79-80 ASBSU

Active Term Ends

by Michelle Hartell
Associate Editor

BSU—April 16 marked the end of the 1979-80 terms for Associated Students of Boise State University (ASBSU) president, vice-president, treasurer and senate. The Senate is the policy making body for the ASBSU which officially recognizes campus organization making organizations eligible for ASBSU funds and the Senate has legislative authority over all ASBSU funds.

In the Senate, for their term, many organizations were given funds for attending conferences, putting on special events and bringing speakers to campus. In legislation enacted by the senate, no new issues developed but revision and reorganization of the ASBSU Constitution and Senate Acts resulted from senate committee work and grievances brought to the senate by students and administration.

Reorganization, affecting the Student Programs Board was enacted, allowing the services of the Public Relations Department to be available to the Student Programs Board and the organizations and clubs recognized by ASBSU. Changes in election procedure which seek to create continuity by having staggered Senate elections, was another act completed by the 1979-80 Senate.

Mary Lou Virgil and David Huntington, both Arts and Science Senators, felt that the everyday duties and responsibilities of attending committee meetings, making office hours and dealing with the distribution of the student fees placed in the hands of the senate were important accomplishments for the year.

An average committee schedule for the Senate includes three or

Keiser Rejects Senate Proposals

by Wilma M. Woods

BSU—Several documents were returned to the Faculty Senate, unsigned, by Boise State University's President John Keiser. The proposals that were rejected include policies dealing with student program changes, faculty salary distribution, advising responsibilities, tenure committees, and legal counsel for faculty involved in disciplinary proceedings.

A proposal, originating in the Faculty Senate Matriculation Committee, recommended that late registration be within a period of five class days. Registration by petition and faculty consent would be allowed five additional days.

Keiser rejected this policy because he believed that the late registration period should be reduced gradually. He also stated that this matter should be determined annually by the Calendar Committee.

However, the Faculty Senate members felt this was a concern of the Senate. The chairperson of the Matriculation Committee was directed to meet with Keiser to make clarifications concerning the Senate's involvement with late registration policies.

Also, a proposal dealing with salary distribution was returned unsigned by the university president. Keiser said that although he accepts certain recommendations, he could not endorse it because he wished to have a meeting of representatives to present and discuss salary distribution proposals before a final decision was made. The proposal advanced by the Faculty Senate intended monies to be distributed on a percentage basis on a base salary of $20,000 after funds for promotions were withheld.

For salaries above that base, one half of the percentage amount would be applied to the first $20,000. Money allocated for merit would be used for promotions, merit and certain inequities in departments.

In another letter of rejection, Keiser wrote that he would prefer to keep the advising responsibilities such as holding current information on job markets, internships, program opportunities, etc. for their advisees. A provision stating that faculty members should encourage their students to visit at least once a semester to discuss their programs or problems was also eliminated.

Keiser would not accept this

New President Gives Goals

by Gunnar Anderson
Arbiter Staff

BSU—Newly elected Associate Student Body President Sally Thomas has announced that her administration will work through the summer, to help implement her governments programs. With the summer session she hopes to organize a strong student government.

"We can be effective in promoting our welfare and the welfare of others as a whole if we organize our thoughts and goals and work together strongly for the next 12 months, summer included, to implement our ideas," Thomas said in a Presidential address.

"My end goal is for an increased student participation and awareness and a strong student voice on campus," she added.

Thomas would like to see students become involved in the governing process, to make institutions at the Boise State University campus more responsive to students.

"Whatever means it takes to accomplish as much as I can of that end, I'm willing to explore," Thomas said.

A 41 year old senior from Buhl, Idaho, Thomas suggested ways of accomplishing her goals and student involvement in an attempt to quell voter apathy which appears plague this campus.

Students Present Foreign Culture

The International Student Association of Boise State University is presenting the Third Annual Feed, Song and Dance Festival on Friday, April 25th at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

"This will be a great opportunity to share the rich cultures of the world represented by students at Boise State and to enjoy their natural foods," said Sheryl Donaldson, President of the International Student Association, "and also to meet the students."

Food from over 32 different countries will be served such as stuffed grapes from Armenia, Rataouille (a vegetable casserole) from France, Lasagne from Italy and others. Some Japanese students will demonstrate the Japanese cooking art of making Yakitori (teriyaki chicken and mushrooms).

"A lot of people aren't aware of how many foreign students go to Boise State," said Donaldson, "Many of them will be dressed in their traditional costumes, it will be very colorful." Donaldson said there are 106 foreign students at Boise State and 50 more born here of foreign parents.

Once Dinner is completed, the entertainment will begin, featuring performances from around the world. Juju, a dance from Ghana, La Bamba from Mexico, Papio, a Samoan/Tahitan dance, an Indian folk dance and a karate demonstration are examples of the program.

According to Donaldson, the festival is "student created, student executed, and student produced." If the festival makes any money it will be used for a scholarship fund for foreign students.

Last year 550 people attended, said Donaldson, and it was too difficult to cater to all of them. This year the association is only selling 350 tickets, 150 of which go to the community.

Tickets are $3.00 for full-time BSU students and 7.50 for non-students and are available from the Foreign Student Advising Office in Room 105 of the Administration Building or call 385-1757.

Engineer Shortage Hits BSU

by Terrie H. Rowley
Associate Editor

BSU-Campus Engineering departments all over the U.S. are experiencing high turnover rate among faculty members. Boise State University is not an exception.

According to Don Parks of the BSU Engineering Department, the BSU staff is shorthanded. BSU has not been able to offer an attractive enough salary to interest a professor of Electrical Engineering. "A B.A. in engineering starts out in the field with higher pay than an M.A. or Doctorate would receive teaching," said Parks.

According to Norm Dahn, another faculty member, there are still quality teachers though, "people who are teaching engineering courses really like to teach."

"Students aren't having problems finding gainful employment in the engineering field...starting salaries are between $1800-1900 a month," Dahn added.

Presently there are roughly 140 students enrolled into the engineering courses at BSU.

Boise State University teaches freshman, sophomore and junior courses in engineering. This can put a student within two or three semesters of graduation. A student presently must finish at another school.

Keiser

Keiser sent back to the Faculty Senate their recommendations on Policy 5357-B regarding tenure committees and their duties and composition. Keiser said he would approve the policy if certain changes were made.

The president did not agree that the status of students on the committee should be changed from one of voting to non-voting. He noted that the State Board of Education wants "equitable student representation." Keiser stated belief that the Senators misconstrued the meaning of "equitable." He urged that the matter be discussed and agreed upon by the Student Senate.

To make the tenure policy acceptable to him, Keiser suggested that if a department has fewer tenure positions available than faculty recommended by the Tenure Committee and the Dean of the School, that the department should recommend which faculty should be awarded tenure and/or placed on continuing appointment. An amendment to that effect was introduced in the Senate and passed, however further discussion or action on this rejected proposal was tabled.

In the last in a series of unsigned documents returned to the Senate, Keiser objected to legal counsel for faculty members where disciplinary proceedings were instigated under BSU regulations.

Keiser believed that every effort should be made to keep on-campus hearing separate from civil action. He wrote "to bring lawyers into campus disciplinary hearings, elevates the problem and extends it in improper fashion." However, Keiser made it clear that if the circumstances "dictated" the need for counsel, he would see that legal aid was provided, although he indicated his hopes that it would be a "rare" occasion that this did happen.

Fund Raising Drive Successful

by Terrie H. Rowley
Associate Editor

BSU--The Bronco Athletic Association pledged 5 million dollars to the Pavilion Project in Fall 1978. To date no dollar amount is available that indicates how much they have raised but Jim Faucher, Executive Director of the BAA is more than optimistic.

Faucher described the drive as, "low key but direct." Faucher, also attributed the drive's success to the strong community support of the BSU athletics.

The money is being raised by outright gifts from contributors and through BAA Lifetime Memberships. It costs 25,000 to 50,000 dollars per membership and the BAA seating in the Pavilion will be located on the Mezzanine. According to Faucher, the seats aren't considered prime seating, but do provide an excellent view of events.

According to Faucher, lifetime memberships entitle the member to lifetime use (20 years for business memberships) of any combination of University Club, Presidents' Club and/or Pavilion seats.

Lifetime members are also entitled to exclusive use of their

Writers Set Finale for Wright Series

Two nationally known writers, young adult novelist Lois Lowry and fiction writer-essayist Tillie Olsen will complete the 1979-80 Charles David Wright Series with April readings and lectures in Boise.

Lowry is the author of "A Summer to Die," chosen for the 1978 Reading Association international children's book award and as best book of 1977 by School Library Journal. Her second novel, "Find a Stranger, Say Goodbye," the story of an adopted girl's search for her true parents, was published in 1978.

She will give a talk on writing literature for adolescents April 23 at the Boise Gallery of Art at 8 p.m. as part of the gallery's Wednesday night program series. The lecture will be free to the public.

Olsen will read from her works seats for all events.

Lifetime memberships are transferable subject to approval of the BAA Board of Directors.

These memberships entitle the holder to receive first priority for additional seats and season tickets. Members will have use of all Pavilion exercise facilities, special reserved parking privileges, a special plaque and program recognition.

Monday, April 28, in the Lookout Room of the SUB at 8 p.m. April 29, she will address the annual meeting of the YWCA at noon. A soup and salad luncheon will be available to the public, and brown baggers will also be welcome.

A recipient of the literary award of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, Olsen is the author of "Tell Me a Riddle," a widely acclaimed collection of short fiction. "Tell Me a Riddle," has also been performed dramatically on numerous college campuses.

Olsen's essay "Silences," originally a talk given at the Radcliffe Institute in 1962 and reprinted in Harpers in 1975, is widely used in courses in literature, writing, and women's studies.

Dr. Carol Martin of the BSU English Department coordinates the Wright series which is in honor of the late Charles David Wright, poet and former professor of English at BSU. The series is funded by a 1979-80 grant of $5,000 from the National Endowment for the Arts and by contributions from Boise Cascade Corporation, the Boise Gallery of Art, The Book Shop, and the Boise Independent School District. It is sponsored by the Boise Public Readings Consortium.

Cutbacks Expected

Campus Digest News Service

Many graduate schools will receive no new awards next year from a federally-financed fellowship program for women and minority students.

The cutback is expected to hit Mexican-American applicants in the West and Southwest particularly hard.

The number of new fellowships nationwide probably will drop from 500 this year to 211 next year because Congress has not increased appropriations for the Graduate Profession Opportunities Program.

So far this program, now in its second year, has provided about 800 fellowships to 108 schools. The annual awards total $3,900 per student, with matching sums to the school.

Unofficially the schools to be turned down next year include Stanford, Harvard, MIT, the University of California at Berkeley, Los Angeles and Santa Cruz and the Claremont Graduate School.

California, which received 33 awards this year, expects only two in 1980-81. Oregon, Nevada, Texas, Arizona and Colorado will get no new awards at all.

President Carter had asked Congress for an increase of $7 million in appropriations for 1980-81. Congress decided on only a $850,000 increase from the previous year's level of $8 million. Carter's fiscal 1981 budget asks Congress to appropriate $13 for 1981-82.

four committees averaging to about 11 and one-half hours a week spent in work for various types of problems. At one time, Senator Beth S. Young, Arts and Science Senator, kept track of her hours and found that the $75 a month in service awards came to about a $1.60 an hour.

The four standing committees deal with Academic Affairs, Student Affairs, Ways and Means, and Legislative Review. Most of the Senate's work was accomplished by these committees and included such things as revising the Recreation Board so that recreation organizations such as Judo Club, Rodeo Club and Bowling Club may be funded for their major events of competition. Other committees accomplishments included dealing with campus bike traffic problems, parking problems for cars on campus and double doors that created difficulties for the handicapped.

Not all projects the 1979-80 Senate set out to do were accomplished. Senator Young hopes that the Senate Outreach project can be reconstructed. Project Outreach was designed to make student government more visible to the students by setting up office hours and desks at various areas in the academic buildings.

Belinda Davis, Arts and Science Senator, hopes her project will be carried out by an incoming senator. Davis started plans for putting left-handed seats in the Science Education lecture halls.

Bev Nichol, Health Science Senator, who has been reelected, is anxious to see that the student recommendation for the Pavilion Board of Governors be approved by University President John Keiser.

The Senate is responsible for distributing about $206,000 of student fees. Senator Nichol said, "Before I became a Senator, I had no idea of how much money was in the hands of the student senate. The responsibility for its management towards the students' interest is my main job."

When the Senators were asked about the influence the senate is able to provide and whether they need more, less or had the right amount of "power" from the administration to do their job. The majority of the senators agreed that they had the right amount of power.

Debbie Brooks, Education Senator said, "The Senate is not as beneficial as it could be. There is great potential in the system, but the senate does not live up to it. We need more communication with the students and other students leaders on campus."

Senator Nichol said, "The Senate is extremely beneficial to those students who use it and is useless to those who ignore it."

ASBSU Vice President Darrell (Gus) Gustavson, chairman of the Senate, summed it up at the last senate saying, "We could have done better, but we could have done worse."

Public to Discuss ADC

Boise—A public meeting will be held at the YWCA on Wed., April 30 at 7 pm to discuss possible actions that can be taken by Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) recipients and their supporters to meet the impending reduction of public assistance monies and food stamps by state and federal agencies.

The meeting is being sponsored by the Alliance for Dependent Children's Rights, a newly-formed welfare rights group.

The purpose of the Alliance is to insure that Idaho's 14,000 children dependent on public assistance and food stamps receive adequate food, shelter, and medical services to give them the same chance as other children to develop into healthy, productive adults.

Unless action is taken at the special session of the legislature in May and it appropriates $1.5 million, the average ADC grant of $256 per mother and child will be cut to about $75—or, perhaps, to nothing at all—a month for food, shelter and utilities.

For more information call: Linda Lou Arcadia at 342-0658, or call 343-1791.

ASBSU Presidential Goals

In her presidential address, Thomas outlined such proposed programs as the student budget, student internships on campus, the pavilion and the Idaho Public Interest Research Group (PIRG), plus many other proposed programs as being important issues on campus.

The projected $200,000 ASBSU budget is one area in which Thomas has proposed that she, as president, sit on the Financial Advisory Board (FAB) in the spring.

"Since the ASB President is charged with presenting the budget to the Senate, why not increase the membership on the FAB in the Spring to include the ASB President for the purpose of hearing budget presentations," Thomas said.

The President would then present the budget to the Senate, a two step process instead of the current five, according to Thomas.

She also raised questions about faculty relationships with students and student internships, in an attempt to better understand the positions of the faculty and students from each point of view. Thomas suggested that a joint ASBSU/Faculty Senate caucus, where students and faculty can exchange ideas and make recommendations to their constituents."

Students internships also would be a program where students receive a better understanding of the university upper division BSU students would participate in the proposed program to get first hand knowledge of administrative jobs benefitting the university in two ways; first, the student would learn how administrative jobs were performed and second, to increase interaction between students and administration, according to Thomas.

The English major also has opinions on the multi-purpose pavilion that's to be completed in January of 1982.

"I think Janet Hayes summed it up pretty well when she said that Boise State University needs this structure, and it will not get less expensive as time goes on and even though students are perhaps paying a disproportionate share of the construction of the university because of the nature of the university and its quickness in growing, students will continue to pay a disproportionate share of the building cost, therefore, the Board of Education directed that the pavilion be built," said Thomas.

Thomas would also like to see a strong programs board that will deal with pavilion programs.

Also, Thomas charges that "students are not being given the kind of direct recognition to the pavilion that citizens in the city of Boise are being offered, such as having your name on a plaque for donating $50 or more," said Thomas.

She is working with President John Keiser for a solution to this problem and, in fact Keiser has sent a letter to the Architectural Liaison Committee charging them with recommending a way of showing that students helped financially with the pavilion's construction.

Thomas thinks that like the community, students should receive some form of recognition for their financial support of the pavilion in the form of a statue or some type of art.

Thomas also believes in student control of the pavilion, but not necessarily the 51 percent majority many students demand.

"I have no quarrel with the fact that we need the pavilion on campus, I would be concerned that students prepare themselves to participate in the governing of that building and participate in the benefits of that building," stated Thomas.

"Students need a strong voice in the governing of that building so that students who are paying the major amount of money have a major consideration for the things that are coming in (to the pavilion)," said Thomas.

But she wants to think in terms of strength, not necessarily numbers for the make-up of the Pavilion's Board of Governors.

"If students have 51 out of 100 seats and yet those seats are comparatively weak seats so that the 49 are strong on the governing board, what does numbers do for you?" Thomas said.

She added, "When I sat on the Core Curriculum Revision Committee as the only student on that committee, I had a strong voice on what happened during the course of the deliberations. I was there and I was the only student and there were 8 or 9 faculty members on that committee and yet my voice was heard very strongly when I spoke."

It would be nice if we had 51 percent and every single student attended every single time, but I know a lot of committees where there's one student on that committee and the student never goes. So, how much representation do students have on those committees? So, how are you going to say just 51 percent. Ok, 51 students and 49 other guys and then none of the students show up or only 12 students show up, does that really benefit students?" questioned Thomas.

PIRG is another issue Thomas addressed that concerns this campus.

"Where PIRG is, is the students made a specific proposal to the State Board (of Education), the State Board said no, but they also said, come back to us with something else, with a different proposal, with something we can support because we want to see students have a voice on campus, at Boise State University. So, what's happening is that the PIRG organizers and some of the rest of us who are concerned about student government on campus are meeting with state board members, with John Keiser, with each other in trying to establish a package that is acceptable to the State Board, acceptable to Keiser and acceptable to the students on campus," Thomas said.

"I will work as an objective observer in the Senate and I think we'll (Young and the Senators) get along well," Thomas said.

ASBSU Vice-President Beth Young, as President Pro-Tempore of the Senate, sees many of the same issues that Thomas has taken a position on as issues that the Student Senate will also deal with. Parking, PIRG and the number of Senators needed on a committee to start business each committee meeting.

She defines her role as closely working with Thomas using her desk as a clearinghouse when issues are presented to the Senate.

"I think it would be a lot easier and I think I can help Sally by helping the Senators communicate with Sally," Young said.

Another program Thomas is pushing is a class free hour every week preferably on Wednesday between 11:30 a.m. - 12:40 p.m. because that day and time have statistically proven itself the highest class attendance time during the week.

This would give students who leave school after their 3 p.m. class a chance to benefit from extra curricular activities, not to mention the benefits for other students, she added.

Thomas expects to work closely with Keiser on ASBSU issues.

Fads have probably always been part of college life. When I was a freshman at Boise State there was quite a large fad for expensive pairs of sun glasses, but (with the perverse twist which marks most fashion fads) the sunglasses were never actually worn on the fadde's face. Instead of covering the eyes the sun glasses were worn on top of the head like some kind of plastic tiara. It was mildly absurd to see hundreds of aledgedly same students squinting in dazzlingly bright sunshine while forty dollars worth of green plastic rested mere inches from their eyes.

That was a long time ago as far as fads are concerned and by now sun glasses on top of the head are just a memory—this year the hot fad is roller skating. Like the stereotype fad, roller skating appears slightly loony to anyone not caught up in it; but also like the stereotype fad, roller skating will be vehemently practiced by its adherents until it is suddenly relegated to the has-been status of Citizen's Band radios and hula-hoops, its short but frantic heyday having inexplicably run its course.

Most popular fads in this country are of the harmless, mildly silly variety of which roller skating is an example; but on rare occasions, a really serious political idea or movement will be taken up as a popular fad. In the Sixties the serious anti-war movement took on the characteristics of a media-hyped fad, having as it did its own fashions, its own music, and its own jargon. Regardless of the sincerity of some of the anti-war protestors, and the seriousness of the topic they were dealing with, it is likely that the fadish aspects of the anti-war movement attracted a large number of people who were genuinely more interested in getting in on what was cool than they were in ending the war.

In the seventies the serious topic which attracted a fad following was the ecology movement. In the early part of that decade Earth Day celebrations were so much in style that even the car oriented high school students of Boise would forsake their cars on Earth Day and either ride school buses or, to be even more chic, ride their bicycles (which had usually been lying dormant since the owners got their drivers license at age fourteen) to school. By the mid-seventies gas prices had gone up, interest in the ecology movement had gone down and the ecology fad had run its course.

Yesterday was the tenth anniversary of Earth Day and, to the surprise of most people, Boise State and other area groups had Earth Day celebrations. These celebrations were not pitiful nostalgic attempts to revive the glory days of the ecology movement, but demonstrations of what the movement is doing right now and how the philosophy of the ecology movement fits in with todays concerns about energy conservation. After all, such energy saving devices as solar cells and efficient automobile engines were concerns of the ecology movement before they were concerns of the energy conservation movement. It is nice to see that the interest in the ecology, as demonstrated by Earth Day, has survived its brush with the unending fame generated by its fad days and is not going to be forever thrown away with the other toys which mark the course of our fad history.

Letters To The Editor

Is PIRG's Position on Campus Shaky?

Editor, The Arbiter:

Recently a letter by Rhonda Boothe (a PIRG student organizer) appeared in the Idaho Statesman disputing Ralph Nader's connection with PIRG. It was stated that: "The first Public Interest Research Group was organized 10 years ago in Oregon by Donald Ross, who is now executive director of New York's PIRG. Ralph Nader has no connection with the groups other than that he encourages students to become involved as citizens in public arenas and thus endorses the concept of an organization through which we can actively pursue this kind of involvement."

These statements are contradictory to those made by Nader's biographers. On page 165 of "Nader: The People's Lawyer," Robert F. Buckhorn states: "What Nader visualizes is an extension of the concept behind his own Washington-based Public Interest Research Group." And on page 168 he states: "Once Oregon was settled on, Nader sent, as advance men, a pair of smooth, dedicated, supersalesmen, Donald Ross and James Welch." It's worth noting that Donald Ross co-authored "Action For A Change" with Nader. This being a PIRG organizing manual. Also, Nader went on an exhaustive lecture campaign in Oregon to organize PIRG there.

I feel that a private, activist group like PIRG should only be supported by voluntary contributions that it collects itself rather than using the fee-gathering powers of the state university. Especially, when PIRG insists on a "negative check-off system." (In Oregon the fee system has gone one step further, so that it is not only mandatory; but non-refundable):

Also PIRG had no business using student funds to finance its campaign to obtain student signatures on its petition. I'd like to know how much money PIRG has collected, with a strict accounting of where this money came from.

It's interesting that as more public debate emerges on PIRG the more shaky its position becomes.

Sincerely,
Stephen M Pitino

P.S. I sure hope that daring to oppose PIRG won't cause Mike Cramer to call me a "Demagogue" or "Reactionary".

Being Fair to Reagan

I think it is unfair of people to say Ronald Reagan is senile just because he calls Edward Kennedy "Senator Massachusetts" and defends "my so-called facts" by calling them so. It is not senility that makes him dumb. Hollywood did that long ago.

It is argued by sophisticated defenders of Reagan's lack of sophistication—the old intellectuals for Joe McCarthy crew—that anyone can make a slip on the stump. True enough. But, having made a dozen slips or so in a week, Reagan does one of two things. He keeps on repeating the first error—e.g., that John Kennedy cut taxes by 30 percent (actually 19)—like a robot whose computer tape cannot be reprogrammed.

Or, even worse, he tries to explain the first slip, compounding the error with even scarier revelations about his own state of so-called mind. Take the matter of GI aid to Vietnam veterans. On that he was flatly wrong, so flatly that it seemed inconceivable he could be saying what he said—till he said it a second time.

Reagan's brain trust, that contradiction in terms, apparently decided this blunder was so odd that they had to come up with some attempts to explain the inexplicable. But all they could produce was an excuse four-or-so-times as bad as the first mistake.

Reagan said he got his so-called facts from two so-called four star officers of the Armed Services. One of these officers, it later turned out, had only three stars—even in doing repair work on his own inaccuracies Reagan adds ingenious new errors. The governor generously absolved the retired officers of his own stupidity, and said he misunderstood them. I repeat: Reagan is not senile, just hard-of-hearing, and harder of understanding. He calls up a picture of three old codgers sitting around conversing about two different things without ever noticing that they were doing so. Reagan was playing his own robot tape while the Officers Club gents remembered better days. This was, even Reagan admitted in robot talk, a "double track" conversation—which is double talk for saying Reagan could not even understand his own advisors and intimates, much less the real world.

Perhaps the worst revelation contained in this "excuse" was Reagan's claim that four stars so impressed him (so dazzled was he that he could not even tell three from four in the stellar blaze) that he would not challenge the officers' claim, unlikely as it would seem to any reasonable sophisticated observer (and, much more, participant) in our politics.

After all, Ronnie said with his best Aw-Shucks manner, he only reached "two bars" in the military service. That, it turns out, was the double track in this two-bar robot's double talk. Reagan thinks it is cheering to his constituents to be servile and unquestioning in the presence of the military. One pictures him eating jelly beans in the Oval office while two of four military advisors tell him to launch our nukes—and Ron amiably complies, on the assumption that two makes up the majority.

If Reagan told his followers, tomorrow, that he confused the number of Lt. Gen. Rowney's stars because he never learned to count beyond two, they would predictably cheer him for his forthright manner and tell us that is just what is needed in the White House, a touch of sobering stupidity.

Well, nobody ever had a right to claim the American electoral system gives us better men than the voters deserve. As the cynics say when rigging their robot computer: garbage in, garbage out. Reagan's voters will, in sufficient numbers, deserve a Reagan presidency; then will have to explain the inexplicable. The only way to be fair to Reagan is to presume that he is not senile, and decide why, on any other hypothesis, he talks as if he were.

Firmly planted in the green grass, the sign reads "Danger, Thin Ice." The waters of the Julia Davis Park Lagoon, stretching away behind the sign, ruffle in the soft, warm spring breeze. Obviously, here lies a problem.

The problem is not in the sign; when the ice is thin there is danger. The problem is not in the lack of ice; spring temperatures generally result in no ice. The problem seems to be that of either inappropriate communication or lack of communication. Since the sign, an inanimate object, cannot lie, and the water is only doing what is natural at 32 plus degrees, the inappropriateness of their joint communication can only be attributed to a lack of communication: no one told someone to go take down the sign.

The same two problems face administrations in trying to serve those who have elected them into office. Inappropriate communication and lack of communication. Administrators don't usually lie and they seldom work contrary to the natural inclination of the majority of the electorate, but they do seem to have troubles in getting that sign down.

Before pointing of any fingers at "the other guy," ask yourself if maybe a good part of the trouble lies in the fact that too few sign-taker-downers are available. Rather than be content to merely point out the danger signs you see existing at BSU, why not volunteer to spend a few hours this coming 80-81 year getting them taken down? Or, maybe you can help hoist a few into place, to warn us all.

Think about it. It's students who are trying out the university waters, whether they are learning to swim or to skate. So, without the needed workers, who do you suppose is the most likely group to go under?

This Learning World A Chapter from History: World War III

by Dr. Richard Meisler

Although the immediate survivors of the Nuclear Exchange continued to read and write for several decades, literacy all but vanished in the next generation. It had no practical relevance to the survival problems posed in the post-Exchange environment of social disintegration. Even if it had been useful, literacy would not have been possible, for inability to concentrate was the most prominent feature of the Survivor's Psychosis that afflicted virtually everyone.

The following is an excerpt from "World History," the first book to be published in more than 150 years. It was released in a limited edition of 850 copies and distributed in the year 2176 to every literate adult.

World War III

"For all practical purposes the War began in the Spring of 1980. Although the Nuclear Exchange was still some time in the future, the world began moving rapidly toward it during the early months of that year.

"Governments and politicians all over the world seemed simultaneously to rediscover an old truth. Ordinary people were willing to turn away from the severe problems of everyday life if they were offered a foreign enemy to worry about. No government was improving the lives of its people in the midst of a world-wide economic crisis. Almost at once they stopped trying. They found that they could stay in power by calling upon vestigial responses: outmoded patriotisms, chauvinism, old national and racist hatreds, religious loyalties, inspirational doctrines of freedom or social utopias.

"The move toward large-scale violence in international life was supported by the pervasive presence of smaller-scale violence in ordinary social life. Physical and emotional terrorism of all descriptions had become commonplace.

"The only new factor in the situation, however, arose from thermonuclear and computer technologies. Some scientists and writers had demonstrated that a Nuclear Exchange would produce destruction and misery greater by many orders of magnitude than the race had previously known. Although a small anti-war movement was organized in the early 1980's, it was easily swept aside wherever it arose by establishment politicians.

"The behaviors of people and nations, therefore, were familiar. The unique element was the results, due to the power of new hardware. More than 65% of the world's human population was destroyed immediately or within 5 years because the ecological system could not support more than a tiny human population. Another 20% or their descendants were rendered infertile or biologically useless because of lethal or reproduction-negating mutations in their germ line.

"The human social order disappeared briefly. Its reconstruction on a permanent basis is doubtful even now because the gene pool may be too profoundly damaged to produce enough healthy human beings.

"A small group of contemporary philosophers has been charged with the task of looking beyond our current struggles of reconstruction. In the unlikely event that human beings can reestablish a stable culture and civilization, they have been asked, how can future mass destruction be avoided?

"The work of these people has not yet been productive. Reviewing the history of World War III, they get stuck on certain questions that have no obvious answers: 'Why did the truth make no difference, even in the private and intimate interactions of people facing catastrophe?' 'Why did private and public institutions, dedicated both to welfare and truth, fail to prevent the Exchange?'"

Private Institution Statistics Disputed

(Campus Digest News Service)

The participation of the private sector in higher education has not declined, says veteran spokesman for public colleges and universities, Russell I. Thackrey, who served as executive director of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges from 1945 to 1969.

Thackrey's statement refutes the reports of the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities which, last December, claimed that "from winter 1970 through summer 1978, the independent sector suffered a net loss of 65 institutions." On the contrary, says Thackrey, the number of accredited private institutions has increased every year since 1970.

The institute reported that between 1970 and 1978, 129 private colleges and branch campuses had closed and only 64 had been founded; and that from 1975 through 1978, 40 institutions closed and only three were founded.

Thackrey said that the institute's statistics showed a net loss because it only counted colleges that had been both founded and accredited since 1970. He pointed out that there is an average of 45 years between the founding and accreditation dates of colleges.

"In the light of this, the fact that only three institutions were both founded and accredited between 1975 and 1978 seems of little significance," he said.

The institute's report conceded this point:

"There were 64 independent colleges and branch campuses founded between 1970 and 1978 that met the criteria for inclusion in the Education Directory. We have no reliable data on the number of colleges founded that have not met these criteria."

The Education directory is an annual publication of the federal government's National center for Education Statistics.

Thackrey says that no one can tell whether the number of independent colleges has increased or decreased in recent times. "This is true because there is no way of 'counting' institutions which are not accredited, or even a definition by which they might be identified--in many cases--as 'countable.'"

The institute's director of research, Virginia Fadil, is also one of the authors of the report and defends its statistics by saying,

"It may be 5 or 10 percent off, but it's probably the most accurate report available on changes in the number of private institutions."

Thackrey said, "It is both an admirable compilation of information and a source of utter confusion." Circulars of his critique were sent to heads of public campuses.

An official of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities said, "We are going to conduct joint study to clear up misunderstandings and get to the bottom of the actual situation."

Salary Increases Can't Cover Runaway Inflation

(CPS)—Graduates going into the job market this spring will be offered higher starting salaries than last year's graduates, but the salary increases are probably worth less in real dollars, according to a study by the College Placement Council.

Average increases, the CPC announced April 8, are nearly nine percent, although the inflation rate has been 18 percent.

The CPC calculated the averages by studying the starting salaries offered graduates between Sept. 1, 1979 and March 6, 1980.

According to the study, petroleum engineering graduates can expect starting salaries up to $1979 per month.

Not surprisingly, engineers of all types can command the highest salaries. Mechanical engineers were offered an average of $1866 per month. Chemical engineers got $1790 per month, civil engineers $1524, and electrical engineers with advanced degrees $1852 per month.

The high starting salaries have convinced many engineering undergraduates to take jobs instead of going to graduate school, a development that causes some engineering teachers to worry about where the next generation of professors will come from.

Dr. Donald Marlowe of the American Society for Engineering Education in Washington, D.C., says the high starting salaries for new engineers has thrown the discipline "into a very serious crisis." Even full professors are being lured from faculty positions into private industry by the high salaries.

Business graduates are also doing well. Business administration grads are starting at an average $1197 per month, with accountants commanding $1284 per month.

Grant Proof Required

(National On-campus Report)

Financial emergencies are something many students face during the course of a college career and often special loan funds are available. But at the U. of California-Santa Barbara, students who break their glasses, need immediate transportation home or have textbooks stolen can turn to a student government fund for outright hardship grants that don't have to be repaid.

The $15,000 fund gives students up to $100 to replace lost or stolen items or to deal with medical emergencies or family problems.

But some students may have overstated their need, says an Associated Students investigating committee, and the financial aid office, which disbursed the funds, may have been too quick to buy student hard-luck stories. Some students were receiving $100 for stolen bicycles that mysteriously reappeared later, while others exaggerated the value of items that were lost or stolen, says A.S. Executive Director Paula Rudolph. The important factor was the lack of student input into how the money was spent, and the failure to draw up specific criteria by which applicants should be judged.

Under new proposals, student applicants will be asked to bring in receipts showing that the emergency grants were used for the purposes intended. Those needing car repairs may have to prove they live beyond bus lines, while replacement of bicycles may be eliminated entirely. The A.S. is also considering establishing an in-house committee to review weekly the applications of those who don't need immediate help. Proof of financial need may also be required for the first time.

Cutbacks—

Some campus officials have alleged discrimination against schools with a large proportion of minorities. The government is required by law to distribute the awards widely.

A system of peer review panels determines the awards from proposals by the individual schools. More than 150 schools applied for new fellowships for 1980-81, but only 47 were chosen by review panels.

Student Suicides Reach an Epidemic Level

(CPS)—A few weeks ago, Mitch Gortler, a University of Florida student told his girlfriend in Atlanta he wasn't feeling well, and asked if she would call him back in a half-hour. But Gortler didn't answer her return call. Concerned, she took the next flight to Gainesville, hurried to his off-campus apartment, and found that sometime between Gortler's phone call and his girlfriend's arrival, the 19-year-old sophomore had placed a rifle to his head and shot himself.

Yet Gortler's was only one of five suicides during a recent ten-week period at the University of Florida. Two students, two faculty members, and one former student have killed themselves. An unsuccessful attempt by a student in the UF parking lot was also made during the same period.

While UF's suicide rate during the ten-week period is extraordinarily high, so is the recent national college rate. In fact, suicide in the 18 to 24-year-old age group has risen to epidemic levels, and the only thing the experts can agree on is the factors responsible are baffling.

Health statistics for college-age people tell a grim story of depression and stress quite frequently tied to academic endeavors and college life. Suicide is the second leading cause of death for 18-24 year-olds. Only auto accidents claim more college students. Many law enforcement officials, though, suspect some of those may also be intentional acts of self-destruction.

"There are as many reasons to commit suicide as there are people who do it," says Liz Jones, director of the Alachua County Suicide and Crisis Prevention Center in Gainesville. UF students account for 20 to 30 percent of the center's case load. "Each time we look at a suicide it's unique. There's no way you can say a person kills himself because of college."

L. Thomas Cummings, director of student mental health services at Arizona State, thinks college pressure can help push an unstable person over the edge. Yet he adds that a lot of students who commit suicide bring the potential for killing themselves when they enroll.

"There are so many dimensions to suicide that it really isn't fair to implicate the university completely," he says. "There are life pressures, pressures with boyfriends and girl friends, economic pressures. One has to stand a certain amount of pressure. Academic stress is a validating factor, but not a primary one."

"The university may be the last straw," he adds, "but the whole comprehensive mass is responsible."

But Michael Zangari, a student at the University of Nebraska whose extensive research into suicide was prompted by a friend's death, firmly believes college can be a determining factor.

"A lot of college students haven't the slightest idea why they're at college, except that they've been told they should be," Zangari observes. "Then, there are the social pressures. The pressure to fit into a peer situation, the pressure to be with someone sexually. Finally, the pressures become too much."

Before the end of her second year of college Zangari's friend Michelle killed herself with an overdose of medications she had been given by a psychiatrist.

"(Michelle) was like a lot of us," Zangari wrote in a story about his friend in Rolling Stone's College Papers. "She didn't know exactly why she was in college, but she had entered with the idea of exploring her talent with a freedom that was not possible in the narrow confines of high school and home. She looked for a gentle push from college, and instead found herself shoved into a crowded auditorium with 125 other freshmen, frantically taking notes in survey classes that had little to do with what she wanted or needed."

Conversely, some mental health professionals even suggest that college could be a deterrent to suicide.

A study done between 1960 and 1970 by Dr. Michael Peck of the University of Southern California Medical Center found that college students in the Los Angeles area had a lower rate of suicide than non-college students in the same age group.

"College is a safe, highly-structured environment," opines Dr. Peck, who contends his study applies to today's students as well.

"In school a student is protected from the ambiguities of life. The worst time is when a student comes to the end of his academic career, and faces the real world."

"Once upon a time," agrees Dr. Marvin Miller, a San Diego-based suicidologist, "there was a pattern to life that could be counted on: get through high school, go to college, get a job, and get married. It may sound dull, but it offered security."

"Now, there are no more guarantees. Students cannot be sure of getting a job in their chosen field and there's a general sense of disillusionment with the world."

Counselors at the University of Texas-Austin see people contemplating suicide all the time, Dr. Edwin Gray reports. He says that UT has a very low incidence of suicide, though 31 Texas Students have taken their own lives since 1971. The rate is a little lower than the national average.

Yet no one pretends there's a single solution to the problem.

Getting students who need help to the mental health counseling centers, Jones contends, is also part of the press' responsibility. She believes all suicide stories ought to include the phone numbers of nearby crisis centers.

But of course funding is also a barrier to those trying to help students with emotional problems. Counseling centers are chronically understaffed, unable to provide enough time and attention when center traffic gets thick. "In the end," Cummings sighs, "it all comes down to money."

Although mental health professionals are reluctant to admit they have few means of preventing the self-destruction plaguing campuses, all agree that, given the scarcity of money, an individual student must be willing to ask for help.

Swedish Police Officer Speaks at Boise State

BSU—Carl Dalin, police commissioner from Falkenberg, Sweden, will discuss the Swedish police system Monday, April 28, at Boise State University.

Dalin's lecture, which will be free to the public, will be at 10 a.m. in the Senate Chambers of the BSU Student Union Building.

He will discuss modern philosophy and contemporary problems in the Swedish criminal justice system. A discussion period will follow.

Dalin has been involved in Swedish local and federal prosecution and police administration for twenty years. A graduate of Stockholm University School of Law, he began his career with the Stockholm Police Department, and in 1965 was named to the federal position of assistant district commissioner. He has been a district commissioner since 1972.

His lecture, seventh in an annual European speaker series, is sponsored by the Boise State criminal justice administration program and the John Jay School of Criminal Justice, New York.

Improving Evaluations

Campus Digest News Service

The teaching skills of college faculty members has been termed one of its most underdeveloped resources. Alexander W. Astin, head of the Higher Research Institute at the University of California at Los Angeles made this statement at the annual meeting of the American Association for Higher Education.

"The blunt reality of the 1980's is that most institutions will have to make do with what they already have, whether it be physical facilities or faculty and staff," said Astin.

He said that lack of training and feedback are the reasons why the teaching potential of faculty members are not tapped.

Graduate programs offer formal training in research and scholarship, but Astin added, "When we look at teaching, however, we find a very different picture. Only in rare instances do graduate programs offer formal training in this complex art."

"Once a new doctorate recipient becomes a faculty member, he or she gets very little opportunity or encouragement to test and improve teaching skills."

Astin proposed mandatory student ratings of classroom instruction "for the instructor's eyes only." These ratings would provide faculty members with an evaluation of their teaching.

He said there should be two sets of ratings if they are to be used in determining pay raises, promotions and contract renewals. One set of ratings would be for the record and the other for the instructor only.

"When ratings of classroom instruction are made public or used in personnel decisions," Astin said, "the teacher is motivated to manipulate the ratings rather than to see them as a source of accurate feedback. Thus, their learning value for the teacher is seriously compromised."

As a further aid to instructors, he proposed that faculty colleagues make reports based on periodic visits to the classrooms.

In the A.A.H.E.'s conference's keynote address, Francis Keppel, former U.S. Commissioner of Education, proposed that the quality of colleges be measured periodically by testing their students.

This proposal raised strong objections from several speakers at the conference. President Willard L. Boyd of the University of Iowa, opposed the idea since it would tend to standardize general education.

R. Morton Darrow, vice-president for public affairs of the Prudential Insurance Company of America and a member of the A.A.H.E. board of directors, said the idea of a national assessment test "calls for a monolithic re-shaping of general education" which would divert attention from the more serious problems of colleges and universities.

Keppel also suggested that representatives of the general public be appointed to governing boards of accrediting agencies. This proposal was supported by Thurston E. Manning, director of the Commission on Institution of Higher Education of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

Manning said public representatives on boards of accrediting agencies should be required rather than merely permitted. He said he expected accrediting agencies to decide within the next few years whether to make greater public disclosure of the information they gather about institutions.

Public reports on campus visits by accreditation agencies is left to the institution's discretion, said Manning. He said the reports are addressed to the agency and institutions rather than to the public. If there is to be greater disclosure, he added, the agencies should prepare separate reports specifically for the public.

Men's Tennis Plays Final Tournament

BSU—The men's tennis team plays its final tournament of the season before hosting the Big Sky Conference championships, May 1-3.

The Broncos will play in the Weber State Invitational, Friday and Saturday, in Ogden, UT.

Weber State College, Boise State University and University of Montana will be competing from the Big Sky along with Utah State University.

The following weekend, the Broncos will host the conference championships. The University of Idaho, University of Montana and BSU will represent the Northern Division of the conference. The University of Nevada-Reno, Weber State College and Northern Arizona University will represent the Southern Division.

The six competing teams from the eight-team conference were decided this past weekend. In Missoula, Montana State was eliminated from the field following Idaho's win of the Northern Division. The Broncos placed second with Montana third.

The Broncos opened play with an 8-1 win over MSU. BSU came back that afternoon (Friday) with a 6-3 loss to Idaho. On Saturday, BSU downed Montana 7-2.

Idaho went undefeated while Montana won one of three and Montana State was winless.

BSU's top singles player, sophomore Steve Appleton, was undefeated in the tourney, as was number four, Eddie Perkins of Boise, a freshman.

The Southern Division matches were held in Ogden, UT with Nevada-Reno coming out on top and undefeated. Weber State was second with one loss to Reno, Northern Arizona was third with two losses and Idaho State was winless.

Alums Look Tough

by Jerry Richards
Arbiter Staff

Two patterns have been entrenching themselves into the trailways of Idaho collegiate football over the past few years, patterns that the parties involved would just as soon break.

One: Boise State blows the whole league away during a year when the Broncos can't make the playoffs (i.e. Big Sky probation or schedule conflicts), but when the doors are open, they can't seem to get that necessary oomph.

Two: Idaho State, due to chronic injuries, coaching changes, and just plain hard luck, starts just about every season doomed to a four-win-or-less year.

Now that spring training is underway at all the Big Sky universities, both schools are out to prove something and prove it good.

BSU will get a great challenge from the Alumni squad this May 3, no doubt. Such players as Chris Malmgren, Harold Cotton and Ren Buckner; will be solid line anchors, and Freddie Goode is bound to terrorize the secondary with his fleet-footedness.

However, no matter who is in the Alumni team, possibly the most significant fact about it is that last year's Bronco varsity contributed so few players to it.

A few players graduated from the starting line of each squad for the Broncos, which last year went undefeated in Big Sky despite being deprived of advance game films. This sort of obstacle just sends coach Jim Criner chuckling on the way to the JCs, to fill in a few loose spots, and to the high schools for future developments.

What BSU has left from last year is an All-American quarterback, an all-classy runningback squad, some fine receivers, and the nucleus of a defense that sent opponent after opponent reeling last season.

In short, the schedule, which features U of Utah up front and Montana State and NAU away from home, is the biggest block between this fall's Broncos and a way out of the playoff plague.

On the other hand, new coach Dave Kragthorpe has a lot of work on his hands trying to get Idaho State out of the gutter. I mean, Case de Bruijn is a good player, but he's about the only returning outstanding player the Bengals have, and he's the punter.

But Kragthorpe has been busy on the recruiting trail, and has done what any good first-year coach would do: fire most of the returners in the backfields and replace them with transfers. New faces are the starting platoons on this year's Bengal squad, and Kragthorpe is making it clear to the returners that ya gotta put out to make the team this time.

Of course one of the biggest dangers to this approach is inconsistency: JC players are only around for two years, and other transfers often less. But if managed correctly, the transfer approach can be quite healthy for a program. After all, that's a major part of how Criner and staff helped BSU recover from Tony Knap's exodus.

But—and I don't wish to sound like a fatalist—patterns break hard, and columnists have expressed hollow optimism in the past...

BSU Track Action Continues

UA—Before they head into competition leading to season-end championship meets, the BSU men's and women's track teams will have a chance to tune their skills at home in the Bob Gibb Invitational meet this Friday and Saturday.

Action will start at Bronco Stadium noon Friday, and resume Saturday at 10 a.m.

The invitational will focus on individual effort, and will not have any team scoring. However, coaches Ed Jacoby and Genger Fahleson have the opportunity to examine the form of athletes from schools they will compete against later in the season.

Competitors from Nevada-Reno and Idaho State, as well as Spokane Community College, Northwest Nazarene, Treasure Valley, College of Southern Idaho and Eastern Oregon State are expected to enter the men's division. UNR and ISU will be among the tops in the Big Sky championship field late in May. Women athletes are expected from Idaho, NNC, TVCC, CSI and Flathead Valley CC.

The distaff team comes into the meet after an encouraging third-place performance in the BYU Invitational last weekend. Placing behind Utah State and BYU, the Bronco women bested Utah, Weber State and Southern Utah State, and on the way several performers turned in season bests.

Kathy Kearney and Jody Smith, placing first and second in the 1500 meters, both qualified for regional competition with times of 4:50.52 and 4:51.74. Darla Hasslequist finished second but set a new school record in the 400 with 58.28 seconds.

Two relay teams, the 880 medley and the mile, set season best times at 1:50.28 and 4:07.67 respectively while placing third. The 400 meter relay team placed first with a time of 48.26.

Several men's tracksters as well set personal and school records at the prestigious Mt. Sac Relays last weekend. Dave Kerby placed fourth in the pole vault with a

Bronco Tennis Team Rallies This Weekend

BSU—The women's tennis team travels to Bozeman, MT, this weekend, to meet Montana State, Washington State, and the University of Montana in two days of tennis competition.

Over the weekend, BSU dropped two matches in Cheney, WA, losing 6-3 to Central Washington University and 9-0 to Eastern Washington University.

In the contest with Central, sophomores Lisa Kagi and Debie Bert and freshman Susan Mechem won their respective matches.

"We did show much improvement over our first meeting with Central," said BSU coach Jean Boyles, referring to the 9-0 victory Central posted over BSU in early March.

"This time we won three matches and went three sets in two double matches," said Boyles.

In the doubles competition, Kagi and Patrice Reimer battled Central's Anne Lister and Teresa Shroat before finally losing 6-7 (11-13), 6-4, 8-6.

BSU is now 1-8 on the season.

NSA Honors Fugleberg

BSU—For the second consecutive year, Boise State sophomore Ruth Fugleberg has been selected to the National Scouting Association's All-Region women's basketball team.

The National Scouting Association is a part of the Women's Pro Basketball League. The 5-7 Fugleberg, who finished the 1979-80 season sixth in scoring (16.5 game average) and ninth in rebounding (8.5 game average) in the Northwest Women's Basketball League, was honored along with fourteen other Northwest players.

Fugleberg also earned second team All-League honors at the close of the season.

BSU Meets U of I Team

BSU-The baseball team has two games in Moscow, ID before playing a four game home series this weekend against Eastern Washington. All six games are Nor-Pac Conference counters.

The Broncos meet the Idaho Vandals on Wednesday, April 23 in Moscow and hope to avenge two previous losses to Idaho suffered two weeks ago.

Then, Saturday, BSU hosts Eastern Washington at Borah High School's baseball diamond for a pair of games beginning at 1 pm. The two teams meet again on Sunday at noon for another twin-bill.

The Broncos had a rough weekend in Portland this past Saturday and Sunday. Saturday's rain-delayed doubleheader was finally played late in the day, but the Broncos went down twice, losing 9-1 in the opener and 6-3 in the nightcap.

The Broncos could manage only one hit by Bob Schuler in the first game. In the second game, BSU bats were a little more lively, connecting for eight hits.

The rain again caused some problems on Sunday. BSU lost the opener to Portland, 11-2, as Portland's Ken Dayley struck out 17 Broncos and gave up only three hits.

In the second game, BSU was up 6-1 in the fourth inning before rain cancelled the game. It will be made up only if it has a bearing on the standings next month.

BSU is now 4-9 in Nor-Pac play and 11-23 overall. Portland upped its league record to 11-1 with the three wins.

BSU Holds Cheer Tryouts

Smash Comedy Opens in Boise

by Steve Corbett

Blithe Spirit, presented by the Boise State Theatre Arts Department is the type of ghost story that I like. There are no deluges of gore, no hideous dismemberments, and only one or two screams. Blithe Spirit, you see, is a comedy, and a good one at that.

The action of the play centers around the attempts of Charles Condomine to research psychic phenomena in order to write a murder novel. During what was planned as a "research seance," Charles' departed first wife Elvira is conjured into the household. This, needless to say, put quite a strain on the current marriage of Condomine and his living wife Ruth. To add to the confusion and merriment, only Charles can see or hear Elvira as she taunts and flirts her way back into Charles' affections. Convinced that Elvira is attempting to do away with Charles in order to be with him forever in the hereafter, Ruth seeks out the medium who originally conjured Elvira up. By an odd quirk of events, Ruth finds herself literally on the same side as Elvira.

Ken Jenkins, as Charles Condomine, does a fine job. Jenkins delivers a credibly harried Charles torn between the living wife and the dead love. However, this is the third production in a row in which Jenkins has either had remarkably similar parts, or has developed remarkably similar characters. Jenkins is too fine an actor to limit himself to one or two interpretations.

Condomines present wife Ruth is played with conviction by veteran actress Melanie Yellen. Yellen delivers a highly tuned, slightly bitchy portrayal of the domineering Ruth. Two other participants in the farcical seance are Dr. and Mrs. Bradman, played by David Painter and Aleah Miller. Although relatively minor characters, Painter and Miller have developed these two into credible, productive parts.

The real joys of this show, however, are a triad of talent composed of Lisa Meredith, Janet Summers Eskew and Nancy Lee. As the flighty housemaid Edith, Meredith is literally a scream. Her erratic zaniness is largely responsible for keeping the show on the necessary energy level.

As Madame Arcadi, the incredibly bizarre medium, Janet Eskew soars. Resorting to music, moans, shrieks and cucumber sandwiches to promote her trances, Eskew shows Boiseans once again that she is one of our finest character actresses.

All of this talent notwithstanding, it is a young woman named Nancy Lee who is the heart of Blithe Spirit. Lee's portrayal of the ghost Elvira is vibrant, sensitive and extremely professional.

Blithe Spirit is director Carolyn Jones' Boise debut, and a fair appraisal can only result in the hope that we'll see more of Ms. Jones' talents soon. "Interesting" special effects and another of Stephen Buss' marvelous sets help to overcome a few muddled lines and slow cues.

Blithe Spirit is running through April 26. Curtain time each

The Talkies: A Film Buy-Line

This week the reviewers saw Serial, a comedy dealing with suburban life in Northern California. Serial stars Martin Mull and Tuesday Weld.

Anthony Burt (★★★½)

Time's reviewer huffs and puffs that this film makes fun of women with large breasts. But the reviewer for Henry Luce's organ misses the point. Serial satirizes all sorts of human excesses, the nifty and the tragic.

The actors in Serial are perfectly cast. Martin Mull, Tuesday Weld, and the zany Sally Kellerman play tanned, blond-haired, blue-eyed middle class California clones who, frantically in search of Paradise in Marin county, "relate to" tai-chi, quaaludes, I-ching, mello-speak, feminist rap groups, beansprout therapy, hot-tub philosophy, and each other in "serial" (repeated and soap opera-ish) fashion.

Large breast jokes notwithstanding, Serial's the funniest film to play in Boise in 1980 (sorry, La Cage aux Folles!).

Karl Knapp (★★½)

If there is any message to be salvaged from the marital havoc incurred in Serial it is that marriage and family life do indeed have their advantages. The alternatives to these institutions that we see in Serial—from love cults and communal living to orgies and homosexuality—inevitably turn sour. We find out that perhaps it's not really so bad to be married even if it isn't always happy. While Serial goes about showing us this in a rather roundabout way, it is nevertheless a comic one. Serial is a funny movie, and Martin Mull's presence does nothing to take away from that quality.

Barbara Jones (★★)

Serial's potential for a memorable movie is lost by a serious lack of inertia and bad timing. Based on the book "Marin" the movie portrays the "Bedroom community" by parodying everything from granola to alternative marriages. At times it succeeds. Harvey played by Martin Mull of "Mary Hartman" and "Fernwood Tonight" is Mull at his best. Like his song "Let's Be Normal," Mull attempts sanity in an insane world.

 Perhaps if Serial had been released 5 years ago, when Marin County, California was at its height, it would have been more appropriate. The picture satirizes fetishes, fads, and cults which were popular years ago—who still goes to consciousness raising groups? (who ever did?) Though Serial never really gets off the ground, it makes an enjoyable movie; its humor, though at times bordering on the hilarious, is nothing more than entertaining at best.

Marianne Flagg (★)
 Serial bears an odd resemblance to The Last Married Couple in America. Both are populated with essentially shallow, plastic people. The book Serial contained a premise which this film's makers have failed to recognize: satire is only at its biting best when the satirized characters are basically real people with real concerns, trying to work out their problems—however cheap and disposable the methods to solve those problems are. Like LMC, Serial is one long sex gag, showing once again how easy it is for adults to behave like adelpated fourth-graders. Martin Mull and Tuesday Weld flesh out their characters a bit and manage to keep the film from being a complete wash-out. Director Bill Persky, and the script writer, should shoulder most of the blame. This was a relentlessly unfunny movie and it didn't have to be.

Whale, Whale, the Gang's All Here
I feel much better this week, though my lungs feel like there are a couple extra parts rattling around in there. Kiwi hasn't talked to me all week long; he figures I'm contagious and he's pretty touchy about such things. Ah well; comme si comme ca.
This week, you're going to have to be careful on, but you got a little headway. After all, only one person had the SMARTS to answer last week's question, even though it was about as difficult as rectifying the formula for figuring the area of a circle. Course even then, you got some ignoramuses who'll argue that pie are not square, pie are round; cornbread are squares.
In any case, since the movie is The Big Fix, we puzzled for awhile about the possible significances of the word "fix" for awhile before we finally decided what to do about the contest. We came up with this: The first five people who tell Cathy at the Arbiter office what they think is a suitable synonym for "fix" each got two free passes to The Big Fix this weekend. But like I said, you have to be careful. Cathy is a nice person! Don't say nothin' dirty!
Meanwhile, I'm off to catch my favorite underwater opera, Cool fan Whale.

WHAT COULD THE ARMY POSSIBLY OFFER A BRIGHT PERSON LIKE YOU?

Drop your guard for a minute. Even though you're in college right now, there are many aspects of the Army that you might find very attractive.

Maybe even irresistible. See for yourself.

MED SCHOOL, ON US

You read it right.

The Army's Health Professions Scholarship Program provides necessary tuition, books, lab fees, even microscope rental during medical school.

Plus a tax-free monthly stipend that works out to about $6,450 a year. (After July 1, 1980, it'll be even more.)

After you're accepted into medical school, you can be accepted into our program. Then you're commissioned and you go through school as a Second Lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

The hitch? Very simple. After your residency, you give the Army a year as a doctor for every year the Army gave you as a med student, and under some conditions, with a minimum scholarship obligation being two years' service.

INTERNSHIP, RESIDENCY & CASH BONUSES

Besides scholarships to medical school, the Army also offers AMA-approved first-year post-graduate and residency training programs.

Such training adds no further obligation to the student in the scholarship program. But any Civilian Graduate Medical Education sponsored by the Army gives you a one-year obligation for every year of sponsorship.

But you get a $9,000 annual bonus every year you're paying back medical school or post-graduate training.

So you not only get your medical education paid for, you get extra pay while you're paying it back.

Not a bad deal.

A GREAT PLACE TO BE A NURSE

The rich tradition of Army Nursing is one of excellence, dedication, even heroism. And it's a challenge to live up to.

Today, an Army Nurse is the epitome of professionalism, regarded as a critical member of the Army Medical Team.

A BSN degree is required. And the clinical spectrum is almost impossible to match in civilian practice.

And, since you'll be an Army Officer, you'll enjoy more respect and authority than most of your civilian counterparts. You'll also enjoy travel opportunities, officer's pay and officer's privileges.

Army Nursing offers educational opportunities that are second to none. As an Army Nurse, you could be selected for graduate degree programs at civilian universities.

ADVANCED NURSING COURSE, TUITION-FREE

You get tuition, pay and living allowances.

You can also take Nurse Practitioner courses and courses in many clinical specialties. All on the Army.

While these programs do not cost you any money, most of them do incur an additional service obligation.

A CHANGE TO PRACTICE LAW

If you're about to get your law degree and be admitted to the bar, you should consider a commission in the Judge Advocate General Corps. Because in the Army you get to practice law right from the start.

While your classmates are still doing other lawyers' research and other lawyers' briefs, you could have your own cases, your own clients, in effect, your own practice.

Plus you'll have the pay, prestige and privileges of being an Officer in the United States Army. With a chance to travel and make the most of what you've worked so hard to become. A real, practicing lawyer. Be an Army Lawyer.

ROTC SCHOLARSHIPS

Though you're too late for a 4-year scholarship, there are 3-, 2-, and even 1-year scholarships available.

They include tuition, books, and lab fees. Plus $100 a month living allowance. Naturally they're very competitive. Because besides helping you towards your degree, an ROTC scholarship helps you towards the gold bars of an Army Officer.

Stop by the ROTC office on campus and ask about details.

UP TO $170 A MONTH

You can combine service in the Army Reserve or National Guard with Army ROTC and get up to $6,500 while you're still in school.

It's called the Simultaneous Membership Program. You get $100 a month as an Advanced Army ROTC Cadet and an addiional $70 a month (sergeant's pay) as an Army Reservist.

When you graduate, you'll be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant, but not necessarily assigned to active duty. Find out about it.

A BONUS FOR PART-TIME WORK

You can get a $1,500 bonus just for enlisting in some Army Reserve units. Or up to $2,000 in educational benefits.

You also get paid for your Reserve duty. It comes out to about $1,000 a year for about 16 hours a month and two weeks annual training.

And now we have a special program to help you fit the Army Reserve around your school schedule. It's worth a look.

A SECOND CHANCE AT COLLEGE

Some may find college to be the right place at the wrong time for a variety of reasons. The Army can help them, too.

A few years in the Army can help them get money for tuition and the maturity to use it wisely.

The Army has a program in which money saved for college is matched two-for-one by the government. Then, if one qualifies, a generous bonus is added to that.

So 3 years of service can get you up to $12,100 and 4 years up to $14,100. In addition, bonuses up to $3,000 are available for certain 4-year enlistments in selected skills.

Add in the experience and maturity gained, and the Army can send an individual back to college a richer person in more ways than one.

We hope these Army opportunities have intrigued you as well as surprised you. Because there is indeed a lot the Army can offer a bright person like you.
