Senate is not unapproachable

In the last ASBSU senate meeting, a student brought a rather farfetched proposal before the body, that of building a horse corral for students who wish to ride their horses to school. Although the senate played with the idea, such as one senator responding to a question regarding horse thievery by saying "hang 'em", the fact that the senate took the time to consider the proposal shows the senate will listen to their constituents.

Many students feel that their elected officials are unapproachable. This is not the case. Any student who wishes a problem or idea put before the senate need only contact the student body offices prior to noon on Friday before the Tuesday senate meeting and it will be placed on the agenda. In addition, senators have offices on the second floor of the SUB with office hours posted. Messages can also be left for them there.

Although it is doubtful that the corral will become a reality, the senate should be commended for listening to the proposal instead of simply throwing it out. Perhaps with this act, the senate has opened up new lines of communication between students and themselves. B.B.

Post Script: The one question remaining logically seems to be-will horses have to buy parking stickers?

Idaho Power Company, planning its proposed Pioneer steam plant to meet applicable air and water quality standards, would install electrostatic precipitators like this one (indicated by outline) at the Jim Bridger plant in Wyoming. Located between Bridger Unit 1's boiler (left background) and 500-foot-high stack (right), air cleaner is designed to remove over 99 per cent of the particulate matter from the boilers exhaust. [Photo and caption courtesy of Idaho Power Company].

Student criticizes Arbiter for cover

Editor, the ARBITER

Critical journalism is one thing; but your attack on Dr. Barnes on the last issue cover goes even beyond the limits of common consideration to another human being, much less the boundaries of responsible journalism.

Dr. Barnes has said nothing whatsoever about naming the Special Events Center after himself, so the cover is not only in poor taste, it's libelous. Is it Dr. Barnes you resent so deeply, or is it the authority he represents? If the latter is the case, you have defeated your purpose by lambasting him personally. If your objection is Dr. Barnes himself, you have no business subjecting the student body to "personal" opinions by displaying your inane pettiness on the cover of our paper.

If this is your idea of conscientious or constructive reporting, you are sorely mistaken, and I for one deeply resent it. I feel that an apology should be offered to the students of this university, to Dr. Barnes, and to the family of John Woodworth. Michael Anderson

Idaho Power responds to article on Pioneer plant

Editor, the ARBITER

Thank you for this opportunity to set the record straight about Idaho Power Company's proposed Pioneer plant, discussed here recently in an article by Mark Hopkins.

Expert witnesses, testifying under oath and thus putting their professional credibility and careers on the line, presented the facts of the matter last August to the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, which must give its approval along with and socioeconomic studies on Pioneer as chief environmental scientist for Stearns-Roger, Inc., consultant to Idaho Power.

York said data gathered so far indicates the plant, burning low-sulfur Wyoming coal, would meet current state and federal standards "with considerable margin. At this time, we do not see any significant impact to the ecological system."

Tests of Pioneer's coal, according to the scientist, have determined that the sulfur content of three of four seams to be used is low enough to permit compliance with air-quality standards, while that in the fourth would exceed some regulations if burned alone. He said Stearns-Roger recommends blending the coal from the four seams - even though at greater cost - to bring all of it within the sulfur-content limits.

Explaining to the PUC how other pollutants would be controlled, York said Pioneer's boilers are being designed to bring nitrogen oxide emissions within current standards and electrostatic precipitators would control particulate emissions. He testified that as a result of these precautions, nitrogen oxide emissions would not exceed 7,620 pounds per hour and between 99.6 - 99.8 per cent of particulates would be removed.

Tall stacks will mix the emitted pollutants into trillions of tons of air high in the atmosphere, he said, to "reduce the concentrations to well below the emission standards."

BSU's own Richard K. Hart, economics professor and director of the Center for Business and Economic Research, asked and answered the question of whether the Ada-Canyon-Elmore area area. The Ada-Canyon-Elmore area's population would increase no more than one per cent with Pioneer's construction, he said, and it would be "relatively easy" for most communities to absorb the new growth because of the larger population and economic bases of the three counties.

Other witnesses told the PUC that alternative generating sources could not be completed in time to supply Idaho Power's needs. For example, a nuclear engineer testified, a nuclear plant would not be available until about 1986-87. Dr. Clayton R. Nichols, BSU associate professor of geology, testified that the temperatures of known geothermal resources in Idaho were "too low" for commercial power production under existing technology.

The claim that Idaho Power employs an "industrial developer" to recruit business is false. The sole function of our industrial relations director is to supply information on a wide range of factors entering into site selection - everything from climate to labor availability to recreation opportunities. This is a necessary service to provide a new business or industry with Idaho's best labor force, utility services, markets, etc. In this way, a business or industry can locate with the least impact on public services and capabilities, at the same time providing the greatest benefit to Idaho. So long as a business or industry has decided to locate in Idaho anyway, our industrial relations director performs that needed function.

BSU students can see "instant" evidence right on their own campus of the increasing demands being made on Idaho Power for more electricity. New building after new building, using electricity for lighting, heating, cooling and numerous other purposes, is rising there to provide classrooms and labs for growing enrollments. It is to supply demands such as these tomorrow that Idaho Power must plan new generating plants today. Bob Brown News Director Idaho Power Company the approvals of numerous other local, state and federal regulatory agencies before Pioneer's construction can begin. Unfortunately for the public, which deserves the facts free of emotionalism in order to make independent value judgments, the testimony of these knowledgeable experts has had far less circulation than the so-called "assessments" of those who would share none of the responsibility for Idaho Power's failure to provide adequate service as it is required to do by law.

Consider, for example, the testimony of Dr. Thomas H. Milby, a Berkeley, California, physician specializing in the full-time practice of occupational and environmental medicine, toxicology and epidemiology. In his expert opinion, Milby told the PUC, Pioneer would not present "any substantial threat" to human health from its emission of regulated pollutants if it meets federal primary air pollution standards. "As I have indicated," he said, "there is very little evidence of any causal relation between the regulated pollutants - sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxide and particulates - in the amount to be emitted by the Pioneer plant and human health."

Milby, also an adjunct associate professor of occupational medicine at the University of California, put the subject of sulfates as a health hazard in its proper perspective. "There is no unanimity of opinion (among scientists), whatsoever, that sulfates are a primary hazard, and so this issue remains unresolved," he stated.

Will Pioneer meet federal primary air pollution standards? Yes, testified Dr. J. L. York, who directs site selection, ecological

Work - study problems related

Editor, the ARBITER

I would like to say how much I agreed with the article about the work study problems. I would also like to get serious for a moment and expand on the subject more. The low wages were mentioned in the other article, but the exact amount was not mentioned. If the student is to do a job that requires a little thinking, he gets $2.00 per hour. If he wants to do a job, like push a broom, he gets $2.20 to $2.50 per hour.

Also, the financial aids people help the student figure out how much money he needs to live and go to school for a year, but they won't always let him work enough to make that amount. For example, the average single student can live on $200.00 per month (about $170.00 after taxes), and he can live and eat ok, but at $2.00 per hour, that's 25 hours per week and he is not usually allowed to work over 20 hours per week. Also, few departments were allotted enough money to allow any one student to work over 15 hours per week. Few departments will let a student work between 5 and 10 per week to make up the extra hours because they need more work done.

So, the average student on work-study must live on between $100.00 and $120.00 per month. Try to live on that and see how you like it. It's hard, but some students have no other choice.

I am not mad at the departments. I am mad that the system is set up in this way. If a student has friends in high places then he doesn't have this problem. I appreciate the help that I am getting on the work-study program, but it isn't being given to me freely, I work for my money. I don't mind working, but I would like a decent wage.

I am sure there are many students out there who feel the same way that I do. I hope all of you will read this article and then see if there is something we can do to change the situation.

CIA dirty tricks

Marchetti reveals military take over attempt

"The CIA problem cannot be seen in a vacuum, it must be seen in its proper perspective. I think that proper perspective is and relates to a bigger problem; the imperial presidency," according to Victor Marchetti, former CIA agent and author of The Cult of Intelligence. Marchetti spoke to about 75 persons last Thursday at Boise State.

"The imperial presidency has been developing since Franklin Roosevelt's time, where the chief executive has been gathering more power over the years and creating a larger bureaucracy. At the same time he is shrouding it all in secrecy so that he doesn't have to inform the public," Marchetti said.

The CIA is part of an intelligence community, according to Marchetti, "a community that is full of redundancy, overlap and inefficiency." He said it costs Americans over $6 billion a year and employs over 150 thousand people on a full time basis. He also said that there are 60 federal agencies that have their own intelligence organizations.

Marchetti said intelligence activities have spread to the state and local level. "Every state is developing some sort of intelligence component, a secret portion of it's state police or it's state government."

The CIA is unique in intelligence because it is primarily a clandestine organization in government. The CIA began in World War II when the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) was created. The OSS was a "blow and burn" operation, concerned with sabotage. It was modeled after the British, Marchetti said, arrogant and aristocratic. These traits exist in the CIA today, he said.

The CIA was created in 1947 under the National Security Act. "When you read that law you get the impression that the CIA is essentially a clearing house for information coming in from all over government. But if you read the law closely, you'll find in there a clause that says the CIA can do whatever else it is asked to do by the National Security Council," Marchetti said.

Under that clause a secret charter grew that allows the CIA to do "anything it wants to, almost," Marchetti added.

CIA should be reviewed," Marchetti stated. "Some of it is just simply to save money. Some of it is on order to bring back into our government the ethics and principles that should be there in keeping with our democratic beliefs. But even from a plain pragmatic view there should be around."

Marchetti said that some of the information the government wanted deleted concerned the "pussy cat they wired to make a walking bug and the guy who wanted to put an airplane into two suitcases, then put them together and fly over areas to take pictures."

what's going on in your government. You will only know what the Pentagon, the White House and the CIA want you to know."

There are several other undesirable features in the bill according to Marchetti. Wiretapping is one. "All the government has to do is certify that there is a danger to the structure of the government and they can wiretap. And telephone companies and landlords must cooperate forthwith."

The Senate CIA investigations headed by Senator Frank Church started out well but now there are some committee members and staff who are discouraged, according to Marchetti.

"I think they have done some good stuff and they are not digging deep enough. They are too concerned with the sensitivities of the White House and the CIA," he said.

Homecoming candidates named

Homecoming Queen and Mr. Bronco elections are being held on November 6 and 7 this year. The candidates for Homecoming Queen are: Lynn Ashby, LDS Students Association; Devrea Herman, Vo-Tech; Jan Lythgoe, Outdoor Activities; Mary Hereford, Chaffee Hall; Barbie Latinen, Driscoll Hall; E. W. Pancoast, Society of Silly Goose; Toni Portmann, Inter Greek Council; Gayla Wilson, Valkyries; Denise Zundel, Alpha Psi Omega.

Candidates for Mr. Bronco are: Kelly Bickle, Vo-Tech; Jim Bridges, Outdoor Activities; John W. Elliott, Alpha Psi Omega; Ray Hooft, Driscoll Hall; Todd Morgan, Inter Greek Council; Kim Silva, Society of Silly Goose; and Jerry Ransom, Valkyries.

This includes what is popularly known as "dirty tricks," such as propaganda, misinformation, penetration of student, labor and cultural groups, toppling of governments, secret support for juntas, sabotage and paramilitary activities as in the Bay of Pigs.

The CIA is divided into four directorates; intelligence, science and technology, clandestine services and support. "The CIA is really two agencies in one," according to Marchetti. "About one third of the agency is concentrating on collecting information through technical methods. The other two thirds are clandestine services and their support."

There are many reasons why the change," he stated.

Marchetti said that because of his book he has been blackballed by the CIA. "They said my book would be harmful to the national security. That's what they say publicly. They can't prove that what I say will cause immediate harm to the national security and I think I can prove the opposite." The CIA is attempting to have large sections of Marchetti's newest book deleted but so far have failed to do so with a few exceptions.

However, Marchetti said, there was a judge "who saw things their way and thinks we should reargue the case and give the government the benefit of the doubt. We're going to start the third time

He also said that a story will soon be revealed in New Times magazine that Pentagon officials planned a military takeover of the United States. "It will include several high ranking officials," including former California Governor Ronald Reagan.

Marchetti also talked about Senate Bill 1 which calls for "very strict punishment, long prison terms and big fines for anybody who leaks any information about government activities classified or considered national defense information. And the government decides what falls into those categories. You will never know

Credit discrimination law goes into effect October 28

by Shannon Freeman

To the joy of thousands of women, creditors will now be prohibited from judging applications on the basis of sex or marital status. The new credit discrimination law will also guarantee applicants an explanation if they have been denied credit. The law goes into effect October 28.

Gasoline companies, banks, department stores or anyone who offers credit or loans will not be permitted to ask that question that makes you or breaks you "Are you married or single?"

The Federal Reserve Regulations implementing the law address sex discrimination in credit with these provisions:

- Creditors cannot use sex or marital status as a factor in "scoring" systems which determine the most creditworthy applicants.

- Creditors cannot ask about an individual's or couple's birth control practices or child bearing plans, nor can they assume from a woman's age that she may quit her job to have a baby.

- On the other hand, a creditor can ask and consider the part that child support or alimony plays in an applicant's expenses or income.

- People victimized by sex or marital discrimination can sue for damages plus fines of up to $10,000.

With the legislation of the new law creditors should judge an applicant on the basis of his or her own merit. Parts of the law will not take full effect for three years, such as the right of a married woman to obtain a personal credit rating.

The versatile Up With People performed last week at Boise State to small but appreciative audiences. Their performance blended a mixture of contemporary music and original pieces. They used audience participation to get their message of life across.

ASBSU Senate to hold open hearing on traffic control policy

Members of the ASBSU Senate will be conducting an open hearing on Boise State University Traffic Control Policies during the week of November 3-7. All students, faculty members, BSU employees and community members may submit written and/or oral testimony pertaining to BSU Traffic Control Policies.

Written testimony submitted to the ASBSU Senate may be left at the Information desk in the Student Union Building at any time during the week of November 3-7.

Oral testimony will be taken on November 5 and 6 from 2:30 - 5:30 p.m. in the Boisean Lounge of the Student Union Building. Oral testimony will be recorded.

McClure will visit campus to discuss G.I. Bill

Senator James McClure will appear on the Boise State University campus November 15 as a guest of the BSU Veterans' Advisory Committee.

McClure will appear in the Student Union Building from 11 a.m.

until noon. His presentation will precede the BSU-Utah State Homecoming game.

The purpose of McClure's visit is to discuss pending legislation and certain inequities in the veterans's G.I. Bill.

According to Gary Bermecosolo, Veteran Affairs Coordinator on the BSU campus, several people had requested that a representative of the Idaho government appear at BSU to discuss questions and problems they had with veteran benefits.

All veterans and anyone else who is interested in attending the McClure talk are welcome. Further information may be obtained from Gary Bermecosolo, Administration Building, Room 114, 385-1679/1471.

Workers needed at Homecoming Election polls

Students are needed to work at the Homecoming Election polls November 6 and 7 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The pay will be $2 per hour.

Those interested, please apply in the Financial Aids Office, room 117, Administration building, and attend the orientation meeting November 3 at 4:00 p.m. in the Teton Room, SUB.

What Do You Enjoy Most About Attending Boise State University? by Duane Trumble

JEFF RODWELL, senior

Being in the college atmosphere and a college town.

LISA FLEISCHMAN, visitor

I like the campus. It's very "woodyish", not "cityish". It has a nice landscape. I like the new buildings.

ROYANNE KLEIN, senior

I can think of a million things. The academic structure of the school. The job opportunities. The activities.

TERI-KAY LINDSAY, freshman

Not seeing the same people twice. There's a hundred thousand people.

MARCIA HAAVIND, junior

It offers a lot to the older student - the one who isn't right out of high school.

KATHY ANDERSON, junior

The activities. It's a nice, easy school - I don't mean scholastic wise - but the people and the teachers are easy to get along with.

JIM FERREL, sophomore

Living in the dorms and the social life there.

RICK ALSAGER, senior

The closeness of the area - things you can do - outdoor activities like fishing and hunting. The football's good, too.

V.D. is number one communicable disease

Q. What is our number one communicable disease problem?

A. Venereal disease is America's number one infectious disease problem. Although V.D. is one of the most treatable of all diseases, only with better education followed by treatment, can it be controlled.

Q. Is syphilis on the way out? How many cases of syphilis are there in the United States each year?

A. No, syphilis is on the increase. There are 85,000 cases of infectious syphilis contracted by someone in the United States each year.

Q. Do pre-marital blood tests detect cases of syphilis?

A. Yes, these blood tests detect many persons who are positive for syphilis. One out of every 71 cases treated is detected through a blood test among marriage applicants.

Q. What is the first sign of syphilis?

A. A painful sore called a chancre (shank-er) appears at the exposed area, usually around or on the sex organs or the face. From this sore, other people become infected.

Q. How can a person know if he has syphilis?

A. By a microscopic examination of the discharge from the sore and by a blood test.

Q. What should a person do who suspects he has been exposed to syphilis?

A. He should consult his doctor. At Boise State University, he should come to the Student Health Center where the necessary tests will be performed and he can be treated. All information is held in strict confidence.

Mini-course informs students of their rights

Monday, October 20 was "put a cop on the spot" day for the special topics course Problems in Communication Education. That's when Robert Taylor, BSU assistant professor of criminal justice administration put himself on the spot to inform students of their rights as well as the rights that a law enforcement officer has at the time of an arrest. Taylor has been involved in police work for approximately 14 years, has taught at BSU for the last six years and has a master's degree in criminal justice administration. Taylor will begin work on this PhD, next fall.

The mini course opened with Taylor explaining the entire arrest procedure. "Once you are placed under arrest," he stated, "nearly all your rights are taken away." He was quick to add that certain rights are not taken away as guaranteed by the 5th and 6th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Search and seizure laws were defined and the differences between the new and old laws were pointed out. After a short lecture a question and answer period ensued.

The first area for discussion was the use of force in apprehending a suspect. Taylor explained that an officer "may use only the minimum force necessary" when apprehending a suspect. He also added that deadly force is never warranted when apprehending a person suspected of committing a misdemeanor. Taylor advised the student not to overreact when they believe an officer has used more than minimum force.

"It's best to do exactly what the officer says, and then file suit against him at a later date," he said.

ARE AMERICANS NATURALLY RELIGIOUS?

Maybe they're naturally industrious, inventive or frontier-oriented.

But naturally religious? No.

85 million Americans have no expressed faith. Millions more don't practice the faith they profess. Millions more, every year, drift away from faith altogether.

If you believe in the power of the Gospel of Jesus and think His Gospel still has something to offer America, then maybe you should investigate the Paulist way of life.

The Paulists are a small community of Catholic priests who have been bringing the Gospel of Jesus to the American People in innovative ways for over 100 years.

We do this everyday through the communication arts—books, publications, television and radio—on college campuses, in parishes, in missions in the U.S., in downtown centers, in working with young and old.

We don't believe in sitting back. Do you?

Lenny Hertling, Senator, Arts and Sciences

by Helen Christensen

"The Student Senate is becoming more effective all the time," stated Arts and Sciences Senator Lenny Hertling in a recent interview. "A few weeks ago I would have said it's completely ineffective, but we're starting to accomplish things now. I think most of the senators have come to realize that we can't accomplish anything constructive until we work together.

"We're now involved in a legal suit against the State Board of Education's ruling which prohibits alcohol on campus. I am a strong advocate of the alcohol on campus issue, and I feel it should be a legal decision, not State Board policy which determines whether or not alcohol is permitted on campus. Several other senators and I have been investigating the drinking in the stadium during football games, and I definitely believe there is a big discrepancy between the way police handle drinking on the student side and drinking on the general admission side. From all indications, the law enforcement people are going to continue to crack down especially on the student offenders, another reason why the issue should be decided by the courts as soon as possible.

"I'm chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, and we are going to re-open the campus child care center investigation. I think BSU has a definite need for a day care center, but we need a day care center that offers fair utilization to everyone, not just 30 children at one time, which was what the proposal brought to us last spring provided. Thirty children at a time just isn't fair. What happens to child number 31 or 32? We have to thoroughly investigate this until we find a way to take care of more student's kids. We can't expect a student to pay out of his registration fees for a service which he can't take full advantage of. There has got to be some way that we can set up a program to get away from this 30-child occupancy limitation. I think it's possible. I just don't think all avenues were explored when the child care proposal was brought to the senate last spring.

"Another thing I'd like to see the senate investigate is the possibility of the ASB buying out the Outdoor Activities Center. As it stands now, we have no real control over it, and if Outdoor Activities were owned and operated by the students, I think it could be ran more effectively and more in tune with student needs. Right now, we could probably buy their equipment for approximately $10,000. Outdoor Activities has a lot of potential for generating revenue in the next few years. It would be a real good investment for the ASB.

"I would also hope that the Student Health Center is investigated in my committee this year. There has been a lot of controversy over the way students are treated at the Health Center, I've heard a lot of complaints. Student fees pay for the Health Center, so it should be operated in the best interests of the student. Hopefully the Student Health Advisory Board, which does have student members, can work with the senate in clearing up some of these problems.

"I'm hoping that Ways and Means and other senate committees will make extensive use of open hearings when investigating these issues. Open hearings give us extra student input and help lay the groundwork for any investigation. It's a good way to learn how our constituents feel about the issues.

"I voted 'no' on the recent proposal made in the senate to hold an open hearing on the scholarship parking system because the time for an open hearing on that particular issue isn't now because we can't effectively deal with it until next spring. The senate is involved in a lot of other things right now. We've got the alcohol issue and day care and many other things that need to be worked out right now. There's no use harping on an issue that we can't do a damn thing about.

"I think that if an open hearing had been held on scholarship parking before it went into effect, it might have made a difference. If the students had been given a chance to express their approval or disapproval in the beginning, there wouldn't be so many students angry about it now. There was absolutely no excuse for the administration selling those parking spots a month before students were back on campus. That was garbage. I was against scholarship parking from the beginning, but at least now we have a scholarship fund and for the first time in the history of the parking problem, faculty and administration are on the same level as the students. Maybe through this there will be an awareness develop of the problem on all sides and we can settle it once and for all.

"The administration should not alienate the students. They should remember that without the students this institution could not exist. If you take the students out of the institution, there is no institution. If you took away the student fees that financed our buildings, there would be no buildings. The administration needs to place a higher value on student input.

"I think that BSU has been ignored in the past by the legislature. The University of Idaho is no longer the dominating school in the state. This is where the growth and potential for growth is. We need to get more of what we deserve. The legislature needs to realize that it takes time to build and we need to start now to plan for the future expansion of the school.

"Times are changing for the school and the students. It's hard for elected officials to vote on issues when they're not really sure where their constituents stand on these issues. So many students don't respond or participate in student government. Only twelve per cent of the students even voted in the elections. There's a tremendous lack of communication between students and their elected officials. There's a lot of information put out, but there's a big awareness problem. There's even a lack of information in the senate. We need more interaction between the students and the student body officers. We are attempting to delegate student monies in the best interest of the students.

"We're trying to keep in touch with the students, but they also need to make the effort to communicate with us. It's a two way thing. If a student has a request or complaint that he or she wants the senate to look into, they can come to me or any one of the senators and we'll do whatever we can to help them. I really think that's what we're here for."

Hertling's office hours are Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The Senate offices are located on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

Senate report

Kim, Mosier report on Student's Rights

by Helen Christensen

"We were amazed that so many student governments at colleges and universities throughout the country are merely a form of tokenism. BSU is in the top ten per cent as far as student participation on joint committees is concerned," stated ASBSU President Nate Kim when reporting to the Student Senate last Tuesday on the National Student's Legal Rights Conference which he and Education Senator Lyle Mosier recently attended.

There were 35 states represented at the conference, which was held in San Francisco. BSU was the only Idaho school whose representatives attended, Kim stated.

"It was an enlightening meeting," said Kim. "Compared to what many other schools have, our student government is ahead. We did come back with a lot of ideas as to where we can go in the future," he said.

"We attended workshops dealing with a great many areas of student interest," said Mosier. "In the area of student services, we found that many schools have none, and some schools offer expanded student services which included travel services with European tours offered to students at cut rates, co-op book stores, student loan services, day care and dental care facilities and housing services which included assistance to students in buying and renting homes and apartments," said Mosier.

"Another thing that ought to be investigated," said Kim, "is equalizing the ratio of students on joint committees. As it stands right now, only one joint committee, the Student Policy Board, has equal membership of students, faculty and administration. The Athletic Board of Control has been getting away with one student representative, when there could be four or five.

"In Oregon, students are members of the State Board of Education. This hasn't been seriously considered in Idaho, and it's time we looked into it.

"There are several other possibilities that could be looked into, such as a staggering system for the election of student senators. If there were a junior and senior senator from each of the schools, the changeover at election time would not be so drastic.

"Another thing I'd like to see investigated is the creation of an ombudsman program. An ombudsman is a neutral position which acts as a liaison between students, faculty and administration. Perhaps the most important power someone in this position has is the power of the pen. An ombudsman can bring out in the press any unfair or unjust policies.

"BSU ought to look into collective bargaining. It's a trend that's sweeping across the nation. It's a thing of the future and BSU ought to get in on the groundwork. We also ought to look into expanding our legal services, not just consultation rights, but cut rates for students involved in legal action.

"Fee structures are also a very important area that ought to be investigated. Rights of grievance, student rights clauses involving maximum student use of student facilities and grading systems including conditions of enrollment should be looked into.

"There is also the possibility of incorporating student government and more effectively utilizing the student lobby. Students can be a very effective third party when it comes to lobbying the legislature," Kim stated.

Senator Howard Welsh, Health Sciences, suggested that the senate develop an agenda to look into the questions raised by Kim's report.

"Let's do something with these ideas," Welsh said.

At the suggestion of Arts and Sciences Senator Lenny Hertling, the senate committee chairpersons will meet to decide which proposals should go to which senate committees.

"I want to encourage people in student government to attend national conferences of this sort whenever possible. The exposure is very beneficial," Kim added.

In other senate business, Kim reported on the progress of the suit the Idaho schools are planning to bring against the State Board for alcohol on campus. He stated that contracts have been drawn up for legal services and that the cost will be approximately $4,000 or $30 an hour, whichever is less. He explained that North Idaho and Lewis and Clark State College have definitely agreed to sign the contract, but the University of Idaho and Idaho State University have not yet made any commitment to join in the suit. Those schools who sign the contract will split the costs of the suit. "This is the first issue which has united Idaho university students," said Kim.

Presidential appointments approved by the senate included Robert Thomas and David Durocher to the Buildings and Structures Committee, Bob Williams and Dan Dorsey to the Honors Committee, Ann Hansen as Election Board Vice-Chairperson, Katie Hoffer to the Election Board, William Johnson to the Library Committee and Sue McKenna to the Curriculum Committee.

New constitutions accepted by the senate were for the BSU Photo Club and the BSU Women's Alliance.

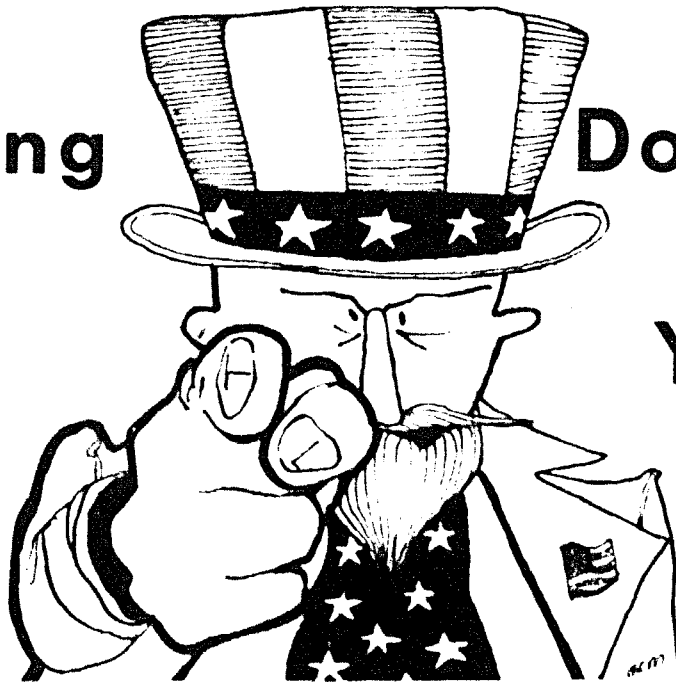

Tired of over-crowded classrooms?

Do something about it.

A recent study shows that BSU has a 98 per cent rate of classroom utilization. Enrollment at BSU increases 12 per cent every year. We need students to help lobby the Legislature for increased funding. Help BSU grow in area as well as student enrollment. Women's Alliance responds to Equal Rights Amendment debate

by Susan McKenna

Oh no, not again! was the response of most of the Women's Alliance members to the interview with Susan Hill published in last week's Arbiter. In response to the interview, we contacted Ms Louise Jones, convener of the Equal Rights Amendment task force for Idaho.

"ERA is a basic issue that has already been hashed out in three sessions of the legislature," said Ms Jones. "We are not looking toward another round of breadloaf emotionalism. We think when facts, instead of emotions, prevail, the citizens of Idaho will recognize that we are refighting an old issue. We want to show the legislators, in their home districts, that people are tired of the ERA debate. More important issues will be neglected, if the move to rescind is put on the next legislative agenda (for the fourth time). Education, land use, and environmental quality are all important issues waiting to be dealt with. We're asking people to let their legislators know they don't want the ERA debated again."

In response to Susan Hill's interview of last week, Ms Jones replied, "The stop ERA movement depends heavily on vague unnamed constitutional authorities and court cases casually dropped in conversation without any specific details." As to Hill's allegation that she has been able to find no authority that states ERA will benefit women, Louise Jones gave us a list of Idaho organizations that support ERA. The list includes such organizations as AFL-CIO, AAUW (American Association of University Women), League of Women Voters, IEA (Idaho Education Association), NEA (National Education Association), Business and Professional Womens Association, the Democratic Party, Common Cause, YWCA, Idaho Association of Secretaries, Idaho Association of Nurses, and the list goes on.

Mrs. Hill is mistaken in her implication that the ERA will no longer require a husband to support his wife and family. All states require a husband to support his wife and children, and some require husbands and wives to support each other. In reality, a wife's "right" to support is not enforced until the marriage breaks down, and one of the partners files for divorce, or brings a criminal action for non-support. The ERA will require husbands and wives to support one another, depending on the husband's and wife's respective financial status and contributions to the household. A homemaker's contributions of time and energy and skill at home will constitute support. (Senate Report, Senate Judiciary Committee, 92-689, p. 12) There will be no question, in court or out of court, a woman's status as homemaker and mother, if this is her choice.

In one third of the states, the existing laws on child support and alimony comply with ERA. Alimony and child support are based on circumstances, not sex. (Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act, sec. 308 a & b) Thus, women, who are the majority of spouses in need, would continue to be entitled to receive alimony or support from their husbands. If a man was dependent on his wife's income, he would be entitled to seek alimony from her.

"The ERA has nothing to do with separate quarters, bathrooms, or dormitories," continued Ms Jones. "The ERA has to do with not discriminating against women. Our opponents are reading things into the law that aren't there. A naive fear of sexuality has been attached to the ERA with no logic." The constitutional right to privacy established by the Supreme Court in 1965 will ensure the sexes will be separated in all public places that involve sleeping, disrobing, or personal body functions. (Griswold vs Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 1965).

"It is true that states will have to bring a lot of laws into conformity, and they should have to," stated Ms Jones. "The so called Protective laws have kept women from making equal pay with men, (latest statistics indicate that of the 44.2 per cent of the population of women who work full time, the average salary is $5,903, for men who work full time, the average is $10,202.....U.S. Statistical Abstract, p. 361 1974). These laws have kept women from being able to own property, from serving on juries, from getting credit, from getting decent housing. Most of these 'protective' laws function like the protective laws for slaves in the 1800's."

"Mrs. Hill is wrong, when she claims that women will be denied credit based on their husbands earnings," continued Ms Jones. "ERA won't deny credit to families, by recognizing women's equality in money matters, the family will be able to get more credit, because the law won't discriminate against women."

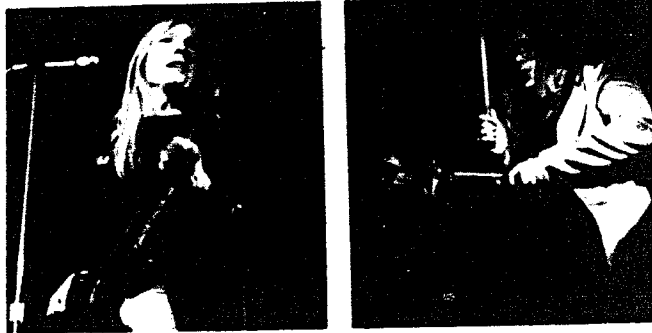

On the question of social security, a married woman today who works and pays social security taxes, receives far less in return in terms of protection for herself and her family, than does a male worker and his family. Under ERA social security benefits will be made available to men and women equally. It will not take away any social security benefits women now have. There is a move in Congress right now to recognize homemakers as legitimate members of the work force and award them benefits on the basis of their own labor. (Not 50% per cent of their husbands' benefits.)

In conclusion, the Idaho State Legislative Council has been joined by the American Law Division of the Congressional Research Service, the Legal Counsel of the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee, and the Attorney General of the State of Idaho in concluding that ratification by a state of a Constitutional Amendment is a final action which cannot be repealed or revised. It is clear that efforts to rescind ratification of the ERA is a costly and futile movement. Write or call your legislator today, and tell him or her that ERA is here to stay. We don't want another costly and time consuming debate on rescinding ERA again.

Three exhibitions opening at Boise Gallery of Art

Exploration in wood shapes, functional and non-functional, by Boise artist Boyd Wright, a dual retrospective lithography show by New Mexico artists Garo Z. Antreasian and Clinton Adams and the recent paintings of Boise artist Bernice Jones are three exhibitions opening at the Boise Gallery of Art on Tuesday, October 28.

Wright, professor of painting, drawing and design at BSU, has shown his work in California, North Carolina, Nevada, Washington, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Idaho and Montana. He will have several wood sculpture objects on display.

Antreasian, professor of art at the University of New Mexico, has for two decades been associated with creative lithography in the United States. His technical creative activities have contributed to the techniques and aesthetics of lithography of this country. His prints on exhibition through the Gallery represent the artist's talents in dealing with the complexities the medium offers.

The retrospective works offered concurrently with Antreasian are lithographs by Clinton Adams, Director of Tamarind Institute at the University of New Mexico. Adams, a native Californian who received his education and taught at UCLA, feels the involvement with materials used influences the entire evolution of the image. His work displays his affinity to impressionism with a concern for a sensuous development of the surface.

Abandoning gold standard causes inflation

Writing for Barron's Financial Weekly, the economist Dr. Henry Hazlitt claims that abandoning the U.S. gold standard has been the single, biggest cause of inflation. Since the U.S. went off the gold standard in 1933, consumer prices have risen 344 per cent. "Compared with 1933," says Hazlitt, "the American dollar commands a purchasing power of less than 23 cents."

Both artists have works included in many collections, including the Museum of Modern Art, Art Institute of Chicago, Los Angeles County Art Museum and the Guggenheim Museum.

Bernice Jones studied with Jacob Elshin at Edison Technical School in Seattle, Washington. Her works deal primarily with still lifes, tending toward an abstract technique. The artist's paintings have been included in juried shows throughout Arizona, Washington, and Idaho, many winning awards.

All three exhibitions will remain open through November 30. Regular Gallery hours are Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 12 noon to 2 p.m. The Gallery is closed Mondays.

Broncos Crush Axers

by Melinda Scharf

The Boise State Broncos added still another victory to their record Saturday night as they blitzed the Northern Arizona Lumberjacks 48-0 in Bronco Stadium before a rain-soaked crowd of 13,545 fans.

The inclement weather may have discouraged some fans, but it didn't bother the Broncos. Boise State displayed a superb all-around effort-- offensively rolling up 375 yards total offense (306 rushing, 69 passing) while defensively holding the Axers to 121 yards total offense (125 rushing and -4 passing) and a scoreless game. In fact, the closest that NAU came to threatening was to the Boise State 43. Prior to that last fourth quarter drive, the Axers had come to the 50 just twice, their own 40 just once.

The Broncos opened their scoring when quarterback Greg Stern handed off to halfback John Smith, who carried the ball 16 yards for the score. Avi Rofe followed with the PAT and Boise State was ahead 7-0 with 8:04 left in the first quarter.

The Broncos scored twice in the second period-- first on a five-yard pass from Stern to running back Gene Skulick and then on a two-yard run by fullback Bob Cleveland plus two PAT's by Rofe and Boise State led 21-0 at halftime.

There was no question of the Broncos' dominance over the Axers. NAU lost the ball nine times to Boise State, six by fumbles and three by interceptions. Cornerback Gary Rosolowich caught two of them and middle linebacker Kauhi Hookano snatched the other. The Bronco defensive line stopped the Axers time and time again, which was evident in the NAU offensive total. The Axers were forced to stay on the ground as their passing attack was completely shut off. In fact, no matter what NAU tried, its efforts were in vain.

Boise State rolled up 21 more points in the third period as Ron Emry opened with a one-yard run seven minutes into the quarter. Quarterback Lee Huey followed soon after with another one-yarder and Fred Goode scored on a six-yard pass from freshman quarterback Hoskin Hogan. All three PAT's by Rofe were good and the Broncos had a 41-0 lead going into the fourth quarter.

Boise State's final scoring attempt ended with Hogan taking it in from the one. A two-point conversion attempt failed, and the score ended up 48-0.

Obviously, it is more than physical ability alone that makes Gary Rosolowich what he is.

Athlete of the Week

by Rob Lundgren

"When the offense (NAU) came up to the line, I asked the wide receiver what his pattern was...." mused BSU cornerback Gary Rosolowich after making his second interception of the evening.

The two thefts by Rosolowich were good enough to escalate him to the number one spot in the Big Sky with five on the year.

Defensive coach Steve Buratto pointed out a very interesting statistic of the BSU-NAU game. "Gary had a better receiving percentage than the entire Lumberjack team," he commented. The NAU quarterbacks attempted seven passes and completed three. Two of those, however, were right into the alert arms of Rosolowich. Apparently, the Lumberjack QBs were equal opportunity passers Saturday evening as they made no discrimination of receivers; regardless of race, creed or color of jersey.

"Gary is a great athlete and very quick. On top of that, he has the self confidence which enables him to wish that the opponents will run or pass in his direction," Coach Tony Knap said. And that is the reason, Buratto points out, most teams prefer to go to the other side.

Indeed, Rosolowich does have a great jump on the ball. He often times seems to sense where the ball is going. Obviously, it is more than physical ability alone that enables him to pick off two of seven passes under the cold, wet conditions of Saturday evenings game. It's determination; and it's with this same determination that Rosolowich has set his goals on a national championship after being in the play-offs the last two years.

A few things about Rosolowich that many people do not know is that he is from Winnipeg, Manitoba Canada where he was a goalie on a championship ice hockey team and an all-around gymnastics champion.

But for now the junior mathematics major prefers playing football for BSU. While playing with reckless abandon, weather on a safety blitz or an interception.

Greg Stern makes his cut for more yardage.

Harriers Down NAU

High winds and near freezing weather hampered times in Saturday's cross-country at Julia Davis park, but couldn't put a damper on Steve Collier and Co. as the BSU Harriers treaded to a 20:35 Big Sky Conference win over Northern Arizona University.

"Times were slowed down considerably due to the wind," said Coach Ed Jacoby. "The weather was definitely a factor in today's race."

Charles Connell of Boises municipal airport reported 38 mile an hour winds at midday, with the thermometer dipping to 40.

Collier finished the 5-mile course in 25:11, avenging a loss to Larry Gerich of NAU by two seconds. Gerich finished second ahead of Collier in last year's conference meet. The Collier vs. Gerich series now stands at 2-1 for Collier. The two will meet again in Moscow on Nov. 8 for the Big Sky Conference championships.

Jim Van Dine, who finished 3rd with a time of 25:58, led the first half of the race before falling to Collier and Gerich. Gerich took over the lead at about the halfway mark and held it until Collier turned it on in the final stretch.

"I couldn't believe what he was doing," a tired Gerich told his teammates of Collier's passing the NAU Harrier. Gerich's coach came over just after the race and asked what happened, (referring to the loss to Collier after holding the lead for a good part of the race). "Everytime I'd turn it on, he'd ( Collier) turn it on too. I couldn't shake him," said Gerich.

The BSU Harriers are making vast improvements over last years team as four of the first five finishers were Boise Staters. It was a rout of a weak team, as NAU finished second, while the Bronco's came in third in last years conference meet. NAU was also victorious over BSU in the dual last season.

In fourth place was Gillesparza and Emil Magallanes came in fifth at 25:40. Dave Frickel was BSU's fifth man to cross the line. He made it in 26:17, 1:06 after leading teammate Collier.

Jacoby said that he was concerned with getting the fifth man in with a better time. "We'd like to get it down to where we can have our first five guys cross with only 40 seconds difference," Jacoby said.

As for Collier, he continues to win, despite the obstacles. With only one loss this year at the hands of a Kenyan, Collier should be a definite threat for that top spot in the Big Sky.

When Collier was finishing the final 50 yards or so, the determination and pain were evident on his face. He developed a severe gut ache during the race and was bothered again with a gimpy leg.

Standing at the finish line was BSU's wrestling Coach Mike Young. Showing a toothy snarl, Young commented, "He's just tough! That guy's a real fighter!"

Who's Next

This week Boise State faces what could be its roughest competition in the entire year on the gridiron. The University of Montana is now preparing for what they hope is an upset in the Big Sky. Even though coming off a loss from their 75th meeting with cross state rivals Montana State the Grizzlies are ready to play ball.

Montana's Powerful defensive capabilities are widely known in the Big Sky. Led by sophomore Tom Clift, a free safety, Montana's defense will attempt to hold the Broncos' attack to a minimum. Clift has been named Big Sky defensive player of the week for his performance in helping the University of Montana down Idaho 14-3. Other defensive standouts, Anderson and Carter, will also bear watching. Montana's defense so far this year has held their opponents to roughly 70 per cent of their own total offense.

Their offensive attack will be led by quarterback Von Troxel (son of University of Idaho's head football coach Ed Troxel) who leads the Grizzlies in passing and total offense going into this week's game. High scorers for the University of Montana are Jordan, Cooley and Mickey. The explosive attack of the Grizzlies will test the Bronco defense in what could prove to be a troublesome evening. Leading rusher for the University of Montana, Mickey, averages 6.6 yards per carry, a long gain of 80 yards. He's followed closely by Speer, who is averaging 5.1 yards per carry. At midpoint in the season, the University of Montana had four other backs who had rushed for more than 100 yards each.

The two teams will clash this Saturday at 1:30 p.m. on the artificial turf at Bronco Stadium, before an expected crowd of 20,000. Every fan who warms a seat should get his/her money's worth.

City Recreation Programs

Boise City Recreation Department will hold a general meeting November 12, 7:30 p.m., for all persons interested in becoming instructors for the Boise City Recreation Junior Ski School. The meeting will be held at the Fort Boise Community Center, 700 Robbins Road.

Applications will be available at the community center from 8 - 5, Monday through Friday, and will also be available at the fall ski show. Applications should be completed with an attached photograph prior to November 12. For further information call Fort Boise Community Center, Outdoor Programs Office, 345-8285.

Boise City Recreation Department is offering a pre-season conditioning program at Fort Boise Community Center. The session will begin October 27 and run through November 26. This class will meet Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Exercises and activities designed to prepare the skier for the coming ski season will be emphasized, along with a general strengthening fitness program. There is no fee and the program is open to the general public. Competitive and recreational level of fitness will be offered. For further information call the Fort Boise Community Center, Outdoor Program Office, 345-8285.
