Senate Committee considers upping fees, tuition increase

The Senate Health, Education and Welfare committee, Tuesday, considered three issues which could have far ranging effects on Idaho college and university students. Senator John Barker, committee chairman, said that the issues, a constitutional amendment allowing schools to charge in-state tuition, allowing each school to raise fees at least $10 and the abolition of tenure were merely in the discussion stage.

Senator Barker said that currently there is nothing in the Idaho code which prohibits the charging of tuition at Boise State and Idaho State Universities. There is, however, a statute which does prevent this at the University of Idaho, according to Senator Barker.

The purpose of this amendment is to even the schools' policies regarding tuition.

The $10 fee increase came about as a result of accreditation problems at the University of Idaho. Senator Barker said that the accreditation board felt the U of I should review their position regarding fees.

As to the tuition proposal, Senator Barker said that no action is being planned right now, however, the HEW committee will meet with the State Board of Education the next time the Board is in Boise.

Commenting on the committee's proposals, Vice Mayor, Executive Director of the Idaho Student Lobby said that tentative or not, any attempt to increase the cost of a college education would result in reducing the access to higher education. He said that students already have a difficult time raising money for fees.

"The responsibility of supporting higher education belongs to the state," Meyer said. "Any attempt to shift that responsibility onto the student will be met with great resistance."

"ISU's recommendation is the development of a comprehensive state plan for higher education in Idaho," he said. Meyer explained that if a plan of this type were instituted, higher education would be more efficient resulting in a savings greater than the income from the fee increase.

The concept of no in-state tuition has been upheld eight times in Idaho court decisions, according to Meyer. Thus, he said, turning court precedent would be difficult.

University of Idaho students body president Dick Kempstone said that what the legislature is considering is not in the best interest of higher education. "It's a philosophical question," Kempstone stated. "It's too bad it's being made financial."

"He also said it was ironic that even before Governor Anderson delivered his budget message, the legislature was asking for a fee increase."

Geoff Ranere, Idaho State student body president said that he is definitely against both tuition and a fee increase. "Students shouldn't have to pay more for their education," he stated.

Ranere said that this was not needed, "especially when you consider that the state of Idaho is supposed to have a $20 million surplus this year."

Boise State student body president Ken Christensen stated that he wouldn't support any increase in fees or tuition.

"I wouldn't support any increase until the legislature becomes more responsive to student needs," Christensen said.

Christensen also said that it was the state's job, not the student's, to provide a quality education.

News in Brief

The "lazy gifts and personal items" ended up as a (no) plowed down weight that went to the greatest harm. Don't worry, the seniors aren't the only ones who are worried about the weather. If you need to find an artificial way to live through the winter, the Boise Public Library is holding a writing contest. The contest is open to high school students in Idaho and will run from January 25 through March 17. The winning essay will be published in a book available at the library. The theme of the contest is "What Can We Do With the Winter?" The contest is sponsored by the Idaho Education Association and the Idaho State Teachers' Association. The first prize is $50.00 and second prize is $25.00. All essays must be submitted by March 15. The winners will be announced in April.

The Boise State Symphony Orchestra will present its annual Spring Concert on April 10, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. in the University Center Auditorium. The concert will feature a variety of musical works, including symphonies and chamber music. Tickets are available at the University Center Box Office or by calling 208-382-2933. Fantasy? Fact?

What follows is a fairy-tale that tells a story about the future. It tells about a land called academia where students are taxed by a proposed instate-tuition charge. Incidentally, the Idaho Legislature is considering this type of tax to help defray mounting costs. Senator Leon Swensen, Canyon County, feels that students should be hungry for education...and so, my dear Mr. Swensen, we are. Remember that what follows never happens but it is possible that this issue is being brought up in order to promote a land grub south of BSU?

Huck's Realm

_Boise State what?_

by Huck Hovey

Numerous complaints have been received by Boise State Officials concerning what is apparently large animals roaming nocturnally about the campus. The Animals have been dropping large deposits of a substance resembling dirt in very conspicuous places and have on at least two occasions dug holes, i.e. one in the sidewalk for adjacent to the Music Building and the other next to the SUB. There have been strenuous efforts made by anonymous Administration officials to disguise this as an official BSU construction program, but anyone can tell by the mess that only large Bees could perpetrate such diggings.

The 43rd Annual Social and Oratory Society show gathering at the Capital Building to make plans for activities during this coming year. Many items constitute the Society's agenda such as allowing Universities to charge in state tuition, how many states are currently charging up to $300 or one large doofus, a fare raise of at least $10 and the abolishment of tenure. Needless to say, when it comes to the cost of education or our welfare, the Annual Social and Oratory Society is in a much better position to decide proper measures than a student currently on food stamps, books mortgaged, credit collection agencies closing in, $50 worth of back traffic tickets and an administrative withdrawal from BSU pending. Needless to say, it should be a tough decision on the above mentioned items for the Festive Gathering to make from these plagues, but then most wonder, "Boise State What...where's the money?"

Last, but not least, an impeachment committee was formed recently to establish the first Idaho Chapter of the Archie Bunker Fan Club at Boise State University. The only logical choice to head the 100 percent American organization was the local Divine Guiding Light and Sage of Wisdom, Holy Hubert, of the Institute for the Salvation of Sinful People. According to reliable sources, the purpose of the chapter will be to disseminate and clarify the elaborate, words of TRUTH set down by the renowned television personality most of which have been revered on this campus since 1932 anyway. This will only be another step in guaranteeing a well balanced education for each and every student who attends this institution according to the most manner vested in the Declaration of Independence, Constitution and current community standards.

Christensen urges students to get involved

Editor, the Arbiter

Well, it's about that time of the year again when the Spring Elections start arising as a topic of discussion. To refresh the memory of many students, it would be a good idea to slow them down by reminding them that elections begin on February 7.

Many students constitute the Society's memory of many students, it would be a good idea to slow them down by reminding them that elections begin on February 7.

In discussions with the officers of this year we look forward to this being the election with the most candidates ever. We hope that all interested students will take advantage of the opportunities to become involved in elective positions within the Associated Student Body. If at any time you can assist students in deciding whether or not to run for an elective position, please feel free to contact me. Within the Student Government the benefits are numerous. Please consider these possibilities of getting involved.

Landgrab' concerns reader

Editor, the Arbiter

The Student View of 1-13-75 contained a shock article titled, "Landgrab: The True", Editor, I am shocked that the article was published. I am sure that there were three ridiculous alternative suggestions for what the author referred to as the "Landgrab of the south." There are at least 20 acres of parking around the stadium and the Student Union Building. Perhaps the secretary of the Associated Student Body of Boise State University that I have resigned as election board chairperson. The eventsprior to my resignation made my continuation in that position impossible.

Certain biased and indifferent senator committees created a situation whose implication could lead to the destruction of our present political system, not once, not twice, but on three different occasions I approached the ASBSU senate with a request that certain stipulated provisions be made for a vice chairperson to those students who serve in the capacity of poll workers.

The senate, time and time again, dragged their feet on the issue. It became increasingly apparent that a just and honorable decision on the part of the ASBSU senate was never to be reached.

Perhaps the ASBSU senate does not realize how important and time consuming this task is, therefore they think about it as the elections begin on February 7. It was the procedures to increase the awareness of my committee and workers that placed each and every elected ASBSU official into office without the controversy inherited from elections of previous years.

I believe that the ASBSU senate must take one of three options. 1) To do nothing at which time they will remain in office for another year 2) To do nothing and run the election themselves or 3) Take upon themselves their duly elected responsibility to make certain that an election is well run, as it was last year.

My resignation should be considered permanent and binding until such time as the ASBSU Senate renews their January 4th decision, at which time I will recon sider my aforementioned resignation.

Views given on Idaho Power's coal fire plant

Editor, the Arbiter

The news reporting of the public hearing on the proposed coal-fired generator plant indicates that public opinion is running in favor of Idaho Power. I for one am very much opposed to the construction of this plant. From the news media report most of those testifying in favor of the proposed plant are business- men and farmers, who in my opinion are not concerned about the overall environmental, economic or social aspects the plant would have on present or future generations. But rather are looking at the short term economic and social aspects (getting the buck and the social and environmental responsibility?

We have for too long in America lived with the idea that success of our country depends on more and more industrial output, more and more consumer goods (many of which are very far from essential in maintaining a decent standard of living). Success and therefore our standard of living is almost totally centered around the economic aspect and really neglects the environmental and social aspects (except those which the buck can buy).

Are we making a step forward in the right direction? If so, then I would have to wonder why.

Southen California, Phoenix, Denver and even Spokane (p. 74) are examples of places that sacrificed beautiful natural physical environments for the so-called successful economic growth. They are now trying to salvage their environments. They might have bucks and growth, but not much else (dirty air, bad water, noise). The phrase "The Time Is Now" is getting a little worn (Civic Center, Gerald Ford), but we in Idaho have a unique opportunity to set some new priorities and put together a new standard of living based on environmental, economic and social considerations. It's going to take the co-operation of engineers, architects, businessmen, environmentalists, sociologists, politicians and the general public, but the opportunity is now.

New and cleaner sources of producing energy (electricity, fuel) must be developed; better design- ed buildings which take advantage of nature rather than shut it out; legislation must be passed which protects the environment, encourages recycling of resources and eliminates waste; business leaders must show more environmental and social responsibility (along with economy), personal consumption of resources must be cut down (turn off non-essential energy con- suming appliances and machines, use less, buy more efficient and better quality autos and appli- ances) is short of waste. It's going to take us all.

Permitting Idaho Power to build the coal-fired generator would only perpetuate a system of energy waste and environmental pollution. It might bet a short term solution to an anticipated energy shortage, but would have a deeper long lasting negative effect and should there- fore not be permitted. What we need is a new direction not a coal- fired generator.

I urge everyone to look at the whole environment (environmental, economic and social) and really do some hard thinking about it; then get involved in shaping your world by writing letters, making phone calls or attending public hearings (on all issues) and voice your opinion. Your vote (or the absence thereof) is a very per- tinent urge to think about the problems and voice your opinion, because your vote is going to live with the decisions a lot longer than we are.

Tribute given to Mittlender

Editor, the Arbiter

On January 12, 1975, a legend began. The "Hawaiian" bowlers won the Super Bowl. It was a cold winter's day, a good day for many bowlers to feel the pressure of a day they shall never forget. A very close friend of mine called that afternoon. He was a victim of leukemia.

Ray Mittlender was his name, and he was 20 years old, 20 years old. I met Ray 16 years ago, but it seemed like yesterday to me.

I know it sounds as though I am living in the past, but for me it was that day. He lived next door to my grand- mother's house. I went over to play baseball with him. I met Ray on we were good friends.

His childhood memories have always brought you out of the problems you were being bothered with.

I always liked him, so I kept him close, so eager and hard working. We grew up together, more or less. We attended the same grade school, and though I was a year behind him we remained good friends.

We spent many hours playing baseball, football, stealing the flag and other games. Even then it seemed that whatever Ray wanted he would get, for he was a strong, quiet, gentle person.

He hated to lose, he hated being seconded. Ray was always number one.

Ray's first love was football. He lived football morning, noon and night, like I did then. He started in the Optimist Program as a quarter- back. For me it was the first best quarterback I have ever seen. To me, he was an inspiration. I caught on his passes from the time we met. All the way through high school until I graduated we were seconded.

Ray's going to a better place. Lord, why him? Why him?

The last few months were very hard on him, both mentally as well as physically. He was in a hospital a lot, but now there is no jailing. When I say Ray last week, we had a good time. That afternoon.

So to our dear residents, please grow up or get out because I am tired of cleaning up!

A BSU student and ex-con has won the Western United States Persuasive Oratory Championship at Fullerton, California.

Dan Peterson, a Communication major and member of the Debate Team, represented BSU during the three day tournament held on the campus of California State University. Peterson won two previous tournaments to be eligible for the major competition.

Seventy-two schools participated in the verbal contest. UCLA, BYU, and the Air Force Academy were some of the schools participating.

Peterson debated 29 people, four speakers at a time. He had to pass 3 preliminary rounds and one semifinal to be eligible for the final.

The judges graded on a scale of 1 to 4, with "1" being excellent. The final round brought the BSU student face to face with the National Champion, Gar Dennett from BYU. Dennett had beaten Peterson by one point to take first place in an earlier tournament at ISU.

By this time, Peterson said he was beginning to get angry at the "phoniness" of some of the other speakers, single people speaking on divorce, etc. As a result of this, Peterson stood completely still during his final speech, making no gestures. His lack of motion did not hurt his oratory.

The topic, "Penal Reform", seemed to be touching enough on its own. "It was as if it was strange." Peterson said, "people cried. Some of the judges and audience just started crying."

The stars prove/ o be a good sign as Peterson won the championship.

This was his third trophy. He was married and had a small government. In addition to winning the competition, he was allowed to get married, something for which a paroled convict must get permission.

The other two trophies held by Peterson are one first place trophy won at Pacific University (Forest Grove, Oregon) and a second place trophy won in a contest at ISU. The second place trophy was the only trophy won by anyone from an Idaho school at that contest.

Peace Corps, Action need people with high skill level

Idaho universities and colleges are especially important in the Peace Corps recruiting plans because of the agricultural background the graduates have, according to ACTION representatives who recently visited the Boise State University campus.

Amy Condorn and Rocky Dias, recruiters from Seattle, said that the image and goals of the Peace Corps have changed since its beginning in the early 1960's. Since many more countries are now requesting volunteers that have a higher level of skill, the need for the liberal arts generalist has diminished.

"Most countries need people with farm backgrounds. To fill their need, there are looking here for people with some experience in agriculture, and we find that schools such as Boise State graduate many students that have the qualifications the Peace Corps wants," Mrs. Condorn added.

She added that volunteers who come from a farm background can be very valuable in their host country. Most of them are experts in their local and assist the people in many ways, including equipment repair, land management, irrigation construction or cooperative organization.

In one instance, she cited, an Idaho volunteer who was able to introduce a new crop to an area that had been unmarketed. Because of Recreation course to be taught

'Waiting for Godot' to show

Waiting for Godot, Samuel Beckett's widely heralded absurdist play is to be the Subal Theatre’s first production of the spring season. It has been described by certain critics and readers and audiences all over the world as one of the most haunting, bewildering, and cacophonous literary works of our time. In the right. Waiting for Godot has drawn audiences and readers on purely intellectual and emotional appeal. There are others, though, who have come completely enamored with the theatrical experience Beckett's play suggests. Among these "others" is BSU's guest director Larry West, who happens to be directing Waiting for Godot.

The play depicts the human condition in terms of an empty plain which may one day be filled with an actual, redeeming Presence, a Godot, but the day never arrives. This theme is used over and over again in modern literature: the quest for meaning or some sort of logic in modern day life. But why must the audience of every modern play be hit over the head with the Grand Message - the over all meaning of life? We live it. We can present this kind of work as Godot, but the day never arrives. However, this theme is used over and over again in modern literature: the quest for meaning or some sort of logic in modern day life. But why must the audience of every modern play be hit over the head with the Grand Message - the over all meaning of life? We live it. We can present this kind of work as a jucie, you give it up as a participatory play. The audience is involved in the play, not as a passive, spectator role. Larry West and his cast of five are approaching the play as a piece of theatre, not as a piece of dramatic literature. Beckett meant it to be performed by players, in a theatre, in front of an audience, not in a book, in front of one pair of eyes," says West.

The arena theatre setting, which places the actors right in the middle of the audience is one way of getting that across. The actors are always aware of the audience a few feet away, and the light booth above and the recorded music filtering in behind. The audience too is close enough to observe the wooden platforms, the stilted tree, and the actors acting. The company: director and cast, has dug into the individual nuances behind Didi and Gogo and Pozzo and Lucky and emphasize the comedy, drawing from old Marx Brothers and Laurel and Hardy schtick. The set is painted in monochromatic shades of blue to suggest the old movie world of the bygone comedians: Chaplain, Laurel and Hardy, W. C. Fields, the Marx Brothers. Didi and Gogo are both the Chaplinesque sad clowns and the slap stick Laurel and Hardy pair.

Out of Beckett's absurd dialogue emerges moments of human truth. Didi and Gogo are waiting, and while they wait they try and pass the time with games, conversation, play - much as we would try TV, a book, knitting, or riddling our thumbs - ANYTHING to pass the time. Pozzo and Lucky are seen as diversions to the tramps, used by the audience to make the time go by. They are people, brutal, funny, sad, ominous, and very human.

BSU students are invited to experience this profound and entertaining theatrical event. Waiting for Godot opens a ten-night run on January 20. Box office for the play opens January 23 and will remain open from 3 to 6 p.m. daily. Phone reservations may be made by calling 385-1462 during box office hours. BSU students with activity cards may reserve free tickets.

Broncos trim Bengals 68-64; to host Gonzaga Friday

With a capacity home crowd of 4,500 screaming their approval, the Boise State University Broncos posted a major upset over Idaho State Saturday night 68-64. The win was the first in conference play for the Broncos, and the contest was also the initial conference game for BSU.

Connor’s cagers jumped off to an early lead against the Bengals behind the hot hands of guards Steve Connor and James Smith. BSU led by as much as 12 points midway through the first half before the Boisegiants’ savvy Sophomore center Steve Hayes waged a scoring binge to draw the visitors to within nine points (45-36) at the half.

Both squads tightened their defensive stances in the second half, as the Broncos went into a sagging zone with 10 minutes remaining in the game. The Broncos went into a sagging zone with 10 minutes remaining in the game. The Boisegiants’ shooting cooled considerably in the second half, and the Broncos crept to within four points, but could never overcome the Broncos. BSU, however, closed out the game with a 7-0 run to secure the victory.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Pat Hoke

Sophomore Terry Miller, from Woodland Hills, Calif., is currently third in scoring for the Broncos with a 1.19 average per game. In addition, he’s the second leading rebounder on the squad with a 7.9 rebound average. The 6’5”, 180-pounder started as a freshmen guard and has contributed throughout his two-year career. He noted that the team “seemed closer together than last year,” and that the whole team was working harder than the previous season.

Terry chose to attend BSU because of the caliber of the business school and the chance to contribute to the growing athletic department. He also plays baseball, and his other activities include “reading and listening to music.”

The BSU Ski-Trek Karate Club cordially invites everyone to attend practices during the spring semester. Workouts will be held for beginners 6:30-7:00 p.m. and for advanced students 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Cost is $3.00 per week.

Pat Hoke is currently the leading scorer and rebounder for BSU with an 8.3 scoring average and 8.9 rebound average. At 6’8” and 202 pounds, Hoke has inculcated his style of play this year to run the offense of the Broncos. He was reified by over 20 coleges while in high school, and came to Boise because “the coaches were completely honest with me.” Pat also feels the Broncos are closer this year, and pointed out that with BSU’s first five Big Sky games being played at home, the squad has a good chance for the title.

Pat, who is from Richland, Washington, is a P.E. major and hopes to coach after graduation. In his spare time he enjoys watching “James Bond” movies and “McMillan and Wife” on TV or listening to rock music.

The swimming pool is open for recreational swimming 21/2 hours during the week and 8 hours on the weekend for a total of 29 harassment hours per week. The schedule has been around 28 minutes per day, and limited by budget and life guard availability.

Gai gymnasts to host meet

The Boise State women’s Gymnastics Team will host their first meet of the season against Lynn-Benton Community College, Pacific University, Saturday, January 25, 1975. In the Boise State gymnastics, according to head coach Pat Holman, this will be the first of three events where we are going to come out and support the girls.

Wrestling goes Big-time at BSU

In case anyone hasn’t heard about it, Boise State presently has one of the finest wrestling teams in the Big Sky history. The Bronco grapplers dominated the league last season, and look to be even stronger this season. The secret of this Orange and Blue powerhouse is head coach Mike Young. In the few short years that Young has been at Boise State, he has used young wrestlers from mainly the Intermountain area to revive a formerly dismal BSU wrestling program and turn it into a national contender. This year, the Broncos are strong favorites for conference honors, and a couple of coach Young’s wrestlers must be looked at for national honors.

The leading candidate for the National from BSU is senior Dave Chandler. Chandler is from Fremont, Idaho, and has taken the Big Sky crown in the 138-pound weight class for three years. Chandler is extremely aggressive, and after watching him in action against the Idaho State last week, this writer agrees that he is, indeed, a hard-nosed guy on the mat. Dave also was named the Outstanding Wrestler in the Big Sky tourney for two years. Chandler finished last season with an 18-4 match record, and will probably improve on that this season.

Another outstanding BSU grappler is last year’s most outstanding freshman Randy Watson. Watson is from the Dailes, Oregon, and won the Big Sky championship in 138 pounds last year. Randy is having another fine year this season and his sights are set squarely on a second championship.

Mark Bintick, BSU’s super-heavyweight, has been slowed by a nagging knee injury, but the outstanding giant has still been impressive. Bintick lost in the Big Sky finals last year to Montana State’s Don Wilson and is looking forward to a possible rematch in the national tourney.

Whatever happens to those three, and the rest of the fine Boise team members, success is being commended for his outstanding effort in building the wrestling program at BSU. Get the word out and watch the team. If you haven’t watched them yet, you’ll be pleasantly surprised.

Skiers prep for 1975 season

The schedule this season for the ISU ski team is comprised of various meets throughout the Northwest.

Coach Ron Sargent said his team will compete in five meets this year. The Broncos won the Big Sky title last year in Sargent’s first season as head coach, along with “Coach of the Year” honors.

Among the women’s team include Linda Doss, a junior from McCall, Leigh Rutledge, a freshman from Boise and Lynn Larsen, a freshman from South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

Sargent with the women’s team will be Dave Watkins, a past NCAA hopeful from McCall, Idaho. Heading up the men’s team this year will be All-Americans, Billy Shaw from Ketchum, Idaho. Another top returnee for the Broncos is sophomore Rich Gross from Boise.

Completing the team are three freshmen, Jim Bowes, from Steamboat Springs, Colorado, George Orman, McCall, Idaho; and Brad Schneider from Woodside, California. Orman has no favorite among the three categories, he just likes to ski. Meanwhile, Schneider and Bowes will be used in both the slalom and downhill.

Starting off the season, the Broncos will compete in Park City, January 17-18. The squad will be at the University of Nevada-Reno Invitational at Mt. Rose, Nevada, February 1-2. February 14-15 Boise State will host the Boise State Invitational at Bogus Basin.

Regional competition will be February 22-23 at Boise State, Montana, with the NCAA Championships to be held March 3-8 in Durango, Colorado.

TO AN ATHLETE DYING YOUNG

The time you won your town the race
We chaired you through the marketplace;
Man and boy stood cheering by.
And home we brought you shoulder-high.

Today, the road all runners come.
Shoulder-high we bring you home,
And set you at your threshold down,
To an athlete dying young.

Smart lad, to slip betimes away
From fields where glory does not stay,
And early though the laurel grows,
It withers quicker than the rose.

Eyes the shady night has shut
Cannot see the record cut,
And silence sounds no worse than cheers
After earth has stopped the cars:

Now you will not swell the rout
After earth has stopped the cars:
Or of lads that wore their honours out,
But at the low lintel up

So set, before its echo fades,
The fleet foot on the sill of shade,
And hold to the low lintel up
The still-defended challenge-cup.

And round the early-lavender head
Will flock to gaze the strengthless dead,
And find unheeded on its curls
The garland briefer than a girl’s.

Grapplers defeat Utah State U. 30-8

Boise State University wrestlers performed before an appreciative group of fans Wednesday night. Boise State literally walked away with the total points over the Utah State University team.

One of several highlights in the match was that of Big Sky Champion Randy Watson against Bob Erickson, who was Bee Hive Champion from Provo, Utah, in the 158 pound class. After a grueling eight minutes of wrestling, the match ended in a tie at 4 points apiece.

Boise State took a total of seven matches and a tie. One match ended with a superior decision that was given to Steve Needs in the 190 pound class. The final team score ended with Boise State on top by a score of 30-8.

Boise's wrestlers garnered honors.
