Theatre Arts/TMA Showcase is a diverse collaboration, combining the energies of students from a wide range of classes, interests, and experience in the performing arts. Its purpose is to provide students with an opportunity to showcase their ideas, talents and craft.

River of Life is an original performance piece, conceived by James Fisk with original segments written by Dano Madden. The ensemble is made up of Theatre Arts majors and graduates.

The second segment of Showcase features original dance performances. Each of the pieces except one, Deja Voodoo, was conceived and choreographed by students in the TA dance program. Student dancers perform all of the pieces.

The final segment of Showcase features original student-written and student-directed class projects. The plays were intentionally unified around a common element, the "One Room Revue." The performances represent the "lab" experiences for beginning students in the Playwriting class, taught by Phil Atkinson, and the Directing class, taught by Richard Klautsch. These projects should be viewed as first steps rather than finished products in the imaginative, creative process. The content and language of some projects may be considered highly objectionable.
