Board Raises Fees & Proposes Budgets

by Sally Thomas

For the fiscal year at Boise State University, the story next year is higher fees. Out-of-state students will receive the brunt of the fee raise with non-resident fees being boosted an additional $300, making the total per year assessment $1500. The fee hike was part of the action taken by the State Board of Education last Friday at its monthly meeting in Pocatello, ID.

In other action relative to Boise State University, the Board approved a $3 per semester fee increase for all BSU students which will go toward maintaining the Health Center. This addition brings the total fees to be paid, beginning with the Fall '79 semester, to $230.

The Board also approved a revision of BSU's parking rates. The fee for a parking decal will go up from the current $3 per year to $5 per year while the fee for reserved spaces will increase from $39 to $50 per year. According to Boise State officials, the additional money will be used to help finance parking lot maintenance, for security costs, and to pay for additional enforcement incurred by Boise City in enforcing parking regulations.

The Board also set forth a proposed budget distribution for the state's four institutions of higher education. The total figure of 68.2 million was divided in about the same proportion as last year, giving Boise State a tentative share of just over $18 million, compared with this year's budget of $17.4 million. A special meeting of the Board has been called for April 17. At that time, the presidents of each of the four institutions will report their findings on the effects of this proposed fund distribution and a final budget will be set. According to BSU budget reports on the impact of various levels of funding, the loss of personnel at the university could be reduced from an earlier prediction of 33 to a figure of less than 18. The actual figure will not be known, however, until after the April 17 meeting.

At this same meeting, the Board will decide whether or not to declare a state of financial emergency. Such a declaration would allow the four schools to lay off tenured faculty among other personnel. Only President Lee Wilkins of Lewis and Clark College has recommended the declaration higher education. The total figure for personnel at the university could be reduced from an earlier prediction of 33 to a figure of less than 18. The actual figure will not be known, however, until after the April 17 meeting.

Vo-Tech Instructors May Get Professor Ranking

by K. Libucha

Should Vocational-Technical instructors be rewarded and recognized for their expertise in the non-academic sphere of the university through some type of professorship ranking system? Dan Miller, Director of the Vo-Tech Department, has submitted a proposal to the faculty senate for approval of a non-academic ranking system as an incentive for Vo-Tech instructors to strive for improved technical skills and teaching proficiency.

The senate rejected a past proposal for the establishment of a Vocational Technical ranking system at Weber State University, on the grounds that the format was not in accordance with proposal guidelines and the mechanics of the system were not clear, according to Miller. The continued to page 10

Dickinson College, a small liberal arts school some 36 miles from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, tried to keep its students calm and its campus open. The administrators eventually lost their battle.

"With this kind of play, we think we might be a contender for the Big Sky," said tennis coach Dan Orwin, who hasn't seen a BSU Big Sky championship tennis team for several years.

The following article is the second in a series of six that will deal with the effect on students of the cuts in funding to Boise State University as a result of the 1% Initiative.

by D. Barr

Course offerings at the BSU School of Business will not be at the potential they could have been according to the Dean of that School, Dr. Thomas Stitzel. Stitzel noted that the limits on course offerings would be only one of the areas affected within the School of Business itself. Presently it looks as if the School will lose a full-time faculty position, and the operating budget will be trimmed somewhat and students will have to expect that their typewriters, adding machines, and other office equipment will last that much longer and thus may be a bit older than before.

The full-time faculty position that may be lost will likely be covered by various leaves of absence that are requested by one to three faculty each year. The School’s ability to hire part-time faculty will be reduced somewhat as the budget for that area is anticipated to be pared down also.

The result of both these changes will mean larger classes in some fields and fewer section offerings in others. Still, Stitzel anticipates meeting the fall schedule for 1979 as printed.

The loss in operating expenses will be spread throughout the School and the Dean also noted that both students and faculty will have to understand and show a degree of maturity in dealing with the situation as it unfolds.

Some turnover in faculty is expected to occur by the end of this year, and if that does become the case, losses of that nature will take the longest time to repair. Support for the Center for Economic Education will be reduced because of the decrease in funding to the School of Business. The Center offers economic education to teachers of grades kindergarten through twelfth. Stitzel stated that attempts will be made to pick up private funding. The impact of the cuts for the center are hard to ascertain, but service to public schools will be restricted and a program that was begun will have to be interrupted due to lack of funds.

Stitzel also sees a kind of two year low point that will eventually have the School of Business emerging with a stronger academic focus as well as increased employment opportunities.

Overall, however, Boise State’s School of Business will remain one of reputation and opportunity for students on this campus. Even with the loss of all graduate assistants next year, the School is expected to become accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business. Final notice of accreditation by the Assembly will not be known until May 2, but according to Dean Stitzel, BSU has spent a number of years acquiring the proper balance in resources and curriculum throughout the entire school to achieve accreditation.

The Assembly is considering data collected over a three year period. Stitzel also stated that if the undergraduate program becomes accredited, the graduate program would be the next area of emphasis in the next five years.

In the future, Stitzel noted that students will have the same employment opportunities as before. In fact, they may increase somewhat.

Still, students will feel the effects of the 1% Initiative throughout the halls that house the School of Business.
Keiser Hopes for Emergence

Interviews with BSU President John Keiser will appear at regular intervals for the remainder of the academic year.

by D. Barr

BSU President John Keiser recently stated that his goal for the future of Boise State included the hope that the institution would continue to emerge and that the residents of the Treasure Valley would come to realize the potential for cultural growth that an institution of higher learning can provide.

Keiser made the remarks during a recent interview with members of the ARBITER staff. He also spoke about his feeling toward curriculum changes that he would like to see considered as the future direction of Boise State University finally takes shape.

He stated that he would like to see a reduction in the number of core requirements for an undergraduate degree and a revamping of the entire course classification system. Keiser said that he "...anticipates changes in that direction." Specifically, he listed such things as a public affairs course that stressed the type of modern society that we live today as well as some type of course that might examine the taxation practices in the United States.

Budgets Are Happy, Mostly

plucked with the FAB's process, though he felt a few outbacks, such as in salaries and in the concerts programs, were "...artificial...they cut some things without much of an explanation."

The steps between the FAB and the senate's approval, though, worried Corbett more, he said, "...I would like to see more inter-departmental offerings and felt that the humanities introduction class might be a good part of a basic education for all students."

Emphasis on good writing and English skills are not solely the responsibility of the English Department, according to Keiser, and he suggested that perhaps a curriculum of courses taken in the spring will help to build a stronger emphasis on this in the core curriculum.

Keiser would like to see more that basic education for all students. This is definitely going to be a difficult task, but it is a task that we must undertake," Keiser stated. He also noted that the FAB's budget is not limited to just the students, but also includes the faculty and staff.

"The FAB's budget is a reflection of how well a university is doing," Keiser stated. "And it is a reflection of the funds that we are able to allocate to the various programs and departments within the university."

The Idaho Association of Educational Office Personnel seventh annual spring conference will be April 20-21 at the Boise Holiday Inn. David Hires, BSU assistant professor, will conduct the conference. Guest lecturer will be made available to the conference.

"This conference will focus on the importance of communication in the educational field," Keiser stated. "It is a vital component of the educational process and must be emphasized in all levels of education."
On that one day when everything has to be perfect...

Ourada Publishes Indian History
by Joanne Fanning
A history of the Menominee Indians has been published this year by Dr. Patricia K. Ourada, Boise State University professor of history.

Ourada, who has sponsored seven annual American Institutes at BSU, wrote her doctoral dissertation on the Menominee tribe for her 1973 Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma.

Her book narrates for the first time the history of the Menominees in the volume, Number 148 in The Civilization of the American Indian Series. Published by the University of Oklahoma Press, the book is a comprehensive study of one native American people's struggle to maintain their tribal identity. It begins with an analysis of archaeological research at the Menominee Riverside Site showing that men have inhabited the shores of the river for the last 3,000 years.

Since the seventeenth century the "white rice" people have dealt with the arrival of several waves of white men which have repeatedly threatened the very survival of the tribe. Ourada follows this history to modern times where, she says, "It is a credit to the heart and spirit of the Menominee people that each such threat has been divested to the tribe's eventual advantage..."

Surviving three hundred years of Anglo-European encroachments upon their lands, the Menominees, unlike many other tribes, avoided being removed to west of the Mississippi. Their stubborn efforts led by their Chief Oshkosh, they kept ten townships along the Wisconsin Wolf River for their reservation, which was returned to them by the 1975 Restoration Act.

Now, Ourada tells us, "...perhaps the sacred drum of the Menominees will again be heard by the people, and the Menominee Indians, having experienced the bitterness and disappointments of leadership struggles and economic desperation, can return to a happy and productive life in the scenic splendor of their lakes and forests."

Ourada is a consultant to the Idaho Inter-Tribal Policy Board, and has worked with its humanities grant to present work of the National Indian Policy Review Commission to the tribes. She also has been a consultant to the Milwaukee Public Museum on a National Endowment to the Humanities film on the Menominee tribe. At Boise State, she is faculty advisor to the Dena'igh Tah Native American Club.

Idaho Teaching Jobs To Be Scarce

Teachers looking for positions in Idaho this spring may not have many to choose from because of an unusually tight job market, reports Richard Rapp, director of Boise State University's Office of Career and Financial Services.

According to a survey compiled by Rapp, job openings for teachers in Idaho are down 77 percent from one year ago. At the end of March, Idaho school districts listed only 96 job openings with Rapp's placement office, compared to 78 in March of 1978.

Job offers for school administrators are also down more than 90 percent this year.

On the other hand, Rapp reports there are 170 out-of-state vacancies listed for teachers, more than eight times the openings in Idaho schools.

"I think uncertainty over the effects of the one percent Initiative is the biggest reason for the tight market," Rapp says.

"We may see more positions open now that the legislature has finished its work and funding for schools is more certain..."

"But Rapp says prospective teachers should be prepared to locate other positions, mostly outside Idaho. Recruiters from outside have shown more interest in BSU graduates this year, including one superintendent who told Rapp he plans to get the "cream of the crop..."

"While vacancies in Idaho are rare, we've seen a slight increase in openings outside the state...It's only natural that Idaho teachers are going to be attracted to those positions," Rapp says.

"The job picture may look grim, but Rapp says prospective employers shouldn't lose hope yet.

"Summers have traditionally been our busiest placement period for teachers...we hope the same will be true this year."
Discrimination Must End

(CPB) It was the last straw for Seattle University student Dave Jones. Earlier this year, he had driven up to the "handicapped parking only" space near his classroom, and found it once again occupied by an unauthorized vehicle. Jones then steered into the parking area but was already blocked several doors down from a handicapped parking violation.

Who "constant contact" with administrators had bought no changes, Jones filed suit against SU for non-enforcement of parking rules. Jones asked for $25 - $35 a tuition refund for the missed classes and $9.75 for his loss of time and inconvenience - and lost in Seattle small claims court. The judge, according to the SU SPEC-TATOR, said "SU wasn't liable because "they are only required to do the best they can.'"

News Of The World

From the Washington Post

South Africa spent $1.6 million in 1977 for public relations in the U.S. The money went to paid newspaper columnists, syndicated writers, academic lecturers, politicians, and journalists.

A senior director for a U.S. firm, who asked not to be named, told the Post: "Inflation rates are reported here even when we know that inflation is not there. People here don't want to hear that the South African Rand is not going down. They want to hear that the Rand is going up."

Although the SU security staff has offered to assist Jones and other disabled students in parking, Jones says he's still "very angry about this situation and that he's "not going to let this (the unfavorable decision) stop him." Jones isn't the only angry disabled student. A rash of lawsuits have been brought by disabled students frustrated by the lack of enforcement of anti-discrimination laws. For many, the courts seem the only alternative to make Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 - "programs or activities receiving federal aid may not discriminate against otherwise qualified handi-capped individuals" - mean what it says.

In the six years since passage, "504" has mandated that the schools, hospitals, and other federally-funded institutions make their programs available to people not only in .continued to page 9
A Time for Establishing Traditions

The dictionary definition of tradition might go something like this, a handed down practice, ideas, or practices. In order to hand down something, however, that something must first be established. And once established and handed down, that something becomes (generally accepted) law, thereby insuring that the probability of the same something being handed down again is good. The above idea, put into perspective, would dictate that the tradition of winning football which now exists at BSU will continue. And with that tradition will continue the benefits it brings to the university, benefits such as the dollars and other kind of support received from the Bronco Athletic Association and other community members, to say nothing of the opportunities given students directed in the form of experience or scholarships.

A closely associated tradition is that of Homecoming. At BSU, the tradition of a Homecoming Queen, and the Homecoming dance stand out as already established traditions. These established traditions, however, may be changed, or they are not joined with an effort to promote the academic side of the university experience. Last year, distinguished alumni were asked to speak before Homecoming; BSU's Dean Keppler were highlights in this effort. This year, similar academic activities are being planned for Homecoming.

Boise State is a comparatively young university and, as such, still has a great deal of opportunity to establish its traditions. And the university community seems to be grabbing on to that opportunity. The Humanities Fair of last week stands as an excellent example of a tradition in the making of the academic side of the university experience. In spite of slim attendance and an sort unfortunate strike, the Fair was not outstanding, exceptional, and enjoyable by all who attended it. The Fair deserves to become an annual event, and it is seen as yet another step to promote the academic side of the university.

BSU already has the tradition of the cold-drill. This literary magazine has won national awards year after year for its outstanding quality and imaginative format. The support that this magazine gives to BSU students does not end with the high pride felt by a contributor to see his or her name in print, nor with the announcement that BSU has won the first place in national competition. It continues into the celebration of the university as a whole. The continuation of the tradition of the cold-drill supports the continuation of the tradition of academic excellence so vital to every student of the university.

Another tradition stands in the wings, waiting its turn to play center stage. Illustrated by Mike Hoffman, Boise State's first Rhodes Scholar, the tradition of nationally or internationally recognized academic excellence is bearing down to award awards being given to BSU students five down from reliable sources. One of these sources, President John Keiser, stated in a recent speech that he would soon be able to declare that the award of one of the nation's most prestigious awards to three of BSU's students. Also, the English Department recently announced that one of their professors, Ken Kirkpatrick, has been admitted to the graduate program in English at Harvard with full tuition plus at least a partial living allowance. These are just two examples of the many things BSU has on a par with the best the nation has to offer when it comes to graduate school openings. These honors support the notion of BSU as becoming, by tradition, an academically oriented institution.

But there are other parts to the university experience. In addition to academic contributions, there are contributions to be made by student leaders. And long desired as being aesthetic, BSU students are beginning to make themselves heard in this area, too, as students promote their own specific interests and needs. These students are just now finding that they have a voice, and they are using it to speak out in favor of quality of educational opportunities and programs available at BSU. They are also asking to be a part of the decision-making activities that govern the educational world, and this is a natural thing to do. On the one hand, student leaders are going to have to move quickly and imaginatively if they are to keep ahead of student interests; to do otherwise would mean that the uniqueness of students' voices. On the other hand, the university leaders will be increasingly charged with providing the opportunities for these voices. It is hoped that this process will result in sufficient provision will negate the learning opportunity otherwise inherent in this facet of the university experience.

As is true with most things, it is easier to direct a moving object than it is to start its moving. It is also easier to direct a moving object before it has gained maximum in momentum. With data come in the midst of self-definition, it is time for the establishment of traditions that reflect the self-definition and self-serving as a whole. The need is not that of athletics versus academia—it is destructive to think that availability is, in great measure, dependent on the establishing of specific Interests and needs. Thesestudents of educational opportunities which are and are not available at BSU.

On the one hand, student leaders are going to have to move quickly and imaginatively If they are to keep ahead of student Interests; to do otherwise would mean that the uniqueness of students' voices. On the other hand, the university leaders will be increasingly charged with providing the opportunities for these voices. It is hoped that this process will result in sufficient provision will negate the learning opportunity otherwise inherent in this facet of the university experience.

The philosophical argument sounds imposing, but the problem with the article is that at the outset Professor Chase reveals too much about what the university is and what it is not. He provides a list of the evils of the modern university and its commitment to the falling fast option and professors who give only A's, regulations that permit students to drop courses late in the semester, the willingness of professors to give extensions on papers and incompletes in courses, and the decline in the number of required courses and the increase in electives. On the other hand, he is particularly horrified that even the Harvard catalogue has doubled in thickness in the last twenty years and now contains over 2000 listings.

Our overkill arsenal for war in the classroom, the cold-drill, the tradition that both support and determine the policies and practices of the school. - •

The above Idea, put Into specifics, would dictate that the tradition which allows students to drop courses long, talking with the list.

The things that disturb Professor Chase most are decrease in the power of the professor to influence decisions, decrease in the power of the professor to influence decisions, decrease in the power of the professor to influence decisions, decrease in the power of the professor to influence decisions, decrease in the power of the professor to influence decisions, and threats of punishment. Perhaps he has lived on college campuses for so long, talking with other professors who agree with him, that the connection between coercion and quality seems self-evident to him. People who benefit from power almost always think that they exercise it for the good of society and themselves. A simple truth that is rather clearer almost anywhere other than facul-

Voter Participation Assessed

Open Letter to BSU Student Body,
I am a student at BSU Vo-Tech, a Veteran, and a property owning, taxpaying, registered voter, who, as a lifetime resident of Idaho, refuses to support any individual party or party policy. I make it a habit to vote in every election, and I vote according to my God-given commonsense after devoting some time and effort to researching issues and candi-

Over the past several years I have become increasingly disagri-to take the time or expend the effort necessary to vote in a truly “free” electoral process, a privile-

Of those who do vote, a majority take little or no time to seek out a given party or candidate to bring the issues and answer for them;

Now, in my first year at BSU, a

The voter turnout for the ASB off your “buts” and do something constructive when the obviously

Please keep your mind in mind when you let serious issues slide

Peacem Corps And VISTA: People Helping People

by Mary Lou Virgil

On October 14, 1960, on the University of Michigan campus, presidential candidate, John F. Kennedy, initiated an idea to a crowd of over 10,000 students. He asked "how many of you would spend part of your lives helping other people in other nations?" Response was overwhelming; the Peace Corps was born.

Since 1961, when Congress passed the Peace Corps Act, more than 72,000 volunteers have worked around the world in assisting nations who ask for help. Three years later, VISTA was created to be the "Peace Corps at home." Throughout the years the willingness to help others has grown in both the number of nations seeking help and in the number of volunteers now working. Currently there are 2,400 requests for Peace Corps volunteers and another 1,300 for VISTA to be filled next fall. Recruiters visit universities and colleges each year seeking people who "are willing to work with their hearts as well as their hands and heads.

Last week, BSU was visited by a recruiting team leader from Seattle, Lisa Hickey, a former VISTA volunteer in Boise. For three days she met with interested students and held seminars on both the Peace Corps and VISTA to all that were interested.

Ms. Hickey pointed out that volunteers are being sought who have experience in volunteer work, who are flexible, sensitive to others, have a willingness to share knowledge and who are motivated. In the past, persons with skills in teaching, nursing, and social work are needed; however, now the emphasis is on liberal arts education and willingness to work hard and long have come to be qualities that volunteers now need to have.

The major goal of the VISTA program is to help increase the voice of poor people in the decision-making process of their communities and to create self-help organizations. The emphasis for the Peace Corps used to be providing developing third world countries with high-level technical assistance. Today there is more of a concentrated effort towards meeting basic human needs, including food and water, health care and shelter.

The basic goal of both agencies is to create programs put to use what is on hand so that when the volunteers leave, their accomplishments will continue to operate.

Those interested in applying may call collect (206)-442-5490 or write 600 2nd Ave, 10th Floor, Seattle, WA 98101 for more information and an application.

Discrimination—

Several rehabilitation agencies, including the Coalition for the Educationally Handicapped, are promoting "educational opportunity," promising to help disabled students. Most cite discrimination as the reason.

But implementing has been slow. It took until 1975 to work out the particulars of stemming discrimination against the disabled, and then more years were set aside for institutions to work out the mechanics, a "deadline" of June, 1980.

Many schools, of course, are making progress. But for individual students, stymied by inaction at their particular school, the "full educational opportunity" promised by 504 can't wait for such gradual process. Consequently, lawsuits are more frequently filed.

Many administrators are clearly perturbed at the prospect of providing additional services for disabled students. Must one money as the prime banner. UT president Loren Rogers said that putting wheelchair ramps on shuttle buses could cost $1.4 million.

But disabled students are among those that cut all butts, buildings or programs need to be changed. Jim Bennett of the Office of Civil Rights, which is responsible for 504's implementation, sees that large expenses are often unjustly anticipated.

Bennett said that feedback from colleges and universities shows that creating accessibility "is not anywhere as expensive" as many schools have feared. He said schools have funded accessibility through money from state vocational rehabilitation through state and local support.

CARLISLE, PA (CPS) — The news, according to one administrator, arrived some 24 hours after the initial, disabling incident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg on March 28.

This began a four-day effort by administrators at Dickinson College, a small liberal arts school that sits some 26 miles away from the power plant, to keep its students calm and its campus open. After repeated radiation readings by nuclear physicists on the faculty, regular reminders to the students, several all-college meetings, and constant reassurances all around, the administrators eventually lost their battle.

John Ross, Dickinson's public information director, announced on Sunday, April 1, that classes would, after all, be suspended through April 9. The suspension came despite readings that indicated that, according to Ross, "there is no danger to students on the campus." Evaluation plans extended in a 10-mile radius from the power plant. Carlisle—and Dickinson—are 26 miles away.

Nevertheless, student—and later, parental—anxiety continued. On Friday, March 30, Sarah Snyder of The Dickinsonian, the school paper, reported that "parents are driving up here and taking their kids away. A lot of people are on the roads hunkering out of here."

Ross suggested only that "a lot more people left for home for the weekend than normally would do so." By Sunday, the school administration received "many, many" calls from students and parents wanting to know if they should return to campus for classes.

After two all-college meetings Friday and Saturday night, the administration gave students the option of leaving campus, assuring them that they wouldn't be penalized if they fled until the crisis in Harrisburg was over. "But a lot of students," Ross reflected, "felt that the statement was somehow pressuring them to stay."

On Sunday, President Sam A. Baker released a new statement, suspending classes without officially closing the campus for those who wished to stay.

"We suspended classes because we didn't want the students to feel pressured into staying. And, it wouldn't be possible to carry on normal classes anyway. I think it'd be hard to sit through a lecture with a "smoke cloud" hanging overhead, when all you really want to do is talk about Three Mile Island."

Those students staying on campus—Ross estimates "about 40 percent" of the 1600-member student body remains—will get an especially-developed diet of classes during the suspension. Each department has concocted unofficial seminars and discussions. There'll be, of course, a series of what Ross calls "nuclear teach-ins," about measuring radioactivi-ly, the ways reactors work, and how radiation is spread by the winds. The classics department, on the other hand, is holding a seminar on "The Last Days of Pompeii."

How did the administrators respond to the crisis so quickly? Dickinson's might have been better prepared than others. President Baker used to teach a course on crisis management at the University of Florida med school. Dickinson, moreover, holds semiannual administrative seminars. Last fall's seminar was devoted to planning, and the lab session, according to Ross, was "an exercise in emergency planning. Nobody believes it when I tell them now, but it's true."

During the Harrisburg incident, a small college only 26 miles from the notorious nuclear reactor tried to stay open, but closed for eight days due to popular demand.

various, so that they may receive money from reserve next year a few weeks, instead of months, before the activities. This cutback from the requests of such clubs as International Students, Anthropology Club, and the clubs within the Multicultural Board, totaled over $10,000; the ASSU budget planners are shooting for a $25,000 reserve.

Other major recommendations: KBSU radio was granted operational expenses, and about half the cost of capital improvements necessary to keep the station at its present spot on the FM band was earmarked. ASSU will try to raise funds for the rest this summer.

The Theater Arts program had a huge reserve, and the FAB recommended that it be kept in next year’s budget, and that sufficient ASS money be added to support production personnel and supplies.

$3,000 was earmarked for a BSU child care center, which may be in operation next year.

Vo-Tech Instructors May Get Professor Ranking—

proposal will be resubmitted for approval at an upcoming senate meeting, and if it meets approval, it will go to the State Board.

According to Dr. Bullington, BSU Executive vice president, when the school entered the state system of higher education on January 1, 1969, the State Board mandated that Vo-Tech instructors could not achieve academic rank and were struck at the rank of instructor. At that time there were four Vo-Tech instructors who had advanced within the academic ranking system by obtaining their masters degrees, and their rank was rescinded by the State Board, according to Bullington.

Vo-Tech instructor, Jim Tomkins, whose rank had been rescinded at that time said, “The struggle to establish a procedure for ranking dragged on for ten solid years going from committee to committee, from office and never getting anywhere.”

On the agenda of Dr. Bullington’s last meeting as president of the university last July was an item to restore the academic rank of assistant professor to two Vo-Tech instructors, Bullington said. This item passed and academic rank was reinstated.

According to Miller, the current proposal was formulated by the Professional Standards Committee and was approved by the Vo-Tech faculty. Miller said the purpose of the proposal is to “recognize and reward the expertise of those skilled instructors who are constrained because advanced degrees are not available in their particular fields,” and therefore cannot participate in the hierarchal ranking system of university faculty.

Miller said, “Of course, there is a dollar figure tied to academic rank,” and this proposal would financially reward dedicated Vo-Tech staff members who strive for “proficiency and self-improvement.”

If the alternate ranking system for Vocational-Technical faculty is passed in the faculty senate, it will go to the State Board for final approval. Dr. Bullington said, “I don’t foresee any problem with the State Board. If the institution accepts the proposal as fair, equitable, and just, I don’t think the State Board will interfere.”
The Boise State University tennis team traveled to Pullman, WA last weekend for three days of competition at the Inland Empire Washington won the title by "Our kids played very well. We're hoping to continue this kind of play, we think we have a chance to win this weekend at the Inland Empire Tournament," Owen said.

After playing Washington for five hours, Sunday, our guys turned right around and played Weber State, a very good team, and were able to win it 5-4. With this kind of play, we think we might be a contender for the Big Sky title. We'll find out how much of a contender we are when we play the University of Idaho this weekend at the Inland Empire Tournament," Owen said.

Boise State will compete in the triangular with Utah State and Montana, March 31. The Broncos were idle this past weekend.

The Broncos won four of their five matches, beating conference opponents Weber State (5-4) and Idaho State (8-1), in addition to beating Utah State (8-1) and Washington State (6-1). The only loss was suffered at the hands of the University of Washington, (6-3).

Washington won the title by beating the other five teams and accumulating 38 points. Weber State picked up 21 points, BSU 18, Utah State 14, Washington State 12 and Idaho State.

Five of BSU's top six players, number one Steve Appleton, number two Mike Megale, number three Nelson Gourley, number five Mark Jackson and number six Greg Wall, upset their records to 5-2. Number four singles player, Mike Gorr, sports a 3-4 record. The number two doubles team of Can-Wall has a 5-2 record, while the number one team of Appleton-Megale, and the number three team of Gourley-Jackson have 4-3 records.

"The kids played very well throughout this tournament, especially with the grueling schedule of matches," BSU Tennis Coach Dan Owen said.

Boise State Hosts All-Idaho Collegiate Track And Field Meet

Boise State University will host the All-Idaho Collegiate Track and Field Meet, Saturday, April 13 at Bronco Stadium. Field events and the men's 10,000 meters will begin at noon, Boise State, Idaho and Idaho State will compete in the tri-angular. All three teams will enter both men's and women's fields.

According to BSU Track Coach Ed Jacoby, the men's meet should be very close.

"The men are really well-matched," and the meet offers a different perspective than would be a championship meet with several teams," Jacoby said. "In most events, all three schools will score, so it should be very close."

Jacoby said Idaho has an excellent team this spring. "Idaho has the best individual performers they have had in several years," Jacoby said. "Ed Idaho, although not as well-balanced as they normally are, has several good individuals and excellent relay teams," Jacoby added.

Top performers for the Vandals include distance star Dave Steffens, sprinter-long jumper Ken- sean Swartz, and middle distance runner-Dave Steffens (10.8 100; 21.5 200, 44.2 400), middle distance man Felix Diaz (3:39.4 1500 meters). The Broncos were idle this past weekend, following their win in the Big Sky title. We'll find out how much of a contender we are when we play the University of Idaho this weekend at the Inland Empire Tournament," Owen said.

Women's Track At University Of Montana

by Beth Rupprecht

Records fell and more women qualified for regionals at the University of Montana Track and Field Invitationals in Missoula on April 7.

Top competition came from the Canadian track team, the Calgary Spartans, who won every event in which they had an entrant with the exception of the shot put and the two mile relay. Calgary's team finished with 72 points, and Boise State came in second with 45. Following teams were: Montana-36, Flathead Valley C.C.-19, Western Montana-10, N. Idaho-6, and Whitworth-3.

Since the meet was basically a relay meet, only a few open events were run.

In another open event, the 5000 meter run, Beth Rupprecht again ran under regional marks and again broke her own school record. Her third place time of 18:51.96 was eight seconds off the old record.

The mile relay, consisting of Karen Osburn, Sue Wessels, Darla Housequist, and Judy Smith also erased school record with their second place time of 4:12.85. The year old track record was 4:13.0.

The Boise State team was not far behind University of Montana's winning team, which ran a 4:09.67 time. Both teams must run again under regional qualifying with their time.

Perhaps the highlight of the meet for the Bronco women came in the two mile relay. The relay was the only win for the Boise team, and their winning time of 9:59.31 not only broke the school record, but qualified the team for regionals.

The battle with Calgary saw Jody Smith (2:26 for half-mile leg) pull into the lead, which was lost by Lisa Johnston (2:38), regained by Beth Rupprecht (2:29), and lengthened by Judy Smith's finishing leg (2:25), leaving Calgary twelve seconds back.

Patty Kasel remained consistent in the throwing events with two seconds in the javelin and discus. Kasel's javelin mark of 113'10" was 20 feet behind winner Kellee Stockton of U of M, and her discus mark of 125'11 1/2" was eight feet behind Estella Rung of Calgary.

Perhaps the highlight of the throw put, Patty claimed the third place medal with her shot put of 38' 9 1/4".

Both sprint relays placed second to Calgary teams, but Boise's 4x110 relay equalled their seasons best time of 49.5. The team of Karen Osburn, Sue Wessels, Karen Osborne, and Colette Taylor again ran under regional qualifying time.

The 880 medley relay team placed second in a time of 1:54. This coming Saturday, April 14, the Boise State women will compete in the All-Idaho triangular meet with Idaho State and University of Idaho.

David Hughes is one of a flashy triumvirate of running backs that will return to Boise State's football team for the annual Alumni contest. Terry Zanzer and noseguard Credicr Minter will also return, but coach Jim Criner says even more backs have the ability to contribute to the Bronco attack.

Women's Fastpitch Gets Scheduled

A Women's Fastpitch scheduling meeting will be held Monday, April 16 at 7:00 p.m. at Fort Boise Community Center, for Divisions I and II. One representative from each team must be present. A $50.00 deposit must be paid by April 13 to guarantee a place in the league. League play begins Saturday and Sunday, April 12-14. For more information, call Bobbie Kay at 384-4166, 384-4296.

Women's Golf Lessons Start Soon

Registration begins: April 16 at 7:00 p.m. Sunday's games start at noon. The Boise State Broncos play doubleheaders. The Saturday games will be held Monday, April 15-16. Senior second baseman Steve McManamon set two more single season records, complimenting the runs-batted-in record he set last weekend. McMannon hit his tenth home run of the season against the Vandals, breaking the 1858 single season record of nine set by John McHenry and Mike Lavoie. He had five total bases in the game, breaking the single season total bases record of 35 set by John McHenry and Mike Lavoie.

The Broncos dropped the twin-bill, 5-2 and 7-6. Senior left fielder Jim Dawson went three for four at the plate, including two home runs and a double. It came back to take the nightcap, 8-5.

Steve McMannon set new BSU records for runs-batted-in and home runs last week.

Two good baseball games are shaping up on the field, at tightly contested games. Tight ending games to be played. John McHenry and John Bartow transferred Kevin Raulerson are all playing very well.

The four quarterbacks, Joe Allott, Kevin McDonald, Dave DeMers and John Bartow are getting training and experience at the position, but according to Criner, none has had enough repetition to emerge from the group.

The offensive line has been the slowest unit of the team to come together. But Criner said this is because of the volume of techniques and fundamentals they must learn.

The Broncos are preparing for the annual Blue-White intrasquad scrimmage in Buhl, 10-6, Saturday, April 14 at 3 p.m. The ninth annual Alumni Game is set for 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 5 in Bronco Stadium. The game features the 1979 varsity against the BSU alumni, comprised mostly of former Broncos from the past three years.

Two good battles appear to be on tap as the competitive Peacock and Detroit's Players, which had a tough time beating Batters & Out, 9-8. The Peacocks defeated Arizona by one, 9-9. The Detroit's Players wallop on 21-16 victory. The Sig Islanders defeated AZ with a 22-10 victory. Towers PG did the same to Big and outspiked their opponents and captured the final # spot.

Intramural Report

All teams be sure to pick up schedules and rules so you know what day and time you all go into action.

Final results of volleyball were left out of the news accidentally so we'll set it straight now. Peggy's Puffers defeated Crazy Crawlers in a pin-off game and PG & & did the same to Big and Little Feet.

On the championship game between PG & & and Peggy's Puffers, PG & & outspiked their opponents and captured the final # spot.

Gymnastics Championships

Washington will have 33 trams, Oregon 17. There will be ten from Montana, nine from Hawaii, and one gymnast from Alaska.

Yuri Morderry of Seattle, WA is the highest qualifier in the meet, according to Coach Ed Zimmer. Morderry entered the competition with a 9.1 average. She represents Seattle Gymnastics, Incorporated. Morderry is a senior at boise State state gymnast, Jackie Carriere. Twelve-year-old Tracee Talavera of the Oregon Academy of Artistic Gymnastics in Eugene took top spot in this last year. Tracee was recently in Sports Illustrated's April 2, 1979 "Flies in the Crowd" edition as first place winner in the American Cup Gymnastics Meet in Madison Square Garden.

Preliminary events are set for 2:00 and 6:30 p.m. Thursday, April 12. Optional routines will be at 10:30 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. on Friday, April 13. Final Competition will begin at 7:30 Friday evening.

Admission for all preliminary events is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children. Finals competition tickets are $2.00 adult and $1.00 for children.

Brother Sun, Sister Moon

April 15th
HAPPY EASTER
8:00 pm
Special Events Center

Brother Sun, Sister Moon focuses on the early years of Francis of Assisi, the founder of the Roman Catholic order of Franciscans. He sought communion with the natural world by renouncing the riches of his family in order to seek his own destiny unencumbered by material possessions. Francis was, in a sense, history's first "drop-out"; he left a life of comfort to seek a spiritual union with the world—a philosophy which was then, as it is today, very hard to understand and accept. Brother Sun, Sister Moon is an uncommonly rewarding and meaningful film experience.

International Food, Song & Dance Festival
by Mary Lou Virgil

A little piece of the world came to BSU this last Friday night as the International Students of BSU presented their Second Annual Food, Song and Dance Festival. The night began with a taste of food from over 40 different countries. Everything from Siew Lun Chua from Malaysia to Khoroshte from Badengonewas available buffet style to a crowd that filled the SUB Ballroom. Things digested to a slow start with some people having to wait up to an hour and a half to reach the food tables. But the food made up for it all, as Rob Perez, ASBSU president, commented, “I don’t know what it is, but it’s good,” as he passed by from getting his second helping.

After a short welcome from Razmik Ranjbar of Iran, president of BSU’s International Students’ Club, the night’s entertainment got under way. Every act displayed a song or dance that was representative of some culture from one of the four corners of the globe. From the east came an Indonesian Welcome Dance by Tina Sulistyana, showing gracefulness and beauty that goes with many eastern cultures. The south brought to the audience an array of songs and dances including several Mexican hat dances and the song “Un Cantar de Amistad” from a group of students from South America. From the west came a selection of Greek Dances presented by five young ladies in sailor attire. And last but not least the north end of the globe was represented with a guitar/vocal duet by two U.S. citizens from BSU.

In between, before and during each act, the evening’s Master of Ceremonies, Dariush Safar-Fashandi of Iran, kept the audience entertained with his array of jokes and comments. As props were being moved around or being fixed, Safar kept everything going, tying it all together.

Safar candidly brought the entire evening all together with his opening comment that even though the International Food, Song, and Dance Festival was presented to put on a show, to let everyone know what his culture is like, that all there were brothers and sisters with a common goal...to someday receive a piece of paper stating she was a college graduate. Or as Safar said it: “During the past year many things have happened in this world...There have been peace and wars, revolutions and counter-revolutions, melt-downs and freeze-ups, but the most important event of the past year, folks, was that I graduated!”

Songwriter, Poet to Perform at Boise Gallery of Art

Songwriters Rosalie Sorrels and Terry Garthwaite and poet Bobbie Louise Hawkins will appear Wednesday, April 11, at the Boise Gallery of Art. The public is invited to the free performance, which will begin at 8 p.m.

The three women give their show a pleasing diversity,” according to the Boston Phoenix. Each, in her own way, tells stories, and not by assuming a role but by clearly projecting both the story line and her own personality. Allowing us to see both the mask and the face behind it, they make the stories as alive as they are—a small trick, but the mark of great story-tellers.”

The poetry series, in honor of the late Charles David Wright, poet and professor of English at Boise State, is funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts with contributions from the Boise Public Readings Consortium. Project director is Carol Mulhanny, BSU associate professor of English.

Andre' Kole: "World Traveling Illusionist"

People materializing, dematerializing, disintegrating, levitating—it’s a part of Andre’ Kole’s “World of Illusion,” an unusual magic show scheduled for April 16, at the BSU Gymnasium. Andre’ Kole, a world-traveling illusionist for more than a decade, attempts to accomplish (on stage) things that are impossible rather than what is possible.

As a usual feature of his show, Kole draws on his research as a psychic investigator to bring out the truth behind communication with the dead, transcendental psychic investigators, and considered Indian by the United States government, he was assisted by his daughter Robyn, who is one of the few female magicians of this era.

The number of years ago Kole was challenged to investigate the miracles of Jesus from the viewpoint of a professional illusionist. Discoveries he made during that investigation changed the entire course of his life. And since those discoveries with his audiences is also a part of this fast-paced production. Andre’ Kole is a special traveling representative for Campus Crusade for Christ International.

Special arrangements for Andre’ Kole’s appearance is sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ Boise State University. Tickets are $3.50 at the door. Advance tickets can be obtained at the BSU Info Booth for $3.00. Show time will be 7:00 p.m.

The Works Of Fritz Scholder Now On Exhibit

Fritz Scholder, an internationally known artist, is primarily known as a painter. His style combines elements of Abstract Expressionism, Surrealism, and Pop.

The figures of detailed greens, purples, and oranges are vibrantly balanced against solid, bright backgrounds. Typically, his Indian portraits portray his subjects in bizarre situations which depend a great deal on Baconian distortion—a part of what Scholder calls a new interpretation of the American Indian scene in painting "the Indian real, not real." But by painting the Indian in the real world, the artist has often been criticized by his own people who believe he hates the Indians to quick agree: "On the contrary, I see in the Indian content hopes of the country. Although I have painted what are regarded by the Indians to be ugly Indians, I have tried to paint the torture that it seems to be the Indians have had to go through."

The gallery hours are Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday and Saturday, 12 noon to 6 p.m.; closed Mondays. UA
