Fence the killer

The water looks cool and inviting on a hot summer afternoon. A kid gets a little too close to the edge. He just wants to look into the water or dangle his feet. The sandy soil provides uncertain footing. The ground gives way. He slides into the water. It's twelve feet deep and the concrete banks are slippery. There's nothing to hold on to. The current runs eight miles an hour. The treacherous undercurrents have killed even excellent swimmers. It happens every summer.

Nine Boise children, all under twelve years of age, have drowned in the New York Canal over the past ten years. Several adults have also lost their lives when their cars ran out of control and plunged into the water.

The New York Canal, open and unfenced, runs through several heavily populated Boise subdivisions. The twelve foot deep canal is located two blocks from Owyhee Elementary School and three blocks from Hillcrest school. Bicycle and footpaths are barely three feet from the edge of the water near Owyhee school.

Had the New York Canal been fenced, at least nine children would still be alive. KFXD, a local radio station, is sponsoring The Fence Walk. Participants will walk the March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon route to raise money to build a fence along 4.2 miles of the canal from Vista Ave. to Owyhee St. To purchase fence at cost with donated labor it will take between $60,000-$80,000. Help fence in this Boise deathtrap. Sponsor forms are available at all Boise schools.

Let's all play the game of 'Hidabooze'

by Bob Davis

Most of you who did not attend the Cal Poly game were not aware of an equally exciting game being played in the stands. The name of the game was Hidabooze.

The game is divided into two time periods. Each is approximately as long as a half in a football game. Separating the two is a time period known as the runformore.

The first part started out enthusiastically.

Each player eagerly attempted to consume as much beverage as possible. The scorers (recognized by their blue costumes) kept their eyes peeled for players to score. When a player is spotted playing hidabooze, the scorer immediately gives him a point and notifies the participant. If a player is scoring too high, he/she is removed from the game to allow other players to catch up.

I played for a while and finally scored. Feeling excited, I wandered over to the other side of the stadium during the runformore to see if anyone else was having such luck. On the other side, I was surprised to see that there were quite a few people who had failed to score. The scorers didn't seem to be on the ball.

Wondering how the royalti was doing, I rode the elevator up and made a check. To my astonishment I found that no one had scored at all up there. In fact, the Athletic department, Hidabooze division, hadn't even had the thoughtfulness to place a scorer in the area.

Now the law is very specific on discrimination of any kind and it seems to me that this case is a cut. Just because the royalti pay $500 a seat is no reason to not allow them to play hidabooze. I think it is the duty of every red blooded hidabooze player to protest this outrage. If the royalti wants to play hidabooze, we should let them and make sure that a scorer is present so that they know who is ahead.

Hi to Foster Brooks! If something like this is allowed to continue, it could seriously destroy the game of hidabooze. We might get to a game with no hand and no scorers there are no scorers present at all. Don't you really find that terrible. No one would know who was ahead or even who had won!

Sports fans, the time has come for the powers that be to hear our voices. Let's let them know that we want no more discrimination in the game. Let's let them know that we want all participants to be allowed to play and that an equal number of scorers be distributed equally.

Let's keep the game of hidabooze clean for all. It's the American way to do it. Let's make Boise State the Big Sky champion in hidabooze!

Abominable press cited

Editor, the Arbiter

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you and your staff for the really outstanding job of promotion and coverage during the recent Moshe Dayan lecture. I have been informed as to the abominable way the community press treated you at the airport when the General landed. We at the Programs Board were also given a genuine taste of the area media's outstanding knowledge of protocol and feel that several of the movements and maneuvers constituted by such outstanding members of the press as we were presented with should bring at very least an apology from the area news services.

It is really refreshing to see that the community is interested in Boise State University and the events that we sponsor, but I do not feel that it is theoretically their place to move in and try to run the show, badger the people who are responsible for the event or in general cause any more headaches than we are presented with at the time of the event.

You can well believe that in the future when advertising is solicited or another figure of note visits the university, the area press will not be shown any more courtesy than they have shown our people in the recent past.

Dogs cause problems

Editor, the Arbiter

As a concerned student here on campus, I am wondering when a few inconsiderate students are going to think of others.

What I am talking about is the problem of dogs. At the rate this problem has been growing, it won't be long before there will be more dogs on campus than students. There have been very few days, this semester, that I haven't run across at least one dog in one of our buildings, looking for its' lost master.

But those students who tie their canine to the nearest hitching post, have really gone overboard. Did you ever try to study, or do math, or whatever, with a dog just outside the window, howling, whining or barking?

If you need to have your pet that close to you, maybe you should forget about schooling and devote all your time to him. If not, please leave them home where they belong (like I do) or take them for their daily run, then take them back home. That way those of us who are interested in learning, can do so without having to wear our ear plugs. I'm sure even the profs would appreciate not having to compete with our canine friends.

If these few students would just stop and think of the inconvenience they are causing and then do something about it, I'm sure we could have a much nicer and cleaner campus.

SFS thanks students for response

Editor, the Arbiter

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who have responded to our letter of week before last.

It really surprised me that so many people would ask to join our movement mainly because of one letter. If there are any more of you who would like to join, just have the information booth give a page for any member of the SFS.

Now for the present. We wouldn't want to put Mr. Nixon, but we still believe that the parking situation is terrible and that something must be done about it. We hope to be coming out with some suggestions very shortly.

As far as the John Woodworth building goes, we hope to clear that with the State Board on October 2. If not, we have some other ideas on how to remedy the situation.

Alcohol on campus, we hope, will be allowed before the end of the semester (or at least the end of the year).

So, keep your fingers crossed and keep joining the movement. After all, it's your movement and is dedicated to the student.

Student says library fines are too high

Editor, the Arbiter

During the past semester I checked out books from the BSU library. They were due back on June 16, 1975. I returned them to books on July 1, 1975. A month or 21 days late or 16 actual days on which the library was open.

The fine amounted to $10.00. This seems to me to be rather high. Seems a little high. It is high. The economic crunch on students is enough without the library bleeding us also.

The Boise Public Library doesn't levy fines on overdue books as long as the books are returned.

It would seem that the library faculty are using the overdue book fines to compensate for and replace the books that are being ripped off. I believe that over charging such as this will only increase the incidence of persons removing books from the library without checking them out.

The ARBITER is published weekly by the Associated Students of Boise State University. The offices of the ARBITER are located on the second floor of the Student Union Building, Boise State University, 1910 College Blvd., Boise, Idaho 83725.

library fines are too high

The proper course of action should be to pay stricter attention to library security. Rarely is there an individual located at the security desk. It's really no problem at all to walk out of the library with an armload of unchecked books.

With the large fines it's no wonder more and more books are being stolen. Excessive charging of persons who check out and return books is not a very equitable way of replacing stolen books. In fact, it's probably a self-defeating policy.

What really disturbs me is the extortionistic tactics the university and library utilizes to collect these fines. I was advised by the office of Admissions and Records that unless I pay the fine I will be administratively withdrawn from all BSU courses.

I disgustedly paid the $10.00 fine. Eldon Huell

Women's Alliance formed to support concerns of women

Many women today are finding that many problems which they face as individuals are common to all women. The Women's Alliance is finding that a positive way to deal with these problems is to form a group in which to voice grievances and support issues of concern to women.

Until recently, there has been no such group on campus with a feminist view point. The Women's Alliance was formed earlier this month to deal with problems unique to women and to initiate social interaction among the women in the community.

In the first three meetings, opinions were voiced about what should be happening on the BSU campus. Suggestions were made for more courses dealing with women's contribution to culture, past and present; for a child care center on campus; a self help clinic and the opening of athletic facilities to men and women on an equal basis.

Throughout the year, the women's alliance will be sponsoring many social and cultural events, such as women's parties, a film festival, concerts and exhibits.

Joining the Women's Alliance is an opportunity to unite with other women and make ideas known to the community. What can be accomplished depends on the enthusiasm of the members of the group.

There are weekly meetings Sundays at 7:30 p.m. in the old Arbiter office in the SUB, next to the Nez Perce room.

American Indian Institute set for October 16

The famous North American Indian communications group, The White Roots of Peace, will headline the Fifth Annual American Indian Institute at Boise State University, Monday, October 13, 1975.

This group, organized in 1969, consists of Indians from different nations, both young and old, who seek to spread a message of hope and encouragement to traditionalist Indians. For non-Indians the White Roots of Peace provide an interpretation of current events, traditional views of peace and harmony with the Creation, and brotherhood for all peoples. The group will bring the Indian response to the Bicentennial theme for October The Land of Plenty.

The group is currently on its second tour of Western university campuses and is not scheduled to return again until 1977. Their appearance for a day on campus is being sponsored by the Department of History and Dama Soghop Club at Boise State.

Energy and environmental workshop held

A nine-member steering committee has been appointed to help provide guidelines for the Boise workshop on energy and the environment, which will open a series of eight workshops sponsored by the Idaho Conservation League.

The Boise workshop is scheduled for November 1. It will be followed in the next three weeks by other workshops throughout Idaho. All are funded by a grant from the U. S. Office of Education.

The Boise steering committee is deciding on local issues to be discussed in detail at the workshop.

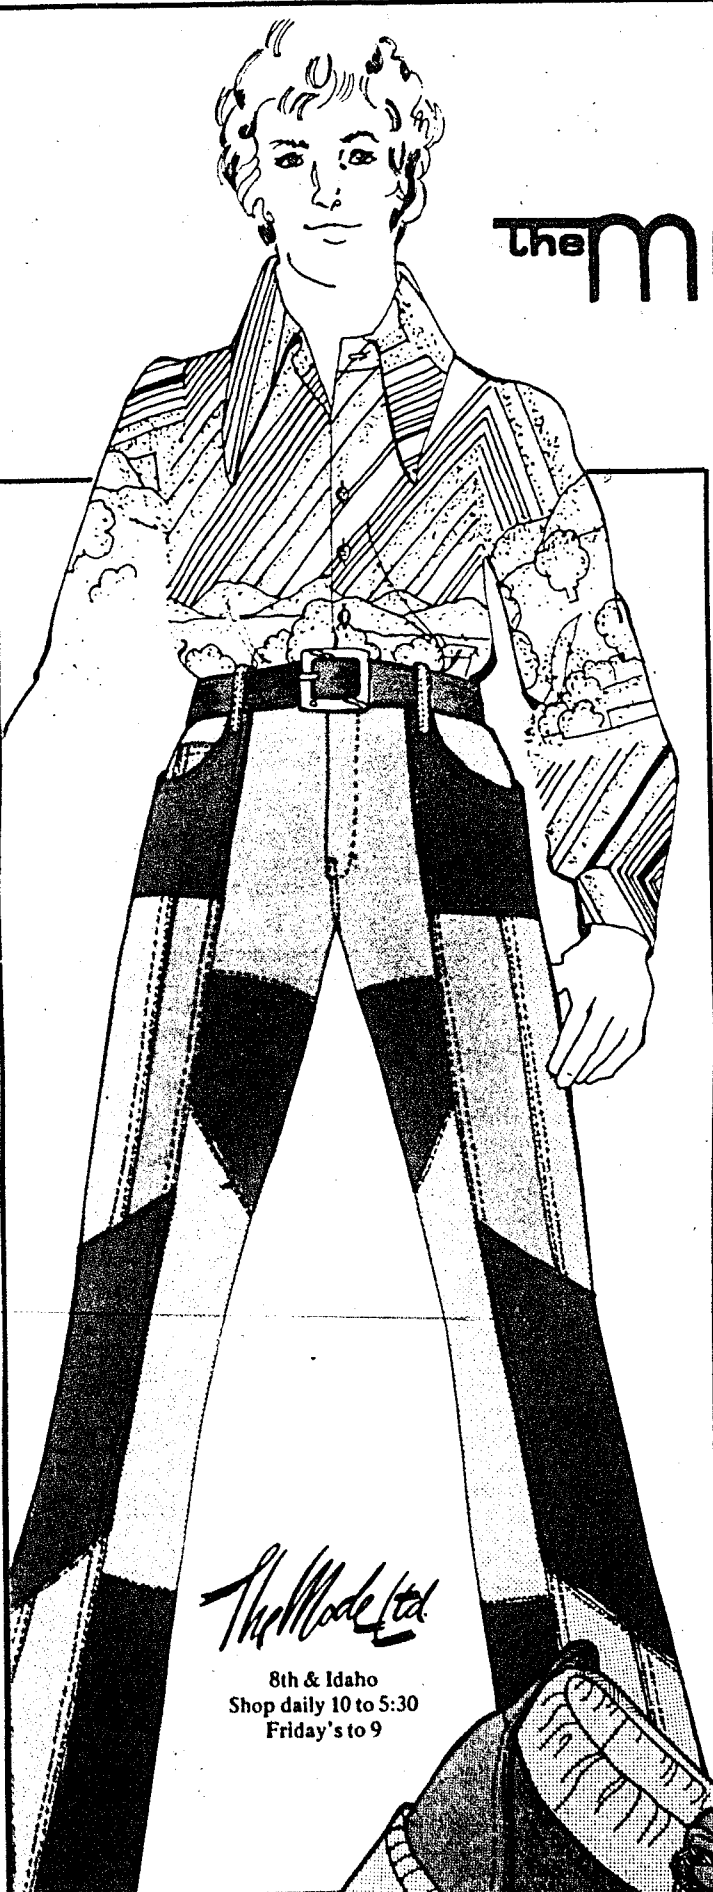

and is recommending program participants. A general format for all workshops has already been determined by a statewide steering committee.

The Boise committee members are City Councilwoman Marge Ewing; Boise State University student Chris Gabettas; David Hawk of the Intermountain Gas Company; Mountain Home farmer Blaine Meecham; Doli Obee of the League of Women Voters; Boise architect Robert Rudeen; educator Ken Runyon and businessman Alan Terrill.

Cancer isn't spreading... testicles are shrinking

Cyclamate, the allegedly cancer-causing sweetener, may not be so dangerous after all, according to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). The FDA wants a panel of scientists to review the 1969 ban on cyclamate because of growing concern about cancer.

But even if cyclamate is found not to be carcinogenic, the FDA has indicated its use would still have to be severely restricted. Studies have suggested that the sugar substitute causes testicles to shrink in male rats.

Yearbook considered

by Helen Christensen

The '75-'76 Les Bois yearbook budget and the Student Action Committee's financial assistance request were considered at last Thursday's Financial Advisory Committee meeting. The FAB holds hearings on ASBSU financial matters and offers recommendations to the student senate.

Margo Hansen, last year's Les Bois editor asked the FAB to approve a $13,580 budget for the '75-'76 yearbook. She stated that $13,580 would purchase a 208 page, two-color hardcover book with ten color pages. She plans to print three thousand copies.

Nick Casner, ASBSU Public Relations Director asked Hansen why she didn't sell more advertising for the book or have each page sponsored, as had been done with the '73-'74 yearbook. Hansen replied, "I don't want this to be a book of advertising, it wouldn't look good."

Casner stated, "It didn't look good last year. I don't really think this is a quality product and I seriously question the advisability of paying $13,580 for something that looks bad and the students don't seem to be very interested in."

Hansen admitted that over one third of last year's books still had not been picked up and that she is in the process of delivering cartons of yearbooks to whoever wants one at the dorms. She also said that almost 500 '72-'73 had to be burned and many '73-'74 books were distributed at the Idaho Fair because students did not pick them up. She stated that if the yearbooks could be distributed in the gym at registration, more students would get them. At the same time students pay $3.00 for a yearbook out of their registration fees.

Casner also questioned the appropriateness of paying to print a color picture of a puddle in the last yearbook. He also remarked that there were captions and many people unidentified.

Hansen replied that Casner's estimates were inaccurate and "too many captions can detract from the over-all mood of the book."

Casner added, "Last year's book was an anthology of a lot of pieces just standing around. There are a lot of things we need on the campus that would be of more benefit to students than a yearbook."

ASBSU Treasurer Ron Buchanan responded to the yearbook distribution problem by stating "we can't have a bonfire to burn the yearbooks before the football games."

The Student Action Committee asked the FAB to recommend a $1,980 expenditure for a documentary film program they wish to sponsor. SAC stated that the response to their showing of "Attica" had been very good and they want to show 42 other films throughout the year. The films can be rented for a total cost of $1,980.

Casner told the FAB members that SAC's program would provide a good balance of films offered to students since the pop films and foreign film series provide more of an entertainment program.

The FAB deliberated in a closed session for thirty minutes and will make their recommendations to the ASBSU Senate on Sept. 30.

Senate report

Business senators vote 'no'

by Helen Christensen

ASBSU School of Business Senators Jim Crawford, Dave Wynkoop and Mary Jane Jorgensen were the only senators to vote "no" on a resolution passed in the September 23 senate meeting which stated that the student senate supports the English Department and all other professional faculty and staff members in their attempt to equalize salaries for equal work.

A motion to support the English Department sex discrimination suit was defeated at the September 16 meeting. Health Science Senator Howard Welsh asked the senate to reconsider the motion so that those senators who abstained from voting on the grounds of lack of information could have the opportunity to learn more about the issue.

The senate moved into an open meeting and Rosalie Nadeau, BSU's Affirmative Action Director and Stuart Evett from the English Department answered the senators questions concerning the suit. Nadeau stated that a statistical rundown on BSU teacher salaries had been done in the fall of '73 and that the findings indicated that sex was determinant in causing lower salaries for females. Nadeau explained that the English Department filed suit against the university on a basis of sex discrimination in salaries. The Labor Department reviewed the suit and found no cause for action. The Human Rights Commission review of the suit stated that there is evidence of sex discrimination in salaries, but they recommended no action since the discrimination is a reflection of society and there is nothing the university can do to change it.

She stated that part of the discrimination is based on ethics. Salaries are high in the Business Department and low in Fine Arts, and since there are few women in Business and more in Fine Arts, women are being paid less.

Before the final vote Welsh stated, "a clear cut case of discrimination has been identified. This vote will determine whether this senate is willing to go on record as supporting equal pay for equal work. And let's have none of this abstention nonsense on a social issue. The information has been provided."

ASBSU President Nate Kim said, "it's time we got involved with the university as a whole. The faculty are part of the university."

"We can't judge this issue," stated Wynkoop. "We need to go into this a lot deeper and I don't want to take the time it would involve. Besides, we can't say that official agencies like the Labor Department and Human Rights Commission were wrong in their decisions," he added.

Before the final vote was taken, Senators Crawford and Wynkoop temporarily left the meeting returning after a recess.

"Walking out of the meeting showed the senate that without us they couldn't do anything, they had no quorum. I hope it at least caused the senate to stop and think," stated Crawford. "The tactics employed in this situation were deliberately underhanded. In order to reconsider a motion that has been previously defeated, a senator who voted "no" or abstained must re-introduce the motion, or the intent and meaning of the motion must be changed. This was not the case with this motion," he added.

"The way the resolution was reconsidered was very unethical. Our leaving the meeting showed the senate how we felt about it. If we hadn't returned, the resolution would have died," said Wynkoop.

The motion passed in a 6-yes, 3-no vote.

Jorgensen stated she voted "no" because, "the open committee meeting did not provide enough time for the senate to fully investigate this issue. It is not our place to get involved on an issue like that. I represent students, and not one of my constituents asked me about this suit. I had absolutely no feedback. My vote must represent the feelings of the students, not the faculty. I can't vote on my personal opinion," she said.

Crawford stated he voted "no" on the basis of the "market concept." "Right now at this university there is a greater demand for business-oriented faculty. I would never want to belittle the people in the Arts and Science fields, but the reality of the situation is that at this point in time at this university, their talents aren't as marketable," he said.

Wynkoop explained his vote in stating, "I saw a lot of evidence that said the suit had no validity. After all, the Labor Department and Human Rights Commission found against the suit. I didn't feel that I had the expertise or authority to vote on an issue so complicated. I do believe that salary equality in this situation is based on supply and demand concept. Right now the university is trying to build the Business and Education Departments. It only makes sense that BSU should have a top Business School since Boise is the business center of the state. In order to attract quality instructors the school has to pay higher salaries. The services of the business professors are more important to the university right now," he added.

In other business, the senate reconsidered and approved a resolution stating that the ASBSU Senate approve and encourage a series of invitational cultural programs commensurate with the function of the International Student Committee and Programs Board to familiarize participating students with the range of social and economic activities of the Treasure Valley area. The resolution passed unanimously.

Don Squires, Capital Planning Insurance representative, answered the senator's questions concerning student insurance. Squires stated that students have until October 1 to turn in refund forms in order to get back the $18 insurance fee that was included in registration fees.

Welsh stated that the Capital Planning Program excluded coverage of "most of the major medical expenses incurred by people in our age group, such as vision care, dental care, pregnancy and childbirth, mental and nervous disorders."

Squires stated that most of the exclusions could be picked up independently by students who wanted to pay for the extra coverage. He explained that they were not included in the general overall policy because the cost would be prohibitive. Capital Planning agreed to print a brochure explaining what insurance options are available and how much they would cost.

The next senate meeting will be September 30 at 4:30 p.m. in the Senate Chambers on the second floor of the SUB. Meetings are open to all students.

Don Squires, Capital Planning Insurance representative, stated that students have until October 1 to file refund forms to get back their $18 insurance fee.

Senate requests must be submitted

The Student Senate meets on Tuesday of each week in the Senate Chambers. Groups or individuals requesting to be heard by the Senate must submit their request to the Vice President at least 8 days before they will be placed on the agenda, (deadline for requests is 12 noon on Fridays). Any topics brought up, not on the agenda, will only be heard with the consent of the Senate.

Dayan speaks of 'imminent' peace in Middle East

by Barb Bridwell

Former Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan spoke last week at Boise State to a capacity crowd. His talk centered around the conflict in the Middle East and the role of the super powers, the U. S. and Russia in that conflict.

Dayan began his address by answering a question he said he had been asked earlier by news media; that is whether American technicians stationed in the Middle East would eventually drag the United States into the conflict there, the way it was dragged into Viet Nam. "I want to say right now that no such danger exists. Not only because your people and administration learned the lesson of Viet Nam but mainly because we don't want you to fight for us. Never has any foreigner fought for us," Dayan stated.

Dayan said, as a military man, the mistake the U. S. made in Viet Nam was to not allow the South Vietnamese to build up their own forces; that the United States is "too strong and qualified." He said Israel wants the United States to provide arms, such as the F15 and F16 fighter planes in order for Israel to defend itself.

There is one exception to that Dayan said, that of Soviet Russia. Russia is involved in the Middle East in a militarily strong way, he said. According to Dayan, there are Russian soldiers in uniform in the Middle East and Russia has also been supplying arms to Arab countries for "more than 20 years."

"We cannot fight Russia. We are 3 million and we can't step up the Arabs if and when they attack us. We had four wars with them and we won all of them. But we can't fight Russia."

Dayan said the U. S. also has to realize they are not the only ones in the Middle East. "It isn't only a conflict between Israel and the Arab countries, the U. S. has got to get an agreement with Soviet Russia."

In the 1973 war Dayan said, there were more than 5500 tanks, 2500 on the Egyptian side and 3000 on the Syrian side. "All of them were Russian." He stated that this number represents a large increase over the number of tanks along the border in World War II. "You're worried about whether you'll get involved with your soldiers there, but the Russians don't mind it."

Dayan said that in June of 1973, President Nassar of Egypt requested fighter pilots from Russia to "take care of Israel. We didn't know anything about this but when we shot down a plane, it wasn't an Egyptian pilot. We found our pilots had shot down four Russian planes. And it is not for Israel to go to war with Russia."

It is up to the U. S. as a super power, according to Dayan, to keep Russia out of Israel. "There is nobody except you to stand up to the Russians, whether you will or will not accept it."

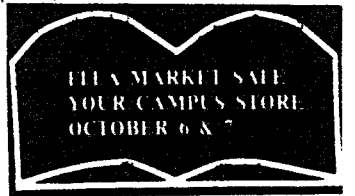

The United States must also have a clear concept of its role in the Middle East, he said. "Now that you are stepping into the Middle East I think you have to be clear about what you want to do there, especially after Viet Nam."

He said that if there is anyone in the world who can help achieve this peace, it is the United States. "It won't come this generation, but it will next generation. What should be done now is an agreement to end belligerence, and this must include Russia."

Dayan stated that conventional warheads will be used on ground-to-ground missiles. His country will guarantee that nuclear warheads will not be used on the Pershing missile. He did say, however, that anytime the Arabs introduce nuclear weapons, they will find Israel ready for them.

Student's rights

Family Rights and Privacy Act - causes confusion

The Family Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, also known as the Buckley Amendment, has caused some confusion among students and administration, according to Leland Mercy, Boise State Registrar.

The crux of the law, according to Mercy, is to protect student records. The part of the law his office is concerned with, he said, is the section which states that student identifiable records cannot be released without the students written consent.

"This opens up all kinds of possibilities for control and possibilities for abuse. What we are trying to do now is see that those abuses are cut to a minimum or eliminated. And to provide the rights and privacy students are entitled to under this law," Mercy stated.

There are several areas included under the law. The first one concerns students records or directory information. "When a student registers there is a card in his packet which a student can sign, asking for privacy. If a student signs that, we do not tell anyone that the student is even registered at Boise State," he said. This card is the same one that states a student's name will not appear in the student directory.

"If someone calls from off campus such as creditors or law enforcement agencies, and asks if a student is here, and he has signed that card, we don't give the information out." Mercy said that his office has ways of checking to see if a student has signed a privacy card. If a student has not signed the card Mercy's office will give directory type information. Directory information is the students name, college address, phone, dates of attendance and graduation dates.

There are exceptions to this, however, according to Mercy. School officials at BSU with legitimate business, state approving agencies, the State Board taking surveys and the financial aids office have access to the files. Also, in extreme emergencies that endanger the health or welfare of students on campus, administrators have access.

Mercy said that if a student is registered at Boise State and has reached the age of 18, his grades will not be given to parents. "We are obligated to hold that record and seek approval of the student before those grades can be released," he stated. "What I try to do when a parent comes in requesting this is get the student and parent together and see if the student is willing to release the record.

"We try to facilitate the student if we can and protect the right of a student, but when a parent comes in and says I'm footing the bill and want to know how my money is being spent, then we say we can't release the record because the student has reached the age of majority."

The transcript policy has also been changed, according to Mercy. When a person requests a transcript now he must show identification. "he must prove he is who he says he is." They must also sign a release for the transcript. "We also send a form which states that if they cannot protect the record, they must return it to us."

Such information as class schedules are not available unless the student has approved it beforehand in writing, Mercy said. "Some students have come and said, 'This is who I want this information released to' and we try to honor that request. Even a student wanting to get his own class schedule has to come to the office."

"This is not just a hassle we are trying to perpetuate on the students, but it is something we are required to do and it's really to protect them."

Officers elected at first AMS meeting

Administrative Management Society elected officers at its first meeting last week. Beverly Young was elected President, Chuck Binford, Vice President, Laurie Boston, Secretary, and Goldie Okazaki, Treasurer.

This business oriented professional organization is open to all majors interested in developing administrative business; determining the needs of commerce and industry through lectures and panel discussions from business executives, and office and plant visitations; and to provide media for free exchange of information and ideas among its members and representatives of the local business community.

The next meeting of AMS will be October 1 at 6:30 p.m. in the Caribou Room of the SUB. There will be a short meeting followed by a visit to the IBM facility.

Anyone interested in joining this organization, contact Beverly Young, 375-0842, or come to the meeting on Wednesday, October 1.

Organizations must submit activity forms

The Student Activities Office in the SUB must have, submitted by October 3, 1975, a current information form for all organizations on campus. Forms are available in the Activities Office.

The information - a current officers list, elections, dates, times and places of meetings and the purpose of the organization - is required to compile a 1975-76 Student Organizational Directory.

Demonstration to be presented by Student Health Services

A demonstration of Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation will be presented by the BSU Student Health Services on October 1 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the lobby of the Student Union Building.

the Student Health Services stated that Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation is a life saving technique applicable in cases of heart attack, drownings, and shock due to lightning. "Since drownings are among the major reasons for the cause of death among 20-30 year olds, there is a very real possibility that this technique would prove useful in saving the lives of BSU students," he said.

Edgar Winter put on a loud show for the crowd at Boise State last week.

Conditions in the gym were crowded and some people seemed to pay little attention to the no smoking rule. Concerts Chairman Eric Bischoff said that Edgar Winter may have been the last hard rock concert Boise State will have.

Edgar Winter Group called stagnant, loud

by John Young

"Edgar is a very progressive type of musician, he isn't happy staying with one style of music over a long period of time." Those remarks, made by the manager of the Edgar Winter Group following their concert here last Tuesday night, did not sit well with me or several other people I talked to after attending the hour and fifteen minute performance.

Edgar Winter, originally from Beaumont Texas, has started this fan thinking just how progressive a musician he really is. Probably half the material performed at the BSU gymnasium was from a new album not yet released in this area. Unfortunately, the new material was almost exactly the same brand of raucous stuff the group has been cranking out for the past few years.

There is little doubt in my mind that the majority of people got what they came for. Every number had the same ingredients, lots of volume, an excess of flashy guitar by Rick Derringer, and vocals that were so badly miked it was nearly impossible to discern any lyrical value. Still, judging from the crowds response, most everyone enjoyed the show.

The warm-up group, Climax Blues Band, performed much in the same vein as the headliners. Lots of loud stuff played to a good boogie rhythm got the audience sufficiently ready for the biggies. The Climax Blues Band however, did seem to have a better rapport with the crowd and appeared to have a good time playing for everyone.

Both bands were made of fine personnel, and I for one was looking forward to seeing the "co-star" of the Edgar Winter Group, Rick Derringer. While he displayed his technical mastery of rock guitar, I was disappointed to see him constantly going off on long, drawn out guitar solos, often with no other member of the band assisting in keeping the beat. There is no room to put him down as a guitarist, but he, as did all the other people playing that night, did not seem to worry about the level of dynamics they played on, which was to say, very high throughout the evening.

When asked about Edgar's commercialism, his manager had this to say. "Edgar started out playing jazz, but he wanted to experience some commercial success similar to his brother Johnny. Now that he has leveled off - I'm sure we'll be seeing him try some new things - jazz is still his main love in music."

In other aspects, the security at the front doors was not what the promoters had hoped for. Many persons, some estimates running close to 200, gained entry without paying for tickets. It looks as though BSU may be seeing the last of big name rock and roll groups, due to all the problems encountered with the crowd.

What it all boils down to is the sad fact that we just don't have a decent place that will hold enough people to warrant bringing in persons of superstar status. I know everyone has heard this same line before, but the sooner we realize we can't continue with what we have, the sooner we can start pressuring for a better place, both in terms of acoustic qualities and physical dimensions.

The concert was plagued by all kinds of technical problems on stage and hassles with the audience. Security around the stage was extremely tight, supposedly in accordance with the fire marshal's orders.

Classes will incorporate drawing and painting media, and a workshop in mime, movement, and dance will be offered for a second term. All classes will be within the Gallery with exception of a mural painting class. The mural art students will spend much of their time at the Idaho State Library where they will decorate a large wall.

Class fees range from $20 to $25 with all materials and supplies furnished by the Gallery. The classes will fill rapidly and size of the classes is being limited. Any interested people are asked to visit or call the Gallery for more specific information and forms for registration.

Efforts to decriminalize marijuana gaining momentum

by Allan Rabinowitz
 "I can think of no area of criminal law where so-called crime and punishment are in such imbalance." - Sen. Alan Cranston (D-CA)

In most parts of the country, a person caught with as little marijuana as one joint is still officially a "criminal", and will have a lifelong criminal record to prove it. But efforts to decriminalize marijuana gained momentum this past summer with five states making major reforms in their marijuana laws. Another state gave constitutional protection to persons who possess marijuana only in their homes and two major federal marijuana reform bills are awaiting action in Congress.

Five states - Alaska, California, Colorado, Ohio and Maine - will now consider possession of small amounts of pot a civil offense, dropping criminal records and jail sentences for possession.

Meanwhile, two measures dealing with marijuana reform are awaiting action in the US Senate.

One bill, sponsored by Jacob Javits (R-NY), Alan Cranston (D-CA) and others in a bi-partisan coalition, calls for the reduction of marijuana penalties to a civil offense punishable by a fine not to exceed $100.

At the same time, an amendment dealing with marijuana decriminalization is being pushed alongside the massive new Federal Criminal Code now under consideration by the Senate. A product of the Nixon and Ford administrations, the revised code, if enacted, would penalize possessors of any amount of marijuana with a 30-day jail sentence and/or a fine of up to $10,000 unless the decriminalization amendment is included.

The current federal law makes possession of marijuana punishable by one year in jail and/or a $5,000 fine.

Keith Stroup, director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), expressed "reasonable optimism" about the outcome of national marijuana legislation. It is possible, Stroup said, that the bills could be voted on by the entire Senate sometime next spring. "If that happens," he added, "we'll be within striking distance."

One important condition must be met, emphasized Stroup, if the drive for marijuana reform is to succeed. "We need the support of a couple of major conservative senators, someone like Barry Goldwater or James Buckley."

Up to this time, conservative senators have strongly opposed marijuana reform. Senator James Eastland (D-MS) warned of a "marijuana-hashish epidemic" in a report of the US Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security.

But some intellectual conservatives, such as columnists William F. Buckley and James J. Kilpatrick, have come out in favor of lesser pot penalties.

The trend, slowly but steadily, is towards a more lenient approach to pot. It has been estimated that 18 per cent of the population has tried pot at least once.

But the move towards more liberal marijuana laws is by no means an avalanche. A recent survey by the private, independent Drug Abuse Council reported that 40 per cent of American adults would like to see tougher penalties for sale and possession of small amounts of the drug, while 39 per cent want the laws relaxed.

And though other states are preparing legislation along the lines of the five states that decriminalized marijuana this summer, ten states have recently killed similar measures. At least one state has gone further that that: in Indiana, such paraphernalia as roach clips and hash pipes have been outlawed - though papers were overlooked.

Students For Students organization reviewed

by Bob Davis

In the spring of 1975 a free-standing student organization was formed.

It began with a small group of students who found a steadily growing awareness of the conditions around them. They began to see that the student was considered by many to be nothing more than a second class citizen. Something to be appeased, but not approached, pacified but not responsive to. They saw, from their stand-point, that students were getting the raw deal in campus affairs and curriculum. It was because of these beliefs that they banded together.

At first, the group was not much more than a small cadre of fifteen to twenty. As they began to organize and state their beliefs to other students, their numbers grew dramatically.

They proposed an amendment to the ASBSU Constitution stating that the "sovereignty of the ASBSU be derived only from all enrolled students".

By proposing this amendment, they hoped to attack the cause of student problems and apathy. They believed that responsibility and responsiveness went hand in hand. The group thought that if the student senate was responsible only to the students who had elected it and supplied the money, that the senate, in turn would have to be more responsive and responsible in turn. They further felt that the elections would be taken more seriously if the senate had the power to make actual changes in cases that were oriented to the students. It was also felt that the part-time student would take a more interested and serious look at campus life if he/she was aware that their vote would be for a representative who commanded the powers of every other duly elected representative.

Two of the planning members of the organization approached Dave Ward, 1974-75 Vice President and chairman of the senate. Ward helped Students For Students arrange the amendment in a manner that would show the changes proposed to the constitution. He also volunteered to have copies made for the senators and to place SFS on the agenda to address the senate.

At the next senate meeting, the senators found themselves staring at a gallery filled with standing room only. Many other students were forced to remain in the hall outside. Students For Students now had a membership of over 200.

Following the address by the SFS spokesperson, the gallery exploded in applause causing Dave Ward to call for silence. The motion to adopt the amendment was made and seconded.

The senators found themselves facing a dilemma. There was no recognized procedure for handling amendments. It was decided that three readings would have to be completed before a final vote could be taken. The move proved to be good, from the SFS point of view, for two reasons. One, was because of the weeks of publicity that the movement needed and now had. And two, because now there would be time to work out all the "bugs" in the original draft of the amendment and therefore, the amendment would be stated in a more popular manner.

Next Week: The Amendment readings and the SFS story to date.

The Greeks went for a world record car stuff to help kick off Boise State's football season.

Greeks kick off football season with car stuff

The Greek organizations at Boise State University, keeping with the tradition of supporting all school activities, helped to kickoff this year's football season with a grand Greek parade and a VW car stuff.

The Greeks who are known for their enthusiastic support to sports left Julia Davis Park in a procession of brightly and creatively decorated cars led by a Model A ford owned by the school and proceeded on a winding trip which ended up at the north end of the Bronco Stadium. A hollowed out VW was provided by the TKE's for the purpose of trying to establish an unofficial record for people stuffed in a VW. After a close head count, 25 people had piled out and an unofficial record was established.

Any student interested in the Greek organizations, please contact the student activities advisor at 385-1223.

Clapton for hard-core blues fans

by John Young

Clapton has not really done anything very exciting with his guitar since he teamed up with the late Duane Allman and made the double LP Layla. He seems happy to stay in a heavy blues format, which is OK, but I think it is a drag that he doesn't put his creativity and superb guitar abilities to a more demanding test. On one of his more recent albums, 461 Ocean Boulevard, many critics deplored his lack of musical inventiveness.

On his new album, which is recorded live, (a very good recording at that) Clapton makes it evident that he is very content to stay with his blues format. He tries his hand at a couple of old Blind Faith numbers, Can't Find my Way Home and In the Presence of the Lord but doesn't come close to the original.

Clapton's guitar playing is outstanding. A player lacking his expertise in the blues would be hard pressed to come up with as many licks on these long, often drawn out three chord progressions. George Terry on second lead guitar also holds his own quite well. The remaining members of the band do an adequate job, but are never really called on to do anything very difficult. Yvonne Elliman, who shared the vocals on 461, sings on a few of the songs, but she doesn't do much for me.

There are only six songs on this album, four of which are hard-core blues stand-bys. If you can't get enough of the blues, this album might be worth scoring. All the numbers are dressed up with good guitar. And Clapton, being one of the most highly respected rock guitar players alive, is always worth a listen. While I may be slightly prejudiced, I doubt very seriously whether he'd do anything that impressed me as much as did the single Layla!

Boise Gallery of Art to presents "Alexander Nevsky"

The Boise Gallery of Art announces the presentation of the feature film, Alexander Nevsky, in conjunction with its continuing Wednesday evening programs. The movie is scheduled for showing on Wednesday, October 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the Gallery. Directed by Sergei Eisenstein (Potemkin, Ten Days That Shook the World, Ivan the Terrible) it was filmed on the eve of World War II. It is a forceful portrayal of a nationalistic hero, courageously confronting foreign invaders.

The extreme tension created in parts of the movie is a result of Eisenstein's brilliant montage and experiment with the musical score. Working with Sergei Prokofiev, Eisenstein aimed for "a congruence of the movement of the music with the movement of the visual contour". He successfully blended highly expressive visual compositions and musical phrases to capture all the tension, terror, brief calms and prolonged assaults of combat.

John Smith is the Arbiter Athlete of the Week.

John Smith cited for athletic ability

"When we play a game against somebody, we're going to have the best running back on the field," head football coach Tony Knap stated. "When I say this I am keeping in mind that we have John Smith in our backfield."

Smith, a senior running back from Sacramento, California, scored 17 touchdowns last year which was tops in the Big Sky Conference and sixth in the nations Division II scoring.

Against the Cal Poly Mustangs last week, Smith only gained 15 yards on the ground, while scoring a touchdown. What makes Smith so good is his versatility. Where Smith lagged behind in rushing, he went to the air and rambled off 143 yards on just 6 receptions and scored an additional two more touchdowns.

Backfield coach Adam Rita pointed out, "John is great under pressure. When the heat is on, he can really turn it on. He usually comes through in a clutch situation," Rita added.

Rita also noted that a few pro scouts have inquired about Smith. "John has a good chance to play pro football. If he chooses not to play pro ball, Smith will have excellent opportunities as a coach. He is a good student, has great football awareness and a love for the game," Rita added.

Knap had an interesting point that relates very well to Smith and his attitude. "If you were going to war and had the option of choosing your own personnel, you'd want John Smith on your side."

Women's hockey begins season

The Boise State women's field hockey team has been busy preparing for what could prove to be their most successful year ever.

BSU will be fielding several returning players, including their entire forward line, and several strong defensive players. According to coach Connie Thorngren, "The defense will be sparked by an outstanding senior goalie, Cindy Fralick; and senior fullback, Maureen Hirai; while the offensive attack will be lead by seniors: Deanna Brower, playing wing and Connie Coulter at inner. Senior Julie White will be filling the open halfback position."

BSU has both a Varsity and J.V. teams. The Field Hockey season officially opens against the University of Idaho at 4 p.m., October 3, on the BSU hockey field, west of the gym.

Broncos slide past Weber. 28-13

by Melinda Scharf

Boise State opened Big Sky Conference play on a winning note Saturday night, dropping the Weber State Wildcats 28-13 in Wildcat Stadium before a crowd of 11,342 fans. The win also moved the Broncos to 3-0 in overall play.

The Broncos took the opening kickoff and marched upfield on the passing of junior quarterback Greg Stern, who started for Boise State. The Wildcat defense stiffened on their own 44-yard line, and neither team could mount a sustained drive until Weber State scored late in the first quarter. A 26 yard run by Wildcat fullback Wayne Jones brought Weber to the Bronco 23, but the BSU defense stopped the Wildcats on the Boise State 15, where Dan Marrelli kicked a field goal to put Weber ahead 3-0 with 4:30 left in the first period.

The Broncos came right back, though, as the passing of Stern brought Boise State to the Weber six yard line in eight plays. Running back Ron Emry bulled his way over from the three, and Avi Rofe's PAT was good, giving Boise State a 7-3 lead.

The Wildcats took the kickoff on their own 15 for a return of 14 yards. An offside penalty to Boise State gave Weber a first down situation on the WS 41, but on second and ten, QB Bobby Martin's pass was intercepted by safety Jim Meeks, who returned the ball 19 yards to the Weber State 36.

A short drive by the Broncos resulted in a fumble by Clarence Smith, which was recovered by Weber State. The steady Bronco defense held the Wildcats, and this time Marrelli's FG attempt from the 34 was wide and no good.

Boise State took over on its own 17, this time with Lee Huey at the helm. On the first play of that series, Huey passed to John "Superneedle" Smith, who scampered untouched for an 80 yard touchdown play. Another Rofe PAT was good, and BSU was ahead 14-3, where the score remained unchanged until the halftime gun sounded.

Weber State scored quickly at the start of the third quarter, as running back Don Reddic returned Clint Sigman's kickoff 94 yards up the middle for a Wildcat TD. Marrelli's conversion attempt was good, and Weber trailed by four, 14-10.

The next series found Boise State unable to make headway. Weber took over on its own 29, but QB Kermit Musseau's pass was intercepted by Sigman on the Weber 39. The game then turned into a rash of errors, as the Broncos intercepted Weber twice; the Wildcats recovered a Bronco fumble and Boise State then recovered a Weber fumble on its own 31. Huey then moved his squad downfield on a 50 yard drive, where he then found receiver Mike Holton wide open in the end zone on a 28 yard scoring bomb. A third Rofe conversion was good, and the Broncos rolled to a 21-10 lead with 1:36 left on the third quarter.

Early in the fourth quarter, Marrelli booted a 52-yard field goal, which luckily bounced off the crossbar for three Weber points, cutting Boise State's margin to 21-13. The Broncos iced the victory when Orin Trussell fumbled a Bronco punt, which was recovered by Jeff Tryon. Stern passed incomplete, and Weber State was called for offside, which put Boise State at first and goal from the three.

Stern handed off to Gene Skulick, who took it up the middle for the score. Rofe's PAT again was good, and the Broncos made the final score 28-13.

There ain't action in Ogden

by John Steppe

In the beginning Knap created the football team and the team was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the field. From this humble start the team worked and practiced and became good. Then came time for the game and it was at this point I came along to ask if I could go with the team and see "how it was." I was told to be at the Varsity Center at 9:30 in the morning. This seemed strange to me because I rarely wake before 10:00, but alas I went.

I walked on board the bus and began to read. The team joined me shortly and looked at me strangely, with a "who are you?" stare. Thus began the journey.

As the bus rolled along the tea came slowly to life. As the trip progressed further the team seemed to grow in size and the space I had claimed for myself was now being claimed by the massive bodies of one pigskin pusher after another. Excitement reigned supreme, but as my luck would have it, the rain became a cloud burst and once I honestly thought I would go stark-staring mad. Then the team got hungry and I do mean hungry.

After the restaurant ran out of food the team again became restless and stormed the bus which didn't help my situation for now they were all a little heavier and a lot happier. The joyous group then began to play those games which people of that size play. I tried to remain impassive but it was though I had volunteered to let myself be driven slowly insane.

We arrived at our destination at about 4:30. I ran into the motel and locked myself in my room.

After a short visit with the television I regained myself and decided to go and find some action.

As you might have guessed my luck was running true to form and the action passed me by.

Shortly after this I decided (for reasons of my own) to find a place that sold cigarette papers. I couldn't find any. Nowhere in the town of Ogden is there a store which sells cigarette papers. I went back to my room and ate Twinkles until I fell asleep.

The next morning I awoke a new man, dressed and went to eat breakfast with the team. They already had eaten. Sitting by myself in the restaurant, I talked to my eggs which were staring at me until out of frustration I viciously attacked them with my fork.

That night came the game, the high point of my trip. Everything was better because we won. However, by this time I was so worn out all I wanted to do was sleep. I boarded the bus and closed my eyes, but then, along came the team. This band of merry gentlemen, to my dismay, was not at all tired, but in good spirits.

The highways of Utah did it to me again. The team wanted to enjoy their victory and that they did, singing from Ogden to Boise. The sleep I wanted I did not get, but entertained I was. Every song they could think of, which were few, they sang several times. I was very tired when we arrived in Boise, my eyes were burning from lack of sleep. Now I find myself writing this story and I haven't even been to bed.

In closing, let me say one thing; strange as it was, I wouldn't have missed it for the world.

Thin clads win easily over Boise State alums

by Ken Dick

Boise State's cross country team open their season with an easy win over the BSU Alumni last Saturday. This weekend the team will have their work cut out for them by running against Washington State at Moscow.

In the win over the Alumni, Soph Steve Collier finished first with a time of 25:19 over the five mile course. Coming in first for the Alumni was Dave Lockman with a time of 25:35.

Collier and Lockman were even during most of the race until they reached some small hills where Collier opened a lead. The Broncos and the Washington Cougars will be running the same five mile course at the Big Sky Conference to be held later this fall.

The Cougars of the Pac-8 are rated by Track and Field Magazine as third in the nation. The Cougars have two national champions in the 3 mile and 6 mile runs. They will be the toughest team the Broncos run against this season.
