PRESIDENT’S MESSAGE

“It’s the most wonderful time of the year!” Well, it is my favorite time of year anyway. I love fall! It is a time of new beginnings for me as it signifies the beginning of school which, as a child, was a time for new shoes, new clothes, new school supplies, etc. Beginning a new school year always promised new friends, new opportunities to learn new things, a new teacher, and new possibilities of who or what I could be. Frequently, it also marked going to a new school as I moved a lot as a child. (I’ve made up for it since then though.)

Of course, fall also is the beginning of the holiday season which brings chaos and busy schedules, but it also brings families together and a desire to make homes warm and beautiful, meals delightful, and activities plentiful. It is a time to pretend we are someone or something else, a time to reflect on what we have to be grateful for (and there is always something), and a time to contemplate our beliefs. It is a time to practice our traditions and celebrate our culture.

However you celebrate your holidays, I hope you will take the time to be thankful for what you have and to share your gratitude with others. The more time you spend being thankful, the more positive your outlook will become. The more positive your outlook is, the more optimistic you are. The more optimistic you are, the happier you will be. Happy people are contagious and good things tend to happen to happy people more than others.

Happy fall! Happy new beginnings! Happy Holidays!

Professional Development Day—

“Navigating University Branding: Don't Let Brand Standards Be Your Kryptonite” with members of the University Branding Committee

by Pam Johnson

In the past few months we've all seen and heard about the new 'University Branding'. BSUAOP Professional Development Day on October 8, 2013 was the perfect opportunity to learn more about the process first hand. The panel consisting of Rachel Bickerton, Director of Trademark and Licensing; Melinda Keckler, Assistant Director of Marketing for Communications and Marketing; and Jodie Thiel, Creative Services Manager for Communications and Marketing, provided great examples, advice and tools to help anyone on campus understand the concept.

From what fonts are acceptable, to space requirements, to how branding is really more than just the B; to the reasons behind the decisions that have been made, they provided visual examples as well as where to find helpful information. We went away with a much better understanding of the entire process and how our attitudes toward Boise State are also considered part of the branding message. The session reminded me that each person's actions are a message of Boise State branding to colleagues and to the community.

After this session, I find myself looking for the new 'B' as I move around campus and the city. It's great to watch the new identity of Boise State University taking over.

Simple as that!

A Professionally Developed Superhero

By Gay Barzee

I walked into the Professional Development Day (PDD) conference room after a fun conversation with Lois Santillanes at the registration desk only to realize that I was late and Leslie Black had already begun introductions. Well, so much for being prompt! I realized very quickly that a superhero can't save the day if they are late to the disaster, so I settled in to hear what Leslie had to say and get myself geared up to learn as much as I could. I was excited about the day and knew it would be worthwhile as I had a few Professional Development Days under my belt already.

The day was planned by Danya Lusk with a theme of “Be a Boise State Superhero.”

It was held on October 8, 2013 and had an overall focus on positive customer service and civility. Having planned a day like this in the past, I had a deep gratitude in my heart for Danya and her committee. It takes a lot of effort to plan PDD and even though I didn't know her, I was very grateful for her dedication to BSUAOP.

The first session of the day was “Hero's Think Positive: Positive Thoughts Bring Life Satisfaction.” Kimberly McAdams presented data about her research on optimism. Did you know that optimists actually believe they are able to achieve their goals through their actions? That they are efficient at recognizing when something is not working and willing to try something else? I learned a new term at this workshop called “cooperative problem solving” where you actually resolve issues without attack or blame. Hmm... I may have to put some of these things into practice.

My next session was with the Boise State Justice League. (Who knew we had one?) It featured Blaine Eckles, Jillana Finnegan, Francisco Salinas, and Jeremiah Shinn. Their perspectives on how to best help students on campus was interesting. It's always good to know who to call if you need something and after the Q & A session we had a good connection with our Justice League. I think I'm going to call one of them with a few more burning questions that I have. My big takeaway for this session was that when a student's bucket of injustice gets too full, they start acting out inappropriately. We need to catch them before their bucket is too full and do what we can to help them have a successful experience on campus.

A Professionally Developed Superhero—

We next moved on to a wonderful lunch where I enjoyed saying hi to old friends and reminisced a little about the good old days, but it was also fun to meet new people. Apparently I've been out of the loop for a while because there were a lot of new faces, and I realized I need to get my hero cape on and start meeting a few of them.

The keynote speaker, Cindy Clark, was mesmerizing as she spoke about civility and respect. Apparently, we are all responsible for the way we act toward others. Who knew? The big eye opener was the civility test she had us take and I'm not sure anyone passed. I was certainly disappointed in my score. There is clearly a lot to know about this subject and Cindy actually wrote a book about it and had a book signing after her presentation.

The last session of the day was by J Lukenbill, a training specialist in Human Resources Learning and Development. He talked a lot about "customer obsession" which is a term I had never heard before, but totally makes sense to me now that I've learned about it. Customer obsession is optimized service, customer service is settling for good enough. He mentioned a process where we can really be the hero when it comes to helping our customers (ie. students, co-workers, etc.) His approach is to Hear, by attentively listening; Confirm by re-stating what you heard to make sure you understand; Research to make sure what you say is accurate and current; and Speak without interrupting to provide information. Wow! If we all would do just this much we could avoid a lot of miscommunication and be a superhero to everyone we meet. I understand this is ideal and we are all human and make mistakes, but I can dream can't I?

Overall, the day was pretty packed and full of useful information and I would like to thank the PDD committee for their efforts in bringing us new information and training tools to make our lives at work a little better. They are all my new superheroes!

Boise State Justice League

By Chris Griffin

On October 8, 2013, I had the opportunity to attend the BSUAOP Professional Development Day. All activities surrounding the theme, "Be A Boise State Superhero," focused on reaching this goal. Each session was informative and helpful; however, one stood out as being especially beneficial to me.

The segment, "Engaging and Nourishing Student Heroes," was a panel discussion that included staff members from various departments of the University. These individuals included: Dr. Blaine Eckles, Associate Dean of Students, who explained his role in helping students succeed even under less than ideal circumstances; Jillana Finnegan, Associate Director for Advising and Academic Enhancement, who stressed the importance of utilizing all available Boise State resources; Francisco Salinas, Director of the Office of Student Diversity and Inclusion, who provided insight on ways that individuals might better understand cultural differences and shared various resources to help; and Dr. Jeremiah Shinn, Director of the Student Involvement and Leadership Center, who outlined strategies to encourage student involvement along with how staff members might positively impact students' lives.

After introducing themselves, each panel member asked for questions from attendees. Throughout the question and answer time, I was impressed by the level of passion with which individuals on the panel responded to questions. All presenters shared how staff members, although from different departments, can work together to provide students with the inspiration and resources to help them become "heroes."

Participants in this session left with a renewed understanding of how we, as office staff employees, can help students realize their dreams.

Institute

The NAEOP 2013 institute was held October 11-13, 2013 in Salt Lake City, Utah. There were about 60 members from across the county in attendance.

What a wonderful educational experience! We were given an opportunity to work in groups and test our skills and knowledge. We were transported from the Little America Hotel to the Granite Technology building to begin our classes.

I took Communications and iPad and Internet Safety where I learned a lot. There was a variety of other classes to choose from. Everyone seemed to benefit from the classes provided.

“Ignite Your Potential”

October 11-13, 2013 Salt Lake City, UT

by Angela Garcia

I am delighted to report on my attendance at this NAEOP sponsored event held in Salt Lake City in early October. Approximately 60 people from Idaho, South Carolina, New York, Utah, and Wyoming gathered to satisfy our desire for learning and professional development. The sessions were two full days and one half-day and they were designed for all areas of educational office responsibilities. They covered Communication Skills; Ethics; Writing/Grammar/Proofreading; iPad Fundamentals; Internet Safety; and Tech-Enhanced Communications. You might think that writing, grammar and proofreading could be tedious and it is; but they made a game of it, it became competitive and it was fun.

The half-day session covered Secrets of Happiness at Work and the co-presenters were also the co-organizers of the Institute; Kathy Goodfellow and Sherry Wilson. The passion, humor and energy of the presenters were invigorating. During this session, NAEOP President Cathy Eberle held a drawing to give away one NAEOP membership. This inspired others to also donate NAEOP memberships on an individual basis. There were four lucky ladies who walked away with paid national memberships!

The entire event qualified for 15 hours of PSP credit. Since I am resolutely working toward PSP certification, this Institute was of particular interest to me. Attending these professional development sessions is the most rewarding experience of membership for me. The curriculum is designed to make learning relevant to our daily jobs, help us understand the importance of taking time to sharpen our skills and build new skills, and gain an understanding that our professional development strengthens our organizations.
