BENCH NOTES

The Employee Assistance Program has implemented a tool for dealing with traumatic situations that may arise within the work place, i.e. real or threatened violence, major illness of a co-worker, death, etc. This tool is EAP's Critical Incident Stress Debriefing (CISD) program. Their trained counselors are available to readily address the concerns in a positive manner, thereby enhancing the avoidance of potentially negative outcomes.

Critical incidents occurring within the workplace can trigger an acute problem sometimes referred to as Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). This occurs because the victims of traumatic incidents have not had the opportunity to effectively express the impact they experienced. Since PTSD can be prevented or minimized by debriefing, it is important to activate the process by contacting the nearest EAP counseling center to initiate a CISD.

Debriefing following catastrophic incidents would be offered to:

- ✓ Emphasize the state's serious regard for employees
- ✓ Allow for evaluation of the event to help prevent it from happening again,
- ✓ Give employees a chance to "let off steam",
- ✓ Provide an opportunity to assess each person's reaction to the incident and allow for needed one-on-one follow-up,
- ✓ Encourage a sense of family,
- ✓ Help with the removal of communication barriers between management and employees,
- ✓ Allow for the distribution of accurate information about the event.

The supervisor of an impacted unit or the agency human resource manager would provide the EAP counseling center with a brief description of the incident, the number of employees planning to attend the session, and the agency's contact person and phone number.

Your EAP provider is Interpersonal Dynamics. Their office is located at 323 Allumbaugh in Boise. Their local phone number is 323-1700. To call toll-free in other areas of Idaho, the phone numbers are as follows:
