Rude, Juvenile? Come On Now

So, U. of I. student body president David Warnick is juvenile, rude and in extremely bad taste. What did he do to deserve this? He actually had the audacity to question the infallibility of certain school administrators.

Were the labels pinned on him justified? Not really. The whole affair centers around a letter he wrote to Governor Cecil Andrus, at Andrus' request. Warnick said he was concerned about the regents reliance on their staff. Nothing rude or in bad taste about that.

Warnick also said that the administration might be justified in spending less time on preserving the institution, and more on student related matters. If that is rude and in bad taste, perhaps the regents' concept of those words might be questioned. He also thought a change in the administration attitude might be justified, if not that, then a change in personnel. Is that juvenile? Hardly.

His worst offense was to actually air these complaints to the press. What is the world coming to? The board seems to forget that they have access to the press whenever and wherever they feel like it. Student leaders have to do something out of line or incredibly newsworthy for them to even be mentioned.

What does the controversy boil down to? Basically, that Warnick had the intestinal fortitude to share complaints with Idaho citizens instead of keeping quiet as student leaders have done in the past and because he criticized highly paid, hand picked administrators. The students of Idaho may still have the last laugh because these accusations could turn out to be true. However, the board does not need to worry about Warnick any more. His term of office will be over in November, and that will indeed be a loss to Idaho students.

Boise State Room Shortage

Termed Acute

by Donald S. Smith

BSU, as we all know, has an acute classroom shortage. We have a 12 per cent increase in student-to-credit ratio in one year. Our classroom utilization is high above the average college or university. In fact, we have an 87 per cent usage of classrooms between the hours of 7:40 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Between the hours of 12:40 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. we have 99 per cent usage and 92 per cent usage between the hours of 7:40 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

Yet, we are not without hope. The new science building and an addition to the vo-tech building are in the starting stages. In the 76-77 school year a four story education complex will be started next to the new science building and connected by protected walkways. This new Science-Education complex Reporter Helen Christensen may have left an erroneous impression in the minds of some regarding Boise State's commitment to eliminate sex discrimination. She quotes me as saying a difference in salaries that could only be tied to sex was identified in the Fall of 1973 and that the English Department filed sex discrimination suits. Implied is a cause and effect relationship which does not in fact exist. Christensen failed to report that upon discovery of the salary differential, Boise State asked the State Board to request that monies be appropriated to correct those salary inequities. That request was granted and in the Spring of 1974, salary adjustments in excess of $60,000 were granted to BSU faculty and staff. Included in that sum was nearly $4,500 to women in the English Department.

Only after the adjustments had been made did English Department faculty members file complaints. Then a total of sixteen professors, will cost in the neighborhood of 7.8 million dollars. A new Fine Arts building, an addition to the Business building, and 1 or 2 floors added to the Liberal Arts building are in the planning stages.

The stadium and additions to the gym and Vo-Tech buildings were funded by student revenue bonds that were sold in 1969. We have been paying this back out of our tuition. An excess developed from this fund and this is what funded the new theatre. This theatre was built in appreciation of the students and their efforts in paying for the student revenue bonds.

There are more buildings and ideas in the proposal stage. With these and the buildings already in the planning or starting stages the university hopes to alleviate the classroom shortage and meet the demands of the future.

ten men and six women, alleged they were victims of sex discrimination. Their claim rested on the premise that the salary adjustments should have ignored departmental lines thereby equalizing salaries cross campus. The University's stand was that adjustments should be limited to within department; women English professors compared to male English professors, women P. E. teachers to men P. E. teachers and so on.

The resulting legal argument is far from simple. If it were a case of departmental women being paid less than their departmental colleagues, there would be no argument. The University would quickly correct that kind of inequity. However, radically changing the independent departmental salary structures presents a very different set of problems that cannot easily be labeled sex discrimination.

Code of Lordly Ethics

by Jack Bryson

The work study program regulated here on campus by the financial aids office has been a blessing for this university. This program provides minimum or near minimum wages for the student while providing the university with an almost endless pool of inexpensive laborers. It creates, however, a problem in labor relations. Employees hired by the state of Idaho are full time, career oriented individuals. The work study student is a part-time employee concerned with earning enough income to help him get through school. As a result, two distinct classes of workers have evolved from this system: one is the state employees (Lordly), and the other is the work study students (Coolies).

Perhaps if you're one of the fortunate you will never be subjected to the work study program. But, if you're one of those, like myself, who fate has turned his back on then you too are one of the members of the "Coolie" team. I have worked in various areas of this institution and have discovered the real problem that arises is not the distinction in classes of workers, but rather how the Lordly treat the Coolies. There is obviously some confusion among the Lordly about proper treatment of the Coolies, or more directly how to keep us in our places and teach proper respect.

Being helpful, as I always am, I would offer the Lordly a few simple rules to help clear up the problem and create a uniform code so all Coolies will be treated equally.

BSU Code of Lordly Ethics and Respect Guidelines

The philosophy of the university is to hire as many Coolies as possible at ridiculously low wages. Coolies earn less than the Lordly, therefore saving the university huge sums of money. Coolies will never be financially secure enough to quit, creating indebtedness to the university and a perpetual slave labor force. Of course, BSU will not accept responsibility for students who may develop scurvy or any other physical impairments created by malnutrition.

1. The Lordly will be payed on the first of each month; Coolies one day later. (To give you the opportunity to cash your checks first in case there isn't enough money to cover all the checks written.)

2. Coolies are to be given the most trivial, tedious, and meaningless duties ever conceived by mankind (similar to many of your own) and if they should think of an easier way to accomplish their tasks, be sure to tell them it's already been tried and doesn't work. Remind them that you are in charge, after all, they're only Coolies.

3. When engaged in conversation with Coolies, control the conversation. Don't allow them to choose a topic that may be interesting to both of you. Talk about such things as the exciting weekend you had weeding the garden. Make them aware of how exciting life can become.

4. Coolies of this age group usually have one of two thoughts on their minds: one is illegal, the other is immoral. When you discover a Coolie with such thoughts, deliver a stern moral lecture. A good way to start is "Now, back in my day..."

5. If a Coolie arrives at work in a good mood be sure to put him in his place immediately. Don't allow him to ruin your day by trying to cheer you up.

6. Basically all Coolies are liars. If a Coolie attempts to pick-up a paycheck for another Coolie be sure he has not only the other person's ID card but also a note from him. Possession of only the ID card means he probably killed the person and stole the card.

7. Remember when hassling a Coolie to remain courteous and cordial at all times. If students stop attending this University you may find yourself without a job.

Fellow Coolies, if you want equal treatment just clip out this article and send it to your "favorite" supervisor. I'm sure he'll know what to do with it.

BSU Called 'Cave of Apathy'

Editor, the ARBITER

During the past few weeks, I've been reading this paper like a lot of other students have (I hope) and I have some thoughts about what I've read, so if space permits, I'd like to share them with you.

In Issue 2, (the same one that had my first letter) a letter from a student had a part in it that got me thinking. He said something about the "caves of apathy" which some students have and that they should come out of them and join something called Students For Students. Let's see what, if anything, it means. There are things that move upon the earth called animals who need shelter from the elements and to sleep for periods of time. Some make holes in the side of hills and these holes are called caves. Apathy is defined as lack of feeling, emotion, sensation, insensibility and other things. The phrase must mean then, that we have a lot of bears roaming around campus with a sense of feeling or emotion for their club.

The editorial that was done on the student senate - I agree with.

Well, I think I had better stop. Of course, I won't get any comments in regards to this, but who cares! Dan Lawrence

ASBSU fails to allocate money

Editor, the ARBITER:

Do you know that your senators in the ASBSU have failed to allocate $26,000 for student programs? This is money that each full-time student pays out of the $181.00 for fees per semester.

Have you been asked by your senator, or have you taken the time to visit your senator and make your feelings known as to what kind of programs you wish to be funded? Unless you talk to your senator, the yearbook, which in the past, has been almost the only concrete return on your investment free to any full-time student, will now be yours only if you pay an extra assessment for it. This is not fair to you the student because money that could insure you a valuable record of your college year free of cost is now going to sit unused or be dribbled into minimum use programs at the discretion of the ASBSU senate.

Stand up for your right to receive an annual report. Otherwise, the next program to go could be the newspaper or the program board. Your $18 should buy you more than the opportunity to pay for concerts and special events.

PEOPLE BY DON HAY

Article on 'Buckley Amendment' praised

Editor, the ARBITER

Thank you for the article on the Buckley Amendment. It is important that the students' right to privacy be called to the attention of all persons connected with the University. On numerous occasions, FBI agents and other government and business officials have contacted individual faculty members for information about particular students and former students. These requests always seem innocuous enough, but the aftermath of Watergate and the mysterious ways of bureaucratic procedure ought to make us ever alert to the privacy rights of students and the possible misuse of information about them.

I was very recently contacted about a former student by Veteran's Administration representatives purporting to conduct a "survey". I readily and unthinkingly gave the requested information. The important point is - I was probably breaking the law. Thank you for calling this to my attention. Hopefully, I will use the Buckley Amendment to stiffen my backbone next time around.

Citizen's arrests suggested

Editor, the ARBITER

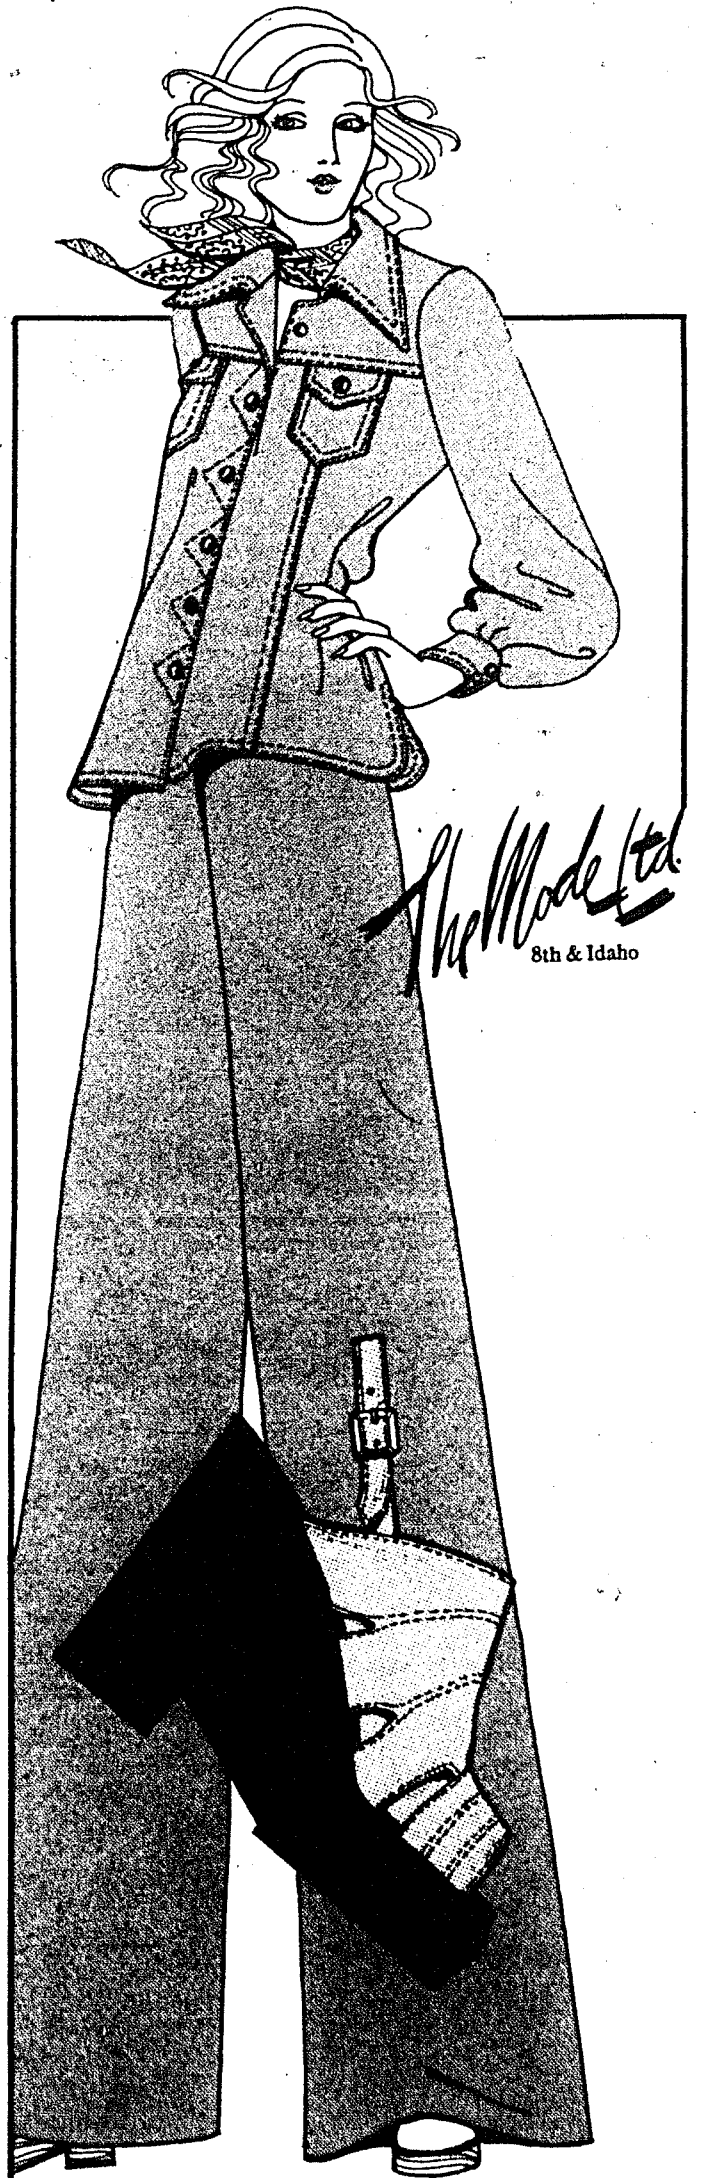

Congratulations to Bob Davis for finding a new and refreshing approach to the inequities in enforcement of drinking laws at BSU stadium. Lets admit, however, that a seasonal Arbiter editorial and Senate protest just haven't gotten the job done.

Considering that some positive action is called for, and remembering that "the best way to change a bad law is to enforce it", particularly among the rich. Might I suggest that students purchase general admission tickets and begin making citizen arrests whenever they see a violation in the section? One such student would not be effective. One hundred, such as an out-of-season track or basketball team, would have policy makers in, to use the vernacular of journalism, a fret.

State Board denies AK Psi deferrment request

by Barb Bridwell

The State Board of Education last weekend denied a request by Alpha Kappa Psi to defer a ruling on the fraternity's sex discrimination suit. BSU chapter president David Schroeder had requested a deferment because of a bill currently in Congress to exempt Alpha Kappa Psi from Title IX, a Health and Welfare ruling on sex discrimination.

Board member Ed Benoit originally moved that the request be deferred until July, after Congress has the opportunity to vote on the exemptive measure. Fellow Board member J. P. Munson opposed this move saying Benoit was "evading the issue".

Roy Truby stated that Alpha Kappa Psi is currently in violation of Title IX and therefore could be compelled to disassociate from Boise State. In their present form, they are also a violation of BSU regulations on sex discrimination, according to David Taylor, BSU Vice-President of Student Affairs.

Another Board member, A. L. Alford said, "I hate to see this Board step into areas of student government." He later moved to deny Alpha Kappa Psi's request which passed, with only one dissenting vote.

In other business, Boise State requested additional funds to pursue an Advanced Institutional Development Program grant. This grant is provided for under Title III, Health, Education and Welfare.

According to BSU President John Barnes, the funds would enable the university to develop more student services, speed the development of Management Information Systems and increase the level of the accounting systems in the business office.

One use for the funds would be in the area of management consulting. Barnes said that students could be counseled by computer. "Students who don't know what occupation to go into, could be counseled by computer. Various occupations would be programmed into the computer and the student could scan these. It would assist students in vocations."

The State Board questioned the fiscal impact of the program, and voted to evaluate the program in areas where BSU is deficient.

Boise State also requested a budget amendment for faculty because of the increase of enrollment. The original request of $247,800 for 13 additional faculty was based on a 4 per cent enrollment increase. Barnes said that there was an actual increase of 8.97 per cent resulting in a need for 24 additional faculty at $460,800.

Barnes said that even with this request, last years high student/faculty ratio will remain at the same level. "The funds requested represent only the amount required

U of I student president reprimanded by board

University of Idaho student body president David Warnick received a severe reprimand from the State Board of Education last week following a letter he wrote to Governor Cecil Andrus. Warnick had attempted to get an investigation of university administrators.

Board member Ed Benoit of Twin Falls told Warnick in the Board meeting that his attempts and use of the press were "juvenile, rude and in extremely bad taste."

Regent John Swartley read part of the personal letter from Warnick to Andrus where Warnick said that some administrators might be better off in other posts. Swartley stated, "I'm disappointed in your letter and your attitude."

Warnick wrote the personal letter to Andrus after a meeting where Andrus requested he do so. Warnick later said he probably wouldn't have written the letter had he known it would be made public. He also later said that the charges against the administration must be serious since the Board's reaction was so violent.

David Warnick

Another charge leveled against the administration by Warnick was that none of the board members had experience in corporate management and that it might be a good criteria for future appointments. Warnick also stated that the administrators do not have the best interests of the students in mind, merely the perpetuation of the institution.

The last person to receive such a tongue lashing was BSU President John Barnes when he attempted to get a new academic program past the regents without their approval. The Board meeting last weekend was Warnick's last appearance there. Student government elections at the U. of I. will be held in November.

confiscated a glass apparently containing alcohol. The party had disbanded by the time police arrived.

Orwick told University of Idaho Assistant Director of Relations Carolyn Cron that he called police to "embarass the $35,000-a-year bureaucrats. Cron organized the party. Cron also said she bought the alcohol herself, although the food was furnished by the U. of I. food service.

The party may have been in violation of a Moscow city ordinance prohibiting drinking in a public school building. Moscow police said the matter was turned over to the prosecutor's office for investigation.

At the same time the press party was occurring, State Board members were attending a gathering at the home of University Of Idaho President Ernest Hartung. The board has made an exception to the drinking rule with Hartung because his residence is on the University of Idaho campus. At the other institutions, the president's home is off campus.

Last year, the regents banned drinking in the Presidents Club, an exclusive seating section of Bronco Stadium.

ASBSU President Nate Kim stated that the state schools will jointly bring a class action suit against the State Board to reverse their alcohol policy. In addition, at last weeks student senate meeting, senate members voted to buy a liquor license for the Student Union Building.

ASBSU President Nate Kim was not allowed to speak on the subject of naming the Special Events Center at last weeks State Board meeting.

Student Leaders Discuss Alcohol

by Barb Bridwell

Student leaders from various colleges and universities met with the State Board over the weekend in an informal rap session. One of the topics discussed was alcohol on campus.

The board was questioned on their policy of not allowing alcohol on state campuses. Board member John Swartley stated that students should go to the state legislature with the question. "The buck rests with the legislature," he stated. Swartley also said that "someone needs to get arrested, then it will be solved." University of Idaho student body president David Warnick responded by saying, "I could walk in here right now and drink and no one could stop me except by regent policy." Several students questioned the board's decision to take the issue to the legislature.

One student said he couldn't see why, if the alcohol ruling was a board policy, why the board could not reverse their own policy.

One member of the legislature at the rap session, Norma Dobler-Moscow, stated that if the alcohol policy were to be reversed, legislative appropriations to higher education would be reduced.

The alcohol issue was put to a test a few hours after the rap session when a cocktail party was held for reporters covering the board meeting at the alumni center on the U. of I. campus.

John Orwick, a former U. of I. student, called Moscow police to the alumni center where they to keep constant the faculty/student ratio of the previous year rather than have it significantly increase due to the enrollment which the university has experienced this fall."

Board member John Swartley questioned the budget because the board had not been notified before the figures were requested. He stated, "It seems strange to change budget figures without the approval of the board." The request was granted.

The Regents refused to discuss the naming of the Special Events Center, as ASBSU President Nate Kim had requested. Instead, the Board referred the matter back to the BSU Executive Committee.

Barnes said the reason this occurred was because the Board felt it was not in their realm and because they did not want to set a precedent.

The board also considered the future of medical education within the state. They turned down a recommendation of its medical education advisory committee to explore ways of expanding medical education through buying slots for future physicians in medical schools in surrounding states.

The board was contracted under the WAMI (Washington, Alaska, Montana, Idaho) medical education program for 20 students to attend medical school at the University of Washington. The board is now in the process of phasing out a similar program with WICHE (Western Interstate Commission of Higher Education).

The advisory committee suggested investigating a similar agreement with the University of Utah to replace WICHE.

Board member J. P. Munson stated that "We have to make a decision on medical education. In four years, we'll be spending $1.2 million on WAMI. The medical education commitment of the state will soon be $1.75 million."

Dr. L. S. McCall, Chairman of the medical education advisory committee, reported to the board that the universities participating under the WICHE program won't be as willing to take Idaho students without the benefit of the program.

McCall also said that medical education is unique because of the severe competition for seats, the cost and benefits to the state and the improvement in quality of care by community clinical units. "Because of these factors, medical education cannot be fooled with or compared with other graduate education."

Munson reminded the board that they must also keep in mind the law school, which is now having accreditation difficulties. "We can invest that medical money into 200 or so law students instead of 30 medical students. If we start investing this kind of money into 30 or 40 physicians, we still face the problem of our law students," he said.

Senate report

Idaho schools will sue State Board of Education over alcohol on campus

by Helen Christensen

Alcohol on campus, Financial Advisory Board recommendations and the proposed Student Union Building Annex were some topics of consideration at the Sept. 30 student senate meeting.

ASBSU President Nate Kim told the senate that BSU, Lewis and Clark State College and Idaho State University are planning to bring a joint suit against the Idaho State Board for alcohol on campus.

The senate passed a motion which stated that the ASBSU will make a financial commitment to split the cost of the suit with the other Idaho schools. Kim estimated the total cost of the suit at approximately $5,000.

"This is the first time Idaho Universities have worked together on an issue," said Kim. "The only way alcohol on campus will be settled is in the courts," he said. It is a State Board ruling which prohibits alcohol on campus.

"Alcohol has been an issue on this campus for several years," stated Arts and Science Senator Lenny Hertling. "It needs to be settled now, for there's going to be stricter enforcement of the rule in the future," he added.

Senator Mike Hoffman, Arts and Sciences suggested that the ASBSU apply for a beer license. The motion passed with Business Senator Dave Wynkoop abstaining.

ASBSU Treasurer Ron Buchanan reported that the FAB, Financial Advisory Board, recommended that the senate appropriate $3,530 for service awards and supplies for the Les Bois yearbook and that the yearbook publication costs be paid by student subscriptions and advertising revenues, and if this does not cover minimum costs the senate should fund the balance.

Health Science Senator Howard Welsh made a motion asking that the senate approve the FAB recommendations with the stipulation that all additional expenditures require approval from the senate.

Les Bois editor Margo Hansen told the senate that it was unfair to require students to purchase a subscription for the Les Bois. "A yearbook is one of the few tangibles a student receives from his ASBSU fees," she stated.

The senate also voted to table a motion to approve the budgetary request of the Student Action Committee. They had requested $1,980 for an educational-political film series.

"We're making a hell of a mistake if we don't fund this program," stated Hertling. The motion can be reconsidered at a future senate meeting.

Tom Moore, Assistant Student Union Director, informed the senate of the Student Union Board of Governors' plans to build a SUB annex. He stated that the building could mean a possible $9 to $10 increase in student registration fees. "We would like to have some input from the students on this plan," said Moore.

The next senate meeting will be held Oct. 7 at 4:30 p.m. in the Senate Chambers on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

From the results, Psychologist Paul Lavrakas has determined the most exciting male figure. The perfect male, Lavrakas claims, has thin legs, a medium-wide chest and medium-thin hips.

The "Alfred Hitchcock pear-shaped look" - a thin chest and large stomach and hips - is the least attractive male figure, according to women surveyed.

Andrus Appeals to Citizens to Help Plan Destiny

"Will you plan Idaho's future?" Governor Cecil D. Andrus has appealed to the citizens of Idaho to help plan the destiny of the Gem State.

Governor Andrus made his appeal during a ceremony Tuesday, September 30, in which he proclaimed October as Idaho's Tomorrow Month and called upon all Idahoans "to help plot the course of our ship of state by participating in the Idaho's Tomorrow Program this October."

The Governor described the program as one which enables and encourages people from all walks and ways of Idaho life to help plan the State's future, adding that 1,000 persons have already participated in it thus far this year.

He explained, "There are several different ways that citizens can take part in developing the blueprints that will guide the State's growth. These range from completing questionnaires to answering questions in a random statewide telephone survey to writing profiles that outline priorities for Idaho in 1995.

"Each of these is a stimulating exercise that motivates thought about the future, a subject that few of us seldom, if ever, seriously think much about. But the process of writing profiles that outline alternatives for Idaho's future seems to provoke the most discussion and the greatest exchange of ideas."

Governor Andrus explained the profile topics include population, industry, agriculture, energy, natural resources, and personal well-being, subjects about which there is a wide range of varied, conflicting, and controversial opinions. He said the resulting conversations are often heated, always informative, and seldom dull, adding, "I've had to bite my tongue while sitting in on several such group discussions to keep from expressing my own opinions."

"We're finding that the people who have participated have some pretty definite ideas about what they want for Idaho in twenty years," the Governor said, "and the participants are learning that to reach the goals they desire, we will have to compromise and trade off priorities in one topic area to achieve the values we want in another."

"We are all learning that to realize what we want for Idaho by 1995 and to maintain our superior quality of life, we have to start planning and building for it today," he added, comparing the State to a large ocean liner that must begin adjusting and fixing its course several miles out to sea in order to reach its desired port of call.

"It's an ambitious task," he said, "but I hate to think of the consequences if we don't do it."

He said business and government have technical planners who can expertly forecast future trends and develop policies to "impact" the results but that they're not always accurate because there are always surprises that simply can't be predicted.

"Besides, if these plans are to include the dreams, values, and priorities of Idahoans from all walks and ways of Idaho life, then we must all participate in planning for Idaho's future," he said.

The Governor said once the opinions and priorities of the majority of Idaho's people have been expressed and identified, then the planning experts can take over and design policies that will bend the trends to meet these goals. He added the public's opinions will have to be sounded every five years or so to update and revise these policies.

"Regardless of how any of us feel about the future," he said, "it is going to come, bringing with it a phenomenal rate of change. If we don't plan it, then others will whose ideas may not represent our own."

"If you have something to say about Idaho's future and want to say it," he continued, "then take part in one or several of the Idaho's Tomorrow activities in your community."

Human Rights files to be found in library

The Human Rights Area Files were developed by the Human Relations Area Files Incorporated, a nonprofit research organization sponsored and controlled by twenty-four major universities. The Files may be found on the fourth floor of the BSU Library and may be used during regular library hours. For help using the Files ask one of the reference librarians or Mr. Huskey or Mrs. Cummins in the periodicals department. Approximately 225 educational research institutions throughout the world presently participate in HRAF's programs.

HRAF organizes and makes available primary research materials and study aids relevant to the human sciences. The study of information contained in these files contributes to an understanding of man and his ways of life by stimulating and facilitating training and research in these fields.

The Human Relations Area Files are a collection of primary source materials (mainly published books and articles, but including some unpublished manuscripts) on selected cultures or societies representing all major areas of the world. The Files are designed to meet the needs of students who are involved in the comparative study of human behavior, culture, and society. Anyone who is interested in man's behavior, customs, and social institutions - whether in anthropology, sociology, geography, politics, psychology, or in fields as widely diverse as literature, home economics, art, or agricultural development - may find relevant data in the Files.

BSU has purchased the files in the 4" x 6" microfilm format. Paper prints may be made from the films if needed.

Although most access to the Files is through printed indexes, as an added aid catalog cards have been ordered and will be filed in the card catalog. These cards will be for individual book titles only that have been analyzed for HRAF. The Library will continue to receive new microfilm as information is added to the Files.

Postal Service Urges Correct Vet Addresses

The Veterans Administration is one of the U.S. Postal Service's best customers, emphasizing the importance for beneficiaries of VA benefits to keep the agency informed of their correct addresses.

Each month the VA mails out 7.3 million checks to veterans and their dependents for compensation, pension and education benefits. Another 4.7 million veterans who hold GI life insurance policies receive 12 million pieces of VA correspondence periodically throughout the year.

For many of the pensioners and GI Bill students, the monthly VA stipend represents a major source of income. While VA records indicate the vast majority of beneficiaries receive checks routinely, this near-perfect record requires the continuing help of the veteran and dependent.

The largest number of nondeliverable checks is among GI Bill students, principally because of their mobility. Weekly changes of residence during periods of a school term are not unusual, a VA spokesman said.

Veterans are urged to contact their nearest VA office promptly with changes of address. VA 'vet reps' on campus can assist in expediting address changes for GI Bill students.

Veteran's educational benefits diminishing

Education benefits for veterans may soon be a thing of the past if The House of Representatives votes October 6 to repeal the GI Bill.

The House Veterans Affairs Committee recently voted to end GI Bill benefits for GI's who enlist after December 30, 1975. The bill is scheduled to come to the House floor on October 6.

"With the end of the Vietnam wartime period, it is appropriate to terminate the current educational readjustment program," the Veterans Affairs Committee report said.

GI students currently receive a monthly minimum of $270 which covers tuition and other expenses. Cutting off veterans' benefits would save the government $1.5 billion in the next five years, according to the committee report.

The bill has already come under heavy fire. "This bill would virtually guarantee that the products of our volunteer military will be under-educated and under-employed," said Reps. Robert Cornell (D-WI) and Robert Edgar (D-PA), dissenting members of the Veterans Affairs Committee.

Pro-GI Bill forces have been bolstered by several education organizations and veterans groups. "Eliminating the veterans programs is a slap in the face of every low-income veteran who couldn't afford college on his own," said a spokesman for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

"We are totally against that bill," agreed Charlie Garefinger, director of the National Association of Concerned Veterans. "It is a serious threat to the concept of voluntary armed services."

Garefinger urged all veterans to make their positions on the issue known to their congressional representatives immediately.

'Women are not chicks, or, what do you say when...?'

BY BSU Women's Alliance

"Chick." We must be assaulted with that term hundreds of times each day. It is such a subtle put-down that many of us - female as well as male - never give it much thought.

But really, what is a "chick", that word so often used to describe a woman? The answer, of course, is that a chick is a fluffy little yellow bird with no brain. On the other hand, a woman is a human being. Human beings are not baby birds. Women are not chicks. It is important to begin pointing out that simple distinction. A lot of people seem to be misinformed!

Seriously, responses to other sexist words and situations are not always so easy to come up with. It is no accident that the emotion which accompanies the first step towards liberation is, for most women, anger. Anger is a natural and healthy reaction to the injustices and insults of a second-class status. It is an assertiveness of self worth.

Sometimes we mutter a quiet response to an obviously sexist comment. Other times we feel strong enough to shout a triumphant "f--- you!" But can't we think of some more creative and educational expressions of our anger! For instance, what DO you say when...:

Scene 1: You are a student. In their lectures, your instructors make it clear that they are not talking to the women in the room. "For those of you who can't type your own term papers, perhaps you can get your wives or girlfriends to do it for you."

Scene 2: You are a student. In their lectures, your instructors make it clear that they are not talking about women. Instead, they discuss the "rational man" or the history of mankind" or "the role of the public office holder as a father."

Scene 3: You have a B. A. and are looking for a job. Each prospective employer asks how fast you can type and take shorthand.

Scene 4: You have a job. Your kids are in high school. Your boss calls you "girl".

Scene 5: You are an instructor. You overhear two male students talking about your ass.

Scene 6: You ask your doctor about the possible dangers of the birth control pills he prescribed, and he tells you, "Don't worry your pretty little head about it."

There probably aren't any easy answers to these situations. But anger at this kind of put-down is an experience shared with many other women. Women in a group can help each other through the first, painful phase of their anger. And controlled, directed anger can become a force in shaping our new destiny.

The BSU Women's Alliance meets every Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the old Arbitrator office. Bring your creative solutions.

Tutors asked to file "tutor's information card"

All prospective tutors will be asked to file a tutor's information card with the Office of Veterans Affairs. No person, regardless of his credentials, will be recognized as a qualified tutor until he has been authorized by the Department Chairman from the area in which he plans to tutor.

A veteran attending Boise State University under the G. I. Bill, on at least a half-time basis, may be eligible for up to $720 of VA tutorial entitlement.

You may use no more than $60 per month of tutorial entitlement and may pay the tutor no more than $5.00 per hour. The rate per hour and method of payment must be agreed upon by both you and your tutor. Both must sign the Tutorial Assistance Form (1990t), verifying that the hours tutored and rate paid are correct. The Office of Veterans Affairs may periodically check to make sure tutoring has been received as stated.

If you are expecting difficulty in any subject required for the satisfactory pursuit of your major and the instructor of the course is willing to certify your deficiency, the Office of Veterans Affairs will assist you in finding a qualified tutor and completing the proper paperwork to receive VA tutorial entitlement.

Public Relations conference scheduled

The first Intermountain Public Relations Conference has been scheduled for October 25 on the Brigham Young University campus in Provo, Utah. All business and communication students from BSU are invited to attend the conference and workshop.

'Parents are Teachers' program set

Jeanne Bauwens and Marion Summers will present the program, "Parents are Teachers", at the October 8 meeting of the Boise Chapter, Association for Children With Learning Disabilities. The Wednesday meeting will be held at the Fort Boise Community Center, 700 Robbins Road, at 7:30 p.m.

The program will be an overview of a subject that is essentially designed to help parents learn to be more effective teachers of their children. The book, Parents Are Teachers by Wesley C. Becker, and a video tape of a recent parent group will provide a basis for furnishing some practical suggestions and methods for parents to use in positive and loving interactions with their children.

Jeanne Bauwens is a Learning Disabilities teacher of k-3 at Franklin Elementary school, and Marion Summers is a Special Education student at Boise State University as well as the parent of an exceptional child.

"Brilliant in performance and extraordinary in accomplishment. . . . Its scope is remarkable and its achievements rare, for it manages to translate the apocalyptic tragedy of our century into human terms and to do so with laughter and tears, with scorn and compassion, and with simple beauty of truth. . . . Totally without pretension, with two great performers creating unforgettable portraits, it stands as one of the fine films of our time, for all time."

Crowd Large at SFS Amendment Proceedings

by Bob Davis

The Students For Students amendment, it was decided, had to be submitted to three readings. Each reading would be held at a different senate meeting. The first reading was conducted at the first meeting when the amendment was proposed. The senate decided to hold the second reading at the following meeting.

The second meeting was held in the Big Four room because of the crowd expectations.

The crowd at the second meeting proved to be even larger than that at the first one. The Society of Silly Goose was on hand to video tape the proceedings. Interest in the amendment was spreading rapidly.

The Students For Students representatives had secured a copy of the State Board Policy Manual. When recognized by the senate, they read a clause dealing with amendments. The clause stated that all amendments had to be approved by the State Board. The administrative assistant to President Barnes was on hand with his own copy of the manual. In it he had found a clause that stated that the university president was the representative of the State Board. He also claimed that because of this, the amendment had to be shown to Dr. Barnes. Students For Students countered with the fact that the clause dealing with amendments did not mention any representative, but stated that it had to be approved by the State Board itself. Dr. Taylor, vice-president of student affairs stated that he felt it was a purely student matter and should be dealt with by students only. Other students in the gallery spoke out, many stating that they approved of the amendment and wanted their senators to place it on a ballot for the students themselves to vote on.

The senate decided to place the amendment in a committee to study all the implications of it. It was also decided to seek legal advice from the campus attorneys and the Attorney General's office.

The amendment was then read for the second time and the senate was finally able to move on to other business. The debate preceding the reading had gone on for over two hours. It appeared to many that the amendment was gaining headway.

Later that week, the committee to study the amendment met for the first time. Several members of the SFS movement were on hand and the debate continued.

Huck Hovey stated that the meeting was a waste of time since no new information would come out of it. He further said that the senate would not be making a decision for or against the amendment by placing it on a ballot but would only be giving it to their constituents to vote on.

One of the major gripes the senators had was that of giving voting privileges to part-time students. They said that the part-timers did not pay ASBSU fees and would probably be against being forced to pay them. Travis Updyke pointed out that it would be no problem for the school to place a card in everyone's packet during registration which would allow each individual to decide whether he/she wanted to pay the fees.

Those who marked "no" would not have to pay them and would get a part-time activity card, those who marked nothing would receive a special "voting" card which would allow them to vote and participate in all ASBSU activities. The full-time students would still get their regular card which would allow them to vote and attend sporting events. The senators were still undecided about what to do even though they did admit that it was a good idea.

It was decided to adjourn the meeting and wait for the legal advice requested by the senate. It would prove to be a wait in vain.

acting and design are all reaching that final polish. This season's opener promises to be a delightful evening of theatre.

Sourdough Cooking Made Easy

by Naomi Aman

Just the mention of sourdough cooking suggests delicious pastries which are a rare treat. To most people it also suggests a complicated process, of which a basic starter must first be given to you by a neighbor or friend.

Actually, sourdough hotcakes, donuts, and biscuits can be made by anyone - even those short on time - with a rather minimum effort. One of the simplest sourdough starters is made by mixing 2 cups of flour, 2 cups of lukewarm water, and a package of dry yeast or a yeast cake. This mixture should be placed in a warm place overnight and the next morning it will be bubbly and have the pleasant smell of yeast. It is also ready to be the basis of the morning's hotcakes. Mix 1 cup of the starter with 1 cup of flour, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon of cooking oil, 1/4 cup of instant or evaporated milk. Blend in 1 teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of soda, and 2 tablespoons of sugar. The mixture should be allowed to bubble and foam a minute then is ready to be dropped on a hot griddle.

According to Don Holm, editor of The Old-Fashioned Dutch Oven Cookbook, two secrets of good sourdough cookery are: avoid mixing the batter too much because over mixing destroys gases from the dough, needed for the raising process. He says, "It's best just to throw it together and let it go at that." The second secret is to use a little higher heat than you normally would.

Starter should be kept in a glass or pottery container, which have been boiled to destroy bacteria and stored in a cool place. It should never be stored in metal containers. Sourdough buffs are reminded to never put anything back into the starter pot except the basic batter which has started to ferment. The starter will be spoiled if batter which has been mixed with sugar, salt, eggs, soda, or cooking oil is put back in the storage pot or jar.

World renowned illusionist Andre Kole will appear October 10.

"World of Illusion" set for October 10

"World of Illusion", one of the most unusual stage programs of our time, will be presented here one night only in the Boise State University gym, Friday, October 10, at 8 p.m. The star of the show is Andre Kole who is recognized as one of the world's foremost authorities on the unusual.

For over twenty years, in sixty-three countries of the world, Andre Kole has studied, investigated, and given presentations dealing with the fantasy and the reality of the supernatural world. At the cost of many thousands of dollars he has assembled one of the most elaborate programs of our time dealing with the unusual. "World of Illusion" includes such unusual presentations as a visible demonstration of the fourth dimension and a revelation of some astounding predictions of the future. One of history's most famous and baffling fraudulent seances will be recreated. Another presentation will be based on Mr. Kole's investigations in India and other parts of the world concerning the actual possibilities of levitation.

Andre Kole is one of the leading inventors of unusual stage effects and illusions. He has developed over 1,000 inventions in his field, some of which will be included in his performance here. In addition to his television appearances in this country he has also appeared on national television shows in thirty-eight countries of Europe, Asia, Africa, and South America.

While appearing throughout the world Mr. Kole has made it a point to study the unusual and mysteries of each country. At the request of TIME magazine he made an investigation of the psychic surgeons of the Philippines who claim to perform miraculous, surgical operations on people without the use of any medical instruments or anesthetics. As a result, Mr. Kole testified in court on behalf of the United States Federal Trade Commission in their attempt to stop the promotion of psychic healers of the Philippines in this country.

With his educational background in the field of psychology, and his studies of mysteries and illusion, Mr. Kole has become an expert in recognizing trickery and deception. This background has made him one of the most knowledgeable people in the world today concerning the real and the unreal of the supernatural and spiritual dimensions of life today. Over seventy million people on five continents of the world have witnessed Andre Kole's presentations through live performances and on television. Two films that he made in Hollywood, World of Illusion and World of the Seance have been translated into major languages and are now viewed daily by thousands of people around the globe. He has addressed more than 3200 separate university audiences and at the present time probably speaks to more college and university students throughout the world than any other person.

Mr. Kole states that his studies and investigations have given him a deep interest and respect for spiritual truth; and that his program is not just to entertain but to illustrate some facts in an interesting way that will not only enlighten, but cause some serious thought concerning the spiritual dimensions of our lives. This special appearance of Andre Kole's World of Illusion is sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International.

Students Warned Against Fraudulent Business Practices

by Shannon Freeman

Caveat Emptor - Let the buyer beware! The old Roman adage is now more necessary than ever, especially for students.

Students are one of the most popular groups of people to go after as far as "selling a bill of sale".

Hardly a day goes by when we do not encounter some type of fraudulent business practice. We live in the age of the half-truth - advertising by omission.

There are hundreds of outright fraudulent schemes in every aspect of business. Students can suffer sizeable financial loss and embarrassment from being taken in by shoddy or illegal practices.

As students are supposedly in a time of change, turmoil and "looking for something", the business world sees the group as vulnerable and susceptible to all kinds of schemes.

The outright swindler counts on the consumer's desire to get something for nothing. He plays on the victims vanity, gullibility and ignorance.

Consumer protection agencies give the following advice to avoid unnecessary fraud:

Never buy in haste. Compare prices and take your time.

Don't deal with fly-by-night merchants. Deal with reputable merchants who have been in business for some time. Find people who have dealt with them and get their reactions. Check with the Better Business Bureau.

Don't be "bargain blinded" or shop by price alone. Watch out for "once in a lifetime bargains", "discounts", and "wholesale" items. Quality is an important value.

Don't be high pressured or overwhelmed by slick salesmen. Look into all the facts.

A salesman may promise or say anything verbally to get you to sign a contract. He can then sell the contract at a discount to a finance company to which you will be forced to pay heavy interest, despite the original verbal agreement.

Always check the credentials of a door to door salesman. Make sure he is who he says he is, representing the company he claims to be representing. Never pay a door to door salesman in cash.

Take contracts seriously. Don't sign a contract before you read and understand it. Read all the fine print.

Keep important receipts, tags, sales checks, and guarantees in a safe place.

Don't accept an incomplete bill for your merchandise. Make sure the service contract spells out who provides what and for how much.

Don't make unrealistic financial commitments. Make sure you can comfortably afford what you buy.

Educate yourself to consumer fraud and sources of consumer help.

As so many things today are going into the category as "the big rip off" it is important to educate yourself on what you can do about it. Your greatest protection to this problem is becoming an alert and aware consumer.

dealing with "Scales of Presence: Man's Place in the Four Environments".

Haine's selection of poetry reading will be "The Wilderness", reflecting the years he has spent in the wilds of Alaska.

Publications he presently has in print are Leaves and Ashes (Kayak), Twenty Poems (Unicorn Press), The Stone Harp (Wesleyan University Press), and Winter News (Wesleyan University Press).

Regular hours at the Gallery in Julia Davis Park are Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m. The Gallery is closed Mondays.

Art Show Opens In Ada Lounge

On October 13 the Donna Jacobs art show will open in the Ada Lounge of the Boise State University Student Union Building. The show will run through October 31 and will be free of charge to everyone.

Ms Jacobs, a self-taught Oregon artist, lists as her favorite subject matter pictures dealing with western, wildlife and scenic themes. She is a member of the League of Oregon Artists and her works are executed in acrylic, oil, water color and pastels.

She has studied at the California School of Fine Arts - San Francisco and Portland State College. Jacobs has given many presentations in the San Francisco Bay area, Marin County, California; Portland and other northwestern towns.

The art display is being sponsored by the Art Committee of the Student Union Programs Board, Steve Robertson, Chairperson.

Arbiter Interview With William Wycherley

Said to be influenced by Moliere, William Wycherley has attained a position of note as a Restoration dramatist whose comedies, though risqué and often frankly ribald, show so much strength and savagery in attacking the vices of the day that their author has been labeled 'a moralist at heart'. He was educated in France and at Oxford and has developed a style which has an individuality seldom found in other writers of his time.

His first play was Love in a Word; or St. James Park (1671) followed by The Gentleman Dancing Master (1672). His best known work is The Country Wife (1674-75), in which the comedy hinges upon the efforts of a jealous husband to keep his young but naturally wanton country wife from the temptations of London life, which she takes to only too easily. His latest play, considered by many critics to be his finest work, was The Plain Dealer (1676). William Wycherley died in 1716.

D. Mr. Wycherley, some have denounced your work and especially The Country Wife, as being... what shall we say... a bit coarse?

W. Well, sir---as some ancient Greek once said: "Indigniar quicquam reprehendi, nonquia crasse Compositum illepidene puteatur, sed quia nuper: Nec veniam antiquis sed honorem et praemia posce."

D. Hmm---That may very well be sir, but some still say that you should clean up your acts. So to speak.

W. Nay Sir! By that means I may be the more acquainted with the husbands, but less with the wives.

D. What? You mean the women like the racy things and the men prefer the tame? I would have figured it the other way.

W. Women serve but to keep a man from better company. A mistress should be like a little country retreat near the town: not to dwell in constantly, but only for a night and away, to taste the town the better when a man returns.

D. That's not really a fair way to talk about women.

W. Thou art an ass!

D. O.K. So -- how do you feel about marriage?

W. Wives are like soldiers. They are made constant and loyal by good pay rather than by oaths and covenants.

D. So, then, you would prefer to "keep" women than to marry them.

W. What! Who boasts of any intrigue with me? What lampoon has made my name notorious? What ill women frequent my lodgings? I keep no company with women of scandalous reputations.

D. And are you married, sir?

W. Yes.

D. And you love your wife?

W. Yes, above the world or, the most glorious part of it, her whole sex. On my wedding day one of my friends said: "Billy, till now I never thought I should have envied you or any man about to marry, but you have the best excuse for marriage I ever knew."

D. Well, at least we know your friend is fond of your wife.

W. My friends are civill!

D. But do civil persons drink and sing bawdy songs?

W. O, amongst friends, amongst friends. For your bigots in honor are just like those in religion: they fear the eye of the world more than the eye of Heaven and think there is no virtue but railing at vice and no sin but giving scandal. They rail at a poor little kept player and keep themselves some young modest puppet comedian to be privy to their sins in their closets, not to tell 'em of them in their chapels.

D. Nice speech.

W. Thank you.

D. Oh, by the way, the Theatre Arts Department here on this campus is doing one of your plays: The Country Wife. It opens Thursday October 9 and runs through the 18th at the Subal Theatre. The box office opens October 6 and you can phone them for tickets between 3 and 6 p.m. daily at 385-1462.

W. Phone?

D. I'll explain it to you later. Well, is there anything you would like to say in conclusion?

W. Only this. 'Tis as hard to be a good fellow, a good friend, and a lover of women, as 'tis to be a good fellow, a good friend, and a lover of money. You cannot follow both; then choose your side. Wine gives you liberty; love takes it away.

D. Anything more?

W. Wine makes us witty; love, only sots. Wine makes us sleep; love breaks it.

"Nec veniam antiquis sed honorem et praemia posce."

"By that means I may be the more acquainted with the husbands, but less with the wives."

"Wine gives you liberty; love takes it away."

Reactions sought in rock concerts problem

Q. What is your reaction to the statement made by the pop concerts chairman, that there will be no more hard rock concerts because of the smoking problem and the disorderly crowd at the Edgar Winter concert?

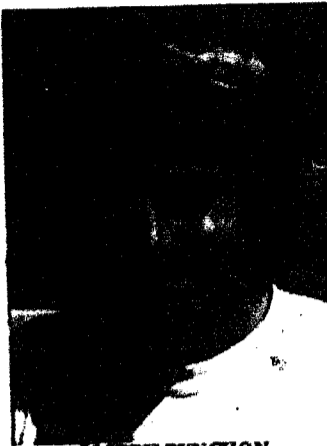

TINA LARSEN

I think they should still have them. I don't know if the cause of the problems is smoking and drinking, but I know there is a lot of it going on inside there. It doesn't bother me anyway.

RANDY GIDLEY

I thought neither were obvious. I didn't think they existed at all. I thought they weren't that disorderly. Everybody seemed to be gettin' into it.

JOSEPH PYNCHON

As far as I'm concerned, they could cancel the concerts in there because it sounds like crap, the acoustics. It's too hot, no ventilation and I could see the Fire Marshall's problem. If there's a fire in there (gym) there's nowhere to go, it's unsafe.

LYNN FROSS

I feel he is right as far as the crowd goes and I think a college should have a little mellower crowd, a little more behaved crowd. As far as hard rock goes, I'm not really into it.

MARGARET COMER

I thought it was kind of ridiculous. I don't think it's (smoking) that big of a problem....no matter where you are going to be you can have some disorderly people.

JOE DIAZ

I've seen the problem a lot worse, like at Elvin Bishop.....they ought to build a place where we can have good concerts.

TOM KELLY

The lack of facilities is what the problem is, the crowds can be handled.

Line-O-Credit extended

The Idaho First National Bank has agreed to extend Line-O-Credit to Boise State students purchasing H. P. Calculators or tool kits, according to Betty Brock, manager of Your Campus Store.

Normally, according to Brock, Line-O-Credit is for a minimum of $300, but has been reduced to accommodate students wishing to purchase these items. "Many students have been asking us to sell these items to them on a time-payment basis, which is not feasible," Brock said.

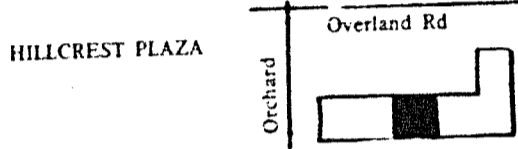

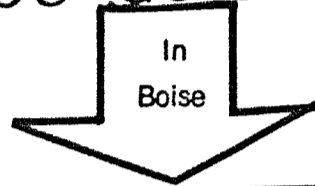

The Campus Store will distribute Line-O-Credit applications to students requesting them. Students will then fill out the application and take it to the Idaho First National Bank. The Campus Store will accept the bank's check for the purchase.

If You've Got It, Flaunt It

The women of Seattle, Washington are reportedly still wearing full clothing in public-but not because they have to.

The ruling came in a court case in which two Seattle women were accused of lewd behavior by sunbathing topless in public places. Defence Attorney Don Yershow argued that the city

Judge Wanick agreed, and cited a state Supreme Court ruling of last week banning sexual discrimination on high school football teams.

According to a decision handed down this week by Seattle Municipal Court Judge Barbara Wanick, women have as much right to appear topless in public as men do.

ordinance banning bare-breasted women in public was unconstitutional, since it applied unequally to women only.

So far, the city hasn't indicated any intentions of appealing the ruling. And anyway, as one local observer noted, "With a wet and cold winter coming on, the full effect of the decision won't be visible for quite a while."

The fever that won't break: THE RISING COST OF A MEDICAL EDUCATION.

Like most things, the cost of attending medical school has risen sharply over the last decade. To many medical students that cost represents a heavy burden, a financial problem that can affect your concentration.

It needn't be that way. The Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship Program was originated to free you from those worries. Men and women who qualify will have the costs of their medical education covered, and will also receive a substantial monthly allowance.

The program offers more than tuition and salary, it offers you the opportunity to begin your practice under very favorable conditions. As a health care officer in the military branch of your choice, you'll find yourself with responsibilities fully in keeping with your training, and with the time and opportunity to observe a full spectrum of medical specialties.

When you decide on the specialty you wish to pursue, you may find yourself taking those graduate medical studies at one of our many large and modern medical centers. If so, you can count on that training being second to none. Both the clinical and research work being done in them have made Army, Navy and Air Force hospitals a major new national medical resource.

It's a long road, but the first step is simple. Just send in the coupon. The details we send you may make the whole way a little smoother.

Broncos Slide by Montana 35-34

by Melinda Scharf

Another episode in the continuing saga of "Cardiac Seizure in the Stands" occurred in Bronco Stadium Saturday night, as the Boise State Broncos pulled still another victory out of the fire, slipping past Montana State 35-34 with 31 seconds left in the game. The win gave the Broncos their 16th consecutive win at home, while boosting their Big Sky record to 2-0 and their overall tally 4-0.

The first scoring attempt by the Broncos came with 5:03 left in the first quarter. Starring quarterback Greg Stern opened an 80 yard drive on passes to Mike Holton and Ron Emry, plus three keepers for 20 yards. The drive was capped by a 12 yard pass to John Smith for the touchdown. An Avi Rofe conversion was good to put the Broncos on the board 7-0.

The next series saw Montana State move from their own 28 yard line to the Bronco 23 in nine plays, but on second and nine, the Bobcats were penalized a loss of down for an illegal forward pass. Kicking specialist Keith Swenson made good a 41 yard field goal to make the score 7-3.

Right at the start of the second period, the Broncos scored once again, this time with John Smith taking it in from the seven for the score. Rofe's PAT was no good, and the score upped to 13-3. The Bobcats came right back, however, and on second and goal from the one, quarterback Mike Holder bulled his way over for the TD. A PAT by Pat Bolton was good, and the Bobcats trailed by just three, 13-10.

Boise State turned around and scored once more in the second quarter, this time with Stern running it in from the five. Rofe's conversion again was good, and the Broncos led 20-10 with 3:18 left in the half.

Montana State's final first half drive ended with a 52 yard field goal by Bolton, making the score 20-13 at the end of the first half.

Third quarter action opened with cornerback Gary Rosolowich intercepting a Bobcat pass, putting the Broncos first and ten on the Bobcat 21 yard line. Stern then handed off to fullback Bob Cleveland, who took it in from the one for the score.

Rofe's PAT was good, and Boise State then lead 27-13.

The next series saw Montana State bounce right back. The Bobcats scored on two plays, capped by an 81 yard touchdown pass to split end Brian Flaig. Holder's two point conversion attempt was good, and the Bobcats narrowed the Bronco lead to just six, 27-21.

Montana State wasn't finished, however. Four series later, the Bobcats threatened again. After the Bobcat drive was stopped short at their own 35, the ball was punted away to the BSU one, where it was touched by Rosolowich, and taken by Montana State. Holder then carried it in for the touchdown, followed by a PAT by Bolton that was no good. The Bobcat tied the score at 27 all.

The fourth quarter was something else again. With 1:51 left in the game, Montana State scored on a 3 yard run by Holder, capping a drive of 77 yards. The PAT was good, and the Bobcats took the lead 34-27. What was yet to come could easily be classified as a small miracle. The next series, Lee Huey came in the game to replace Stern.

After three plays, Huey's pass intended for Holton was intercepted on the BSU 38 yard line, and things looked hopeless for the Broncos. But not for Gary Rosolowich. Holder ran the ball on a keeper, but to his surprise, Rosolowich grabbed the ball right out of his hands and turned it back over to the Bronco offense. Huey threw to Clarence Smith good for four yards, but was sacked on the next play. Huey then worked the miracle - with 31 seconds left in the game, he threw a 32 yard touchdown pass down the left sideline to Holton, who was waiting in the end zone with outstretched arms. A two-point conversion attempt by the Broncos resulted in Montana State being called for pass interference, and Boise State got the ball on the one. Huey then handed off to Cleveland, who went flying over the superb blocking of Jim Ryan and Everett Carr for the two points and the winning play.

Hockey team defeats U of I

Boise State's field hockey team started the season successfully by defeating the University of Idaho 3-0.

Connie Coulter scored a goal in the middle of the first half giving BSU the lead and the momentum needed to settle down and control the game. Elaine Elliott knocked the second goal for the Bronco's and Boise State lead 2-0 at the half.

Elliott struck again for the only score in the second half, insuring the win for Boise State.

BSU will be hosting the University of Utah Friday, October 10 at 2 p.m.

Women's volleyball to host CSI

The BSU women's volleyball team is optimistically awaiting the start of the 1975 season. The team has only three returning players from last years J.V. team, with the majority of players made up of freshmen.

Coach Genger Fahleson commented on the team's progress, "We are working with a 6-2 offense, a variation of the 4-2 offense. The 6-2 is new to our team but using this offense gives the team four permanent spikers and two spikers who double as setters. We don't really have a tall team but they are handling the ball effectively." The BSU volleyball team will be opening their season Tuesday evening at 7:00, by hosting a team from the College of Southern Idaho.
