University marches for journalist

by Mike Bell

Despite the decision of Judge Roy E. Mosman not to sign a detention order for the imprisonment of Lewiston Morning Tribune reporter and executive editor Jay Shelledy, over 100 University of Idaho students participated in a protest march from the union building to the steps of the county courthouse, Thursday, November 10, to make clear their support of Shelledy and his position.

Shelledy was to be imprisoned because of his refusal to reveal, in the proceedings of a libel case, a source of information that had informed him that officer Michael Caldero had killed a man during a drug raid, not exercised proper judgement and the circumstances surrounding the death "Didn't add up."

Shelledy's offer to reveal the source to the judge in the privacy of his chambers was

...what rights do we wish our media to have...

public discussion what protection, what rights do we wish our media to have. There is no one answer. With shield laws, some people say yes, some people say no. Are you going to certify people, say to them, 'you're now a professional, now you can be a journalist?' That is a little bit touchy. Hopefully this will force attention on that issue, and we can continue rather than just letting it die down."

Contingents from all over the campus were represented at the march, including one from Boise.

The plan was to go from the SUB up 6th street to the county courthouse, and there to sit in the parking lot and listen to the speeches of selected guest speakers.

Buch Allord, publisher and editor of the Lewiston Tribune, was unable to appear as scheduled but instead sent a prepared statement.

He said in the statement that he and Bill Hall, the editor of the letter's page, "Send all our support and join in expressing our thanks for all your support today."

'We are pleased that Jay did

Mary Henberg, one of the speakers at the Moscow protest, not enter jail, but wish it were for a different reason."

Mosman had stated earlier that his decision not to sign a detention order was due to Coldren's decision to file to strike the defense Monday morning.

'The issues are far larger than Jay Shelledy or the Lewiston Tribune,' concluded Allord's address.

Campus book store manager resigns position

by Mary Stuhrs

As of December 1 Betty Brock will have officially resigned her position as Your Campus Store manager. She recently accepted a managerial position at University of Kansas where she will be responsible for three bookstores on that campus as well as the development of her own staff and store operation. Frank Barge, director of the Kansas Union Building said of Brock,

"She is a people-oriented person who is very knowledgeable in her field, I feel confident she will be sensitive to the needs of students, faculty members, and those with whom she will be working."

According to Brock, there is "a feeling that it's hard to explain that everybody at Kansas Union is working together for the benefit of the students. When, Roger Green, who was then Vice-President of Financial Affairs, brought me here, the philosophy service, service, service to the students was stressed constantly, and I was brought here because that was my philosophy too. I am joining a school that has the same philosophies as I do. The things they don't do for students here

Committees abound at Boise State

by Tim Scharff

"The life cycle of the committee is so basic to our knowledge of current affairs that it is surprising more attention has not been paid to the science of "committeeology." For in a cabinet of nine it will be found that policy is made by three, information supplied by two, and financial warning uttered by one. With the neutral chairman, that accounts for seven, the other two appearing at first glance to merely ornamental." (From Parkhison's Law, by C. Northcote Parkinson)

Committees form an integral part of most large organizations, and BSU is no exception. BSU has committees for Personnel Selection; Promotion, Tenure and Competency Review; Residency Determination; Academic Grievances; Student Health Service and Student Union; Student Policy; Athletic and BSU is no exception. personnel Selection; Promotion, Tenure, and Competency Review; Residency Determination; Academic Grievances; Student Health Service and Student Union; Student Policy; Athletic and BSU is no exception.

Most of the groups include student representatives, as well as people from the administration and faculty. Councils recently formed by the BSU Presidents are: the Meaning of the University, the Future of the University, Review of Current Programs and the Planning Committee for Academic Programs. The administration strongly encourages the faculty to participate in committee work. The Faculty Senate contributes many committee members as does the ASBSU Senate. Eighteen people sit on the Executive Council, one of BSU's most important cabinets. The Council is selected by the BSU President to provide him with input from all components of the university.

Most of the committees live on in perpetuity. No major council has been dissolved in recent years. Rather, there seems to be a strong growth trend. When an outside consultant recommended that one advisory committee be formed for the BSU Data Center, three such committees promptly emerged.

But, according to an administration official, there is a genuine need for most, if not all, of the BSU's committees. "If it's not needed, it's cut off." People just won't come to meetings that aren't necessary, he says.

How many committees, councils, and boards does BSU have? When asked, the administration spokesman just laughed and shook his head, "I wouldn't even hazard a guess."

Idaho's Tomorrow organized

Are you interested in Idaho's future? If the answer is yes you'll want to attend the Nov. 17 to start organizing a convention entitled Idaho Tomorrow.

The convention, tentatively set for the spring, will offer students an opportunity to meet with other concerned students, learn about our states pressing environmental and urban problems, and voice their opinions as to the direction they would like to see Idaho take in the future.

The organizational meeting is set for 7 p.m. at Boise State University in the Teton room of the Student Union Building. All those interested are invited to attend.

The head of the Veterans Administration today cautioned GI Bill students to look before they leap if they're considering dropping courses or seeking non-punitive grades for them.

VA Administrator Max Cleland said that in certain circumstances the law now requires the agency to retroactively cancel assistance payments for courses dropped without a grade after a reasonable drop-off period. This applies also in cases where a course is completed but the grade assigned is, in effect, ignored by the school for graduation requirements -- so-called "non-punitive" grade.

"In other words," Cleland said, "veterans dropping courses in such circumstances, or receiving a non-punitive grade could wind up in debt to the federal government."

He pointed out, however, that VA would not retroactively collect payments already made when the situation is due to circumstances beyond the student's control.

The law, which went into effect last December, prohibits VA payment of educational benefits for any part of a course that is not used in computing graduation requirements.

Cleland explained this could mean that many students will find themselves overpaid under the GI Bill for courses in which they withdraw and, for courses from which the assigned grade does not count toward graduation.

"The safest course," Cleland said, "is not to drop a course or receive a "non-punitive" grade until you contact the school's veterans affairs office and find out what effect the withdrawal or grade may have on your monthly VA check."

The agency also recommends that both students and school officials provide a brief statement concerning the circumstances of the withdrawal or "non-punitive" grade assignment when reporting such action to the VA.

Trials symposium at Moscow

The 1977 Trials Symposium will meet in Moscow, November 12-13, in the University of Idaho Student Union Building.

"The meeting is open to everyone interested in trails and trail activities," David Thoms- son, trails coordinator, Idaho Department of Parks recreation, said. "The theme," Thompson said, "is "River and Trail Restrictions--New Approach to Recreation in Idaho."

Wednesday afternoon ses- sions will focus on "Restriction--Experiences of the Managing Agencies" and "Education as an Alternative." Speakers include John Dalle-Molle, backcountry manager, Mr. Ra- iner National Park; who will speak on "Mt. Rainier's System--A Highly Restrictive Example;" and Art Sceama, district ranger, Moose Creek, Nez Perce National Forest, whose subject is "The Forest Service, 'Porter Assistant' Approach." Allocating river permits, education techniques, and collegiate outdoors programs also will be discussed.

An illustrated presentation on the American Everest expedition will be presented at the Saturday evening banquet by Dr. Maynard Miller, dean of the University of Idaho College of Mines.

The Sunday session will begin with a general membership meeting of the Idaho Trails Council with election of board members and a legislative proposal for funding non-motor- ized activities on the agenda. A tour of the U of I Forestry building and an open house sponsored by the Appaloosa Hill Climbwill feature the symposium's activities.

Bike-a-thon......Marijuanathon?

by Mike Isbell

Owing to the recent popularity of money raising Bike-a-Thons and Bike-a-Thons to raise money for such causes as Muscular Dystrophy and Cerebral Palsy, Mike Fisher of the ASBSU senate has proposed organizing an effective lobbying move toward marijuana legalization. Mike Fisher, to be held in Boise in the spring, to raise money for a serious lobbying effort for marijuana legalization.

"...the idea of the Marijuanathon came to me after the success of the Bike-a-Thons and some of these similar projects have had in raising money," said Fisher. "Secondly, I know there's a lot of interest in overturning a lot of the marijuana laws now established in the state of Idaho."

Fisher noted that there has been a great deal of difficulty in organizing an effective lobbying effort for the cause of legalizing present marijuana laws. The Marijuanathon will be a first step in realizing a coalition of all groups and individuals interested in these ends.

"In this respect, the Marijuanathon will involve people filling out sponsor sheets for, let's say, a dollar per mile, and when they completed a ten mile walk, then the money that they would raise would go into the coffers of NORML (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws)," said Fisher. "As its first step in realizing a coalition of all groups and individuals interested in these ends."

"I'm more or less latched onto the idea," Fisher went on. "In this respect, the Marijuanathon came to me after the success of the Bike-a-Thons and some of these similar projects have had in raising money," said Fisher. "Secondly, I know there's a lot of interest in overturning a lot of the marijuana laws now established in the state of Idaho."

Fisher spoke concerning the idea of the Marijuanathon as a joke. Fisher, however, saw it as an opportunity.

"I'm more or less latched onto the idea, and I hope to expand it."

The Marijuanathon would be held in Boise as a test case for the proliferation of other such fund raisers around the country. To Fisher's knowledge, this would be the first such attempt to organize a pro-marijuana constituency in a Walk-a-Thon type of situation.

"Jim Clavert, the director of NORML for Idaho, has suggested with a statewide Marijuanathon. I'd like to see first how it goes over on a local level. Boise is a pretty wide-open area in that respect, and I think if it went well here, we could indeed expect cooperation throughout the state."

NORML has had varying degrees of success throughout the country. Right now, according to Fisher, there are a half-dozen state that have undergone some alteration of marijuana-concerned laws due to the efforts of NORML.

"We're not limiting it to the college-age group at all," Fisher foresees the greatest problem in becoming organized enough to be recognized by the city and state, which will enable them to get permits.

In the interest of forwarding the cause of the Marijuanathon, Fisher has applied to NBC's Saturday Night Live as a host.

"I was informed that there was someone going on to write to Saturday Night and explain in twenty words or less why they would want me as a guest host for an upcoming program. This I did, explaining to them that I was organizing a Marijuanathon, I feel a show such as Saturday Night, considering the type of viewers that it draws, would be an excellent media device."

Fisher stated that a publicity effort is his major goal. He is sure of the support being out there, it's just a matter of publicizing it and organizing it. Those are the two crucial things I think we're looking at now," Fisher said.

Concerning his stands on the legalization of marijuana, Fisher said, "Frankly, I don't want it limited to any age. I'd like to see a complete cross-section, across the board from all age groups, get involved in this thing."

Fisher spoke concerning the approval or disapproval of parents leaning to negative views allowing high school age (and under) children to walk in the Marijuanathon. "I feel that the freedom of expression and choice in this country should be such that there shouldn't be any hassle with children's parents. I feel as long as we go through proper legal channels, get our permits, and don't become unreasonable in the organization of the thing, there shouldn't be any major problems at all."

Fisher foresees the greatest problem in becoming organized enough to be recognized by the city and state, which will enable them to get permits.

"Actually, I feel that it's a positive thing. Whether or not they smoke marijuana, I feel that my constituents are liberal enough to endorse toleration of other views, regardless of their own ideas, regardless of whether or not they partake themselves."

Fisher noted that there was a conspicuous absence of marijuana legislation at the Idaho Student Convention that he attended recently. "I thought it rather odd at the time. I guess they thought that it was too controversial, that it would damage the credibility of the ISC. I disagree."

Senator Fisher was asked how the walkers would celebrate the end of the pilgrimage. "It's whatever way the individual deems appropriate," Fisher smiled. "But seriously, we are not advocating the breaking of any laws on the books. We are advocating the changing of present archaic laws."

"It's a pilot program. I'm enthusiastic about it, and by spring we'll have enough solid groundwork worked out to ensure others. Whatever money we raise is not going to be frivolously spent, but will be used for something very constructive, the reform of marijuana laws."

Anyone wishing to contact Fisher may do so through the ASBSU Senate Offices.

Don't you know everyone loves a juicy story ... gossip ... rumor ... and happy endings. Well, I am one. What about you? I love to see others happy and what is more, to see them in a position of responsibility and power. And who else besides the Arbiter would have the nerve to say, "Well, it's not possible he didn't get word of my comments. We'll have a nice chat, I should tell him I appreciate his concern, can relate to the difficult nature of his job, hope he relates to my situation. Two weeks have gone by since those opening lines and nary a word. His silence speaks volumes."

Of course, the Arbiter asked simply, "If indeed we do generate advertising revenue, is there a chance the Arbiter and the senate could best understand the needs of the newspaper?"

The senator, Dr. Graech, Thomason, Steve Lathrop, Donn Clark, Brad Martin, Barb Bridwell, Jim Layton, Mona St. Clair, Kristin Moe, and others would laugh and say, "Of course!"

Thus, the Arbiter decided to handle the Arbiter in a unique fashion. The senate was made aware that the Arbiter was a viable business entity and in the process of generating money.

In exchange for this task the Arbiter asked simply, "If indeed we do generate advertising revenue, is there a chance the Arbiter and the senate could best understand the needs of the newspaper?"

The first Displaced Homemaker Act was passed in California on September 25, 1975. The second Displaced Homemaker Act was passed by Maryland in April of 1976. Florida passed its Displaced Homemaker Act in the closing hours of its 1976 legislature. Arizona, Ohio, "New York, Louisiana, Massachusetts and Minnesota all have bills pending state action. Displaced Homemakers in the nation are in the process of being drafted in Idaho, Mississippi, Georgia, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Texas, New Mexico, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

There are presently between three and seven million Displaced Homemakers in the nation and the number is growing rapidly. President Carter recognized the importance of legislation concerning these women by signing into law the Reinstatement of BH Act 128, which provided for the establishment of 50 centers throughout the nation. However, to adequately handle this rapidly growing problem, it is imperative to establish many more centers at a state level.

At last report, the Displaced Homemaker Act for Idaho is still in committees for drafting. Idaho's Act might do well to model itself after the California Reinstatement of the DH Act should propose that.-

1) multipurpose centers be established which offer counseling and education of native or required skills, job training and placement, health education, legal counseling, financial management and outreach and information services relating to existing local and federal programs.

2) the legislation should state that there shall be the creation of new jobs (new approaches to deceptivw employment which combines the special skills of the homemaker with the needs of the community).

3) should provide for feasibility studies on a national and state level for appropriate ways to include Displaced Homemakers in existing employment benefits programs and

4) each Displaced Homemaker Act should include adequate provisions for its funding. (Unfortunately funding provisions were not clearly stated in the Florida Act and it has been bogged down in a struggle for many months.)

The political 'experts' in California are trying to set the idea of a Displaced Homemaker Act might appeal to a handful of older women, certainly it had no chance of being passed by the state legislature. But, much to the surprise of many, the so-called "experts", the bill sailed through both committees, passed by a large majority in the full Assembly and unanimously in the full Senate. Here was all this accomplishment by an alleged "handful" of older women. The DH Act was drafted by a young California Attorney, Barbara Dudley, and filed with the California legislature in April, 1975. On May 8, the Alliance for Displaced Homemakers was founded and spearheaded by Laurie Shields. The first step the Alliance took was to convince the legislators in the House and Senate committees which were studying the bill. They visited the districts and organised support from traditional women's groups as well as NOW chapters and other feminist organisations. They called for personal letters to the legislators and visits to their district offices. They used the "old girl" network! They asked every woman they met to get out her address book and write friends, and relatives throughout the state and ask for their support and action in the campaign. Governor Brown was literally "bitten" with letters, mailgrams, petitions from women of all ages from all over the state until he signed the bill on May 15 and a half before the deadline.

On September 25, 1975, just 121 working days after it was introduced, California's Displaced Homemaker Act became a reality.

What has been done in California, Maryland, and Florida can be done in Idaho. We have only to organise and to act. We must, however, proceed carefully and thoughtfully. We must be sure that any proposed legislation is sound and that the new needs of our social structure is somewhat different from that of the past. It is too late to influence the other states and we must tailor our Displaced Homemaker Act to the needs of Idaho's displaced homemakers. Michigan and Minnesota have called for the establishment of two centers in each state. One center would serve the urban areas and the other center would serve the rural areas. These two states are among the first to realise that the problems faced by women in urban and rural areas differ widely and cannot always be solved in the same manner.

Idaho has a high seasonal unemployment rate. When new jobs are created for Displaced Homemakers, this fact might be taken into consideration. Perhaps with some study and insight, positions could be created which would aid in dealing with some of the problems created by this seasonal layoff. For information on the development of national legislation and to find the location of the center nearest to you or any other question about these centers, write to: Alliance for Displaced Homemakers, 3000 Harvard St., Oakland, California 94111. Envelope a 15 cent stamp.

Post-child-rearing years should cease to be viewed as the end of a period in our lives. A more positive and I might add, more accurate description would be the beginning of a new period of self-fulfillment. These so-called "middle years" can be the high point of our lives, the time when we fully develop and utilise all our many talents and capabilities. The years between 35 and 65 can and should be that time in our lives when we contribute the most to society and gain our maximum of self-worth. Remember, "women are like fine wines; we don't get older, we just get better with the passing of time".

Night student hassled

Editor, the ARBITER,

I would like to make a few comments about something I have not seen anything about. The full-time night student. This person usually works all day and has to take time off of work to register. Also, to get a photo ID card they have to take more time off. If you don't get the photo ID card you have a helluva time dropping or adding classes. Almost all labs are set up for daytime students. Example, there are about eight accounting labs to help students who are having trouble. The latest they end is 2:30 in the afternoon. Big help to the night student!

These are just a few of the many hassles that the full-time night student has to endure to continue their education. Each time a new registration deadline is set up I feel like the Administration of BSU is giving me a little more of the same.

BSU Health Center meets with financial trouble

Follow Students,

With the rising cost of medical services, it was bound to happen. Last week was no exception. Dr. Taylor, Vice President for Student Affairs, asked the Administration to establish a committee whose charge it was to find a method by which funding for the health center could be increased.

The center, which had been operating in the red for quite some time, was and is in dire need of additional financial support.

In response to this, a committee was created. Under the guidance of Jay Shelledy and Senator John Osterkamp, this group isolated two options:

1) increase student fees of $3 per semester to go towards the health center.
2) the implementation of user fees for some of the services the center provides.

Recently, a student poll was conducted in an attempt to discern which of these plans the students would prefer. The results of the survey are as follows:

Percent favoring: Fee increase: 46%
Users Fee: 54%

At this point, the committee has decided to ask Dr. Nyhug, the Health Center Director, to formulate a schedule of fees that, if implemented, would meet his needs. The committee will review these and then, depending on how extensive they are, make a final decision.

Between now and the time the decision is made, I would like very much to hear your thoughts on this issue. Please give me a call (385-1440) any day of the week between 1:00-6:00 in the afternoon or come up and visit the office (2nd floor of the SUB).

The Student Union Programs Board (SUPB) Concert committee received $452.50 toward a trip to Spokane, an emergency loan of $200 was made to the Esquire Club, and the ad hoc committee to study the possibilities of streamlining student government was eliminated at the November 8 Senate meeting.

The Concert committee's request for travel funds was turned down during the November 1 meet-ning, but a reconsideration attempt made by Arts and Sciences Senator Craig Hurst passed with the two-thirds majority necessary to permit the budget reallocation. The funds will be used to send three persons the the National Entertainment and Activities Association Conference in Spokane on November 13.

The Esquire Club presented, as an emergency item, a request to draw $300.00 from the ASB loan fund. The request was made because the club had been experiencing financial problems as of late. As a condition of the loan, the Senate set December 30 as the repayment date for the debt. According to club representative, John Bow, the club faces no difficulties in meeting the debt with the advent of basketball season so close at hand.

The ad hoc committee that was formed during the last meeting to study the possibilities available to stream-lime student government was eliminated by a 15-2 vote. Student Affairs committee member, Mike Hoffman, stated that the exact intent and purpose of the special panel needed further examination prior to beginning the actual study involved. The Senate, therefore, decided to refer the idea of the committee back to its own Student Affairs committee. In an ABP report, Mike Hoffman, the representative of the Idaho Student Association, informed the Senate that the goals of the Idaho Student Association Student Senate related. Hoffman stated that the efforts of the group would be directed toward (1) increased funding for Idaho colleges and universities, (2) a special Social Security exemption for students, (3) in-state tuition, (4) the development of a tax penalty for those paying for higher education, and (5) stopping the State Board of Education from becoming exempt from the Administrative Procedures Act (APA). Will Roy, of BSU, is the new lobby director.

President Hoffman also listed his own priorities for his administration. He is intent on (1) getting together a plan to achieve the construction of a multipurpose pavilion, (2) ex-

danding the Academic advising handbook, and (3) getting the Data Processing center operating with at least three operable programs. Appointments nominated by Hoffman and approved by the Senate included Mitch Brown and Joey McLea on the Financial Aids committee.

In another action, the Senate approved a resolution that encouraged the Senate to continue into major collaborative arrangements with arts and in at least one case, have virtually written the texts completely through major building classrooms. The resolution stated that the physical atmosphere of the building was hindering the learning process of the students who used the building.

Editor John Priscella, came to the Senate in response to the question ASB Treasurer Steve Artis had raised during the November 1 meeting. Priscella also wanted clarification from the Senate as to the items the ARBITER could spend money on. and the Senate's recommendation on the source. Priscella attended the weekly Senate period of debate, the Senators requested that Priscella attend the weekly Senate caucus meetings to discuss the matter further.

The Idaho Student Nursing Association constitution was also approved. Senate meetings are held on Thursdays in the Chambers of the Student Union Building.

CLEP exam lacks money to continue

The BSU CLEP Invitational Examination Board has six years aided hundreds of students in receiving free credit hours, will be discontinued after this spring, because of lack of funds to support the test. Dr. Guy Hunt, Dean of Admissions, said that the past four years, funding for the exam has been cut out of the President's funds. But the interim president, Richard Bullgren, said that he saw no possibility this year, of funds being available for the exam. Hunt said he was told in the past, funding for the testing was on a year to year basis. When Bullington was interim president, Hunt went looking for funding on a permanent basis. He went to the faculty senate, proposing "10 percent of the matriculation fee monies collected by the BSU Admissions Office each April, beginning April 1979, to be used to defray the costs of continuing the BSU CLEP Invitational Examination Program." The money collected by the Admissions Office is considered scholarship money. The faculty senate said, "We support Dr. Hunt's cause but feel that fees for the CLEP Invitational are not scholarships and should not come from scholarship funds.

The CLEP Invitational started on a shaky ground in April 1972, with only 34 high school students participating in the program. The next year, 100 students were invited again, with 97 students participating. Those first two years, there was no cost for exams, with BSU's. expenditure being for lunches. The next year, there was a cost for the examinations. Overall, the Invitational has cost Boise State Athletics $300, said Dr. Hunt. His arguments for the proposal was that CLEP credits could be used as a form of delayed scholarship. The Financial Aids committee, under Carol Maloney, said, "This program was not a scholarship program but instead "promotion." Maloney said that the sentiment of the committee was in favor of the program, and "would not be opposed to the Senate's deciding that some of the matriculation money" be designated as something other than scholarship money. Hunt said however, no formal recommendation will come out of her committee suggesting this.

Textbooks become selling game

The textbook is no longer the "publish or perish" affair of college professors alone. Publishers compete for荣耀 among professors entering into major collaborative arrange-

chology Today: An Introdu-

tion. The first edition sold about 180,000 copies, a marked success since the cutoff for textbook bestseller status is about 20,000. But the unusual circumstances surrounding the new text was that it was put out by a market research, each copy, CMB Books, and was essentially written inside the publishing company by "book team" of writers, market researchers and graphic designers. There was no author listed anywhere.

CRM's move into the college market place left an impression on other textbook publishers who began moving toward market research, more graphics and more in-house control by publishers over the content of textbooks.

The publisher has assumed an atmosphere of cooperation in what was once the professor's realm. The author is getting more help from the publisher than ever before, a result of a drop in college enrollments and a tightening of the market place has caused publishers of college texts to become less willing to leave all the decisions about a textbook to their authors.

Nevertheless, authors still shape the atmosphere of the book, where students are often required to use the book written by their professors. Some of the books are costly; the publisher, for example, often running as high as $127. A professor at Florida Technological University said that his students that he specified any royalties he be received from the PTU sales of his book be returned to the university specifically for his department.

While the price of a book is determined by the publisher, the royalties for an author remain high, about 10 to 15 percent. The bookstore receives a 40 to 50 percent profit. Says the PTU professor, the author has little control over what happens to their text.

And that is the way the marketing research department of the publisher hopes to win and keep it.

George Maddon and Associates, a publishing company in San Diego, focuses more on what professors say they want in a textbook than on what they use. Professors are invited to personal interviews with a sample of teachers whereas CRM marketing uses computerized surveys of the college market to help them plan their manuscripts.

In fact, the original concept at CRM was that a book was not necessary but specialists in each area were consulted instead and the book was in fact not written other than the dinners with the writer. In other words, a "book team" is born with the expectation that the professor does a drop in college enrollments in a tightening of the market place has caused publishers of college texts to become less willing to leave all the decisions about a textbook to their authors.

The air I was breathing. But, as I traveled upwards, the temperature, if I remember correctly, was between 180 degrees and 212 degrees in the lower regions. The 212 degrees in the lower regions miraculously became cooler, but as I traveled upwards, the air became warmer and warm, and the noise of machines and telephones and customers. Our doors were open and the heat was rising from the Thermostat. There was one unifying force at work in the building, the heat, the noise, and the air. The thermostat, to perform her ritual. Sighing loudly, peering through the bottom of her glasses, she elaborately adjusted the dial to her satisfaction. If it were true that middle of summer, I could have been sitting on the roof, but there were no openings for any of our windows. As I traveled upwards, the air was almost always cold and the air is almost always cold. In actuality, what it does, according to Mengel is 'the system. That is, the system seems to work pretty well.' What does seem to be the problem, then, I asked. 'It's Irene, she...hold it, Mary,' he said into the intercom. 'Hold it, Mary,' he said into the intercom. 'What about Irene?' 'I hold my trials, mercifully keeping the story short. 'This is a difficult matter,' he said in a rather cool tone. 'Irene...that is, she has been here for some time, since the beginning you might say, and the old man is kinda fond of her. Whatever she wants to do downtown; he'll back her up.' "But what about the rest of us?" I protested. "I think you'll better make the best of it, sweetie, and look forward to the time when you may get advanced and come back up here." I said. "But, that may never happen, and I don't want much 'hope or work or..." "If you leave now," he said, standing up, "I may be here sometime next week and I'm sure you'll be able to bear it."

Still smiling, he opened the outer door, pointed me directly to the custodians, and threw me out of heaven.

L. Arts building problem 'hot' by Mary Strubs

For the past seven years, what appeared to be a cost-cutting move has taken place on the BSU campus. Mr. James Maguire, Director of the Physical Plant, has been voicing his complaints and actively seeking support through petioning in his effort to correct the situation of sometimes uncomfortable temperatures in the Liberal Arts Building. Maguire stated, 'At least a third of my students class time is not totally wasted-at least less valuable than it would be in more tolerable circumstances.'

According to Maguire, since October 1976 up to October of this year, when the system was 'out of order,' he had been forced to keep the building windows open. The Director of the Physical Plant, that the situation was either due to clogged filters or custodial problems. Mengel said that the problem exists because students who attend classes in the LA building at night spin the thermostats, therefore creating adverse temperature conditions for those who enter the building the following day. Another reason, Mengel added, that the filters get clogged with dirt and hair, decreasing the circulation resulting in a stuffy atmosphere. Both of these reasons are being dealt with. Also, Mengel said he must set the temperature in accordance with Governor Evans' request to conserve electricity. For a short period of discomfort we hope that people can tolerate.

Although these reasons are valid says Maguire, the real problem is the central control system itself. In a memo dated October 28, 1977, Mengel admit, 'I think that the temperature problem exists within the LA building, but within most of the BSU campus buildings. He indicated that for the past several or eight years he has been trying to obtain through our regular established procedures a centralized automated control system. He further wrote; 'Each year the request falls by the wayside. What results is the situation that you, the faculty/staff members, and the students complain so bitterly about that the buildings get out of control from time to time...To depend upon complaint calls is, quite frankly, one hell of a way to have to operate heating/air conditioning systems.'

A centralized automated control system would put sensors in all the campus buildings in critical locations and these sensors would be monitored twenty-four hours a day by an operator. Citing approximately $80,000, Mengel added that this would also act as a security device and fire alarm at an additional cost. Mengel said that all the big campuses that have modern buildings like BSU campus, that is, have the control of this kind of system (Univ. of Idaho, ISU, Brigham Young Univ., etc.). He added, 'If we had some malfunction in a building our problem would be much worse.' He went on to say, 'we are working on it before we go to a response.' He called the IBM systems which we have are 'nothing more than a glorified clock designed to save electricity.' In actuality, what it does, according to Mengel is 'Complicate the problem.'

When asked why the centralized automated control system had not been included in past budgets, Mengel replied, 'Because other things were just a greater priority.' He added, 'It's high priority now. You can be assured that it will be in the next (budget) request.'

Until this system is installed, faculty and students can expect to have to cope with the same fluctuating temperature conditions that have persisted for at least seven years now. It's a matter of priorities.

Musical 'Shenandoah' exceeds expectations

by Donn Clark

Shenandoah is a story of friendship, love, hardships, and death. Shenandoah gives us the essence of strong family ties. As Charlie Anderson, (father) strives to express himself, the audience is able to understand the love, the closeness this man has for his children.

"They'll never take our sons to be targets of Yankee guns," Charlie confides to his deceased wife of twelve years. Charlie had just been told that a group of Confederate soldiers had been found dead on his property. The same men who had come to draft the Anderson boys earlier.

The Andersons lived in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. Charlie had no cause to become involved in the war until Robert was kidnapped by Yankee soldiers. The family immediately went north looking for the lost son where they learned of and endured the hardships of the war.

Highlights of the play are: Gabriel (the slave boy) and Robert go fishing and sing "Why am I me?" This light hearted song touches the hearts of most anyone.

Sam (a Confederate soldier) and Jenny fall in love and decide to marry. This serious situation turns comical when Sam asks Charlie for his daughter's hand. Charlie then asks Sam as to why he wants to get married, Sam, nervous anyway, becomes confused, and then really nervous. With a few quick answers, Sam runs out with Charlie's blessing. "Next to Lovin' It Like Fighting!" as sung by James, Jacob, Nathan, John, and Henry with its dance routine was a treat. The song itself makes you want to sing along and with the high steps and cartwheels, it is special.

Shenandoah, directed by Fred Norman, will run November 14 and 17 through 19, with a matinee November 19. Reservations can be made by calling 336-6784 between 10:30 and 2:30 weekdays.

BSU's dinner theatre presented by ARA netted $10,000. A check was presented to Velma Morrison by Dr. Richard Bullington prior to curtain time Thursday evening. All proceeds can be made by calling 336-6784, between 10:30 and 2:30 weekdays.

BSU Music Dept gives Chamber music at Special Events Center

The Boise State University Department of Music will present a concert of chamber music for wind instruments in the Special Events Center at 8:15 pm on Friday, November 18.

The musical event is presented as partial fulfillment of the requirements for courses in which a study is made of wind instrument literature and its performance practices through a wide range of historical periods.

Taking part in the concert will be a Renaissance Brass Quartet made up of Donna Higel and Brent Curry on trumpet with Kylene Skogberg and Phil Hartman on trombone, a Clarinet Trio with David Sower, Douglas Spangler, and Douglas Dodson, Dawn Davis and Jan Randquist in a Bassoon Clarinet duet, James Hopper and Dean Hartvigsen in a Recorder Duo, a Woodwind Quartet with Ron Hawly on flute, Dean Hartvigsen on oboe, Jan Randquist on clarinet and Davis and Dawn on bassoon, and concluding with a Brass Quintet consisting of Tim Deulancy and Kevin Gilbert on trumpet, Jennie Flicks on horn, John Gist on trombone and Phil Randquist on tuba.

The ensembles are coached by BSU music professors Melvin Sheeho and James Hopper.

Admission for this concert will be $2.00 for adults, $1.00 for senior citizens and students, and free for BSU personnel and students.

Reverse discrimination equal evil?

Bakke vs. University of California
Davis Medical School

This case involves the rights of individuals to seek higher education in our nation on an equal basis. This columnist has expressed the opinion that the system used at University of California-Davis Medical School has violated the rights of Alan Bakke by refusing to admit him in 1973 and again in 1974, because he is a white male. America's long history of racial discrimination has left many Americans long history of racial discrimination. There is also the certainty that blacks in minority status-of the other 13 institutions which Alan Bakke was refused admission to in the 1973-74 period. The columnists would seem to accord toward singling out the blacks in society as being brought up to equal status in our society because of the indifference of racial and economic discrimination of policy of the past and present environment we dwell in. The lower court of California ruled in favor of Alan Bakke. The percentages of gains in the past have been gain- ed by an elite and only in politics as groups. This focus on the group makes sense. The bureaucrats of affirmative action would like to do. They would like to make any logical case that blacks throughout history. The injustices suffered by all groups exist only in our minds. This focus on the group makes sense. The bureaucrats of affirmative action would like to do. They would like to make any logical case that blacks throughout history. The injustices suffered by all groups exist only in our minds.

Underlying the philosophy of affirmative action is a belief that America's long history of racial discrimination has left many blacks so culturally disadvantaged that they cannot compete on an equal footing. Handicaps will be unnecessary. Blacks will have caught up. There is also the certainty that some white Americans are prejudiced against others who may sit and work to the general concept of equal opportunity, but yet continue to discriminate where they can. Boosters of affirmative action programs, which generally pre- scribe numerical quotas, believe that affirmative action can short-circuit that kind of hypocrisy.

On the whole, affirmative action looks like a very good deal for the blacks. Reasoning, perhaps, that a good deal for blacks-is long overdue, the Carter administra- tion, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, many black mem- bers of Congress, and several civil rights organizations have all joined the University of California in urging the Supreme Court to deny medical school admission to Bakke.

All these people are wrong. To understand why they are wrong, consider the nature of discrimination.

Nobody can discriminate, in any meaningful sense, between a group: blacks, women, homosexuals, or what have you. Such groups exist only in our minds. They are abstractions. For any hurtful discrimination to take place, some individuals must be a member of a group. The nature of discrimination re- quires that the group be considered, when all that should matter is the quality of the individual. But the individual suffers, not the group. To focus, thus, on the individual, is not to detract from the right of minorities to react politically as groups. This focus merely points out the unfairness of weighing Alan Bakke's rights to equal treatment, against all the injustice suffered by all blacks throughout history. That, however, is what the bureaucrats of affirmative action would like to do. They would like to make any logical case that blacks have profited by discrimination. No fair person can make any logical case that blacks have profited by discrimination.

What is really hurting Alan Bakke is the perennial bureau- cratic need for statistics. Lack- ing any convenient means to assure the rights of individuals perse, the administrators of our 13 programs have used with some justification, to numbers. If members of minorities are

The Supreme Court should decide that it would decide in favor of a similarly situated black.

Columbia University awards Cold DriU

Prize winning poet appears in Boise

Callmg the 1975 BU literary magazine's "cold driU, unique in conception" and "a pattern setter for other colleges," judges in New York City's Columbia University have awarded the Department of English prizes in first place to Medalist honors in the 54th annual Columbia Scholastic Press Association contest. Several CSPRA Medalist rating is granted only to publications selected from the college's first place newspaper, magazine, and annuals winners. Medalists are distinguished, according to the Association, for "their unusual and original approach to the subject which could be characterized as 'personalistic.'"

Association judges also praised praised Edward A. Forte's "Give Me Your Ear," and Georgia Evens' "fastidious handling of copy and art which reveals the editors' good taste" and noted the excellence of literature and composition rating indicating that the magazine's "level of material is uncommon." The editors of "The Greenlight" they considered demonstrates "how effective writing can be encouraged and made a reality of in an English department."

Copies of the award-winning magazine, printed at the BU Printing and Graphics Center, are available, exclusively, at the University Bookstore.

Housing alternates proposed

Most people in this busy world have enough problems on their minds, with work, school, etc., with their thoughts, and action matters about which they have little control and yet on which in the course of their actions have a matter over which they have control. Between these two, the case means more than sport, by Dick Shaap.

Faithful book review columns often live by one person: The newest is of the utmost importance. Disregarding such guidlines has been a note of the success for this reviewer. And I've had the pleasure to discover a book two years from press, yet worth the time: Sport. With some 35,000 words published each year in the U.S., most swimming in banality, the time had come to give some review to the figures from the arid lens-picking, to spend time on worthwhile reading. That is opinion, yet what is the purpose of this space but to make aware to the public of columns worth the energies into them? Sport was a refreshing pause from the liquid how-to works now cluttering the shelves.

Dick Shap's recent solo effort was for the most part overlook- ed, perhaps due to it's title; maybe it's the deeply felt and drawn others. I came to it knowing the author's fine reputation as a sportscaster and journalist. Fellow Sport's bi-weekly column in New West magazine, the avant-garde journal for California's informed, and you'll find others of my opinion. His writings are fluid, colorful, and beyond anything else, fun to read.

Sport is an amiable collection of essays that have appeared in periodic reviews since the Evening Post to Life. But don't expect to learn the title. Shap goes beyond looking at sports, anecdotes and sweat socks, to in-depth portrayal of personalities, fellow writers, and comedians; in the latter case, the book's finale centered around the malignated and misunderstood Lenny Bruce. It proves itself not so much a testimonial, but more an insider's look into the midst, now a folk hero. The account is a flagrant tear jerker if you read your own personal biographies to it.

Shap possesses a definite gift. Harder to find every time you look: a living feel for poetry and words. He's proven himself ghostwriting for comedians, Instant Replay with Jerry Kramer and 'the Nappie's' I Can't Wait Till Tomorrow. The humor in Sport is sharp, the details meticulous. Columnist Jimmy Breslin wrote in his introduction of the book: "The answers, as you see it throughout the ages of this fascinating work, is that everything has changed and nothing has changed."

Shap makes it clear that whether it be on a playing field, or political arena, or a back alley tavern, people shall be people. Whether you be a million dollar athlete or a shopping bag lady of the west side New York, there is always an equalizer in the reichs of life: sport. Very pleasurable.

Hopes are that Shap will continue to produce quality work. His New West articles are fascinating, his book superlati ve. You might expect this from the man who coined the phrase "Fun City." Magpie by any account. But then again that's opinion with a house full of comedians. Shap had sport, it had spirit and savvy. Pick it up-the newest isn't always the best.

It may also be stated that the defense of the policy at University of Colorado- Denver Medical School has been defined as too little, too late. It may be that the school can be using this case to rid all affirmative action procedures from taking place at the cost of using you, the public and our judicial system. As a college president, the case means more than just whether Bakklo can be admitted it also means that people in the country could be wasting their time sending schools of higher learning back to the drawing board when the students from the best schools will be considered after this time. The Book Store, and BU will feature four other prominent writers this year. January 25-26, Alan Degan will appear. February 15-16, Judith Guest will read. March 12-13, John Pult Ritto, and April 19-20, Gary Snyder.

Presently, Mueller is teaching in the Goddard College, Vermont, a program of Fine Arts writing program. She is a B.A. graduate of the University of Evansville, Indiana, and served as poet in residence and visiting poet on numerous campuses as well as at poetry centers and libraries. For a number of years she was poetry reviewer for the Chicago Daily News. Other publications also include "Voices from the Forest," published this year by Juniper. Present "Voices From a Queen," and "Dependencies."
Its cast topped by Julie Harris, Ellen Heckart and Arthur O'Connell and with a screen discovery Jeannette Clift in a key role, World Wide Pictures' "The Hiding Place" bows here Friday, Nov. 18, 7:30 pm at the Student Union Ballroom.

Filmed at a cost approximating $1.7 million, the picture is the most ambitious to come from the studio of World Wide Pictures, an adjunct of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association.

Regarded by many critics as America's foremost living actress, Ms. Harris has four times won the New York Stage Directors' most coveted recognition, the Tony Award. Ms. Heckart is an Academy Award winner, and O'Connell twice has been nominated for an Oscar.

"The Hiding Place" is based on the Corrie ten Boom best seller of the same title and relates her World War II experiences as a Dutch Christian leading an underground force intent upon saving Jews from capture by the invading Nazi forces in Holland. She is portrayed by Miss Clift. Corrie's sister Betsie, the physically weaker of the two sisters but the stronger one spiritually, is played by Ms. Harris; Ms. Heckart portrays a prison trustee serving as a nurse in the German death 'camp, Ravensbruck, who befriends the sisters. O'Connell is cast as the ten Boom's father.

The story was before the cameras for more than four months, with the first month's shooting confined to Haarlem, Holland (outside of Amsterdam) where the ten Booms lived.

The balance of the story was filmed in England, with the company first working in a London studio before moving to Lingfield, 50 miles distant.

The latter location was at Hobbs Barracks which during World War II served as headquarters for the Royal Women's Army Corps. This facility was vastly altered to represent Ravensbruck, a Nazi death camp where thousands of women were to die before the Histerian holocaust came to an end.

The screenplay, an adaptation by Allan Sloane and Lawrence Halban, was directed by James F. Collier, who has emerged as Hollywood's top director in the area of religion-oriented films. William F. Brown, World Wide Pictures' president, and Frank B. Jakobson are the executive producer and producer, respectively.

Julie Harris, portraying Betsie ten Boom in "The Hiding Place", and Paul Henley, cast as her young brother Peter, are shown in a scene from the film as they are being transported to World War II for aiding Jews to escape capture by Nazi forces in Holland during World War II.

Criminal justice majors hold careers seminar

Criminal justice majors will get a chance to find out what job opportunities are available to them and where, during the Career Opportunities Seminar, November 16 and 17. The seminar is presented by Criminal Justice Administration and the professional Criminal Justice fraternity, Omega chapter of Lambda Alpha, Epsilon. Robert Marsh, of Criminal Justice, said the seminar will "let students know where the jobs are and make agencies aware that BSU has students who have degrees to fill those positions."

The first day, November 16, the emphasis will be on how to get a job. The session will "familiarize the student with the procedures and personal conduct which will be most effective in a job interview. Resume preparation, interviewing conduct and procedures, and services available to employer and applicant through the BSU Career and Financial Services Office will be discussed."

On the second session, the 17th, federal, state and local personnel officers will speak "regarding career opportunities in the criminal justice field."

Three students, under the direction of Marsh, are responsible for putting the seminar together, Marsh said. Bob Dorr, Nancy Hecht and Karen Retledge followed through with all the details, and although they will receive one independent study credit hour, Marsh noted they worked more than one hour's worth.

HELIICOPTER SKIING IN THE CARIBOOS with five mile long runs is featured "IN SEARCH OF SKIING", the amazing story of a 25,000 mile ski trip produced and narrated by Warren Miller. Roundballers prepare exciting year

by Freddie Vincent

Arbiter Sports Editor

The 1977-78 Boise State basketball squad is preparing for the upcoming season, and if you are an avid fan of the roundball, then be prepared for an exciting season.

Coach Bus Connor welcomes nine lettermen, including four seniors with three years in the program. Three of the four are three-year starters.

The Broncos were disappointing at a 10-16 season and a 5-9 league mark, but Connor thinks his seniors will get him back on top as they were in 1975-76.

The guard position could be considerably stronger this season. Steve Connor was top scorer last year at 17.3 ppg. With a year to go, he is BSU's top career scorer, with 1,397 points in 81 varsity outings.

Other starters are 6-5 Trent Johnsnn, perennial Bronco basketball star, goes high for the ticket must be shown at the door before admission to the game. A full-time student waives his ticket with his activity card. The activity card and the ticket must be presented at the door for admission to the game.

Full-time student must pick up tickets in advance for each home basketball game. The maximum number of student tickets dispersed to that many victories in a season, plus there is speed, quickness and experience. Connor feels the major weakness of the team is its defense and rebounding.

Boise State was the league champion in 1975-76 and took part in the NCAA regional in Eugene, Oregon.

The Broncos' first scheduled non-conference game is against the Athletes in Action, the athletic representatives of Campus Crusade for Christ, Nov. 19. These talented Christian athletes played a 61-game schedule in '76-77, beginning with an 18-game tour of Australia in the summer and finishing with a 10-10 loss to the Russians on March 7. With all winning games in Australia added to a 36-7 regular season mark, the final total came to 54-7. Besides defeating Las Vegas, AIA made headlines with wins over Maryland (77-71) and San Francisco (104-85).

The only other team to that many victories' in a season is its defense and rebounding.

Besides defeating Las Vegas, AIA made headlines with wins over Maryland (77-71) and San Francisco (104-85).

AIA has not always fared so well, starting their basketball program in 1976 with one player and no coach. After acquiring a schedule, a coach and a full team, the squad finished that season at 15-14.

Head basketball coach Bill Oates has become one of the finest coaches in the country. A look at his credentials since starting with the Orange County-based quintet proves this point.

In 1975-76 Oates led AIA to a 37-8 record, including a 90-70 drubbing of Boise State, and the national AAU title, the team's first national crown since its inception.

In 1976-77, he guided his "USAers" to a 54-7 record for a total of 91-15 (.859).

Against college competition Oates has led AIA to 58 wins in two years. The only other amateur coach who has led his team to that many victories in the same time span is Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas.

AIA shows three starters scoring in double figures: forward Alonso Bradley (20.8), guard Harry Shooby (15.3) and center Ralph Drollinger (12.8). As a team the USAers are scoring at a clip of 94.3 ppg while holding their opponents to 70.8 ppg.

For the '77-78 campaign AIA has six home games, and faces such top competition as Mary-land (Dec. 3), Michigan (Dec. 22), USF (Jan. 19), Syracuse (Feb. 7) and UNLV (March 6).
Collier ends season; XC comes up sixth

by Claudia Wittwer

The Boise State University cross country team, trying to duplicate its first place finish at last year's Big Sky Conference championships, failed dismally when first, Steve Collier suffered a pulled muscle in his ribs and had to momentarily drop out of the race, and secondly, the entire Bronco team didn't run up to their capabilities. Weber State College won the title by a score of 29 points to easily out-distance second-place Northern Arizona University. Tate and Jerry

MSU-PSU: nothing

by Tate Simmons and Jerry Richards

With the NCAA season on the brink of closure, so is our region's cross country team; the Ill-fated prestidigitators of Cross-town High who have failed to distance themselves from the bottom of the barrel, currently on the rocks. You had a nifty idea (wonder where you got it) but, as they say, "class will out." Shucks, guys, it was fun to chuckle at your antics, even more so at your personages (sorry). Never a dull moment.

Far be we from perfect, yet our record speaks for itself: the credentials that made us tops will soon, too, be a pleasant memory. So in passing, At any rate, the word goes out... "class will out." Guys, it was fun to chuckle at your antics, even more so at your personages (sorry). Never a dull moment.

Hockey goes to Fraser

by Nancy Phillips

The BSU women's field hockey team, after chalking up three impressive victories at home, travels to Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia Friday and Saturday for the NCWGA regional tournament.

The Lumberjacks scored 67 points while the University of Montana was third with 70 points. The University of Idaho was fourth at 82 points and at fifth was Weber State University with a score of 114 points. Finally, at sixth, was Boise State with 137 points, Idaho State University, 201 points, was last. "I'm very disappointed with the way we ran," said Tate. "I've been telling everybody that I had some very good runners on this team and then they ran like this. I still think that we have a group of very good runners. But we're young and inexperienced. Still, we should have placed a lot higher to Weber State than we did," said Coach Ed Jacoby.

Collier, a senior from Oregon, was within striking distance of the Weber runners when, after 3,000 meters, he suffered a severe pain in his side. He momentarily dropped out of the race, finishing his side. He later started to run again, but by this time, 40 or so runners had passed him, and the Weber runners, Jorge Ruiz and Javier Chavez who finished second, were well on their way to victory. It was a big disappointment for Collier, who earlier in the season had defeated both Ruiz and Chavez in a cross country meet in Boise. Collier, in fact, had gone undefeated against all the Big Sky runners and was heavily favored to be the Big Sky individual champion.

"Well, there isn't really much to say about this race," said Collier after the meet was over. "The season's over with. I'll just have to really train and work hard for the track season coming up this spring." With Collier out of the race, junior Scott Blackburn had to take up the slack and secured a 10th place finish. Blackburn's time for 10,100 meter course was 37:16 and 13 seconds. But Jacoby was not too happy with this performance, either. He felt that Blackburn should have been in the top four. After Blackburn was freshman Dave Soifless, who placed 25th. Placing 27th and third for the Broncos was sophomore Karl Knapp. Mike Henry, normally Boise State's sixth man, came in fourth for the team at this meet. Collier was the next finisher for the Broncos. He edged freshmen Stan Link and Charlie Winner, who were the sixth and seventh men for Boise State, respectively.

This meet also served as the District 7 qualifying meet for the national meet to be held next week in Spokane, Washington. Teams from the Western Athletic Conference and Big Sky Conference were combined, with the top four teams going to nationals. The University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP), Wyoming, Brigham Young University and Arizona advanced to the national meet. As a result, no Big Sky team or individual will compete in next week's meet. Jacoby said that this rule is a fair one. "If none of the Big Sky teams are good enough to place in the top four of the district meet, then they really don't deserve to go to Nationals. But on the other hand, this district that we compete in is rated to be the toughest district in the United States. UTEP will probably win the national meet and Wyoming and Brigham Young should both place in the top four or five teams. That makes it kind of tough to qualify for the Nationals when there are already four of the top teams in the nation right in your own district."

Despite this year's poor finish, Jacoby said that next year's team should benefit from the experience that this year produced. Collier will be the only runner missing from this year's team and the freshmen will have a year of experience under their belts when they try again next season.
The game between the Cal-Poly (SLO) Mustangs and the Boise State Broncos was supposed to be close, and also for the title of best in the west, but freshman Cedric Minter turned it into Cedric Minter day. All the tailback did was to rush for a record single game total of 210 yards on just 26 carries, set a single season total rushing yardage mark of 785 yards, and also set a record for most touchdowns and points rushing in a single game (4 touchdowns and 24 points). All this against a good defensive team, and with yet another game to go this year, against the U of Idaho Vandals on Nov. 26.

The tempo of the game was decided early, when the Broncos recovered a fumbled punt at the 11 yard line. Five plays later Minter scored his first TD from the one.

BSU made it 14-0 when Hoskin Hogan found Terry Hurt in the endzone from the three with a little over three minutes remaining in the first quarter. The Mustangs tried to make a game out of it as they cut the score to 14-7 on a trick play. Quarterback Bob Ansari handed off to flanker Robbie Martin who in turn passed back to Ansari for a 25 yard TD.

It was ten minutes later, when Minter scored again, this time from the 22 on a sweep around left end. The half ended with the Broncos ahead 21-14, as the Mustangs drove 50 yards in just 35 seconds, with the score coming on a play of 24 yards.

Although the offense scored often, it was the defense who shut down the Mustang offense. Minter scored his third touchdown in the third quarter, but the defense than forced the Cal-Poly punter to mishandle a snap from center and Bob Macauley recovered the ball on the 19 yard line.

The Broncos failed to score when a field goal attempt by Tom Sarrette was wide. The defense then blocked the next attempted punt and Macauley again recovered, this time on the 20 yard line.

Quarterback Bob Ansari again moved the Mustangs to within 7 points as he scored...
With the offense and the defense playing so well, perhaps the biggest surprise of the game was the punting of Corey Bridges. The freshman from northern Idaho averaged 45.5 yards a punt for the afternoon, something that kept the Mustangs pinned deep in their own territory. Bridges' punting was something that had been needed badly in the first part of the season.

The win places the Broncos at 8-2 for the season, with the final game coming up on the 26th of November at the University of Idaho's Kibbie Dome.

A win at Moscow would give the Broncos outright possession of the Big Sky crown while a loss would leave them ties with NAU for the title.

The only sad thing about the game with Cal-Poly is that even though the Broncos asserted themselves as the top Division II team in the west, there will be no play-off for Boise State this year. The Broncos are going to have to settle for being the best in the west, and number one in the hearts of their fans.

Erb and Schenk, along with Elaine Clegg, Alice Myers, Linda Hampton and Tammy Demick scored to hand defeat to C of I.

Schenk scored two goals in both the EOSC and NNC games while Erb added one in each of the contests. Senior Jeanine Brandel led the team in assists throughout the weekend.

"I was pleased with the way the team worked together," commented coach Jayne Van Wassenhove. "We showed a lot of ball control and the forward line moved the ball really well. The system of play we're using now seems to be working really well for us, strengthening our defense and improving on our control of the ball.

"We're starting to communicate more on the field and getting to know each other's style of play. We're playing a lot more like a team," added the coach.

Teams from Canada, as well as Washington, Oregon and Idaho will compete in the two-day regionals at Simon Fraser. This will be final season action for the BSU team.

"I'm looking forward to this weekend and I think we'll make a strong showing. This is the culmination of our season and since this is what we've all been working for and looking forward to all season, everyone is really excited," concluded Van Wassenhove.

The tough teams at the tournament, according to the coach, should be the Canadian teams of Simon Fraser and the University of British Columbia and the University of Idaho and the University of Oregon. BSU will be looking to avenge earlier losses to the U of I and U of O and improve on a 0-0 tie in their last encounter with the U of I.
