You're under arrest

An analysis of Senate Bill 1

by Allan Rabinowitz

(CPS)-Imagine, for a moment, that the entire anti-war movement of the sixties was illegal, and that thousands of students were given prison sentences of up to fifteen years, or possibly the death sentence.

I dunno, is it "violent and tumultous conduct" or just "public disturbance?"

If Senate Bill 1, the controversial criminal code reform bill now sitting in the Senate Judiciary Committee, had been enacted ten years ago, that is exactly what would have happened.

The sanctioned laid down by SB-I. put together under the Nixon law-and-order administration, emcompass so much, in wording that is so vague, that virtually any political act or statement aimed against the government could be construed as being in violation of some provision of that code.

From the start, the new criminal code was clearly constructed largely in response to the anti-war movement, by Nixon Attorney General Kleindeinst and Mitchell. By examing this bill in the context of the anti-war movement of the sixties, it becomes clear just how far the influence of this bill would penetrate American life and stymie any attempt at major social change.

For example, the new criminal code would expand the 1968 incitement to riot statute which formed the basis of the celebrated Chicago Conspiracy trial. The seven defendants in that trial were ultimately acquitted because the government failed to prove that they had crossed a state line with the "intention" of inciting a riot.

But under SB-1, the government could have ignored that detail. The government would only have to prove that the defendants had used the mail or an interstate phone call to plan the event that later had become a riot. The seven Chicago defendants could have been convicted and given three-year jail sentences.

Furthermore, a "riot" is defined in the bill as any "public disturbance" involving ten or more people that, "by violent or tumultous conduct, creates a grave danger of injury or damage to persons or property." But what is "tumultous conduct" and what constitutes danger to property? Shouting chants while trampling the grass in a park?

Draft board demonstrations, the destruction of draft records, the encouragement of draft resistance--all of which took place during the anti-war years--can constitute "impairing the military effectiveness of the United States," bringing a sentence of three to thirty years and a $10,000 fine.

Another provision of the bill punishes by a one-year jail term the obstruction of any "official proceeding" through noise, violence, "or any other means." What "other means?" Passing out leaflets?

Under SB-1, Daniel Ellsberg could have been charged for treason for leaking the Pentagon Papers, and been executed. The New York Times editors who received those classified documents could have gotten seven-year sentences.

Under SB-1, the 20,000 demonstrators arrested en masse in the 1971 May Day protest in Washington, DC could all have been convicted of obstructing government functions and given sentences of three years.

Under SB-1, a member of an organization "which incites others to engage in conduct that then or at some other time would facilitate the forcible overthrow of the government" could go to jail for seven years.

The language is so vague that practically anyone connected with a leftist organization on campus could be arrested. This could have included every member of the SDS, the Student

Bookstore tightens security

by Dave Frisinger

Your Campus Store has taken new security measures to protect the store from rip offs. One way mirrors, electronic devices and store walkers have contributed to a tripling of arrests. Described as low-key, the security system is on a much smaller scale than at stores like K-Mart and Grand Central.

Store manager Betty Brock said the tightened security measures were taken to reduce the 2 per cent theft rate, an amount termed "excessively high" by one business professor. Brock says the $20,000 lost last year by theft would have amounted to a $2 rebate to all students or a reduction in prices.

According to Brock, about 20 persons have been caught shoplifting since the new system was installed during Christmas break. Many of the petty theives were nabbed for pocketing things like pens, bubblegum, jewelry, art supplies and candy bars. Three persons have been charged with "obtaining property under false pretences (changing price tags).

All suspects are held until the Boise police arrive to issue a complaint summons. The summons are similer to a traffic ticket. The accused is ordered to appear in court to enter a plea. To date, the stiffest sentence imposed was two days in jail and a $150 fine. Some of the convicted have been placed under prosecuter's probation and can have the charges removed from their record if they stay out of trouble during their six month probationary period. The bookstore boasts a 100 per cent record in conviction of those arrested.

There are two locations in the bookstore where observers have an overview of large areas of the store. One is inside a piller about 35 feet from the front entrance, and the other is located in the southwest corner of the store. Mirrors located just below the ceiling level are equipped with phone lines for cooperative surveillance. The manager's office and other phones in the store may be reached from the watchtowers.

In addition to tower personnel, the store tries to keep at least one plainclothes floor-walker working at all times. The duties of a floor-walker are to hang around, behave like a customer, and watch people.

All boolstore employees underwent a short training session during semester break. They viewed a Small Business Administration film on shoplifting techniques, which included a woman who hid steaks under her dress and packed them out between her legs. Also on hand was a police officer who told employees to "watch everyone who comes into the store. They may be a potential shoplifter." Employees are instructed to report all shoplifters to security.

For after hours protection, the store has movement sensors installed near the front entrance. Activated by a front door key, the devices will set off an alarm if they detect any movement inside their range.

State Board OK's dormatory rate hike

by Barb Bridwell

The State Board of Education approved a 6 per cent rate hike for residence halls at it's meeting at Boise State last week, but not before questions concerning $100,000 surpluses within the housing department.

Dave Frisinger, a Boise State student questioned the need for a 6 per cent increase while the housing department makes $100,000 in surplus.

Ron Turner, budget director, said that in past years the housing department has had a surplus. However, he stated, housing is not a profit making program. Turner said the company which handles the capital improvement bonds on housing facilities requires the university to take in $30,000 to $40,000 a year in surplus. The other surplus came because of an unexpected increase in enrollment.

Board member A.I.. Alfred stated he didn't want the housing department making a profit off of students, and that he wanted to be assured the housing department would not make a profit.

The State Board also opposed tuition at Idaho's universities. A Senate Joint Resolution states that "The regents shall impose rates of tuition and fees on all students enrolled in the university as authorized by law." If both the Senate and House approve the resolution, it would go before the voters for approval.

The presidents of the three universities and the president of Lewis-Clark State College endorsed the resolution, but said that the State Board should have the power to set the tuition, not the legislature.

The Board rejected the president's endorsement for three reasons; the members oppose tuition in the first place; any move to change the proposal might imply acceptance by the State Board and such a move might make the price of a college education too high for student to afford. Board member J.P. Munson of Sandpoint stated, "Let them (Legislature) carry the monkey on their back when they raise the tuition so much that student's can't afford an educa-

editorial

With the question of funding for higher education looming in the Legislature, the divided factions within the university system have come out of the wood work. No where is this factionalism more evident than at the University of Idaho, where in various publications, writers have come down hard on Boise State University.

A column in one issue of the Argonaut, the University of Idaho student newspaper, the columnist charged that residents of the "populous center (Boise) have been successfully lobbying to gain increased funding for Boise State University." One can only wish this were true. However, BSU is still the least funded of the three universities in Idaho, even though BSU is fact becoming the largest student enrollment wise.

The column further states that if the present trend continues, "the state may well shift from the position of having an excellent higher education system. . .to an expensive position of having three inadequately funded approximations of universities." It's rather obvious the blame for this is pinned on Boise State. However, it is the responsibility of the state, who felt that Boise State deserved university status, to fund all three institutions. The University of Idaho need not worry about being phased out. There will always be certain disiplines that are better handled at that university, such as agriculture and mining. There are also several areas that can be better dealt with at Boise State, such as business.

It seems BSU's northern sister would like to see Boise State under funded, although what purpose this would accomplish is not revealed. To add insult to injury, Boise State is referred to as B.J.C. and in another article about Tony Knap leaving, as B.S.C. They apparently find it hard to spit out the words "Boise State University.'

If higher education in Idaho is ever to expand and grow, the back stabbing and factionalism must stop. Perhaps is was not the right move to change Boise State's status from college to university. But it's just a little late to suddenly have so much hind sight. The fact remains that Idaho has three universities, which for the good of the state and students, must be adequately funded. The best policy is to shake hands, get along and work to get the funding that all three institutions so desperately need.

I HEAR THAT J. PAUL GETTY IS LOADED ...

BIG DEAL, SO AMI ...!

Coach Tony we're going to miss you, but don't let the door hit you in the butt on the way out

by Jack Bryson

I suppose I can accept at least part of the blame for Coach Tony's leaving as head football coach. I was busy practicing energetic apathy and I had no idea that Coach Tony was in the process af acceepting another head coaching

Last year I elected myself as head of a committee of one to build a monument to Coach Tony. This monument was to be magnanamous undertaking which would have rivated Mount Rushmore in stature and size. Coach Tony's Greek godlike appearance was to have been etched into Table Rock high above Boise Valley and directally above the hugh "B" that stands for Barnes (strangely enough most people believe the "B" stands for Boise).

The committee had hoped the monument would be completed by next fall. We had planned to have the Boise Philharmonic atop Table Rock along with all the loyal athletic supporters. The Philharmonic would play a medly of medly of "2001 AOdesy," "Theme from Rollerball," and "Jesus Christ, Superstar" while fireworks filled the sky.

Construction was progressing along on schedule. The elevator shaft that was located inside the monument, extending from the base of Coach Tony's "eye" observation point is completed. Too bad, Coach Tony, now you don't get the monument, but we got the shaft anyway.

I admit I feel bad about my committee not getting it's task of monument building completed, but not that bad.

The next question is where do we go from here? The varsity football players voted to have assistant coach Dave Nickel as their new football coach. The administration responded as it usually does with student imput .. by ignoring it and forming a committee to select someone they want.

As a result of Coach Tony's leaving, the football program will probably suffer, at least for the next few years, until the new head coach has time to rebuild. Perhaps now is a logical for the administration to take some of the money that is being poured into the football program and spend it on more academically oriented programs so that this institution con be known for it's academic achievement rather than it's football team. But if the past record of the administration is any indication they will pump more money into the "ailing" football program. Keep in mind this is the same administration that instituted the $30 Scholarship Parking program, and we all know how much the students benefited from that. After that brilliant mone no one has accused this administration of being too logical.

If the football program does falter perhaps we could turn our attention to other athletic events. We could convert Bronco Stadium into a rodeo arena and recruit cowboys. Or with the installation of the telephone poles in front of the gymnasium perhaps we could concentrate on recruiting a couple of feet. If the football program fails completely we could transformthe newly completed 20,000 seat Stoneage stadium into the Northwest's largest and most beautiful terraced botanical garden. It would be without a doubt the most expensive flower pot in the west. We could replace the scoreboard with a movie screen and have Boise's newest and only carpeted drive-in theater.

We are going to miss Coach Tony. He is taking with him an impressive record -- he was the highest paid football coach in the history of BSU, and evidently that wasn't enough. Our best bet in recruiting another coach is to offer more money, because if we've learned nothing else from Coach Tony's leaving we have learned good men are bought.

Mobilization Committee, and other major anti-war groups of the sixties. It could include everyone in the People's Bicentennial Commission, an alternative Bicentennial group calling for fundamental change in America. It could include people you know personally. Itcould include you.

These are just some of the many abuses of the democratic process to be found in the proposed revised criminal code. The American Civil Liberties Union has discovered more than 3000 provisions or phrases in SB-1 that are vague, ambiguous, or violate an individual's rights.

But as if these provisions are not repressive and outrageous enough, there is one more that tops them all. Under SB-1, a government official who claims that he felt he was acting in the best interests of the country or following his superior's wishes could not be held responsible for illegal actions he might have committed. In other words, while Daniel Ellsberg could be executed, John Ehrlichman gets acquitted.

Reader cautions against losing control of budget

Editor, the ARBITER

BSU students often complain about the lack of facilities, getting our fair share and so forth. I agree to a point, however, often a brief trip to Brigham Young University, I would admonish caution.

Our neighbor, BYU, built a house on a foundation of sand. The problem began when their motion picture studio lost control of their budget. They operated in the red a few years, then the university began to worry. Instead of untangling what budget there was, they combined the motion picture studio with their broadcast services, sound services and instructional television services.

All of these groups were operating at a profit--however, it wasn't too many months before the cost began to rise in the other areas.

For example, the cost of one service rose from $5 to $10 an hour. The doubling of costs was just from over head.

Finally, the storm broke. Nearly fifty people were laid-off, many from the department which had combined with the motion picture studio in order to help them balance their budget.

There is a lesson to be learned here. Perhaps we should learn to use what we already have in the most efficient way possible and encourage our administration to build new projects on a solid financial foundation.

Lawrence gives advice on center

Editor, the ARBITER,

To my many followers who read my letters from past issues, but have not seen any this year, and think that something has happened either good or bad to me in the meantime, please be assured that it has not. I am now back to comment upon the things that go on at a place called BSU.

Persons do many things in life such as building things and making things called statues. which are to give the viewer something to think about and if it is outside of a building, to-add to the meaning of the building. The point is that I was walking to the SUB, and what do I see but a building off to the side which had something outside of it which I cannot put into words except to say that is one of the most stupid things that I have seen on this campus. That is not including the senate, the thought of beer on campus, and this chap that the Arbiter calls "Uncle Ernie." I do have a solution though. Let's tear that statue down and tell "Ernie" to take it and dive into Lucky Peak.

Rumors are flying

by Eliot Jonson

Now that all the candidates have turned in their petitions and notably declared intentions, it appears as though Campaign "76" has all the earmarks of an upset year. In recent years, the primary and in most cases the general elections have only been necessary time consumers. This year any one of the six presidential candidates could win by a landslide.

It is quite apparent to ASB observers that the "SUB SUPERSTARS" are starting to divide into camps in support of their favorite Fucher. At least two of the candidates are preparing to call foul on some of the other candidates neglect of the basic election codes. As Bette Davis said in All About Eve. "Sit tight, it looks like a bumpy night."

The administration has agreed with student representatives concerning the opening ceremonies for the Special Events Center. The agreement for the Grand Opening slated for March 10 is that the house will be reserved exclusively for BSU students and alumni. This is what this writer calls an impressive bit of fair play.

Everybody is waiting with baited breath to see how the Inter-Greek Council's chugging contests go at an infamous Garden City saloon. Good luck! Sounds like a good way to raise interest in the BSU Greek system.

Finally, our romance question of the week is - "What prominent Arbiter sports writer, and what bright young SUPB newcomer are shyly looking around to see if anyone is watching? The answer is yes.

Good-bye, good luck and Buenos Noche Peggy Herbert wherever you are.

Troubador music to be at the Gallery

On Wednesday, February 11 at 8 p.m., the Boise Gallery of Art presents a free performance by Martin Best, noted world traveling troubador whose repertoire ranges from the 12th century, through Renaissance Europe, into the 17th and 18th century guitar song and to present day folk-song, flamenco, Beattle melodies and the song cycles he writes himself.

Best, born in Hampshire, England and studying at the Royal College of Music in London and the Segovia Master classes in Spain, comes to Boise from concerts throughout the world. This season, his coast-to-coast tour during January and February includes among others, Princeton University, Penn State, UCLA and the University of Wisconsin. The tour ends with a return engagement at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Mr. Best, and his assistant Mr. Edward Flower will come to the Boise Gallery of Art as a part of the continuing Wednesday Night Program, made possible in part by a matching grant from the Idaho State Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

Senate Report

Alcohol, child care, FAB considered

by George Nells

The ASBSU Senate was presented with three issues that have come before them in the past at their meeting last Tuesday. The first and possibly forthest reaching was a resolution introduced by Lenny Hertling, calling for a policy of alcohol on campus. Emphasizing that the alcoholic beverage, when used at all, "should be used in moderation." Hertling stated first of all that each BSU student is responsible for compliance with the laws of the state of Idaho. He asked that students and residence groups form their own regulation pertaining to the use of alcoholic beverages. Those people who are not 19 would be "accorded recognition and appropriate protection."

Third, alcoholic beverages may not be used by students on the campus except within the interior of campus residences , the student union and Bronco could be served at school functions if non-alcoholic drinks were also served. Violations of these regulations, as with other university regulations, would be subject to disipline through regular procedure.

Hertling, in his resolution, said he did not condone "the use of alcoholic beverages under any circumstances when such use impares personal health, academic achievements, or the best interests of the univer-

Dave Wynkoop, school of business, asked if there would be any chance of dividing the stadium into sections because "people get tired of people swaggering around and making fools of themselves. It is descrimination not to segregate. A lot of complaints came to me last football season about booze." Hertling stated "I don't think someone drinking a beer in the stadium will hurt someone sitting next to him." Lyle Mosier from the school of education, said that if they segregate the drinkers, the smokers would be next, and then the cussers. Royanne Klein objected to having the non-regulation of drinking in the SUB. She said "I would hate to come to the SUB at noon and see people hanging around drinking beer." Hertling asked Klein if she wanted to separate stairways and separate lounges. Mike Hoffman noted that with the State Board meeting and the alcohol suit coming soon, "Do we want to tie ourselves up with speculation." Hertling stated that the resolution was suggesting, not dictating. The resolution passed, with only Wynkoop voting no, and Hoffman abstaining.

Senators Scott Whipple and Howard Welsh brought a child care proposal to the floor. The proposed program would be funded with $8000 by the ASBSU, the faculty would support $11,000 and the federal government would match "to about $54,000." Some of the faculty programs includeed in the proposal would be from the psychology department, English linguistics, Vo-Tech, theatre arts, business and from the department of Societal and Urbal studies.

Welsh stated, "The faculty has done a lot in terms of cash value of what they have to offer. You can't get something for nothing." He also stated that the senate "should evaluate the kind of matches the faculty is willing to put up." Ron O'Halloran convinced the senate that they should discuss this proposal at the next meeting when the senators would be better prepared for it.

Welsh continued the discussion, asking for the affirmation of the proposal and that he could go ahead and set up the program again.

It is the "responsibility of the student government to be involved," Welsh said. "We need to clean up our own back yard," he said, referring to the time when the child care proposal was brought up only to be voted down. "It's important to develop the direction we wish to go."

Wynkoop asked reconsideration of the previous weeks rejection of the financial advisory baord's request of money. Last week money was requested for a trip to Washington D.C. for a conference. The request was for $1145.80. "One of the people involved with next years government would go with Nate Kim," stated Wynkoop. Mike Hoffman said that it would "be better if we get better known around the country."

The vote fell just short of the needed two-thirds majority.

The senate passed a bill giving a $500 scholarship to the winner of the Miss BSU Pageant.

Krenk lectures for Inner Forum and Astro-Listers

by Johnny Lister

Findhorn, called by some the first New Age community. where 42 lb. cabbages grew in sandy soil that previously produced only gorse bushes, will be the subject of an illustrated Saturday night lecture by Marv and Mary Krenk from Eugene, Ore. program, the third of three the Krenks will give next weekend, is a report on the Krenk's 1975 summer visit to the celebrated community. Sponsored by Inner Forum and open to the public, they will speak next Saturday, February 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Boise YWCA Club Room, 720 West Washington, one block north of the Capitol.

Krenk, a TV executive in the Oregon city and an astrologer whom Johnny Lister calls "one of the finest trained and clearest thinking I know of," with his wife will be giving what Lister calls "probably the most potentially significant, in terms of both immediate and ultimate importance, lecture that Inner Forum has presented."

Findhorn, a community of about 200 people, situated on a sandy peninsula sticking like an exposed thumb into the inhospitable North Sea from northern Scotland, would seem an unlikely candidate for a leading role in the New Age. But people from all over the world, coming in burgeoning numbers to the windy location near famed Loch

Ness, call it exactly that. The community is the subject of two just-published books, "The Magic of Findhorn" and "The Findhorn Gardens," both appearing late in 1975; earlier, the authors of "The Secret Life of Plants," a 1973 bestseller. made Findhorn the subject of that book's last chapter and announced it as the central theme of their entire next book.

The community garden, started as a necessary food source for the three adults around whom the community grew, Eileen and Peter Caddy and Dorothy Maclean, first attracted outside attention because of the magnificent plants growing there under wretched conditions. Those three people, previously untrained in horticulture, used contact with "the plant spirit world," what they call devas and nature spirits, to lead them to success. Cooperation with those spirits, and learning to treat plants as equal partners rather than as pawns to be manipulated, started the community on an adventure in cooperative living that now goes far beyond that spectacular garden. Findhorn, the matrix, has spawned centers in other parts of the world. Saturday night's lecture and photo tour by the Krenk's will be an up-to-date report on what is going on at Findhorn.

Krenk also will give a Eriday night astrological lecture, also at the Boise YWCA, sponsored by Astro-Listers, entitled "The Twelfth House." And Saturday afternoon from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., on the same day as the Findhorn lecture, Krenk will conduct an afternoon workshop at the YWCA on "Color Coding in Astrology." The Friday night lecture will be advanced, the Saturday workshop will be basic and elementary.

The public is invited to all three events. Admission to each of the weekend's three parts will be $3 for the general public, $2 for Inner Forum and Astro-Listers members, with a 50 cent discount for each additional lecture a person attends. Total admission to all three events will be $8 for the public, $5 for Inner Forum and Astro-Listers members.

TV's new season

A look at 'Laverne and Shirley'

by Linda J. Knighton

Among otherwise sane people, there seems to be a style of psuedo-intellectualism which is embarrassing to the better informed.

It seems to be the "Moda" to baste on television to regard all who enjoy that particular medium as mental zombies whose artistic taste runs to, The Mickey Mouse Club and Batman.

This may have been true when Newton Minnow made his famous "Great Wasteland" statement, but the advent of such innovators as Norman Lear, Agnes Nixon and Sherwood Schwartz has reversed that tide, leaving all of Minnow's true believers gasping platitudes no longer current.

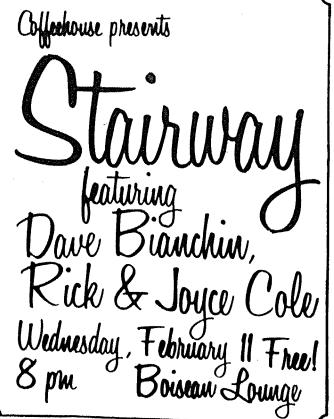

The introduction of reality to the tube has done more for social awareness in Americathan any movie--including. "Citizen Kane."

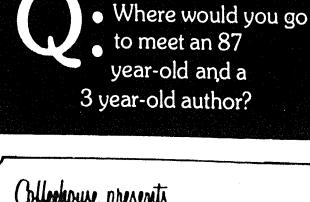

As for the writing, I challenge anyone who thinks television writers are backs who sit around and drop new names into formula plots to sell a script to, for example, The Waltons. This attitude, ego-building though it be, is unrealistic to say the least. Those interested in further debate might look up David Merrill and question him on the use of the Affective Domain in Audience Manipulation through the implementation of instructional strategies in a motion-visual media. With television's new season starting, a serious look at the new season starting, a serious look at the new shows might be enlightening. My selection this week is Laverno and Shirley. one of ABC's two good sitcoms.

Laverne and Shirley is riding the crest of the nostalgia wave. It is set in the 1950's among the [con't on page 10]

The total woman

A new look at womanhood

by Barb Bridwell

Thirty-two pages into the Total Woman, a book by former beauty queen, housewife and mother, Marabel Morgan, I had four basic observations:

1. It's a great program if you are rich;

2. If you don't have to or want to work;

3. If you have nothing better to do than cater to the whims and ego of your partner, and;4. If you wish your partner to totally run your relationship.

Ms. Morgan seems to have a totally one dimensional concept of her own womanhood; she is a cook, nurse and lover, not an equal partner in an open relationship. According to Morgan, a wife must never take part in financial matters. As Morgan states, "Don't ever tell him what to do with his money. You stay out of it and take care of the kitchen."

Although she denies using her Total Woman technique for monetary or material gain, all critic's corner-

through her book that is precisely what she does. Morgan states, "It is more blessed to give than to receive, and that is so true. Don't keep your husband from being blessed!" In other words, the Total Woman takes whatever she can get.

Much as I hate to label a philosophy as nauseating, that is precisely what Morgan's idea of total submission is. She uses Biblical quotes rather loosely, such as "You wives must submit to your husbands leadership in the same way you submit to the Lord. Morgan of course, interprets this to mean being under a mans thumb. She states a wife must adapt to her husbands way of life.

Morgan's underlying premise of good deeds make for good returns holds true even into her physical relationship. She states, "A woman's most important sexual organ is her brain." Although I am not a screaming, bra-burning woman's libber. I do believe my brain is there for more than dreaming crotic thoughts. In further support of her denied premise is a line that states, "A

America Laughs- 'needed polish'

by Linda J. Knighton

My usual philosophy is, if an audience enjoys a show, give it a good review. However, in a special showing, I must rely on my own judgement.

America Laughs reminds one of an experimental production by a group of students. The main idea is fresh--but there is a certain amateurishness which should not be present in a university production.

The show was written and directed by Dr. Robert Erickson. I am all for writer-directors, but this show suffers from a sorf of myopia.

Most of the reading selections were very good, but the connecting writing was too thin to hold them together. The acting was a bit over-played, which was all the sadder because it ruined many otherwise brilliant performances. The actors also had a habit of mugging while on and dropping their character while off. The director attempted to correct this with some rather elever bits, but evidently the actors forgot when on their own. They also forgot a few lines, which gave a fumbling quality to the show.

It was clear the show needed polish. The set, designed by Liz Streiff, was well planned, but poorly executed. It also needed polish, or at least the rough edges sanded off.

I feel that this show, however flawed, is an enjoyable evening if you don't have to pay to get in.

Tuition bills come to Legislature

Two bills introduced in the Idaho legislature last week could have long-range implications for students of Idaho's colleges and universities. The first, and least likely to go anywhere, is the so-called "one-university" bill. The second, and more chilling, is a proposed constitutional amendment, which states that the Regents (State Board of Education) "shall impose rates and tuition on all students."

The amendment, Senate Joint Resolution 113, was introduced by Sen. Phil Batt (R-Wilder), who has brought up such legislation before. 5 This year's version could fare better. especially in a legislative session that has seen much sniping, some justified, at the costly state system of higher education. A "pay-as-you-go" college education seems plausible to many of Idaho's legislators.

The amendment pertains only to the University of Idaho, but the outcome will affect all public colleges in the state. The U of I was chartered while Idaho was still a territory, and when Idaho was granted statehood, the U of I's charter was incorporated into the Constitution. Section 12 of the charter says that no resident of one year "shall be required to pay any fees for tuition in the University, except in a professional department, and for extra studies." So far, only the U of I Law School falls into that category.

Idaho code presently also forbids the charging of tuition at the three other schools. If tuition for the U of I was passed, it can be assured that very quickly the law would be changed to permit it at BSU.

Idaho State university and Lewis-Clark State College. This could have the effect of increasing enrollments at North Idaho College and College of Southern Idaho, the state's two community colleges, or, more likely, those fees would also be raised to remain "competetive" with the four-year institutions.

Batt said that the fees presently charged "may be unconstitutional, and I think they are." He said that the amendment would allow the people of Idaho to vote on whether they think tuition charges would be a good idea.

He further remarked to the Senate State Affairs committee that he understood that "some lawsuits" are being prepared on behalf of the students concerning the authority of the regents to impose the present fees. He is apparently referring to the Committee for Student Rights at the U of I which has been working since 1974 to have the regents examine the fee structure. The CSR succeeded last month in convincing the regents to make such an examination. Batt has not contacted any of the members of the CSR.

The resolution would require a two-thirds vote of both chambers before it could be presented to the public. But even if the measure fails this session, it is probable that it will continue to be brought up.

The "one-university" bill, House 462, was submitted by Representatives Butch Otter (R-Caldwell) and Larry Jackson (R-Boise), and has been given by legislative insiders little chance of passing. A similar bill, although not as carefully drafted, was introduced last year, but didn't make it out of the House Education Commit-

The plan calls for changing the names of the four state schools and calling each the University of Idaho at Boise, Pocatello, etc. As mentioned before, the U of 1 is a constitutionally chartered institution, but the three other schools are legal creations of the legislature. An attorney, in Boise, who is highly experienced in Idaho educational law, doubts the validity of the bill. saying that it is questionable whether a law passed by the legislature can alter the status of the U of I, but says that there is no such restriction on the three other schools.

A major deficiency of the bill, and the one that will create the most opposition in a cost-conscious legislature, is that it will create an "executive officer," a chancellor, who will supervise all four schools. One opponent of the bill has pointed out that in Oregon, where a chancellor system is in effect, there are eleven vice-chancellors, and over 180 persons on the chancellor's staff. Presently the Idaho Office of Higher Education has less than ten persons.

Student leaders at each school have expressed their opposition to the bill. Besides the increased bureaucracy, they resent the move to reduce the individual identity of each institution. ISU used to be called U of I - Southern Branch; it later became Idaho State College, and only in 1963 did it become ISU. Boise State has gone through a similar evolution, last year becoming a university. Lewis-Clark was once a college of education, and was closed down. lt was reopened, and granted fouryear status in 1965.

Tax measures considered energy

Two bills in the Idaho Legislature dealing with tax incentives, are currently under consideration in the Revenue and Taxation Committee of the House. Both bills, numbered 434 and 468, provide for installation of alternative energy devices. In addition bill numbber 434 calls for exempting alternative energy devices from taxation.

These bills are patterned after similer measures which have been adopted by eight other states. According to the bills, alternative energy devices include "a fluid to air heat pump operating on a fluid resevoir heated by solar radiation or geothermal resources."

Bill 468 encourages the construction of alternative energy devices, including geothermal and solar heating or cooling systems, thus "reducing environmental pollution and promoting the health and well-being of the people of 468 also states that on or after January 1, 1976, an individual taxpayer may deduct from taxable income the amount paid or accrued during the year from the installation of insulation within any existing building which serves as a residence for the taxpayer. The bill defines insulation as any material commonly used in building, and installed for the purpose of retarding the passage of heat energy into or out of a building.

An individual taxpayer installing an alternative energy device in his residence, may deduct up to 40 per cent of the amount that is attributable to the construction, and 20 per cent per year after that for a period of time not to exceed three years. This deduction may not exceed $5000 in one taxable year.

Bill 434 states that the actual alternative energy device is exempt from taxation. The tax figure is founf by substracting the market value of the property without the device from the market value of the property with the device. This must be reported to the county assessor before any tax break may be included in tax forms.

A student delegation presented the heads of the Finance and Appropriations Committee with petitions signed by over 2500 students in favor of Phase II of the Science-Education complex at the State House last week. The petitions were signed by students during the week of registration.

The petitions call on the Legislature to appropriate funds to build the Phase II portion of the Science-Education building now, rather than in 1980 as originally planned. The petition pointed out that classrooms at Boise State were already over crowded and with the growth rate of the university, they would be more so long before

Phase II will require 3.5 million dollars from the permanent building fund. Most of the petition signers were from

Ada County with 1732 signatures, Canyon County was second with 219. There were 271 out of state students signing the petitions.

but her soul dictates that she be mid-Victorian. Following the idea that comedy is based on pain, this Gary Marshall production plays it right on the line, wavering between the bellylaugh and pathos. The latter is often commented on by Fonsie, who represents a philosopher aware of things finer than usually exist in their world. This is a light comedy with a solid foundation on reality. Not all this book is based on total submission, some of it is even humorous. One section deals with putting more pizazz in your love life. To do this the Total Woman asserts, is to "Place a light candle on the floor and seduce him under the dining room table." This brings to mind all sorts of contortions and bachaches.

Sadly enough though, it appears the Total Woman technique appears to work. People Magazine recently ran a feature on Morgan. It seems her lawyer-husband resigned his job to manage his Total Woman's business affairs.

Womens cage squad pulls two victories

by Johna Reeves

The Boise State women's basketball team enjoyed a successful weekend as they moved their season record to 7.5 by defeating the University of Montana 60-35 and Washington State 48 41.

The Broncos started slowly against Montana, Friday evening, but got things together to take a 27-12 lead at the half

Three Bronco women shot 50 percent, while hitting in double figures. JoAnn Burrell led the train with 18 points. Flaine Fluit had 12 and Vicke Tawson added 14. As a team Boise State shot 47 persent from the field Flaine Godfrey led Boise State in its bounding with 15.

" recomming with 15 Saturday, the Broncos took on Washington State. Boise State University played a good defensive game, forcing the Cougars to shoot from the outside. JoAnn Burrell had 14 points and 17 rebounds to lead Boise State's well balanced scoring attack, and Elaine Elliott had 9 assists.

Bosse State held a 28-16 lead at halftime and at one point in the second half led by 12. Washington State battled back to a four point difference but Bosse State held on to win 48-41.

The next action that womens team will be engaged in will another home contest for the Bronous, when on February 13 they will host Montana State University. The game will be held at 8.00 p.m.

The Bronco grappling crew picked up two decisive victories over Ricks College of Rexberg, and Weber State College of Ogden, Utah, as those teams visited the City of Trees. The 36-6 win over Ricks on Friday, and the 34-10 victory over the Wildcats Saturday brings BSU's season tally to seven wins, three losses and one tie in dual competition.

Friday night brought all Broncos but one wins in their individual weight classes. Tim Matthews pinned Ricks' Craig Fillerup in 2:22 in the 177 class, and Rob Lundgren pinned Darrell Smart with only eight seconds left in the match for a victory at 142. Outstanding performances were also recorded by Dan Warren in the 158 class, as he scored a decision over Richard Hoppes, 19-6; Leon Madsen, who wrestled Neil Gilbert of Ricks to a 12-8 final in the 126 class; and Ken Moss, by stopping Steve Earl 12-4 in the 190 class.

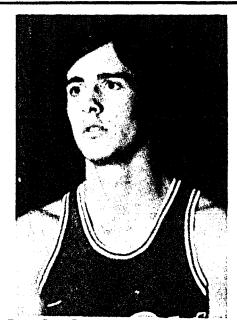

Saturday afternoon, both Weber State and Boise State found themselves in neutral territory. This rematch took place in Meridian, site of the Southern Idaho Conference District III High School Wrestling Tournament. BSU, coming off of a 28-17 win over Weber last week, as well as the win the day before, were more than ready for the Wildcats, as the final score of BSU 34-WSC 10 proves. For the third straight week, Dan Warren defeated Bob Thoman of Weber, but this time it was a pin, not just a decision. Joe Styron, Don Evans, and Ed Ritt won their matches by forfeit.

On Febuary 5, the Broncos rolled onto the court of Northern Arizona, and held their own until the final buzzer of the second half. The score at that point was 67-67, the game went into overtime, and to the dismay of the Boise State University cage fans, the Broncos went down in defeat, 85-83.

Two nights later, the story was quite different. The Broncos had traveled to Ogden, Utah, and were doing battle with Weber State College, who had bested the Broncos just one week earlier, 97 - 87.

At the end of halftime, Weber was leading 33 - 32. Boise State came back out in the second half, and using the ball to full advantage, went on to down the Wildeats 71 - 69.

Scoring for the Weber game went well, with Boise State's Pizza Hut Basketball Classic candidate Pat Hoke tying with Steve Connor at 14 points each.

With 13 points for the evening was spohmore Trent Johnson, a forward from Seattle Washington. Forth place went to Dan Jones of Compton California with 10 points for the Weber State contest.

The game, the player, and the ever present grades

(CPS)--The athletes who star on the football field Saturday afternoon do not always shine as brightly in the classroom Monday morning. The absence of academic progress in big time athletes has begun to worry officials at several universities and has recently prompted a number of studies of athletes' graduation and academic records.

It is no secret that many schools reduce their minimum academic admissions requirements for promising athletes. Since 1973, a recruit for a Big Ten conference school need only have a 2.0 high school GPA. And an athletic department official at the University of Minnesota admitted that the University was willing to take marginal students in an effort to get the best athletes available.

Recently the State Board of Higher Education of Oregon gave the Chancellor the power to change admissions requirements for Oregon's state universities. The reason for this ruling was that some university presidents feared that Oregon's higher admissions standards have "discriminated" against athletes who possibly wanted to attend college in Oregon.

The GPA requirements for out-of-state transfers and entering freshmen will probably be lowered to the level of in-state requirements, from a 2.5 to a 2.0 for freshmen and from a 2.75 to a 2.5 for transfers.

The problem with lowering admissions requirements to bolster the athletic department is that universities often cannot keep their sports heroes from dropping or flunking out. This low graduation rate for athletes worried the director of athletics at Marshall University in Huntington, WV so much that he initiated a study to find out where all his athletes were going. The study was started. Joseph McMullen explained. because he was concerned about why so many underclass rather than upperclass athletes were playing for Marshall teams.

Recruiting the athletes shouldn't only be looking at how fast he can run or how high he can jump, but more importantly at how the athlete can compete in an academic environment, McMullen said. "The school should get competence from the athlete both in academics and athletics."

But because college athletes often spend more time at practice sessions than hitting the books, many of them require special tutoring help. Only eight per cent of the Big Ten conference football players maintain "B" averages and only 66 of 822 eligible football players were nominated for the 23rd annual Big Ten All-Academic team. So tutoring programs, accredited by the NCAA, have been instituted at all of the Big Ten schools.

Athletes who are having difficulties with their academic work can obtain a tutor through the athletic department and the $5 an hour bill is footed by the school. At Purdue University. 40 to 50% of the eligible athletes use the tutoring system sometime during their careers and football players are the biggest customers.

In spite of the formal tutoring systems set up at Big Ten schools, many conference athletes are still incapable of making it all the way to graduation day. At the University of Minnesota, almost half of the athletes queried in a recent study never got a degree.

This in spite of the fact that more than two-thirds of the athletes are receiving significant financial aid and all Big Ten athletes must be enrolled in school on a continuous basis.

The data at the University of Minnesota indicates that nonrevenue sports have a slightly better graduation rate than the more prestigious revenue-producing sports like football and basketball. Minnesota's academic counselor for athletes admitted that when a prospective player in a revenue sport comes to the University, the sport is probably his main reason for being there. In non-revenue sports, athletes are more likely to be attending the University with adacemic priorities, he said.

Whatever the reason for the poor academic records of many college athletes, many universities are determined to find out why they can't produce athletes with degrees, but not without some opposition. At the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee where a project to take a detailed look at the records of student athletes was approved by the Athletic Board, some board members warned that officials would not like what they found.

'Our past record is not that good." an alumni board member who opposed the study said.

"There are skeletons in our closet and I will tell you what you will find. You'll find a rapist, a shoplifter and a dope peddler among some of our former athletes.

Unquestionable, 1975 was a big year for major-college football records. The rushers and kickers led the way, but they weren't the whole show, by any means, as this final roundup by NCAA Statistics Service will prove:

Team Offense

1975's Great Land Rush in major-college football produced an all-time high in total rushing yardage at 408.9 yards per game (both teams combined) and made offenses more explosive than ever: All-time highs were established in both yards per attempted pass (6.52) and yards per total-offense play (4.61), and yards per rush (3.94) was second in history to the record 4.05 set way back in 1954.

Final figures show the big role played by the country's 17 ground-loving Wishbone teams. The Wishbones averaged 279.7 rushing yards per game, the rest of the nation 194.2 (the national one-team average was 204.45), Wishbones 7.12 yards per attempted pass, the rest of the country 6.48; the Wishbones 5.02 yards per total-offense play, the rest of the country 4.56; the Wishbones 4.65 yards per rush, the rest of the nation 3.82.

National total-offense yardage (648.1) and scoring (40.1) both topped 625 yards and 40 points for an eighth straight season.

The national team champion in total offense is California, piloted by a classic drop-back passer in Joe Roth, running out of the pro set with runner-receiver Chuck Muncie, runnerup in the Heisman. Balance was the key for the 8-3-0 Golden Bears, who tied for the Pacific-8 championship. In fact, Cal's balance was exquisite indeed-2522 yards rushing and 2522 passing!...a record that can be tied but can never be surpassed.

It was the first total-offense championship ever won by a Pacific-8 team.

By contrast, passing champion San Diego State continued its every-other -year tradition, having also won the national passing title in '73, '71, and '69.

11-0-0 Arkansas State, in its first year as a major, won the rushing crown.

11-0-0 Ohio State won the national scoring championship (34.0).

Team Defense

Texas A&M's dream of a perfect season was shattered in that closing-game upset loss to Arkansas, but the Aggies do have a pair of consolation prizes--the national major-college statistical championships in both rushing defense and total defense.

The Aggies yielded only 80.3 yards per game rushing (only 1.97 yards per rush--lowest in the country), edging Miami (0). by 64 yards, and gave up only 183.8 rushing-passing yards per game in total defense, edging Alabama by 24 yards for No. 1.

Alabama's scoring-defense crown (6.0) was nothing new. Bear Bryant's team also won it in 1966 and 1961. But it was VMI's first-ever pass-defense (51.1) crown. The Keydets permitted opponents only a .354 completion percentage--lowest in the nation.

Rushing and Scoring

By almost every measurement imaginable, 1975 was indeed the most remarkable year for running backs in modern college football history, exceeding even the superlatives expended after the 1973 and 1971 seasons. Precisely because they won by big margins in such a season, three players stand out:

Southern Cal's Ricky Bell: Won the rushing championship by 279 yards. It was never a race after he rushed 256 and 215 yards his first two games. He just missed the all-time season record of 1881 yards by

A CAREER AFTER COLLEGE...

Young people are faced with many decisions, not the least of which is the choice of a career after college.

It should be one in which you will find satisfaction-not just for the money it brings, but for the opportunities for accomplishment it represents. Ideally, it's a career in which your spouse can be much more than an onlooker.

Don't overlook one important career that offers all this-financial reward in direct proportion to ability and a sense of achievement in a worthwhile undertaking.

It's a career that provides liberal compensation and benefits-even while you're learning. It's a career in which qualified young people are outstandingly successful.

Please call 344-1411 for an appointment.

Cornell's Ed Marinaro, finishing with 1875. Their figures were amazingly similar: Bell carried 357 times, Marinaro 356, and both averaged 5.3 per carry. (Bell had runs of 73, 46, 40 and 36 yards wiped out by penalties.) Please note, however, that Marinaro's all-time per-game record of 209.0 stands alone, with San Francisco's Ollie Matson second (174.0 in '51), USC's O.J. Simpson third (170.9 in '68) and Bells 170.5 fourth. Bell is a 6-1, 215-pound

Ohio State's Pete Johnson: Won the scoring championship by 48 points. It was never a race after this 6-1, 246-pound junior ripped North Carolina for five TDs on Sept. 27. His 25 TDs have been exceeded by only one major collegian in history--Penn State's Lydell Mitchell with 29 in 1971.

Ohio State's Archie Griffin: Only player to rush 5000 career yards against all-major opposition and first double winner of the Heisman, he drew more voting points than the next two (California's Chuck Muncie and Bell) players combined. (The first six players in the voting were running backs--first time that's ever happened.) His 5177 career yards probably won't stand long, but his amazing 31 straight regular-season games with at least 100 yards rushing probably will stand a long, long

Others Over 4000

You have to spotlight this trio, but there are many others who are hardly average also-rans. For instance, Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett, first junior ever to reach 4000 yards in career rushing (his 303 vs. Notre Dame was the national season high); and Long Beach State's Herb Lusk, whose 1596 yards have been exceeded by only eight major collegians in history. Oklahoma's Joe Washington, fourth on the all-time list, just one five-yard run short of 4000 (Dorsett's third at 4134). In all, a record nine players reached 3000 career yards--as many as the last two years combined.

Others were Kentucky's Sonny Collins, seventh at 3835; Wisconsin's Bill Marek, 10th at 3709 (making five of the all-time top 10); Utah State's Louie Giammona, 11th at 3499; Louisville's Walt Peacock, 3195; Muncie 3059 and SMU's Wayne Morris, 3044.

How do you measure a big rushing year? By 100-yards per-game rushers? There were 31 (including Arkansas' Jerry Eckwood, 113.1 for seven, not in the rankings because he didn't play 75% of his team's games), smashing the record of 27 set in '73. 1000-yard There were 35, rushers? equaling the record set in '73. 200-yard games? There were 34, again equaling the record set in '73.

Kicking Explosion

Call it the Great Kicking Explosion of 1975.

Note, please, the explosion is not confined merely to the number of field goals. A final survey shows the big kicking year also extended to accuracy and distance of FGs, and even to punting and points-after-touch-

Nationally, a total of 1164 field goals were made in all games involving the country's 134 major teams. That's 206 more than were kicked in the previous-record year (958 in 1973). The kickers achieved an accuracy percentage of .520, compared to the old record of .499 in 1973. And 116 games were decided by FGs, a whopping 25 games over the old mark of 91 in 1972.

Kickers were trying more often from longer distances and making them more often.

The national punting average was 38.1, second highest in history to the 38.5 in 1965. The national PAT percentage was a record .908 (old record .901 last season).

And the leading individual kicker this season--Temple senior Don Bitterlich-set six all-time records--season FGs (21), season FGs per game (1.91), season kick-points per game (7.1), and consecutive PAT's made (87 straight since Nov. 10, 1973).

Field Goals and Punting

How else do you measure a big kicking year? Consider these:

Item: Of the seven major collegians since 1937 who have kicked FGs of at least 60 yards, five played this season. Air Force's Dave Lawson made a record 62-yarder, but Colorado State's Clark Kemble broke that with a 63-yarder.

Item: Of 103 players in modern major-college history (since '37) who kicked at least 20 career FGs, 34 played this season (and 49 others graduated in the 1970s).

Item: Lawson's all-time career record 51 field goals is five more than all the major teams in the country combined kicked in 1950!

What about the punters? The champion, Ohio State junior Tom Skladany, boasted a 46.7 average--topped by only one punter (Utah's Mary Bateman, 48.1 in '71) since 1956.

There were too many other top individuals to mention, but one you can't overlook is New Mexico senior Bob Berg, whose 41 career FGs is thrd highest ever, and his career accuracy percentage is an amazing .732 (41-for-56).

Total Offense

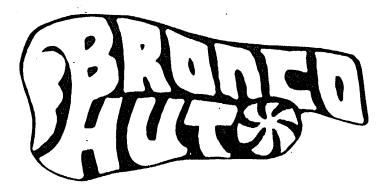

Make no mistake, there were some outstanding major-college quarterbacks this season, even though running backs hogged the headlines and the Heisman

Who? Well, for openers there's Toledo's Swick, national total-offense champion and the all-time career record-holder with 8074 rushing-passing yards, breaking the 7887 set by Stanford's Jim Plunkett in continued page 15

continued from page 14 Then there's San 1968-70. Diego State's Craig Penrose, national passing champion, and New Mexico's Steve Myer, who ranked in the top three in both categories.

Who else? Quite a few: California's smooth 6-foot-4 Joe Roth, whose 8.4 yards per attempted pass was highest in the top 25; South Carolina's Jeff Grantz, who led the country in TDs-responsible-for at 28 (he ran for 12 and passed for 16); Arizona's Bruce Hill, who had just 3 of his 225 passes intercepted for 1.3%--just missing the all-time record 1.2% by Tulsa's Jerry Rhome (4 of 326 in '64); UCLA's John Sciarra, who netted 806 rushing and threw for 1101 more; Ohio State's Cornelius Greene, who didn't have enough plays to eraged 9.5 yards for 103 attempted passes and is an outstanding runner; Miami (0.)'s 6.4 Sherman Smith, who netted 938 on the ground and 592 in the air. That's only a partial list, and don't forget the Wishbone operators like Kansas' Nolan Cromwell, whose 1124 rushing was third highest ever by a quarterback; and Texas' Marty

Passing

Akins.

Unquestionable, Swick is a skilled passer-he's led the country's top-25 with 62% completed each of the last two seasons (even though his top five receivers graduated in '74).

But this 6-1 son of a Dayton minister is the national champion because of his running ability: He ran for 577 yards--more than any player in the total-offense top 10--was thrown for a country-leading 358 yards in losses trying to pass and had 219 net rushing (to minus 170 for Penrose). Similarly, Swick netted 807 rushing over his career--amazingly gaining 2138 on the ground and losing 1331 trying to pass-while Plunkett netted 343. In fact, only one player in the all-time total-offense top 10 with 1225 in 1964-66. It should be pointed out that Plunkett's career per-game record in total offense (254.4 pg for three seasons) still stands. It is notable, however, that Swick threw 24 fewer passes than Plunkett over his career. Swick's rushing was the differ-

Penrose's passing championship should have been expected-San Diego State wins it every other year. Jesse Freitas won it in '73, Brian Sipe in '71 and in '69, Dennis Shaw won the total-offense crown for SDS.

Other Champions

And don't forget the receiving-runback specialists and safeties -- those versatile little game-turners who are vital to every football team:

Receiving: Brown's Bob Franham, a 5-10, 175-pound junior from Andover, Mass., helped his team to its finest season in 21 years (6-2-1). He took control of the receiving race with a national season-high 14 catches against Cornell Nov. 8.

Kickoff-return average: Maryland's John Schultz, 5-10, 195-pound senior wingback from Vestal, N.Y., helped the 8-2-1 Terps to their third straight bowl game by winning the kickoff-return crown (31.0), but that's not all. Schultz rushed for three TDs, threw a TD pass, caught two TDs, was the team's No. 2 receiver, had a 92-yard kickoff TD and a non-scoring 92-yarder.

Punt-return average: New Mexico State's Donnie Ross, a 5-11. 180-pound senior from Atchison, Kan., moved on top in punt returns with his non-scoring 81-yarder against North Texas Nov. 15. Earlier, he had a 79-yard TD against U. Texas El Paso.

Interceptions: East Carolina's Jim Bolding, a 5-11, 165-pound junior from High Point, N.C., intercepted 10 passes in 10 games for the 8-3-0 Pirates.

All purpose-running: Utah State's Louie Giammona won his second straight all-purpose championship (his 2045 yards was fifth highest in history) and a big factor once again was his leading the team in kickoff and punt return yardage.

Farnham was just one of many outstanding receivers. Tulsa's Steve Largent topped the country in both receiving yards (an even 1000) and TD catches (14)-the second year in a row he's led the nation in TD catches. California's Wesley Walker led in yards per catch (23.3), among the country's top 75 receivers.

WHO GETS THE NEW RELEASES FIRST??? Of course, we'd like to say THE MUSIC; WORKS, and we frequently do, but not always. Actually, if the record companies possibly could, they'd arrange that every store would receive the new releases simultaneously, which would be fine by us. In real life, though, a new LP will sometimes arrive in one store well before other stores get it. We do like to think we have the advantage most often. We're the only store in the area that gets all its merchandise directly from the manufacturers and distributors. instead of secondary wholesalers. Very often this saves a day or two on new releases, so it's worth checking with us when you're looking for something brand new.
