Board to act on dorm fee hikes

by Barb Bridwell

The State Board of Education will meet this coming Thursday and Friday, February 3 and 4, at Boise State.

Included in the Boise State agenda is a request from BSU to raise rates for dormitory and married student housing. For example, a double room at the Towers, Chaffee, Morrison and Driscoll Halls, with a 7-day, 20 meal plan, would cost $1,285 if the increase is approved. A board plan of 5-days, 10 meals a week for a double room at the dorms would cost $1,220.

Rates at University Courts and University Heights and Manor would also be raised. For a small one bedroom apartment at University Courts, the cost would be $87 per month. A one bedroom at University Heights would cost $133 per month.

The hike is due to increased operating overhead, utilities and food costs, according to BSU. The increase will maintain acceptable levels of service and accommodations available to resident students.

ARA food services is also asking for a ten per cent increase in snack bar prices for 1977-78. This is the first price increase for the snack bar since 1975.

BSU will also present its final plans and specifications for the Phase II portion of the Science-Education Building to the board. The project is basically unchanged since the preliminary plans were approved by the board several months ago, however, BSU would like to let Phase II be bid as soon as possible to know whether additional funds will be required.

Boise State is also requesting authority to appoint an architectural consultant to study the feasibility of a new on-campus apartment complex to be located adjacent to the Towers. Originally three facilities such as the Towers were to be located on the site, but planners feel there is space available for such an apartment complex.

According to the school, the facility is needed to meet increased student demands for housing and the demand for storied efficiency units, for both single and married students.

If the board approves the request, BSU will report back on the feasibility of such a plan and would possibly seek permission to appoint an architect to develop preliminary plans.

The State Board will also be asked to rule on yet another residency re-classification. Michael G. McBride is asking the board to classify him as a resident student.

McBride, in a letter to the board, stated "I think it is unfair to discriminate between one citizen who chooses to travel and accept employment outside of Idaho and one who doesn't. Idaho is my domicile of choice, I have been registered to vote in Idaho since November of 1974 and I have voted here. I have paid Idaho State Income Taxes as a resident in 1974 and 1975 and will do so for 1976."

Boise State is also asking for a $536 per year raise for head football coach Jim Criner. He would receive an annual salary of $24,736, up from $24,200.

Companies announce interview dates

A number of companies have announced interview dates for interested job applicants. The Simmons Sielaff & Parkinson Company will be interviewing people on February 9 for a Junior Staff Accountant position. They would like the applicant's major to be in accounting. The probable location for this job is Boise.

On February 10, Union Pacific will be conducting interviews for the position of Corporate Auditor. An accounting major with at least a 3.0 GPA is desired and the probable location is Omaha, Nebraska.

The Carnation Company will be conducting interviews on February 16, for the position of a Production Management Trainee with the probable location in either Nampa, Idaho, Othello, Washington or Moses Lake, Washington. They would prefer a major in Business Management with a knowledge of Food/Dairy Science. They will accept only those applicants who are on the Bachelors degree level.

An Associate Programmer position is open with the McDonnell Douglas Automation Company with the probable location in Long Beach, California or Huntington Beach, California. The interview date is February 21 and several majors are acceptable: Computer Science; Business Administration/Computer Science or Data Processing; Math/Computer Science and Operations Research/Computer Science.

The U.S. Navy Officer Program will be conducting interviews on February 22 and 25. A major in Science, Business, Math or engineering is preferred and the probable location is worldwide. Pilots, Naval Flight Officers, Line Officers, Businessmen dealing with supplies and nuclear engineers are needed.

Bomb threat evacuates campus buildings

On Friday, January 28, at about 12:30 pm, a bomb threat was phoned into Boise State University. The caller said that there was a bomb located within the Student Union, as well as one in the Administration building. Both buildings were evacuated and searched. When there were no bombs found, authorities allowed students and BSU personnel to reoccupy the buildings.

Boise city police have stated that they have no suspects in this case.

KBSU expands operating hours

KBSU has expanded their operating hours on weekends, according to Rich Landucci, program director. The station will now broadcast from noon to 1:00 a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. On Sunday, classical music will be broadcast from noon till 6:00 p.m. Broadcast hours on weekdays will be lengthened as soon as the announcing staff is expanded.

The station's new stereo equipment has arrived, General Manager Gary McCabe said. The new equipment will be in use in approximately two weeks, although KBSU won't broadcast in stereo for a month. The reason for this, according to McCabe, is that the FCC must approve the location for the new antenna, which will be on Table Rock.

"There is space and phone lines available on Table Rock, there is no hassle, but it does take a long time to get the FCC to OK it" he said.

Another new feature KBSU will present is radio theater in cooperation with the Theatre Arts department. Beginning Feb. 6, and running through May 8, the TA department will present radio drama, from 9 til 10 PM on Sundays. A partial list of productions include, Feb 13, Flash Gordon, Feb 25, Radio Star, March 27, Hamlet part 1, April 3, Hamlet, part 2, and May 8, War of the Worlds.

St. Luke's expands outpatient department

St. Luke's Hospital has expanded its outpatient department in its new addition by providing outpatient department physician coverage during selected hours of the day. This service has been provided to meet a community need for those people having "Urgent" but "non-life threatening" medical problems that require attention when physician's offices are closed.

The outpatient department is open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week and is staffed by skilled nurses. A physician is on duty in the outpatient department during the following hours: Monday through Friday - 4:00 p.m. to 12:00 midnight and on Saturday and Sunday - 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 midnight.

Patients using the outpatient department for "urgent" but "non-life threatening" situations may receive treatment by their private physician or the outpatient physician if they do not have a private physician or if their physician is unavailable. However, if patients do have a family or private physician, they should call him and follow his instructions before coming to the hospital.

A charge will be made for outpatient services; if the patient is seen by an outpatient department physician, his charges will be incorporated in the hospital bill.

The goal of St. Luke's Hospital is to treat many of the "urgent" but "Non-life threatening" problems particularly during evening and weekend hours, and to avoid delay in the treatment of these problems when the community emergency facility is busy with critical injuries.

Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, Joseph A.

Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, in conjunction with the Boise chapter of the American Red Cross, will hold a blood drawing Thursday, February 3, on the campus of Boise State University. The drawing will be held in the Ada Lounge of the Boise State Student Union Building, from 10:00 am to 3:00 pm. We would like to encourage all students of the university and residents of the community to participate. Pictured above is last year's blood drawing in the SUB Ballroom, which netted 173 pints for the Red Cross.

New HEW secretary outlines policy

Califano, Jr., held his first press conference yesterday since being sworn into his new post. No prepared statement was made on education. However, during the question and answer period, he was asked whether the Carter administration would propose any sweeping changes to the education portion of the budget submitted by the previous administration just three days before the inauguration. Indicating that he had already attended some budget meetings and others were scheduled this week, the Secretary indicated that many areas of the education budget would be looked at.

He particularly cited two which he believes are in need of additional consideration. One area was in the funding of education for the disadvantaged known as Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, and the other was in the area of relief to middle income families who were sending their children to college.

Funds for the disadvantaged for the current fiscal year totalled $2,050,000,000, and for the next year funds will increase to $2,285,000,000. Secretary Califano said that even that figure may have to be increased.

He further stated, "I think we need additional resources in many of these areas. I'm not the final arbiter of how fast we get those resources or the extent to which we get them. In the education area I think those resources are needed. Under Title I particularly, because that seems to be, at least at this point in time, the most effective focus of funds to disadvantaged children."

Secretary Califano expressed concern for the plight of middle income Americans who have children in college. He commented: "I think we must look at the question of how we provide relief so that middle class Americans do not have to go bankrupt when they want to send their sons and daughters to college."

Most of the student financial aid programs supported by the Office of Education are targeted to needy students. Of the five student aid programs supported by the Office, the primary vehicle for the middle income student is the guaranteed student loan program. To date, students from all income levels have borrowed more than 10 billion dollars through this program from private lenders with government guarantees.

THE QUESTIONS COLLEGE STUDENTS ASK THE MOST

CCC has been working on hundreds of campuses for 25 years. We've assembled answers to 10 of the questions most commonly asked by students when confronted with the claims of Christ.

The answer to one of the 10 questions today is brief. If you desire to know more, a CCC member would be happy to meet with you (336-1951) or come to our meetings every Thursday 7:00 Senate Chambers.

HOW CAN CHRISTIANS SAY THAT JESUS IS THE ONLY WAY TO GOD? Jesus Himself claimed to be God and others recognized Him as deity. He said, 'I and the Father are one.' The Greek language is explicit. Literally, Jesus said, 'I and the Father, we are one.' Jesus also claimed that He was the only way to God: 'I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one comes to the Father, but through Me.'

The question is, can we accept what Jesus claimed? The most conclusive evidence establishing the deity of Christ is the resurrection. The apostle Paul wrote that Jesus 'was declared with power to be the Son of God by the resurrection from the dead.' If the resurrection of Christ is true, then it is possible to

The primary reason that Jesus is the only way to God is that He forgives sin and offers eternal life, something which the founder of no other religion has claimed to do. Every person is separated from God by sin. Either man must pay the penalty for sin-death-or he must find someone who is willing and able-who has no sin-to pay it for him. Jesus Christ was able to do this, and was willing, as demonstrated by His death on the cross.

Tenants' unions work for rent laws

by Clifford A. Welch

(CPS)--"Hey man, how ya doin?...Have you found a place to live yet?...Neither have I. Brother, is off-campus housing ever a bitch!"

Any student, Anywhere, USA. Most of us have been through it. Notoriously, university and college towns across the nation boast some of the highest rents and lowest vacancy rates. Finding a place to live is the first lesson of many college careers.

Ploys have been tried at various campuses over the years to strengthen the students' position in the off-campus housing war, this year, though, there seems to be an influx of student organizing in this regard.

Initially, tenants' unions are formed so that, should a landlord commit an injustice to a tenant, like suddenly raising the rent or leaving the building a shambles, all the members of the union would rally together to defend the wronged tenant legally and/or spiritually.

As landlord-tenant conflicts have become more frequent and complicated, TU's have searched for ways to establish laws setting down codes of ethics for landlord-tenant relations. The most common move is an attempt to get a local rent control system, setting a ceiling on landlord profits.

At the University of California, Berkely campus, students and concerned townspeople are making a second bid at creating a local rent control ordinance. Their first try was successful--at first. A referendum was placed on the city ballot in 1972, passed and adopted into law. Unfortunately for the tenants of Berkeley, the law was later challenged by real estate and landlord representatives who brought it to the attention of the California Supreme Court, which struck down the ordinance because the original referendum was unconstitutional, the court said.

This time around, the Berkeley Housing Coalition and the tenants' union in Berkeley hope not to make the same mistakes. They'd hurry because, as Mary Saal of the UC Student Lobby explained, there is a "Rent Control Bill" ready to hit the State legislature which takes the power over the creation of local rent control out of a city or community's hands and places jurisdiction in the State Assembly and Senate. This is a bill sponsored by real estate concerns, Saal said, which would severely hang-up legislation designed to enhance tenant life because each case would have to be decided on by the entire legislature.

Where there is a hassle concerning the upkeep of a building or a rent hike, an independent, usually elected by the community, board of rent control reviewers would decide on the matter.

In Amherst, Mass., at the University of Massachusetts which has an enrollment of 25,000 compared to Amherst's 30,000, community groups and students are regrouping for a third try at imposing local rent controls, after a referendum's narrow defeat last November.

A spokeswoman for the Amherst Tenants Association, explained that their referendum would have rolled rent prices back to June, 1976 rates. This process would have taken two months. During that period landlords would be responsible for registering with the rent control board comprised of five elected members from the community, as established in the referendum. The landlords would have to give their cost figures so the board would review them and come to a conclusion on what a fair rent charge would be. The landlord's cost figure should take into account all expenses made to get the building up to local housing standards, the spokeswoman said, and the landlord would have to prove that the building met those standards.

The basic arguments against rent control center around the fact that under a rent control ordinance, the landlord's profit share is limited. The argument goes well with state legislators, who invariably have some jurisdiction over community ordinances, in these inflationary times when all forms of business must be encouraged.

Opponents argue that money would have to be appropriated from some source, more than likely property taxes, to support the rent control board. That would hurt landlords. The "con" argument continues: Rent control deters outside investment since investors could see that there was a ceiling on the amount of rent they could charge.

Property values would also decrease, opponents say, because landlords would not be encouraged to make improvements since profits are regulated.

But most of these arguments just don't hold water, as a UC student lobbyist explained. Citing various studies done in rent control boroughs in such places as New Jersey, New York, Florida and Massachusetts, Saal said:--there is more housing construction, hence more investments, in rent control areas than in non-rent control areas; --dwelling abandonment in rent control areas is less frequent;

--bankers did not give as a reason for holding up home loans local rent control regulations.

There is also rent control activity at the University of Colorado at Boulder and at Boise State University in Idaho.

However, rent control and/or landlord-tenant legislation is not seen as necessary in all large student dominated towns. At the University of Texas at Austin, a spokesman for the local tenants' union said that rents are not at all outrageous and that the availability of housing suits the demand.

At Wayne State, Michigan and at Rutgers University in New Jersey, also schools with large enrollments, the story is similar to that of UT at Austin. But where there are rental problems near colleges and universities, it appears students are working vigorously with the community to find solutions.

Monmouth students study soap operas

(CPS)--Students at Monmouth College, N.J., will have a chance to explore reasons why 30 to 40 million people a day are glued to their television sets watching soap operas.

The college has decided to offer a course exploring the psychology of soaps in an attempt to help the students come to grips with why people become addicted to watching Mary Harman's marital difficulties and cringing at the pain and problems in "As the World Turns."

The instructors of the course are Monmouth professor Kenneth Haun and his wife, Julie.

"People watch because they do not want to get involved in real life situations," Mrs. Haun said. "It's really an escape. Mr. and Mrs. Haun began watching soap operas after their sixth child was born.

"We would sit down to feed the baby, turn on the television set and discover ourselves involved in the soaps," she said. Her husband concluded that since 30 to 40 million people a day are glued to their tubes watching the soaps "there was something of interest to a psychologist here." He took his idea to the school and after a bit of apprehension, the school agreed to offer the course.

ERA causes furor in State Legislature

by Barb Bridwell

Twenty-four simple words are currently causing more furor in the Legislature than practically any other piece of legislation ever introduced. Those words: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any other state on account of sex." Otherwise known as the Equal Rights Amendment, or ERA.

The House Printing Committee of the legislature voted Thursday not to block an attempt to rescind Idaho's ratification of the ERA. The committee voted 5-3 to print the resolution calling for rescission. It will be introduced this week.

The resolution is the fifth attempt by the legislature to rescind their 1972 ratification of the proposed constitutional amendment. The amendment must be ratified by 38 states by next year to become law, and 35 states have ratified thus far.

D. Allen Dalton, chairman of the Libertarian Party of Idaho, says that the ERA is supported in principle by that group.

"The Equal Rights Amendment has been debated enough such that all arguments have been heard. In effect, all the ERA will do is extend and clarify the meaning of the fourteenth amendment. The fact that the amendment provides an active role for the government in ridding our society of inequality before the law should be of no detriment to the issue," he said.

Dalton said several side issues have been brought up by groups that have no substance. "Women will be subject to the draft, opponents say. True. The opponents assume that the slavery of the draft is proper for men but not for women. The Libertarian response," Dalton says, "is that slavery is wrong for everyone. Apparently the persons who oppose ERA have come to no such insight. I believe it is time we realize that every individual has the right to live in any peaceful manner he/she so chooses. The ERA only brings such a world one step closer to realization," he added.

Last Saturday, ERA opponents held a "Stop ERA" rally at Meridian Junior High school. Phyllis Schlafly, chairman of the National Stop ERA, told the crowd of 1600 persons at the rally that the Equal Rights Amendment would "destroy the American family and rob wives of the financial security they've always known."

Schlafly warned the group that while the ERA claims to better the position of women, the privileges they now enjoy will be eliminated when laws are rewritten to show no difference between the sexes.

A prepared speech by Boyd Packard, an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, was read to the group. Packard, a member of the Council of the 12 Apostles, said the "ERA as a blanket attempt to help women could bring them more restraints and repressions.

It would strike at the family, humankind's basic institution."

Schlafly said "There is nothing that the amendment would do to help women. It takes away no inequities. There are no laws today that discriminate against women."

The ERA would, according to Schlafly, make women liable for the draft (This, however, could only happen if the draft were reinstated). It would also make women liable for a family's financial debts and would no longer require a husband to support his wife and children. Schlafly said the ERA would also not allow for privacy between sexes in public places.

U of I tuition measure up for consideration

The House Education Committee of the Legislature has a constitutional amendment before it which would give the University of Idaho authority to charge tuition to resident students. Action was deferred however, until the opposition have an opportunity to protest.

Rep. Ketty Guernsey, (R-Boise) introduced the measure to the committee, saying that Idaho students are paying less for student fees than students in institutions in surrounding states.

Currently the Idaho State Constitution prohibits charging students at the University of Idaho in-state tuition. State statutes prohibit charging tuition to resident students at the other state-supported institutions.

Libertarian Commentary

'Right-to-work' infringes

by D. Allen Dalton

The so-called 'Right-to-Work' bill (HB 67) now before the State Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives of the legislature has received much attention lately in the statewide press, but at best the treatment has been superficial.

The 'Right-to-Work' bill is allowed by the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947 in section 14(b). This section of Taft-Hartley was adopted by Congress in an effort to allow state legislatures to regulate union membership, or as labor unions prefer, union security clauses. The Congress adopted this provision in an effort to partially nullify the National Labor Relations Act (1935), which provided exclusive representation rights for a union chosen by a majority of workers. Under exclusive representation, a union which has achieved a majority of votes in an election of employees to choose a union to collectively bargain for them, bargains for all employees. Briefly, if an individual employee votes for a different union (or no union at all), he is denied, under the law, any redress.

The 'Right-to-Work' bill before the Idaho legislature, like other bills enacted or pending in other states, does not address the problem of exclusive representation. Rather, 'Right-to-Work' laws mandate, by law, a compulsory open shop. An open shop exists as a "plant where employees are declared by the employer to be free to join or not join a union." (Primer of Labor Relations, p. 132) A compulsory open shop exists as a plant where, by state law (not employers), it is declared that employees are free to join or not join the sole and exclusive representative (union) at the plant, if such exclusive representative exists.

As an example of the present situation: if an individual becomes an employee where a union shop exists, the individual must become a member of the union- which is the exclusive representative- within thirty days (as a rule). If an agency shop exists, the individual may (after thirty days, as a rule) either join the union, or not join the union and pay an amount equal to dues to (usually) the union welfare fund, instead of the union treasury. In both cases, the specific arrangement is agreed upon by the employer and exclusive representative of the employees. According to Lonnie Keating, Idaho COPE director for the AFL-CIO, "In Idaho, union shops and agency

Shawna Lee

Lee becomes new ASB Chief Justice

by Mary Struhs

Since the first of January there has been a new Chief Justice presiding over the ASBSU Judiciary Council. Though 19-year old Shawna Lee has just recently been selected to be Chief Justice, she is by no means new to the Judiciary Council. She served 1½ years as a justice before she was chosen by the Personnel Selection Committee to replace John Flewelling.

Shawna has the "authority in all cases involving alleged violations of ASBSU and/or University regulations or policies. They will hear all complaints other than academic unless referred to a lower tribunal." (as states in the Student Handbook)

The new Chief Justice says that she is "enjoying the opportunity to serve the students. I think that the experience will be invaluable to me when I go on to law school. It's a very time-consuming position as I need to be knowledgeable of all the procedures. There's a lot of reading involved."

Shawna would like to see more communication between the legislative and judicial branches. "I think we might come together on a lot more issues then and perhaps be able to represent the students better."

Currently she is employed as a legislative intern for KAID, writing research projects on welfare conditions and on a state water plan. She also conducts preview interviews with legislators. When asked about her plans for the future she said that she definitely has political ambitions. "But," she commented, "my biggest concern is with the underprivileged-especially the minorities."

Shawna can be reached, along with the justices, through the Programs Office in the SUB. She would like to encourage the student to express his opinion if he has a complaint. All complaints can be given to Christa Bax, who is the assistant director of Student Activities in the Programs Office.

Senate gives approval to Informational Retrieval System

---The ASB Student Services Department got the go-ahead from the student senate Tuesday for their $16,000 computerized Information Retrieval System.

The expenditure was approved with Senators Tracy Miller, Freddie Vincent, Chris Hayne and Jim Marshall voting "no."

Hayne explained his vote by stating "I couldn't see spending $16,000 for an electronic file cabinet."

Student Services Chairman Howard Welsh, who presented the proposal, described Information Retrieval as a computer program which will provide students with information including transportation, housing and job referrals.

"This is the kind of program that establishes our competence and viability as a department of services for the students," said Welsh.

---The entire Programs Board Committee was on the verge of resigning last week in response to the student senate's refusal to allow an increase in service awards for SUPB chairpersons.

Steve Robertson, Programs Board Director, asked the senate to allow SUPB to increase nine chairpersons' service awards by $25, so that the service awards would total $50 a month. Robertson did not ask the senate to allocate the extra $900. He explained that SUPB has an extra $900 already included in their budget, and they only wanted permission to relocate money previously allocated to increase the service awards.

With eight senators voting "no", the motion failed. One senator suggested that as a gesture of good will, the SUPB return the $900 they saved to the general fund.

---The Arbiter asked the student senate for an $813 allocation for lay-out supplies. The motion failed, with senators Jim Marshall, Chris Rudd, Connie Nelson, Holly Welsi, and Mike Kirkpatrick voting "no."

"This budget came up at a bad time," stated Rudd, "All we've done today is spend money."

Equal rights

Sexism and below average mentalities have returned to the Idaho Statehouse for the fifth year in a row as the continuing saga of "ERA--To Be Or Not To Be" goes on.

Equal rights is an idea whose time has come. Discrimination can no longer be tolerated, be it against blacks, Chicanos or women. In a state that has just spent the past week watching a television series dealing with discrimination, (Roots) it is hard to believe that the idea of inequality among people can still be tolerated.

Idaho was one of the first states to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment. Now a small but vocal group of people, who would rather stay home in the kitchen, barefoot and pregnant, (or have their wives stay home barefoot and pregnant), would choose to dictate to others what their life style should be.

Some women either can't or do not wish to stay in that position. More and more women are working outside the home, either by choice or necessity. They deserve equal treatment in the job market. This is no threat to motherhood and home as some would believe. The ERA does not force any woman out of her home; it simply makes it possible for those who wish to work and lead equal lives to do so.

Thirty-four other states have ratified the ERA. The world has not come to an end. People still get married, have children and live happily ever after. Women aren't forced to use men's bathrooms. But for women who want to work, it gives them an equal chance.

Equality under the law is only logical. The ERA would give women just that--the right to try and make it in their own in a world that is, unfortunately, still filled with empty minds.

'The national interest demands that we...'

By Chuck Bufe

"The national interest demands that we..."
Supply the rest of the sentence yourself.

How many times in recent years have we heard that phrase? How many times have we been told that the "national interest" demands that we "reaffirm our commitment to the government of South Vietnam"; "accept a certain level of unemployment to hold down inflation"; "pursue an all-out nuclear power program to meet our energy needs"; "deregulate natural gas prices to stimulate exploration for more gas." The list goes on and on.

What is most interesting about such statements is that the politicians and businessmen who issue such utterances blithely assume that there is such a thing as the "national interest," and that it's the same as their own.

If you do not wish to get bogged down in metaphysical swamps, a fairly simple definition of the term nation (in this case, the U.S.) suggests itself -- the geographic area referred to as the United States and all individuals inhabiting that area (well in excess of 200 million). Given the huge number of people living in the U.S., it becomes immediately apparent that the interests of all the people will coincide on very few, if any, issues. Thus, if we are to use the term "national interest," the only sensible use of the term is in the sense which refers to the interest of a majority of the population.

As the most immediate problems facing us are economic, it seems reasonable to begin a discussion of the "national interest" in terms of economics.

Contrary to popular belief, the American economic system is not a "people's capitalism"; the distribution of wealth in the U.S. is as lopsided as in any Latin American country. Approximately 15 million Americans own corporate stock. That sounds like a large number, but in comparison with the total population it's not very impressive -- only 1 in every 15 U.S. citizens owns any stock. And even within that comparatively small group the distribution is very uneven. One fifth of the stockholders hold four-fifths of the stock. That is, 1.6% of the population owns over 80% of all stock. The same group holds nearly 100% of all state and local government bonds.

One rather obvious example of divergence of interests between those who own the big corporations and the rest of us (the unemployed, those already in the work force, and those of us preparing to enter or re-enter the work force) is in the matter of unemployment. Maintaining a certain level of unemployment works to the advantage of the corporations: it tends to keep their workers docile (who's going to run the risk of being fired when prospects of finding another job are dismal?) -- this, of course helps to hold down wages; the unemployed constitute a huge reserve of potential scabs for use during strikes; unemployment helps ensure a steady supply of recruits for the police and the military; and the unemployed must be fed (by those working) -- this provides right wing demagogues with a golden opportunity to divide the poor by railing against "welfare fraud," that is, blaming the economic woes of the American economic system upon its most pitiful victims.

For the rest of us, unemployment means one thing only: misery. Unemployment ensures that most of us live with the constant worry of job-loss or the worry of being unable to find employment upon graduation. This in turn leads us to accept lower wages and worse working conditions than we would otherwise find tolerable.

The most bizarre aspect of the unemployment question is that there is evidence that unemployment does not even hold down inflation. A new study prepared by economists Howard Wachtel and Peter Adelsheim for Congress' Joint Economic Committee suggests that unemployment worsens rather than reduces inflation. The study finds that "prices in some industries continue to rise during every major recession going all the way back to World War II."

The reason? Economic concentration. In many industries a small number of ever-expanding companies so dominate the markets for their products that they can set their own prices. Thus, during times of high unemployment with the concomitant decrease in demand, these firms raise prices to maintain profits. Some of the industries in this category are utilities, food, aircraft, rubber and tobacco.

There is a similar divergence of interests in the manner of energy.

The prices paid by the public for energy has risen drastically in the last few years. The disastrous effects of the price rise are reflected in the average home budget. Home heating bills in the range of $50 to $75 per month are becoming the norm. And the price of gasoline has doubled in the last five years.

The effects upon the corporations have been somewhat different than those upon the public.

Two endorse multi-purpose complex development at BSU

To the Student Body of Boise State University

As the final recommendation of the committee investigating the need and feasibility of a multi-purpose complex at Boise State draws to an end, I feel it is necessary for me to voice a few of my observations and concerns.

It should be pointed out, the State Board of Education, at its July meeting, indicated that the students would be assessed a fifty to one-hundred dollar fee increase. At first, it appeared that this fee would be arbitrarily levied, later it became apparent that the administration as well as the students would be allowed to earmark this fee increase. It is my major concern that if a fee increase should occur that it be earmarked for a specific purpose that will benefit the students such as the pavilion. ASBSU Vice President Mike Hoffman and I recently visited with Mr. Milton Small, Executive Director of State Board of Education, who informed us that a fee increase might well be assessed for the institutional fee. I believe that the general operational expense of running BSU is solely the responsibility of the State of Idaho, and should not rest upon the students shoulders. Students at Boise State are not assessed this tuition-type fee. My feeling is that if a fee increase is to occur, and it appears inevitable, that the fee increase be used for the development of a multi-purpose complex, it should also be noted that no other institutional fee increase should be levied at Boise State unless that fee is uniformly assessed at the other State institutions of higher learning.

In conclusion, I believe that the committee has done an excellent and thorough job, and should be commended for their efforts.

Lenny Hertling
ASBSU President

Editor, the ARBITER,

President Hertling's comments in the above text follows the trend of ASBSU student leaders over the past seven years. This issue of students paying for educational buildings and maintenance has long been a questionable one. It is time we, the student body of Boise State University, step forward and meet the challenges that are being presented in this multi-purpose complex issue. These facts provided by President Hertling should ease any ill feeling about why the student government is addressing the fee increase question, because it's not what we want but rather what we're going to get regardless! This is Boise State University's last opportunity to keep BSU funds at BSU where they are sincerely needed, and where they belong to meet our demanding growth needs for the future.

Writer lists Campus Bookstore problems.

Editor, the ARBITER

I feel compelled to relate an incident that happened to me a few days ago. I entered the University Bookstore intent on purchasing a book required for one of my classes. After a time of searching, I did in fact find the book I needed, noted the publisher's price of $5.95 emblazoned on the front, and proceeded to the checkout area.

Assuming the price of the book to be $5.95 (I usually take for granted the fact that actual cost of an item corresponds to the indicated cost of said item) I was confused when the cashier rang $7.05 on the register. An honest mistake has been made, I thought, and I brought the price discrepancy to the attention of the cashier. After an extended waiting period, I was informed that no, a mistake was not made; things are not always what they appear to be -- essentially, gee, that's tough, buster.

My question then, is: Does this not constitute fraud, false advertising and underhanded trickery? I feel that I have been swindled. Further, there seems to be no recourse for me but to sit back and accept this injustice. Does this happen all the time?

I am disgruntled enough with the existence of a textbook monopoly on campus, but such obvious departures from fairness and honesty make me hard to live with and very angry.

National interest...

Last year Exxon recorded profits exceeding $2.5 billion, an all-time high.

And just who's "national interest" is reflected in the energy policies we're being urged to follow? Practically all we've been hearing recently are calls for subsidies and tax breaks for the energy conglomerates to stimulate more drilling and exploration for fossil and nuclear fuels. Also being urged is an all-out nuclear energy program.

Practically all of the easily exploitable deposits of oil and natural gas in this country have already been discovered and are rapidly being depleted. Development of the remaining supplies will be much more difficult, and hence, much more costly. If we pursue this option, we're faced with the prospect of steadily rising energy costs.

Nuclear power is also a very expensive proposition. Long touted by its proponents as a cheap source of energy, nuclear power has become an extremely expensive proposition. As an example, the Midland power complex in Michigan was originally scheduled to open in 1974 at a cost of $349 million; the latest estimate is that it will open in 1981 at a cost of $1.4 billion.

Another problem with nuclear power is that the supply of uranium is expected to run out by the year 2000. This means that fuel costs will steadily rise.

To "solve" that problem, the Energy Research and Development Corporation is pouring money into the development of "breeder-reactors" which will produce more fuel than they consume. The fuel that the breeders will produce is plutonium, the most toxic substance known to man (inhalation of one microgram—one millionth of a gram, one pound is equal to 455 grams—is sufficient to produce cancer in human beings).

Needless to say, the breeder program will be very expensive. To date the U. S. has committed over $200 billion in public and private monies to nuclear energy.

The tying up of such huge sums means that comparatively little is available for development of alternative sources. During the last 30 years the federal government has spent only $163 million on the development of solar energy.

At the same time that we're hearing anguished cries from government and business for the development of new supplies of oil and gas and the investment of high amounts of money in nuclear power, energy conservation remains an empty slogan. In most areas of the country utility rates encourage the waste of energy—the more you use, the less you pay. Small users commonly pay three or four times as much per kilowatt hour as large industrial users.

Huge amounts of energy are wasted in all segments of the economy. It is estimated that 50 per cent of all energy used in this country is wasted, with the waste in some sectors, specifically transportation, being much higher.

If we follow the course outlined by business and government, in regard to energy, the consequences are obvious. Business will be assured of continuing profits. The rest of us will be faced with ever-higher energy bills.

On the other hand, if we embark upon a serious program of energy conservation and development of alternative energy sources, especially solar, the public, not the corporations, would benefit. Energy conservation through utility rate reform would produce immediate relief for small users as well as reduce the need for new sources of energy.

Development of solar power would also be advantageous to the public. The most immediate practical uses of solar power are in the fields of hot water and space heating. A program of low interest loans and tax write-offs for the installation of solar units and insulation would not only reduce energy consumption but would also stimulate employment. Such a program would produce many more jobs than would a capital-intensive, high-technology nuclear program.

The next time you hear some politician or shill for big business stating that "the national interest demands that we..." take a few seconds and think about what he's saying. Think about whose interests he's talking about when he utters the magic words "national interest."

Readers disagree with astrology commentary

Editor, the ARBITER

We were very perturbed by Mr. Bufe's blatant and flippant comments about the astrology seminar currently being offered under the auspices of the Honors Program. While many of us agree that the Honors Program seems to have different sets of standards for admission to different students, we feel that calling the astrology seminar, "awarding of academic credits for the study of...pseudo-scientific garbage...appalling...etc." is not only unprofessional, but also unsubstantiated. We respect Mr. Bufe's opinion, but as an infamous historian once said, "opinions are like assholes, everybody has one."

Idaho's progress toward ERA

Since 1972, the Idaho Legislature has taken on a sadistic attitude concerning the Equal Rights Amendment. When the session was convened in 1972, Idaho women had gained a victory. In 1896 women won the right to vote in Idaho and now, eighty-one years later, the ERA marked a new victory, equal protection under the law in the form of a constitutional amendment. Women became recognized not as half of a human being, but a whole person, a citizen at last. Things were looking up.

Since that time, other states have been in a dilemma as to how to handle the ERA issue. The whole question hangs on one simple question, "What are all those women going to do with a constitutional amendment in their hands?" To some of those prominent legislators, this question is enough to bring on a coronary. While some states ponder this issue, others have created a new technique called recission. Recission is a polite way of saying, "Oops, sorry, chicks, but we made a terrible mistake." Idaho has chosen this alternative in dealing with the critical issue of rights for women.

Since the Guilt-ridden days of Vietnam, when the country went to great lengths to quiet the fires of revolution, the drums of democracy have slowly stopped beating. When the end came of the student demonstrations and threats of anarchy, so came the end of political promises for a "New Day". Women were tantalized with the belief that they too could share in the wealth of government protection-the ERA. Women marched from the kitchens of the new left and formed Women's Liberation Movement. The movement called for an end of discrimination based upon sex. For a short time, this demand seemed to be solidifying.

In Idaho, the sadistic techniques to which I referred, have erupted. The game of cat and mouse has resumed. The representative from Pocatello was interviewed and asked about his reasons for seeking recission. He replied that he was reluctant because he just didn't know what might happen later down the road. I wonder if he has considered what might happen down the road if the ERA is not made law.

The power of the people was felt dramatically in the 1960's but a confrontation with thousands of angry women will mean more than a small bonfire.

Vicky Walker and Millynn James of the Women's Alliance, Tutti Sandmayer of Student Services, and Nancy Burks (N.W. lottery delegate) were delegates at the founding convention of the National Women's Studies Association held in San Francisco January 13-16, 1977.

Women's Studies is a rapidly growing program in over a thousand colleges and universities around the nation. From a scattering of only a few hundred courses in the 1960's, the new discipline now counts nearly 5000 courses and 300 degree-granting programs. Five now offer the M.A. in Women's Studies, and two plan doctoral degrees. Participating were 600 faculty, students, administrators, and community program representatives who took part in founding the new Association.

Sponsored by the Women's Studies Program of San Jose State University in San Jose, California, and the Santa Clara Commission on the Status of Women, the new national Association is a response to the growth of Women's Studies, as well as to the inclusions of Women's Studies courses in traditional areas. Departments of English, History, Psychology, Sociology, Anthropology, Biology and other sciences include the new courses in their offerings.

Preceding the San Francisco founding convention two conferences were held, at Philadelphia and at Bryn Mawr. Delegates were elected from a wide variety of University campuses, Secondary and Elementary Schools, and Community-based centers. They came to the founding convention from twelve geographic regions of the United States.

The new Association will work to establish communications networks and to support in all appropriate ways the activities of Women's Studies Programs throughout the nation. Our women's programs at BSU are now charter members of both the new national association and our own Northwest Women's Studies Association. We will continue to work within both groups and on a local level. We are preparing a more in-depth look at the conference, within this column.

BSU ski classes forced to 'go without'

by Doug Harper

Looking into the future, it would be safe to say that the winter of 1976-77 will be remembered as the Year Everyone Went Without. Already it's February, yet there isn't even enough snow on the ground to keep the area's only ski resort, Bogus Basin, open. (As of the Arbiters' deadline last Thursday, the weather forecast remained unchanged...cold and dry.) Granted, it's hard to console the many ski lovers who bought season passes for $155, or even the students who planned to ski and go to school (usually with priority on skiing), but what about the 126 Boise State students registered for classes in cross country and alpine skiing?

Bill Jones, an outdoor recreation professor at BSU who has organized the ski program for the university for the past eight years, encourages the students not to give up hope, even though the first two Saturday classes have been cancelled due to the snow "famine."

"Bogus has promised to open at the first snow," he said. "The entire area is packed down. They have a beautiful base, but you can't ski with most of the rocks uncovered. All we need is snow."

"Usually there's about five feet at this time of year. There was only about eight inches of snow on the north slope of Schaffer View the other day, and when I dug through to the ground, it was dust. There is absolutely no moisture in the air. The snow is frozen on the top, but the dirt is dry because there were no November rains to produce moisture.

"We (BSU Physical Education Department) are in a holding mode until it snows. If it does, then the lessons will be operated on a pro-rated basis where the student will pay for only each lesson at a time, (about $6 for two sessions that last two hours each) rather than paying for all of the lessons at the beginning.

"The school will set a cutoff date, probably around the last of February, so that students can withdraw before midterm if there is no snow. This will give them a chance to enroll in outdoor spring classes if they choose."

Jones pointed out that the only money that the school would lose if it didn't snow would be from refunds to part-time students and to those who audit the course. The part-time students will receive a refund of $20 while those who audit will get $18 back.

If the snowfall would have been normal and the resort had kept open, those students who registered for the class would have saved at least $118 by taking the class through BSU; rather than paying for the lessons privately. Through agreements with Bogus Basin and McQ's, all of the registered students would have gotten discounts on their ski equipment and lift passes, while it would cost $35 for 24 hours of instruction. Students would be placed in classes according to their prior ability.

Jones added that this year would be an excellent year to buy equipment, as most stores will try only to sell their 1976-77 ski merchandise without expecting a very big profit margin, if any at all.

For those unfortunate souls who bought passes or private lessons from Bogus, a spokesman said that the board of Bogus Basin, a non-profit corporation, will decide on all refunds when they meet at the end of the ski season. (When is that?)

Laughing, Jones closed by describing the conditions as beneficial only to the rocks at Bogus. "They all have P-tex tops and have been waxed very well!"

Ferlinghetti to kick off readings

Lawrence Ferlinghetti, a San Francisco poet who played a major role in the Beat movement of the 1950's, will be in Boise February 9-10 to kick off a new series of poetry readings arranged by Boise State University.

He will read February 9 in the Boise Gallery of Art on poetry and paintings and February 10 in BSU's Speccenter. Both appearances start at 8 pm and are free to the public.

Ferlinghetti will be the first of five poetic superstars who will be in Boise this spring under the grant organized by BSU English professor Dr. Charles David Wright. He will be followed by William Matthews, Robert Bly, Marge Piercy and Sandra McPherson.

About one poet per month will be in town through May, said Wright. Finances for their appearances come from BSU, Idaho Heritage Magazine, Observer Books, Boise Public Schools and the Boise Gallery of Art.

Those organizations combined to put up half the $5,000 used to fund the series. The National Endowment for the Arts furnished the rest.

According to Wright, each poet will spend two days in Boise, spreading that time between workshops with teachers, creative writing classes at BSU, and readings.

Opening poet Ferlinghetti was a pioneer in the 50's movement toward a more open, oral style of poetry, said Wright. With Peter Martin, he founded the first all-paperback bookstore in the country, City Lights, in San Francisco. Later, his publishing company by the same name was one of the first to print works of Beat poets like William Burroughs and Allen Ginsberg. Ginsberg's "Howl," which was seized by customs agents and led to the well-publicized trial of the author, was published by Ferlinghetti.

Unlike many of the "Beat" poets, Ferlinghetti's work is engaged in politics and society. Poems on topics like billboards and "automobilized America" are typical of the San Francisco artist, said Wright.

Since 1955 he has completed eight books of poetry, two plays, three films and four records.

As the person who brought poets, sponsors and money together, Wright said this spring will be the first time so many widely acclaimed poets have come to Boise. At least four of them are included in anthologies used in BSU classes. The chance for BSU students to meet poets they have studied adds "richness and excitement" to the BSU English program, Wright explained.

The new poetry series is the continuation of several BSU--community efforts, he said. Already the university has worked in the "Poetry in the Schools" program. Last year four poets sponsored by a grant from the Idaho Association for the Humanities were at BSU and the Gallery for public readings.

Wright said Boise is ready to receive big name poets like Ferlinghetti. "There is a lively scene in poetry here now," he claimed. As examples, he points to several community activities in poetry.

Of the Wednesday night programs at the art gallery, poetry readings are often the best attended. Readings at the Observer Bookstore have also drawn good crowds. On top of that, Wright credited publications like Idaho Heritage, cold-drill and the Statesman for bringing poetry to the people.

Wright added that Idaho has at least four publishers who print good poetry. For a state with eight people per square mile, that's a lot of involvement," he said.

"Poetry in the Schools," a program that has brought several top rate poets to Boise to work with young students, has also helped the poetic climate in town, Wright added.

Department to present 'The Birthday Party'

Who would be rehearsing a birthday party for four weeks? The Theatre Department of course! "The Birthday Party" by Harold Pinter, one of England's top contemporary dramatists, will be the first show of the new year.

Director, Dr. Robert Ericson cast the show before Christmas. However, the actual rehearsals didn't start until school started this semester. The cast is a good mixture of new talent and veteran members of the department. Seelye Smith plays the part of Meg, an older lady who runs an almost-empty boarding house. Her husband, a deck chair attendant, is played by Gerry Bryant. There is a neighbor girl (Victoria Holloway) and a solitary boarder, Stanley, who is portrayed by Marc Vega. It is his birthday (or is it?) that is celebrated. Two other guests arrive: Mr. Goldberg played by Doug Copsey and Mr. McCann played by Joel Farmer. Their arrival causes a variety of reactions from delight to terror.

The usual gaiety associated with a birthday party is replaced with a fearful anxiety as Pinter explores the psyches of his characters.

Start the new year with a new look at the "normal" people around you. "The Birthday Party" will be presented in the Subal Theatre from Feb. 18 through 26.

What is your opinion on increasing student fees for the fall semester?

Bill Farnwood-sophomore- I don't like it, but if it goes for the new pavilion, it will be a good deal.

Marva Dotson-sophomore- If it's for the new pavilion, I'm not too happy about it. The money should go for faculty fees.

Elaine Clegg-junior- Well, I guess it was inevitable, I don't like it but there's not too much one can do about it. If they do increase it, I would like to see the money go for the pavilion. We need it very badly and if it is built, it should be an all-purpose pavilion.

Richard Young-graduate- Well, everything else is rising. What can you do? They will probably get the money for the pavilion, I wouldn't doubt it.

Ron Sater-sophomore- I'm not in favor of it. I don't think the survey was valid. They recommended an increase, but when it was time for the survey they didn't let the student know how much of an increase it would be.

Dean Wynkoop-sophomore- Well, it depends on what the money is used for. But I would not favor it.

Nancy Jo Lester-freshman- I don't think I'll be too happy about it. I don't know if it's really necessary.

Lynn Fernston-sophomore- I think it is a great idea. The money should not go for teacher's fees, but the students need better facilities for athletics and concerts.

Barble Lahtinen-junior- I think it is a good idea if the money is used for more facilities.

'Wind' opera cast set; rehearsals to begin

Tryouts were held this past weekend for the Rock Opera "WIND" scheduled for production the last four days of March in the Special Events Center.

Further casting has yet to be finished.

There are still openings for people interested in working with this show as there are a large number of effects, slides and projections that require some help. There is also a need for a drummer. If you, or someone you know might be interested, please call. The number is 376-4218.

"WIND" will begin rehearsals the Febuary 14 for the showdate in March. All profits from the show will go into a scholarship fund.

shops are split about fifty-fifty as far as agreements between the workers and employers."

'Right-to-Work' would infringe upon the right of contract now enjoyed by the employer. It must be remembered that both employees and employer must come to a voluntary agreement, in any situation, for employment to continue. 'Right-to-Work' binds the hands of employers who, for whatever reason, wish to bargain for either union or agency shop in their plants.

Laws restrict freedom. This is an insight long established by legal and political philosophers. 'Right-to-Work' will do no less.

If the 'Right-to-Work' people really wished to provide freedom for the worker and employer, they would concentrate their efforts on repealing the National Labor Relations Act, Taft-Hartley Act, Landrum-Griffin Act, and all of their amendments. Starting from scratch, Congress could recognize unions as associations protected by the First Amendment and allow free and voluntary shops (where multiple and competing unions could exist in each plant; where individuals could join or not join a variety of unions; where employers would have full freedom of contract) to bloom.

'Right-to-Work' laws on the other hand, will only subject both workers and employers to a further morass of bureaucratic regulation and harassment, imposing loss of liberty to the individual and higher costs to the consumer.

Boise faces must road trip

by Marty Most, Arbitrator Sports Editor

All of a sudden, Boise State's basketball team is in desperate trouble. Facing the toughest road trip of the year and fighting for their lives, the Bronco's hopes rest on yet unseen reserves of determination. Every game is a must-win situation for Bus Connor's 6-12 team.

The strange thing is, it's hard to find a reason for BSU's five game losing streak. The Broncos haven't been out-rebounded, they haven't been outshot from the field- in fact, they often look like they're outplaying the teams they're losing to. Kevin Goetz is playing better each time he takes the floor and center John Mayfield is rapidly developing into a fine pivot man.

There's been a lot of speculation on what caused the breakdown- a loss of leadership when Pat Hoke and Terry Miller left, or playing the wrong defense at the wrong time- but it's academic speculation on intangibles. About the only sure thing you can say is that Boise State can't buy a break. Shots won't fall and rebounds won't come at crucial times. Other teams seem to make almost every shot they put up. Sound strategy turns against the Broncos and the closing minutes become a nightmare of ragged officiating and frantically inconsistent play. BSU gets ahead but just can't find the killer instinct to put their opponents away.

Luck, however, runs both ways and if luck is the only thing standing in the Bronco's way, events can still take a drastic turn.

ler, the Lumberjack's 6-7 junior forward who ripped the Boise defense for 32 points. Another such performance could devastate the Broncos. But paying too much attention to Gossweiler could result in a blitz by Dave Henson, the other forward who had 18 points against BSU, or the Tsingine brothers, Willard and Raymond, who claimed 24 points between them Saturday.

Thursday night's contest against Weber State may surprise some Big Sky watchers if the Broncos hold true to past form. BSU has beaten Weber in Ogden three straight times in the last two years. WSC didn't look particularly impressive this weekend and if the Broncos catch them with their offense sputtering, it may spell upset.

A split this weekend wouldn't do a lot of good, but it would keep BSU's slim hopes barely intact. A sweep might give Boise State the inspiration and momentum to win their last six games. That would leave the Broncos 9-5 in conference and almost a sure bet to make the league tournament in March. It's a big if, but it's about all the Broncos have left to play for.

Saturday night Boise State travels to play Northern Arizona. A loss to NAU would probably be the final nail in the coffin for the Broncos. A win would keep alive their slim chances, as the Axers seem to be headed for the conference playoff's number four berth, behind Idaho State, Weber and Montana.

In last Saturday's 88-84 loss to Northern, Boise State showed that they're a match for the Lumberjacks. BSU had a six point lead with just over seven minutes to play in the game until the breaks turned against them. The key to the next meeting will be Mark Gosswil-

Montana's Johnson may cause Grizzlies to forfeit

by Lenny Hertling

The Montana Grizzlies' 13-4 record this year may be jeopardized due to starting center Lee Johnson. The problem developed over a possible grade transcript violation. According to NCAA regulations, a transferring athlete's transcripts must be completed by the time of class enrollment. It appears that Johnson's transcripts were not forwarded to the University of Montana until after he had completed registration.

Bob Rosenthal, sports information director at U of M, stated that when Johnson transferred to Montana last fall his transcripts did not include grades from a Denver Junior College where Johnson had been enrolled in summer classes. Rosenthal went on to say that there was a verbal agreement between the schools that the grades would be sent later.

A Big Sky Conference committee is investigating the alleged violation. According to BSAC Commissioner John Roning, if the 6-10 sophomore is found in violation, then Montana will have to forfeit its eleven wins in which Johnson played. The eleven wins include three conference victories -- two against Montana State and one against Northern Arizona University. According to Roning, if

Johnson is found ineligible he will not be allowed to play the remainder of the season. (Montana sat out Johnson in weekend games against Idaho and Gonzaga.)

The NCAA, which is the Big Sky Conference's regulating body, is also investigating the possible violation, but has made no ruling concerning the situation. If the Big Sky Conference does not act on the matter it is inevitable that the NCAA will.

If Johnson is found ineligible, then an unexpected boost to Montana State and Northern Arizona's BSAC records will occur. However, it would add little hope to the dwindling chances of the Boise State Broncos to make the playoffs.

Wrestlers place disappointing seventh in MIWA

Boise State University's wrestlers were able to score only 21 points and finished seventh in the Mountain Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament Saturday night in Ogden, Utah.

Brigham Young University won the meet with 103 points, followed by Northern Colorado, Colorado State, Utah and Utah State.

The best finishers for the Broncos were Hector Cedillo, who lost 7-1 to Matt Boyle of Northern Colorado to place fourth in the 118 pound class; Leon Madsen, who also placed fourth after losing to Paul Fehlberg of BYU at 126; and, Steve Needs who finished third at 190 after being beaten by Dave Hill of Western State 6-2.

The Broncos return home after almost a month on the road to host Washington State Wednesday, Portland State Thursday, and BYU on Saturday. The matches all start at 7:30 pm in the Bronco Gym.

Weber State 66, Boise State 57.

Everyone is wondering: What has happened to the Broncos? Last year they were the Big Sky Champions and this year they have been outplayed and outscored by four of five BSAC opponents.

The Broncos are in a critical situation because they will have to beat NAU and Weber State on the road in order to earn a playoff spot.

Weber State handed BSU a 66-57 loss on Friday night and NAU beat the Broncos 88-84 last Saturday evening.

This brings BSU's season record to 6-12 and 1-5 in conference standings. The Wildcats beat the Broncos with the aid of Stan Mayhew and Jim Ericksen to keep a 5-0 record in the Big Sky and a first place tie with ISU. (Idaho State beat Weber 85-71 Saturday night to take over undisputed leadership in the BSAC.)

In the first half, there was little scoring by either team.

The Wildcats entered the second half trailing 28-26. It didn't take long for the Weber State team to recapture the lead and force the Broncos to play catch-up ball most of the second half. The Broncos stayed within reach, however, and with 5:58 remaining, took a 49-48 lead on Trent Johnson's fourteen-foot jumper. But Mayhew and Ericksen responded. Mayhew scored five points in the next ninety-six seconds, and the Wildcats were ahead to stay with 4:22 remaining in the game. Continuing to battle the Weber four-corner offense with a trap-zone defense, the Broncos never caught up. Mayhew scored three straight field goals and added a free throw with 1:06 left to seal the coffin for Boise.

For the game, Mayhew

Tucker: Broncos to lose twice

by Benjamin Tucker

The "Bernie and Ernie" show returned to the Associated Press Division I poll last week as the University of San Francisco Dons continued to cling to their number one position.

Tennessee, on the strength of forwards Bernie King and Ernie Grunfeld, have taken the undisputed lead in the South-eastern Conference race for the championship, having knocked off highly rated Kentucky and Alabama. In Sunday January 30 action, the Volunteers lost to UCLA by the score of 103-89 at the Omni in Atlanta.

The January 25 Division I poll from AP shows USF leading with a 21-0 record (to date), followed by Michigan (15-2), Alabama (15-2), North Carolina (13-4), UNLV (16-1), Kentucky (14-2), Tennessee (15-3), UCLA (16-2), Marquette (14-2), and Wake Forest (16-2).

In the Big Sky race, Idaho State leads with a 6-0 record (14-2 overall), followed by WSC (5-1,13-5), Montana (5-1,13-4), Northern Arizona (2-4,9-8), Montana State (2-4,7-10), Gonzaga (2-4,6-12), Boise State (1-5,6-12), and Idaho (1-5,3-14).

The top match-up of games for the week January 31-February 6 will take place in Cincinnati (provided there is enough natural gas in lower Ohio) where the ninth-ranked Marquette Warriors will take on the twelfth-ranked Bearcats. Cincinnati, who has stumbled in recent games, should return to top form in this nationally televised contest. The Warriors, who have had an easy schedule lately, always seem to choke in televised match-ups, and this scribe foresees a Cincinnati upset.

Nevada-Las Vegas has not played since January 22, but this week the Rebels take an eastern road trip to play Bradley (6-11), Illinois State (13-5) and Rutgers. Coach Jerry Tarkanian's charges should sweep these three contests to improve their record to 19-1 on the year.

The Pac-8 battle for leadership will take place in Los Angeles this weekend, as the Washington schools take on UCLA on successive nights. The Bruins should emerge with two victories and take a solid lead in the race with a 6-1 mark (18-2 overall) while the Cougars will drop to 5-2 and 16-4 and the Huskies decline to 4-3, 13-7 overall.

The Big Sky race should settle down after this weekend, as after the February 5 ISU-Weber battle, both the Bengals and Wildcats should go undefeated. This makes the shootout in Ogden the determinant of the site for the BSAC playoff tourney. This scribe feels the Wildcats will claim the game, the regular season Big Sky crown, and the host's role for the tournament with a convincing win over the Bengals.

Boise State fans may well wonder what situation the Broncos will be in at the end of the season. While the road trip this weekend to play Weber and NAU will probably be very disappointing for BSU, the six games following look, at this point, like easy-going. With that in mind, here is a predicted final BSAC standings:

Weber State	13-1	21-5
Idaho State	13-1	21-3
Montana	8-6	16-10
Boise State	6-8	11-15
No. Arizona	6-8	14-12
Gonzaga	5-9	9-17
Montana State	3-11	8-17
Idaho	2-12	4-22

Last week's record was 16-6 (.727 percentage) to bring the seasonal mark to 32-11, for a .744 slate.

BSU women trounce Northwest opponents

by Julie Howard

The Boise State women's basketball team added two more victories to their record this weekend as they defeated Western Washington 62-30 on Friday and Seattle-Pacific 73-52 Saturday. The Bronco's are now 7-3 for the season.

Elaine Elliott hit for 25 points against Western Washington Friday to lead the Bronco squad in scoring 28 of 57 shots for 49 percent from the floor. JoAnn Burrell and Kendra Falen added eight points apiece, while Nancy Phillips led BSU in rebounds with 11.

"Our defense made the difference," said Boise State coach Connie Thorngren, "along with our shooting percentages and well-organized blocking."

In Saturday's clash against Seattle-Pacific, the BSU team, led by Elaine Clegg with 20 points, held their opponents to only 1 point during the first five minutes of the game. The Broncos led at half 37-23, before defeating Seattle 73-52. JoAnn Burrell added 18 points for BSU, reaching for 14 rebounds and Kim Erekson chipped in 17 points.

The Broncos will host Utah State Friday, February 4 at 8 pm in the Bronco gym and will play a special game against the Seattle AAU Lumbermen on Saturday at 9 pm in the fieldhouse.

Gymnasts score third straight win

by Julie Howard

The Boise State gymnastics team captured their third straight victory Saturday as they downed Montana State 114-97 while Caspar Junior College took third with 49 points during a triangular meet in Bozeman.

BSU's Gail Harris took all-around honors for the third time this season with 28 points to lead the Broncos to their weekend victory. Nancy Wilkins placed second with 27 and Judy Wilkins earned 26 points to grab third place all-around.

Boise State swept all four areas of competition as Jerrie Sievers continued to dominate the uneven parallel bars, taking first place for the third time this season with a consistent score of 8.4. Judy Wilkins placed first in the balance beam and floor exercise competition and Gail Harris took first on the vault.

The BSU gymnasts will be looking for their third road victory this weekend as they travel to Oregon to face Portland State on Friday and Oregon State on Saturday.

Broncos drop pair...

the Bronco scorers with 12 points, while Kevin Goetz and Steve Barrett added 11 each.

The Broncos fought hard against the Wildcats, but once again, they fell short.

No. Arizona 88, Boise State 84.

This loss probably hurt the Broncos more than the other defeats they have suffered this season. Boise led the Lumberjacks 70-64 with 7:43 remaining in the game, then lost their momentum. An occurrence familiar to the Broncos all season long.

Boise State went into a four-corner offense when they took the six point lead, trying to draw fouls. The Broncos had not utilized the four-corner offense so early in a game all year. The results of the strategy were turnovers-and because of the turnovers- fouls. The Lumberjacks, who looked down and out after BSU had jumped to the six point lead, regrouped and took advantage of the mistakes to take charge of the contest.

Willard Tsingine hit two straight jumpers and the Lumberjacks led the rest of the way. Mark Gosswiller continued to add points in the second half for NAU. The 6 foot 7 inch forward hit twelve of eighteen field goals on the night and added 8 of 13 from the line for 32 points. He added 9 rebounds- which led the Lumberjack effort.

Kevin Goetz, playing his best game of the year, scored 25 points before fouling out of the contest. Goetz was outstanding on the boards- grabbing off 8. Steve Connor rebounded in the second half to contribute 10 points, to end the night with 14. Dan Jones picked-up the slack after Goetz fouled out and finished with 16, as Trent Johnson and John Mayfield added 9 a piece. The Broncos lost the game on turnovers and fouls- something which has plagued them all season. For the rest of the Boise season, the situation is, to put it bluntly, "do or die."
