Church: Russians to Suffer
by Denise Minor

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan was the main topic addressed by Senator Frank Church yesterday at 10:30 when he spoke to Boise State students at the Special Events Center. Almost 400 attended the speech which was sponsored by the International Honors Society in Economics.

"I do not regard Afghanistan as a place for the United States to go to war with the Soviet Union," said Church, "it would be almost impossible for us to force the Russians out of Afghanistan, just as it would be impossible for the Soviet Union to force us out of Mexico, if we foolishly invited." Church does not think the aggression should be accepted without reprisal. He compared any appeasement of the Russians with the situation before World War II. "Appeasement if it does not mean we will not apologize. He compared the proposed multi-purpose pavilion proposed for construction later this year. "I'm looking forward to seeing the new facility," he said, referring to the proposed multi-purpose pavilion.

Students carry a sign in the Big Sky in 1977-78 and went on to win the Utah Prep minor league title.

Even though Idaho is a wheat exporting state, Church supports Carter's wheat embargo of the Soviet Union, as well as other sanctions such as the half of technological exchanges. He supports Carter in a boycott of the 1980 Olympics and hopes either major powers will follow suit. "The Soviet Union has invested $5 billion in the Olympics, according to Church, and they would have a hard time explaining to their citizens why most countries weren't showing up. "This may not mean the Soviet Union will pull out of Afghanistan, but it will mean they will pay a price they did not expect," said Church.

"and I hope these measures will halt the Russians from moving further." Congress would probably support Carter in a U.S. military intervention into the East Asia if a collective effort was made by many nations against Soviet aggression, said Church. "An 'informal NATO' would be the only means to stop Soviet expansionism in the Middle East," he said.

The United States could use primarily naval and air forces, but ground troops would have to be supplied by China, Pakistan, or other nations. Church added he does not believe we will go to war in East Asia, and believes the restraint shown by Carter is the only policy that will work.

Church said he prefers a voluntary army, and opposed the reinstatement of a peace-time draft and particularly the drafting of women.

During the question and answer period, Church said his ultimate goal is the restriction of "this mad nuclear arms race." "I hope your generation is not condemned to another cold war. I do not relish pressure to win in sharp contrast."

"Bus has been a very dedicated coach, effective the end of the season. Connor's seven-year-plus career at Boise State began in 1972, when then coach Murray Satterfield resigned in mid-season. Three years later, in the 1975-76 season, Connor coached a first-place Big Sky team that won the conference tournament and gained Connor the league's Coach of the Year award. A sophomore on that team was his son, Steve, who was picked as the outstanding guard in the Big Sky

Pressure's High
Head Coach Connor Resigns
by Bud Humphreys

Pressure, said Bus Connor, is the main reason he has resigned his post as Boise State University's head basketball coach, effective the end of the present season. "Every job has a certain amount of pressures and problems," he said. "But coaching a basketball team, you have to play the players on public display constantly."

Connor said the pressure to win, in a situation as adverse as this season has turned out, imposed not only his own affairs, but the development of the players as well.

Connor's seven-year-plus career at Boise State began in 1972, when then coach Murray Satterfield resigned in mid-season. Three years later, in the 1975-76 season, Connor coached a first-place Big Sky team that won the conference tournament and gained Connor the league's Coach of the Year award. A sophomore on that team was his son, Steve, who was picked as the outstanding guard in the Big Sky.

Organizations Help Veterans cope

by Dan Gallagher

Arbitrator Staff

There is a special group of people living in the United States today. They are the veterans of the armed forces. This is not to say veterans are any different than the average American. But it is a fact that veterans entering those of the Vietnam era, have experienced unique situations. There are a number of organizations in the Boise area designed to help the veteran receive his benefits and provide support for any number of problems that might arise.

Robert Garrecht is head of the Veteran's Affairs program on the Boise State campus. His office is located in the Student Advisory and Special Services, room 114 in the Administration Building. Garrecht started work at BSU in 1973, and is a Vietnam veteran. The Veteran's Affairs is funded by HEW and helps veterans and their dependent relatives receive their benefits. Garrecht points out the educational aspect of the program, also. Tutorial services and peer counseling are available for veterans.

One big concern that sets the Vietnam Vet from others in our country has entered into is the lack of funds available to the veteran said Garrecht. After World War 2, GI's were paid monthly salary to subsistence allowances, plus books and tuition in any university in the country. Today, with inflation, they are receiving less than the 1940's. Since 1966, 65-70 percent of the vets have used the GI bill toward an education, but only 35-40 percent have gained a degree, partly because of low funding.

Garrecht is involved in other veteran's groups in the country. One of them is the National Association of Concerned Veterans (NACV). In 1973, this group was forced to impound funds from the Nixon Administration for education. They have also brought the "Agent Orange" controversy into the open. "Agent Orange is wild stuff," said Garrecht. From 1965-1975, "Agent Orange (24-D-dioxin) was used to fiddle fate a third of Vietnam. Countless numbers of Americans and Vietnamese were exposed to it through air drops. All types of physical ailments are cropping up from its use, ranging from kidney failure to genetic problems. A special doctor was appointed to the Veterans Hospital for Agent Orange symptoms, but this is an exception rather than the rule in the U.S., according to Garrecht.

Peer counseling teams have been set up through the Veteran's Affairs. Delayed stress patterns similar to those in the Vietnam conflict, many soldiers felt a lack of identity and stability. They returned to a country ashamed of itself during the Vietnam War. Since 1968, 54,000 veterans of the war have died from violent deaths, suicides, or drug overdose. The median age in the war was 19.2, indicates Garrecht. Now experts are finding people in their late teens are undergoing serious questioning of identity and place in society. By melding these young adults into warriors, the armed forces created problems that are still present today. The Outreach Team try's to help the veteran (and his family) feel their experiences were not unique and the community is backing them. "You don't just fight a war and walk away from it," said Linda Stevens, "We're all here to help."

Activities Council Formed by Student Body Leaders

by Michelle Hartell

Associate Editor

Leaders of the Associated Students of Boise State University (ASBSU), Vice President Darrell Gustavson and Treasurer Vicki Childs are heading an Activities Council which will concern all BSU organizations.

The next meeting scheduled for February 15 will deal with information and organization on the formation of the new council. Vice President Gustavson sees the council as "A clearing house for information, tips and advice on how to become a more effective organization and how to become a more effective organization and how to become a more effective organization. For instance, it is budget time for student governments; if an organization wished to become a more effective organization, they can help."

The next meeting will be February 25, 3:00 p.m., Senate Chambers, located on the 3rd floor of the Student Union Building. Any member from any of the BSU organizations are encouraged to attend.

ASBSU is making it mandatory to belong to the Activities Council if an organization still wished to be recognized by ASBSU. Treasurer Vicki Childs said, "The Activities Council will promote communication and cooperation between all BSU organizations."

Childs hopes many organizations will be able to combine efforts and produce bigger and better campus student activities.

Mumee O'Keeffe, a BSU student, came up with the idea which had been a great benefit to her high school. ASBSU leaders hope this will be an effective devise here on the BSU campus.

What Do the Students Think of the Programs Board?

The Associated Students of Boise State University (ASBSU) constitution sets up the Student Programs Board to be responsible for social and cultural activities for all BSU students. Approximately 2% of your student fees go towards campus activities such as films, concerts, lectures and special events such as homecoming. In your opinion, how well does the Programs Board cover the varied interests on campus?

Mr. Tom Trusky of the English Department: "What happened to the Foreign films? They don't offer a complete series such as 3 or 4 a month."

Beth Somerton Young: "They satisfy my interest. This year they have had more films, more often. Concerts have been really good, if anything they could have more. It's really an improvement over past years."

Bob Stroud: "I think they could do a lot more, but sometimes they do a good job. Half of the time they don't show up for movies. I don't attend lectures due to poor advertising. If they advertised farther ahead of time it would be more effective."

Bev Nichols: "No I don't feel the Programs Board benefits all students. Movies should be different than those shown in the theaters. Lectures are great. Concerts could use more variety such as jazz. Publicity around school has not gotten to all students."

Scott Beaver: "I think the Programs Board covers most of the outside interests, maybe there could be more money put into music with some jazz groups or new rock groups. Films are covered really well."

Scott Beaver: "I think the Programs Board does a pretty good job. They cover a variety of interests."

Diane Fairchild: "As far as I know, activities are good. I commute and don't attend most activities because they are in the mornings. If they were rescheduled at other times I'd like to attend."

Linda Aim: "Things need to be better advertised. I live off campus and I don't find out about the activities because I'm not really active at school."

Michelle Hartell: "They satisfy my interest. This year they have had more films, more often. Concerts have been really good, if anything they could have more. It's really an improvement over past years."

Dane Fairchild: "They cover a variety of interests."

Critiquing the Critics

After nearly two months of publicly working toward establishing themselves on the BSU campus, Idaho Public Research Interest Group (PIRG) is meeting with what appears to be organized points in the same order; l.e., the method of funding for PIRG and student affairs? If it's truly because these people are concerned during the last few months continuing the proposed by the administration and pushed by the BAA to the tune of $5 million. There are no provisions for students to be refunded as much as one penny of this fee, yet no off-campus voice in opposition. It's a concern to be funded, what could it be? Perhaps students' financial affairs, could it be a screen to cover concern for another matter? Are students to be exploited to see the interests of others?

As earlier noted, a common thread of attack on Ralph Nader runs through all these attacks. The reason Nader is so attacked is because he is "openly anti." It is "harrasing" corporations and big business. The charges against Nader also include "lobbying" and "litigation" to provide "big government causes." Those charges are vague, saying nothing while inferring misbehavior, and are based on the concerns of business. The point lies in the basic American emotion by the use of vile language and foul terms. Enraged, he attacks political .action committees in 1977-78 spent $17.7 millions on lobbying (PACs) and $4 millions on "labor unions." The point to be made does not lie in the opposition to PIRG. Nor does the point lie in any opposition to Ralph Nader, nor in opposition to labor unions. The third identifying feature of the received anti-PIRG mail lies in the violent, accusing language. "An important secret to successful organizing is to make the point that, left to its own impulses, big business will do what's best for business. The charges against Nader also include "lobbying" and "all.

I Get Back Up

Editor, the Arbiter:

It was Jan. 30, 1980 at BSU. After the first class I was going to see my counselor, Margareta. We should meet on campus. But at the building I slipped and fell and hit my head. I came over to me, said, "Just take it easy you will be all-right." "I don't need a doctor but they didn't understand what I was trying to do." After a little while two boys came and picked me up. Each one arm, they lifted me to the hospital, put me on a bed and checked me, 11/0, 11/0. You are all right except for your head. I think we better put some ice over your head." While the nurse got some ice, I said to myself, "HELP!" Let me out of here. The nurse came back, she said, "the doctor needs to talk to your mom." "I am on my own. Can I go now?" She said yes, "I have to ask the doctor." And so, she came back in a minute and said, "OK you may go now." She helped me with everything, and I was on my way to the hospital.

It's sure no one of us at BSU to care about handicapped people. We are going to leave you to do this. It is not because I have to do it if I am well but I am going to get up again. I am going to tell you a little about myself. I've got Cerebral Palsy (if you don't know what that is, you should look it up in a dictionary). In love the Military services, they don't want me to join my hobbies. I also ride a three wheel motorcycle and a three wheel bicycle. I am living in our family, in Idaho. Nancy S.

Nuclear Power

Editor, the Arbiter:

The mention of Nuclear Power and its dangers is often heard through the public as the greatest catastrophe that could happen to the world. The fears, however, are not based on facts. Dr. Peter Beckman, is a Fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, a Nuclear Engineer Professional Engineer in Colo., now on campus at BSU, claims that in 1975, 34 of the country's foremost scientists, including 11 Nobel Prize winners, issued an appeal for nuclear power. The news media ignored it, saying that it was a wrong attack against nuclear power and its safety.

According to Dr. Beckman, "That in spite of the ferocious propaganda against nuclear power, the vastly superior method of waste disposal is one of the salient advantages of generating electricity from nuclear energy. If nuclear power were not SAFER than other power generation (which it is), it would not be used. If it were not more ECONOMIC (which it is), it would be used. If it were not more ECONOMIC (which it is NOT), it would be used. If it were not more ECONOMIC (which it is opposed because it is not more ECONOMIC which it is)."

Since the Navy has stated that $4.300 million is required for the Nuclear Power project in the next ten years, it is obvious that the disadvantages of nuclear power and the advantages of fossil fuel power are not too important.

More on PIRG

Editor, the Arbiter:

May I suggest all students look carefully at the upcoming Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) now on campus. It doesn't support the P.I.R.G. must go semester. Those who don't support the P.I.R.G. must go period. Obviously much more information should clear up many mistakes.

IRS on Campus?

Editor, the Arbiter:

An open letter to Mike Cramer.

Your interest in the PIRG petition has shown that you are interested in 51% of the students at BSU. But how will PIRG become an IRS? It seems like an impossible power multiple. There are a few students who signed a petition asking the B.S.U. school authorities to allow formation of this organization on campus. At least this amount such a thing could have cost a $3.00 fee per semester. There are those who don't believe that P.I.R.G. must go through a refund process at a special campus wide meeting this two period. Obviously much more money will be collected and kept even if they don't have any supporters.

At this point ask, why not a system whereby only those who were wished to be? When this was suggested at a state P.I.R.G. there are no provisions for students to be refunded. The majority funding would continue with only a small refund. Again power is multiplied, unless an overall majority among the P.I.R.G. is, it is unlikely that 50% of the students would actually turn up the trouble to get a refund. Thus majority funding would continue with only a small refund. Also note that if P.I.R.G. fails to set up this system they tax they fend up their tent and move out. Does this suggest confidence in winning and keeping free popular support?

I would not approve of any tactic that looks like it is or could be used to force the students to sign P.I.R.G. I think that any such activity goes beyond the objectives, use its own resources to collect its funds, and only collect them as freely given voluntary contributions.

Find Out!

Editor, The Arbiter:

By this time, nearly every student on campus has heard about the Idaho Public Interest Research Group, and the $3.00 per semester fee that will be charged, if and when the PIRG is established. Emotions run high on both sides, and students are hearing a few facts on the subject of the fee that should be brought to light.

$1.00 to pay off bonds for other buildings on campus, including the future Multi-Purpose Pavilion.
$5.00 to building operations and maintenance.
$30.00 to the university's general operating budget.
$8.00 to the Student Union Building and the dorms.
$3.00 to the health insurance fund.
$1.50 to pay for the newly-established Idaho Protection from Consumer Subterfuge.
$1.00 to the ASBSU student government, which has to resort to lobbying and litigation that promotes big government to promote big government causes.
$1.60 to the Idaho Public Interest Research Group, a brainchild of Ralph Nader. If 50% of the students sign the petition and the President and Board of Education can be persuaded to go along with it, they will have the most important aspect of PIRG accomplished. Let's see how this will work.

When you register for college, you will have to pay $3.00 extra through your activity fees. But you say, "I don't know anything about PIRG and if I did, I might not agree with them." The answer, of course, is because 50% of the students will have decided for you. How can you possibly object to that? And besides, if you are that much opposed to it, you can get your $3.00 back during the second and third week of the semester.

This sounds like a round-about way to do things. You might say, "Why not just have everybody who wants to join PIRG give them $3.00 voluntarily?" The answer to this is obvious: the money collected this way would be but a fraction of the collection with a mandatory "pay now and get your money back later" system because many students would either forget, neglect, or not care enough to get their money back. Seems like a kick of a way to collect funds for an organization, which claims as one of its goals the consumer protection from [cons just like this].

Ralph Nader, the father of PIRG groups and self-appointed protector of consumers, attacked book clubs for apparently similar practices, but there is one basic difference: if you join in the book club, you are there because you choose to be there -- it's not a democratic 50% that voted you there. Students in following semesters wouldn't even get the chance to vote! They will have no choice. This is what PIRG is proposing. The motivation of a group which has to resort to [subterfuge] to raise enough money does not instill confidence that their future action will be any more aboveboard.

In fact, PIRG groups, after hiring [outside professionals from Nader's National PIRG Job Clearinghouse,] have become a real menace. Their activities range from harassing businesses through [self-applotted] Consumer Subterfuge to lobbying and litigation that promotes big government (causes). Ralph Nader has said that his [plan is to hire (price the newly-established Idaho Protection from Consumer Subterfuge] full-time professionals, all available to act as citizens' organizers on projects of his choice. If you don't want to support but your activity fees, write to PIRG President John Keiser with your views. But if those students are so convinced they are doing the right thing and that PIRG is needed, let them at least compete for the funds on the open market with voluntary organizations without using trickery.

George Fiebing (Mr. Fiebing is not a student at BSU. He is self-employed as a gun stock maker in Boise)

Counterview

It's up to you to give Idaho PIRG a chance. A majority of BSU students must support PIRG on the petition before Idaho students can have an effective vehicle for off-campus student involvement. Traditionally, students don't have the resources to represent our own interests on public issues as effectively as private interests can. Idaho public interest research groups, after hiring [outside professionals from Nader's National PIRG Job Clearinghouse,] have become a real menace. Their activities range from harassing businesses through [self-applotted] Consumer Subterfuge to lobbying and litigation that promotes big government (causes). Ralph Nader has said that his [plan is to hire (price the newly-established Idaho Protection from Consumer Subterfuge] full-time professionals, all available to act as citizens' organizers on projects of his choice. If you don't want to support but your activity fees, write to PIRG President John Keiser with your views. But if those students are so convinced they are doing the right thing and that PIRG is needed, let them at least compete for the funds on the open market with voluntary organizations without using trickery.

In the course of our petitioning to get PIRG established, we've encountered many questions and concerns, and have tried to answer all of them or find out the answers we didn't know. Write BSU students too, and we started out with the same questions.

First, a Public Interest Research Group is run entirely by the students who fund it. We would elect a Board of Directors from among ourselves, just as student government is elected. We would pay less than the fee statement for PIRG, just as we pay less than the fee statement for PIRG. The differences are 1) that the fee statement for PIRG is refundable, 2) PIRG is self-sufficient, and 3) student government is concentrated on-campus, and PIRG is independent from the university itself.

The PIRG fee is set up democratically, with a majority of students on a petition, with an optional refund available to protect minority rights. The system is actually more democratic, since traditional democracy demands minority rights to the will of the majority. In this case, the $3 PIRG fee would be the fraction of all the fees on the ASBSU fee statement (in that it was the only one refundable on a no-delay basis). (The insurance fee requires a form to be filled out and then a several week wait, while the PIRG refund would require only a student's signature and be dispensed on the spot by PIRG from an on-campus office during the second and third weeks of the semester.)

If you've seen flyers that claim to be from "The Silent 49%," ask yourself if you're really part of that group. Don't let someone else make your decision for you, but do talk to a responsible person.

A Closer Look at PIRG: Viewpoint

At this moment, a group of students on the BSU campus are collecting signatures for a program to fund the Student Public Interest Research Group, a branch of Ralph Nader. If 50% of the students sign the petition and the President and Board of Education can be persuaded to go along with it, they will have the most important aspect of PIRG accomplished. Let's see how this will work.

When you register for college, you will have to pay $3.00 extra through your activity fees. But you say, "I don't know anything about PIRG and if I did, I might not agree with them?" The answer, of course, is because 50% of the students will have decided for you. How can you possibly object to that? And besides, if you are that much opposed to it, you can get your $3.00 back during the second and third week of the semester.

This sounds like a round-about way to do things. You might say, "Why not just have everybody who wants to join PIRG give them $3.00 voluntarily?" The answer to this is obvious: the money collected this way would be but a fraction of the collection with a mandatory "pay now and get your money back later" system because many students would either forget, neglect, or not care enough to get their money back. Seems like a kick of a way to collect funds for an organization, which claims as one of its goals the consumer protection from [cons just like this].

Ralph Nader, the father of PIRG groups and self-appointed protector of consumers, attacked book clubs for apparently similar practices, but there is one basic difference: if you join in the book club, you are there because you choose to be there -- it's not a democratic 50% that voted you there. Students in following semesters wouldn't even get the chance to vote! They will have no choice. This is what PIRG is proposing. The motivation of a group which has to resort to [subterfuge] to raise enough money does not instill confidence that their future action will be any more aboveboard.

In fact, PIRG groups, after hiring [outside professionals from Nader's National PIRG Job Clearinghouse,] have become a real menace. Their activities range from harassing businesses through [self-applotted] Consumer Subterfuge to lobbying and litigation that promotes big government (causes). Ralph Nader has said that his [plan is to hire (price the newly-established Idaho Protection from Consumer Subterfuge] full-time professionals, all available to act as citizens' organizers on projects of his choice. BSU-The Idaho Public Interest Research Group (Idaho PIRG) has been gathering signatures for their petitions since the beginning of February. Recent letters to BSU President John Keiser, AGBSU President Mike Cramer, and Asbber Editor Sally Thomas have asked students to sign statements in opposition to the creation of Idaho PIRG.

The basic charges against Idaho PIRG are that: It pressures people to pay $3.00 per semester (through a negative check-off system); it forces people who do not wish to support PIRG to go through some means of getting their money back; and it is a front for Ralph Nader. The letters suggest that students be allowed to voluntarily support Idaho PIRG instead of being forced into participation in a negative check-off fee system. The letters were largely from non-students. One author who is a full-time student could not be reached for comment.

In trying to ascertain student thoughts on the whole thing, this reporter asked some full-time students for their views on PIRG.

Ram Edwards is a 31 year old junior with a business major. Her first reaction when asked how she felt about PIRG was, "$3.00 to PIRG is better than $420.00 to the position."

She stated that she gave PIRG $3.00 voluntarily. She has heard the posters around campus but still questions what Idaho PIRG will do.

"I'm still bothered that they don't state any goals. Couldn't PIRG at least state some problems that might be pursuits to give students a clearer picture of what PIRG would try to do?"

Martin Aris is a 24 year old sophomore, also a business major. When asked why he opposed Idaho PIRG, he stated that he basically opposed student costs going up. He felt that the way PIRG is trying to achieve financial means is very coercive.

Although Arts knew he could regain his $3.00 fee increment, he felt the time factor involved for him to do so, would be unjust to him. He further noted that, in comparison to the advertising barrage across the campus, not enough information was readily available.

He also stated that PIRG hasn't adequately stated their goals, and that their goals should be fairly specific before asking for money. If PIRG would use voluntary methods of gaining financial support instead of coercion he would be more interested in PIRG. His final comment was, "I'm not convinced that the "good" produced by PIRG will benefit the students of BSU or the Boise community."

In-state Tuition
The Ongoing Nightmare

by Tertie H. Roslew Associate Editor

Boise-The in-state tuition bill failed in the legislature again but what about next term? Across the nation other colleges and universities pay in-state tuition. Tuition ranges from $200 to $500 per semester or quarter depending upon the state. What this means is that above and beyond your tuition fees and your books, that you will pay even more money.

Student leader, "En Masse" at the statehouse last week to show their opposition to the bill. Fortunately it was vetoed down.

BSU President John Keiser believes that the universities in the state of Idaho and therefore the state, are not students should bear the bulk of costs. He also stated that imposing in-state tuition would need to be done lower enrollment.

AGBSU President Mike Cramer found any discussion of tuition premature. He stated that Idaho cannot afford well run universities in every region. Idaho needs to expand existing programs instead of expanding new programs to other schools.

Cramer would encourage the administrations of the colleges and universities as well as the legislature to look at the idea of consolidating and reinforcing before looking at in-state tuition. The current State Board of Education have not formally stated whether the state will hold in-state tuition but Climp Hoopes, president of the board stated he was opposed to the idea.

President Hoopes took a poll of the board members and found that six members oppose the proposal on the grounds that the state is benefitting from higher education and should therefore bear the bulk of the costs.

Two members favored the proposal because they felt that public education needed funding more result, public bonds are not competitive.

Although administrations and obviously a majority of legislators, are opposed to the imposition of in-state tuition this does not mean this issue will end. In fact if history repeats itself, it could appear in the next legislative session.

Community Health Center Is Available

Chris Kamovski

On a national average one of every ten people need assistance in coping with the everyday pressures that result from living within the family and the community itself, according to literature available at the Children’s Mental Health Center.

This means eight-thousand people in Idaho could benefit from therapy. Some of these pressures come from responsibilities of family, job or interacting with other people. The Boise Community Health Center has many programs of assistance available.

While waiting for an interview with Dr. Francis Kirk, the Child Clinical Psychologist, I sank into an easy chair. I unleashed my anxiety on this person who easily weighs eight pounds, the six-foot extension cord crammed in my back pocket was sat on until I got home. It must have appeared that I was loaded for bear or going to stay overnight.

“Your Community Health Center and You”

1. Do you often wake up and just can’t face the day?
2. Do you often feel that you’re going to blow up if one more person asks you to do something?
3. Do you often feel sick, but your doctor says there is nothing wrong?

“If you answered ‘yes’ to one or more of these questions, you may be feeling depressed or just not coping well with daily stresses. With all of the pressures of everyday living, many people may find that there are times when talking with a mental health worker can be of some help.”

Dr. Kirk is one of only two child clinical psychologists in Idaho and is the director of the Center.

He said that twenty-five staff members administer to the needs of eight-hundred and sixty people.

with approximately twelve new clients being added a week. There are Individual and Group therapies for both children and adults of all ages.

Sexual abuse and child abuse programs are also offered as well as help for hyperkinetic children and juvenile delinquents. Alcoholism and drug abuse are also dealt with at the Health Center or "referred to other help centers specifically designed to deal with these problems."

"The whole family is treated at our center, rather than just the pathology of the patient," said Kirk. "Problems with individuals arise when tension or pressure from another source cannot be coped with. The problems are the symptom rather than the cause.

By working with the whole family, we can often get at the root of the problem rather than treating the symptoms," he said.

Parent Effectiveness Training (PET) is also offered as well as marital therapy. Sexual impotence between married couples is treated with well proven methods such as those practiced by Masters and Johnson.

Where do all the eight-hundred and sixty clients come from? According to Kirk, twenty-five percent are referrals from other agencies such as Child Protection; twenty-five percent are referred from professionals such as psychologists and psychiatrists; twenty-five percent come from the schools (public, private) themselves. We don't have a contract for the schools but they (patients) are sent here after counselors and juvenile officers can no longer help. Often a parent wants their child retested to be sure there is the problem.

"And twenty-five percent are sent here by word of mouth," he said. People hear about the Community Health Center and the good results that come from seeking help. This is a stigmatized area for a lot of people, according to Kirk. They think just because the center is a part of the Department of Health and Welfare only people on Welfare are eligible.

"It's not true that only people that seek our services are on welfare. We have regular clients that play thirty dollars an hour. All fees are pre-rated on a sliding scale from two dollars to thirty dollars an hour, depending upon the number of dependents and family income. However, NO ONE is turned away."

This last bit of information was encouraging and I almost started blurt out my addiction. Maybe a therapist could be helpful to explain my coffee addiction, food binges and late sleeping as the methods I use to deal with everyday responsibilities, I stifled my impulse.

If the center received more financing, Kirk said, "T'd hire more therapists and staff. We are losing three or four people this year (not as a result of the one percent); with an increase of twelve clients a week, we need more therapists."

Kirk added, "We need a larger play area for the children; every now and then we go over to West Jt. High and use their facilities, but this isn't very convenient. I'd also have a follow-up study that would keep track of the clients in their own neighborhoods. This would foster better relations (clients) to get in touch with us than to have to drive across town; we'd maintain closer contact.

The Children's Mental Health Center is located at 800 N. Curtis Road."

Bronco Women Face Alaska Team

The University of Alaska is an independent member of the Northwest Women's Basketball league and holds a 4-13 overall record. The Seawolves are led by 5'10 junior forward, Eva Robinson, who is averaging 17.3 points per game, and 5'7 senior guard, Nancy Stassek.

"Alaska has a new coach and has added some fine players to the squad. They should be a main improved team ever last year," said BSU coach Connie Thomson. "There is doubt we can win both nights, especially if we can continue to play as we did this weekend against the University of Montana.

The Broncos upset the strong University of Montana on Saturday evening, 58-54. Earlier in the season at Missoula, the Broncos had lost badly to Montana, 75-52. In this second meeting the Broncos played a tighter defensive game, even though Montana's Jill Gravdal scored 30 points. "We did a much better job defensively in this game than in the first. We forced more turnovers and did a fine job of turning those mistakes into points at the other end," added Thomson.

Even at six at half-time and by nine in the second half, the Broncos rallied to take the lead with three minutes left in the game. Clutch shooting by BSU junior center Nancy Phillips and sophomore center Kara Miller kept the Broncos on top.

Leading scorers for the Broncos were Meier, with 14, and Ruth Fugleberg, with 13. Fugleberg had drawn the tough defensive assignment of Jill Greer and fouled out with five minutes still on the clock.

Leading rebounders were Meier, with 10, and Greerfield with 13. "Our players played with as much confidence and poise as they all year. We have not been a strong second half team. This game, however, we were able to force the mistake and make the big play," said Thomson.

On Friday evening, BSU dropped a game to the Bobcats of Montana State, 73-68. Leading scorers for Montana State have with Meier and 17 and a freshman guard, Kim Wagoner with 15. The game's leading scorer was MJSU's Merica Topp with 20.

BSU Roundballers Still in League Race

Boise State's men's basketball team still has an "outside chance" at the Big Sky Conference title, according to coach Ron Runn, even though they must win all four games to gain a 500 season and a chance for a playoff berth. This weekend, the Broncos travel to play the Montana teams, MJSU on Friday and Montana on Saturday.

Last Saturday, even coach Bus Connor's public statement of resignation couldn't fire up the Broncos enough to overcome the University of Idaho in the BSU gym, as the Vandals outlasted BSU 81-69.

In the Big Sky Conference, BSU is 4-4 at home, 5-5 in away games, and overall, 9-13. With two games against Oregon State and one against Washington, the Broncos have a 0.800 mark, even though they must win all four games to gain a 500 season and a chance for a playoff berth. This weekend, the Broncos travel to play the Montana teams, MJSU on Friday and Montana on Saturday.

With four players over 6-6, the Montana Grizzlies also have a share of rebounding power, though more balanced. Center John Strode, 6-10, forward Gary Isenberg, 6-9, forward Rod Brandon and guard Craig Zanon all average over 4 rebounds a contest.

Zanon leads scorers with 15.5 ppg, followed by Isenberg and 6-1 forward Shane Stobert, at 14.5. Guard Blair Taylor, who average around 11, Montana's 6'9 center Nancy Phillips and 6-6 forward are the scoring leaders for the squad. They should be a main improved team over last year.

One area in which the Broncos showed new strength, which will be needed this week, is rebounding. At the Idaho contest, 6-10 forward Larry McFarley pulled down several offensive boards and made or set up baskets from them, especially late in the first half.

McFarley and 6-9 center Dave Richardson, both over 6-3, are fighting it out with Hasbrouck and Northern Arizona's Matt Swenson for the conference rebounding title.

Rodger Bates continues his hot shooting at the guard position, nailing 10 of 15 shots from the field, including 6-of-10 for 30 points. The shooting percentage is the highest in the Big Sky Conference.

Ruth Fugleberg and forward will be key players in the game against the Grizzlies. Fugleberg has scored 30 points in both games against the Grizzlies this season, and has been consistent on the boards, with a 4.9 season average. Both games start at 8 p.m., and will be broadcast on KBOI Radio, 670 AM.

Ruth Fugleberg and forward will be key players in the game against the Grizzlies. Idaho Will Make Playoffs

by Jerry Richards

Arbiter Staff

Two weeks out, the Big Sky looks as if the rest of the league's long-standing wish to keep all Idaho State in the playoffs will definitely not be fulfilled. The Montana schools, one of which Idaho ought to beat to this weekend, and the flash in the pan due to Northern Arizona and Nevada-Reno are all that stand between U of I and a second place finish in the conference.

Virtue is up the columnists, after having witnessed Bert Vanden’s cllestly showing at Boise last Saturday, in the Senior Athlete Invitational Tourney both would not be out of line. But, Eastern-chautists as they are, the NIT directors have stated a policy against entering any second-place Big Sky team. So you, the NIT fan, can again look forward to watching some lackluster assemblage of New England schools, each of whom has been beaten twice by John St., unless I miss my guess.

But I grow sour grapes. At any rate, Weber is on a baseline, still, for the outright Big Sky championship, and look to be the first intermountain team since the 1977 Idaho to gain a really strong shot at the Final Four. The amazing thing is, though Bruce Collins is constantly red-hot, and the entire Weber team is revved nationally in floor shooting, rebounding and winning margin, the wings starter is too far above the others in those areas. That’s teamwork.

Elsewhere, if Boise State wins all of their games, they should have the playoffs if Idaho makes the playoffs.

BSU Team Travels

School Records Tumble

(7S71, The Boise State University indoor track team heads for the Idaho State Minidome this weekend. The team is going in the annual Simplot Games. Friday and Saturday, Feb. 15-16. This will be BSU’s third attempt at this meet in the Minidome this winter.

The BSU men’s indoor record book was broken on the way out of Salt Lake City on Friday. It will be the second weekend that Track Coach Ed Jacoby termed the “best team performance” we have had indoors or outdoors in two years.”

The Broncos competed in the non-scored Mark Herndon Invitational in Logan, UT at Utah State University.

BSU was led by several outstanding performances, including Kenrich Camerout’s school record and best ever time of 4.27 in the 400 meters. Camerout won the event and anchored the mile relay team with a 4.58 split. BSU was third in the mile with a 3:19.37 clocking. Idaho State won the event in 3:18.10 while Weber State was second in 3:19.35.

BSU’s time was more than two seconds better than the school record and best of the winter.

All of Boise State ran an outstanding 8:32.3 in the 3,000 meters, placing second in the race and best indoor time was 8:32.85. Steffens set a school record and personal best.

Mervin Reid, running very well, won the 55 meters in 6.32. Dave Bradburn was third in the 60 meters in 6.4 clocking.

Several other events, BSU’s Carl Pollard won the long jump with an effort of 23-3½, his second best jump ever and his best indoor mark. Bill Bailey set a personal best in the shotput with a toss of 51-1, placing him second to Montana State’s Lance Odom.

In the 1,500 meters, Howard Conley of Boise State was second in 4:36.37.

Gary Little finished fourth in the 55 meter high hurdles with a 7.8 clocking, his personal best.

“I was really pleased with our performance,” Jacoby said. “We had a personal bests from Bill Bradburn in the shotput, Gary Little in the high hurdles, Carl Pollard in the long jump (indoors), and Randy Heidenreich in the pole vault. Kenrich Camerout had a really furmance effort in the 400 meters as did Dave Steffens in the 3,000 meters. Mervin Reid ran extremely well and the mile relay team had a personal best, so overall, I’m very satisfied with this performance.”

Jacoby added. “It’s good to see our team coming along so well.”

Year in, year out, it seems the public appeal for horror flicks never flags. And, realizing that people will go to just about any movie that creates an aura of fear (or attempts to), the makers of Halloween bring you another chiller-thriller, The Fog. However, this John Carpenter film about a band of reanimated pirates who terrorize a small Californian coastal community via their open fog tank lacks some of the necessary ingredients vital to a suspenseful horror picture; namely, a tight plot and unpredictability. But it doesn't really matter because for all their aimless wandering (or is it drifting? they know they're going to get someone, regardless. Knock knock, who's there?

Barbara Jonet ( ** )
This week I had the pleasure of viewing The Fog with two other reviewers (guess who?), and judging from their reactions, one might think it was the scariest movie since The Exorcist. While one on my right was rocking back and forth in a fetal position ("I always sit that way during movies,") he often had his hands covering his eyes. And you trust them to review your movies?

The Fog bears a strong resemblance to a number of movies, in particular jaws, including obnoxious music that attempts to grab the viewer more than the movie itself. Once again we find a small coastal town, this time in California, whose existence is threatened not by the horrid man- lack, killer cars, or tidal waves, but by FOG and wait the fog brings: knock, knock, knock, "Teleman." And the acting is mediocre to poor; Adrienne Barbeau disguises herself by playing a disc jockey with the biggest mouth west of the Mississippi. Hal Holbrook makes his appearance as a priest who partakes; and so for the others, they will remain nameless. Definitely not a movie worth admission or the drive.

Boyes' remorse is a disease you can't afford. It comes when you buy life insurance and life insurance and life insurance services are all about - just so long as it pays off, not just when you own it, but also when you buy it. Whether you are in the market for life insurance or not, it will pay his hands to get acquainted with a Northwestern Mutual Agent.
