KBSU Expands Program Format

By Rynly Reed

Associate Editor

In an effort to comply with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) requirements for its upcoming expansion to 3000 watts of transmitting power, KBSU has made extensive changes in its programming format.

KBSU is currently operating with 10 watts of power. The FCC requirements call for a specified amount of airtime to be devoted to public affairs and educational programming. KBSU has made several additions to its broadcasting format, ranging in topics from astronomy to astrology to subjects of national and international interest.

Some of the new shows that are educational in emphasis are:

- "Men and Molecules"—sponsored by the American Chemical Society, this program has a variety of scientific topics that are presented so that the average person can understand them.
- "In the Public Interest"—This is a daily news commentary focusing on national and international issues. It airs daily at 5 pm.
- "Women in Society"—This is a locally produced program. Catherine Harri, public affairs director at KBSU, covers a number of different topics about the changing roles of women in modern society. The programs have a wide range of subjects including women's health, music, politics and problems. "Women in Society" is aired twice a week.
- "Space Story"—This program is produced by NASA (the National Aeronautics and Space Administration) and is designed to keep the public informed about new developments in the space program.
- "Wildlife Watch"—This is a weekly report from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. It reports on the survival of wild animals in Idaho and throughout the western United States.
- "The Future: Toward the Year 2000"—This program is a series of discussions about human growth and potential in the future, and how public policy will affect us.
- "Consumer Rip-off Report"—This is a weekly program aimed at consumer awareness. Ken Thomsen, reporting for the Better Business Bureau is the host.

BSU Sponsors Symposium

"Education and Contemporary America" is the topic of the 1980 Education Symposium, sponsored by the Boise State University School of Education.

The symposium will be held Oct. 9-11.

The purpose of the symposium is three-fold," Dr. John Dahlberg said.

The program will assess the status of University teaching, explore the nature of human learning and examine education of the 1970's and project and develop what needs to be done to make education a more meaningful process.

The deadline for applications is October 6th. Nominations are due to the Campus Crusade, Purnell is a nationally-known speaker and counselor. Dick Purnell will speak on "How To Live with Yourself and Like It" at the Boise State University Special Events Center on October 1, 1980 at 8:00 p.m. Purnell is a popular lecturer among high school and college students throughout the United States and is liked for his warm, informal style.

As an international representative for Campus Crusade for Christ (an interdenominational Christian organization), he has traveled to 27 different countries during the past 18 years and spoken to over 100,000 people.

Identifying with students and their problems, Purnell addresses topics such as "How to Live with Yourself and Like It," "Why Couples Break Up" and "Sex and the Sexual Revolution." He captures his audience's attention by using vivid illustrations and stories from his childhood, college days and experience as a counselor.

In 1973 Purnell earned his Master's of Divinity degree from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School. He holds another master's degree in counseling from Indiana University.

In addition to his work with Campus Crusade, Purnell is a professor at the International School of Theology in San Bernardino, California. His field is communications, and he is training people to become public speakers. While he is in the area, Purnell will also speak on "Why Couples Break Up" at the BSIU House Corner on October 2, 1980 at 8:00 p.m. Purnell's lectures on campus are being sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ at Boise State University.

New York Outlaws Hazing

New York now prohibits hazing at colleges and universities within the state. Gov. Hugh Carey signed the bill which outlaws the practice. Hazing is a tradition used by many fraternities and sororities. Uppercrassen harass new students or stick them with humiliating and abusive trials. In recent years the hazing pranks have had some serious consequences. Some students have been injured or killed. New York's law is a result of the 1978 hazing death of a lot of "balcony," and that the reason given for keeping the agency under the cloak of secrecy is the "Communist threat."

Marchetti said he believes the public has a right to know about the actions of the intelligence community, but that the courts have helped to keep it under wraps.

The public is kept ignorant because then it cannot control the agency, Marchetti said.

"The role that the CIA has played in the downfall of other nations and their administrations will never be entirely known," Marchetti said.

As of Thursday, the official policy of the U.S. is not what really takes place. He said. "We have moved some nations into the arms of the Soviets by our actions."

"The efforts of the Senate committee which investigated the CIA in the early 70s have come to naught," he reiterated.

"The efforts foolish and now the general public will probably never know what this arm of the federal government is up to," Marchetti said.

More Women Seek Public Office

Campus Digest News Service

What do Paul Laxalt and Jacob Javits have in common? Though Laxalt is a senator from Nevada and Javits is a senator from New York, both are Republicans and politicians. And both of them are being challenged by women candidates running against them.

Laxalt is from Nevada and Javits is from New York City. Both are Republican senators, and women are looking for elected office with political experience at state and local levels.

In fact, Elizabeth Holtzman, who now serves in the House of Representatives, is running against Javits in New York City. Holtzman is a member of the House of Representatives and an excellent example of the political talent being displayed by women in the United States.

Laxalt is challenged by Mary Gojkic, a woman who first served in the state assembly and then the senate. Gojkic has a strong conservative record in the state, and she has a difficult time unseating him.

In Florida, Lory Wilson has filed an independent effort to win the district held by Democrat Richard Stone. Eight other men also seek the office.

From 1972 until 1976, Wilson was the only state senator in Florida and the nation elected as an independent. Twelve Republicans and 21 Democrats are vying for seats in the House of Representatives. Some of the women are running for spots to which no incumbent is returning. Lynn Martin, a Republican from Illinois, is running for the seat vacated by presidential hopeful John Anderson.

Others, however, challenge well-established politicians. Golden Johnson, for example, is running against Peter Rodino in New Jersey.

While Iris Mitglang, chairwoman of the National Women's Political Caucus, insists that the number of women in the House of Representatives is increasing, she also points out that this still represents a token change.

"There are still only 17 women members of Congress," Mitglang says. "There are only 10.3 percent women in state legislatures. There are also only 3 percent women who are governors of any state although there are six women who are lieutenant governors."

In an editorial in the Women's Political Times, Mitglang also says that more feminists are learning about politics by running campaigns.

"This means," she says, "the next generation of political leaders will be feminists and that their issues will be raised in every campaign."

Many congresswomen are running for re-election to the House of Representatives. Five of these women are Republicans and ten are Democrats.

For many of the women, including Colorado Democrat Patricia Schroeder and New Jersey Republican Millicent Fenwick, prospects for returning to Congress seem good. Fenwick is interested in running on the Republican ticket against the incumbent Garry Hart.

Big Cars Become Affordable

With the rich leaving their gas-guzzling cars behind for more fuel-efficient ones, used car lots are filled with these one-time symbols of prestige.

Two kegs of beer will be given to any students who want to drive to campus and who have previously turned in a good credit risk.

The Idaho Lung Association and the Miller Brewing Company are co-sponsoring a "Tub race" to raise funds for scholarships in BU's respiratory therapy program.

The tub race will be held at half-time during the 1980-81 basketball game on Oct. 11.

Two kegs of beer will be given as first place prizes, one for the best decorated tub, and the other for the race winner.

Second and third place awards will also be given. All tubs must have a pledge sponsor. The sponsor must pay $100 as an entrance fee.

A booth will be set up in the SUB on Oct. 7 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Oct. 7 from 12 noon to 1 p.m. for anyone interested in registering or receiving further information on the race.

Average Tuition Rises 10 Percent

Campus Digest News Service

Tuition averages $3,297 at private four-year colleges in 1980-81, an increase of 10 percent over last year, according to College Scholarship Service.

The average fee at public colleges and universities is $768 for 1980-81, that represents an increase of 4.4 percent in the past year.

The total cost for students attending public four-year institutions has also gone up, rising 10.7 percent with an average cost of $3,409.

Tuition is up 16.6 percent at public two-year colleges and up 9.2 percent at private junior colleges.

Ex-Yippie Leader Turns to Lectures

Ed Decker, leader of "Ex-Mormons for Jesus," will be the featured speaker at the Student Union Building, on the campus of Boise State University. The Seminar will be held in the Big 4 Room on Friday at 7:30 p.m., and in the SUB Ballroom on Sat. morning at 9 a.m.

The seminar will address the questions: Is Mormonism Christian or Judeo-Christian? Is Jesus the Son of God? Is God an "Exalted Man" or Spirit? Is the Bible "the" Word of God or unreliable? Are Mormons saved?

Decker will speak about the real differences between Mormonism and Christianity.

Decker spent almost 20 years in the Mormon church as a "Temple Mormon" and Elder in the Melchizedek Priesthood. He was active in many areas of teaching the Latter-Day-Saint Theology.

Decker's ministry has been to actively seek to bring other Mormons into an understanding of the "Born Again" experience and out of the church.

KBSU Needs Assistance

The Public Affairs Department at KBSU would like socially-minded, creative, dependable students with good writing and interviewing skills to apply to work on their staff in the production of two original public affairs programs: "Women In Society," and "Toward the Year 2000: Public Policy and the Future."

Between one and four credits may be earned through the Department of Communication, depending upon degree of involvement.

To apply, contact Catherine Hart, Public Affairs Director, KBSU at 386-5653.

Fire Caution!

The late spring rains and early fall moisture contributed to a light fire season in 1980, according to Gordon Stevens, Fire and Aviation Branch Chief for the Boise National Forest. The Boise Forest has had 132 fires which is slightly below average, but burned nearly 3000 acres, which is above average for total acres burned.

Although the recent rain and cool temperatures have reduced the fire danger, hunters and wood cutters are cautioned that a few warm days can dry out the fuels, allowing damaging and costly fires. People who start wildfires are liable for the cost of suppression and damage.

The September twenty-first issue of Northwest, the Sunday magazine supplement of the Oregonian newspaper, was a pleasant surprise for anyone connected with Boise State. On the cover was a reproduction of the Rudolph Valentiner poster from the most recent issue of the Cold Drift, Boise State's literary magazine. Inside the magazine was a seven-page article on poetry at Boise State (the Cold Drift, the poetry in Public Places posters, and the Ashash Press) and on Tom Trusky the faculty member largely to blame for Boise State's change to write about something positive. O.B. is not just a junior college that grew up fast, it is a high school with ash trays in the halls, or a handy place to grab a diploma when you can't afford better. This university has the faculty, the facilities, and the widely varied student body necessary to be a really great institution: the only limits would be the inability to recognize BSU's potential or being crippled by a lack of funding. This is an ugly thing to think about when one is excited and confident and sounding off like a recruiting brochure.

The really heartening thing about the Oregonian article is that it proves that Boise State can make its mark in places other than the basketball court. Academics and arts at Boise State do make it do the outside world and they matter to others. There is the old argument that sports made Boise State's reputation in the Seventies, that may very well be true, but this is the Eighties and Boise State proves that Boise State can make its mark in places other than the sports world and they matter to others. There is the old argument that sports made Boise State's reputation in the Seventies, that may very well be true, but this is the Eighties and Boise State proves that Boise State can make its mark in places other than the sports world and they matter to others.

It is often said that 'lesser of two evils' theory has its roots in American political history. In 1964, people were forced to choose between Goldwater and Vietnam, and the young people who voted for Goldwater would see increasing involvement in Vietnam and the bombing of Hanoi. And so did. So in 1968 Americans elected a Republican to stop the "Democratic" conflict in Indochina. And so on and so on...

The problem is that politicians religiously follow the polls in much the same way that TV producers follow Nielsen ratings. Press agents, make-up artists, and advertisers work the campaign trail with the candidate deliberately create a Reality which appeals to the majority without offending anyone else. Many elected officials quit trying to be representatives or leaders, and instead would follow the weatherman of public opinion.

It is inevitable that third parties would evolve. In the hopes of offering an alternative which people would support, a few groups are vying for your vote. One of the groups here is a list of alternative candidates who feel that a protest vote for something you believe in is better than waving out in front of the tube on November 3.

Former Republican John Anderson has the most serious potential for the nontraditional apple cart. Although he is on the ballot in 40 states and has Federal Matching Funds, he is still number 3 in the polls. Anderson is again the no frills gun control and a gasoline tax to promote conservation. He has been called a political transvestite and there is some question as to whether he will draw more votes away from Carter or Reagan. But his popularity illustrates the public desire for a third option. With Dole's help, he may have a fighting chance.

Ed Clark, running on the Libertarian Party ticket, is on the ballot in all 50 states. "That government governs best which governs least," say the Libertarians, and they feel that government regulation of guns, industry, drugs, and motorcyle helmets. The Libertarians could pull a substantial fraction of the vote, though certainly not enough to win.

Barry Commoner is the Citizen's Party candidate and he says he will be happy with 5% of the vote. The thrust of his campaign is to bring control back to the local level and away from the multi-national corporations. Considering that Big Business helps finance most successful campaigns, Commoner may have a chance to get a voice to 1% of the vote. He has pointed out the following.

Among the lesser-knowns is Socialist Party nominee David McReynolds who wants to open discussion of Democratic Socialism. McReynolds wants to distribute the economy according to the "principle of need," then presumably the Social Security and Welfare departments would have some of the money and the politicians would have less control.

Gus Hall with the communist party is also calling for a non-equitable division of the economy among individuals and the government.

"Nothing, is the interest of the citizens of the U.S. Labor Party, and John Rankic with the American Party, though no information on their platforms was available at press time.

In the Sublime to Ridiculous category, a number of hopefuls are competing for votes. Pat Paulsen has been juggling for President since he first announced his candidacy in 1968. In Massachusetts, Paul E. Miller and Paul H. Fitor have been the favorite sons of the Liberty and Indecency Party. President Wolfepieler (his real name) is running as a 'Love and Death' leftist. And if you're still not sure which horse to back then cooking up your computer file, there's always Daily Dixie, Betty Bobb, Miss Piggy or Zippy the Pinhead.

Finally, if you distrust all political politicians, there's None of the Above, now appearing on the bottom of several state ballots. And according to the Youth International Party (Yippies), even if you plan on not voting this year, you're still casting a vote for Nobody. Nobody won 46% of the vote in 1968, and that's not even counting those who didn't register. Hog Farmer Wavy Gravy, the Yippie candidate and his running mate, "Nobody has no thoughts," he now enjoys in the polls.

And the always the possibili- that third parties could create a new system of political inevitability. After all, it is the only way to change the system. The Wimps, and the Mugwumps: Nobody took them seriously, either.

In the wake of the current college sports scandals, Swarthmore University has become the first in the nation to abolish all athletic scholarships whatever. "Heavens, in the interests of character building, moral integrity and fair play," announced President Hiram Swepson, "we will pay all our athletics a descent living wage instead.

This decision—the results of which are being closely watched by the leading institutions of higher learning and athletic prowess, culminated weeks of spirited debate on the Swarthmore University campus.

Leading the fight for radical change in the somewhat murky status quo was that powerful student group, the Associated Student Athletes, headed by Alan (Buck) Ace. The reason for such radical reforms is to stop the annual $1.2 million on the campuses, and there is some question as to whether the Swarthmore students have the right to control and a gasoline tax to promote conservation. He has be tesor Joseph Tweedelman, was immediately on his feet. "Are you saying that Swash University should hire a professional football team?"

"Well, it's certainly no job for amateurs," said Ace. "Take recruiting, for instance. You'd have to hire a pro immediately on his feel. "Amateurs," said the team?"

"Cold beer and hot girls or whatever some pimple-faced youth fast cars, politicians' strategy grids or whatever in order to con him into taking on this difficult and dangerous job. How much more honest it would be to simply run a classified ad: "Help Wanted-Aggressive six-foot-two, 300-pound middle linebacker. Knowledge of English not necessary, but must be liked. Starting salary, $30,000 per year. An Equal Opportunity Employer." It was President Siwash's turn to blanche. "Did you say $30,000 a year?"

Ace shrugged. "You get what you pay for. And don't forget that the fee-sea rights to the Super Bowl alone could bring us in close to a million bucks."

"I move Mr. Ace's plan to blanche," said President Siwash, "Just a minute," said Professor Tweedelman. "There is no way we could teach paid athletes like that even to read or write.""Darn," said Professor Tweedelman. "That will decimate our faculty."

With Tweedelman abstaining, the vote to divorce athletes form academics was unanimous. "Just think," said President Siwash, "we could be the richest university in the world if it weren't for the financial drain created by all our worthless academic students."

A committee was appointed to work on a solution to that problem.

Error Noted

Editor, the Arbiter:

This is to bring to your attention an error in the Sept. 24 Arbiter article headed "BSU's KBSU to Gain Watt and Grade Level." Mr. Irons has accomplished many deeds and deserves credit for a great improvement at KBSU; however, he has not been with KBSU since it first went on the air. I myself trained Tom to do this job in the spring of '79. KBSU has been active as of 1976. A marked three year difference. This may have been a petty error, but it makes myself wonder how carefully your articles are gathered and reported. Do not damage your credibility for small errors!

Loss to MSU 18-17

By Bud Humphrey
Sports Editor

There are three things which, as of this moment, Jim Criner-led Boise State football has not done: winning at Boisezeman, making the playoffs or any post season competition, beating the University of Montana at home.

Of course, this is a season for progress — in terms of the Boise State wins at Northern Arizona and Utah — and only one of those three goals is out of reach this season. Due to events in the rest of the conference, Boise State’s loss to Montana State at Boisezeman definitely does not knock the Broncos out of conference contention.

One big stumbling block, though, is the Montana Grizzlies. Four years ago, the Broncos beat Bozeman 17-14 in the last minute, before a shocked home crowd, and put the 1976 Bronco season out of reach for sure. The next Boise game, in 1978, involved Montanas holding BSU its second conference loss of that ill-fated season, 15-7.

These Montana squads have been unimpressive in overall competition to the BSU teams they have played. But old grudges will out, especially when looking to be even less impressive.

The fact that three weeks ago, they wrestled a 60-27 lollipop from the ill-fated season, 15-7.

The Bronco offense, inconsistent in the early going the last few games, was still stifled while the Bobcats gained a deliberate 10-0 halftime lead. Then touchdowns by Cedric Minter and Terry Andrus: while two Klever passes turned out touchdowns against Simon Fraser, none has crossed the line in the last few.

Klevers also ran for two scores and did some punting before his untimely injury.

The Montana defense is similar to the Broncos in formation, according to BSU head coach Jim Criner, and much the same as Boise, has quite a strong inside linebacking contingent in seniors Kent Clausen and Dave Gleason.

Top defender for the Grizzlies, Clausen is touted by the school as an All-American prospect. Leader in the secondary for the experienced defense is strong safety Jayc Buck.

Of course, there is little as different from a Bronco team that returns home lacking its wounds. Boise State was failed in its attempt last Saturday to pull out a fourth-quarter victory at Montana State game. Jeff Taylor will fill Sosnowski’s tackle spot, and Dan LeBeau, who tackled 11 corners last week, moves up to start at outside linebacker.

The game this Saturday will start at 7:30 pm. at Bronco Stadium, and will be broadcast on KBOI Radio, 670 AM.

Field Hockey Evenys

Out with 1-1 Record

by Terrie H. Rowley
Arbiter Staff

Boise State’s Field Hockey started the season out with a 1-1 record this fall. BSU scored three times against Brigham Young last weekend to take the season in proper Bronco fashion, then deadlocked with Colorado University 1-1 and lost to the Provo Club 2-0.

Coach Jayne Van Wassenhove is pleased with team performance and looks for further improvement. “We did really well for the amount of team experience we have,” said Van Wassenhove.

Steve Sosnowski, the first Bronco to return home lacking its wounds, was still stifled while the Bobcats gained a deliberate 10-0 halftime lead. Then touchdowns by Cedric Minter and Terry Andrus: while two Klever passes turned out touchdowns against Simon Fraser, none has crossed the line in the last few.

Of course, there is little as different from a Bronco team that returns home lacking its wounds. Boise State was failed in its attempt last Saturday to pull out a fourth-quarter victory at Montana State game. Jeff Taylor will fill Sosnowski’s tackle spot, and Dan LeBeau, who tackled 11 corners last week, moves up to start at outside linebacker.

The game this Saturday will start at 7:30 pm. at Bronco Stadium, and will be broadcast on KBOI Radio, 670 AM.

Bottom Ten Teams

Don’t Eat It Much

It has to be the college football coach’s biggest fear. More disappointing than any option. It took one week after another, literally reminding the coach of how crispy his team is when he already knew.

The “Bottom Ten”—college football’s ultimate in humiliation, published Thursday in the Statesman— has to be the shrug in the title of logging college coaches nationally, not to mention the teams themselves. Losing streaks rather than winning streaks are the topic of conversation, and the team that finishes number one really has nothing to be proud of.

What perhaps began as something of a joke has turned into a weekly ritual of sorts: just as college football has its Top Twenty poll, it also has its Bottom Ten, ranking the ten worst teams in the nation each week.

But while the “Bottom Ten” may seem funny to those armor-back quarterbacks who smirk when they read which team Vanderbilt will lose to next, it’s hardly a laughing matter to those poor souls down in Nashville; like any other team ranked in the “Bottom Ten”, the Commodores hardly need to be reminded of their “cellar-dweller” status.

Imagine the head coach of Northwestern University’s (a perennial “Bottom Ten” team) on a Monday morning hangover from a 49-7 loss to Washington that weekend. As he opens his paper to the sports section, he sees his team ranked eighth in the “Bottom Ten”, moving up a couple of notches. How encouraging.

Steve Harvey, who writes the “Bottom Ten”, has softened up a bit this year. Last season he not only ranked the ten supposedly worst teams in the country, but also predicted each teams next loss.

It must be demoralizing to look forward to a projected defeat of 56-12 when your team hasn’t even stepped on the field yet. But the humiliation doesn’t stop with “projected losses”: the Bottom Ten also has categories for “others not receiving votes,” the “crummy game of the week”, and the “route of the week”.

However, like the Top Twenty, the Bottom Ten is almost somewhat priceless. Just as one knows that Alabama, Notre Dame, USC, Michigan, and Ohio State will be on top of the polls, too, does one know where Northwestern, Vanderbilt and Oregon State will be ranked.

The Leadership Training

Two days with Matt Weinstein that will bring power, excitement and a new meaning to your working relationships and your professional life.

 Called by People magazine “The Master of Playfulness” and one of the “100 Best People in the World,” Matt Weinstein has facilitated hundreds of motivational programs for diverse audiences across the United States.

This original model of group interaction proposed that a task-group is like a microcosm of the psychodynamics of any group—same rules, same psychology, same dynamics. As in all task groups, disagreements will arise - and workshop participants learn how to cope with the stress among themselves, all of which can continue in their customary supportive relationship.

And more importantly, participants in The Leadership Training learn the psychological dynamics of making successful, winning and fostering satisfying interpersonal relationships and that celebration leads to a feeling of excitement and commitment to each other. This special bond of openness, friendship, and high-energy support is the trademark of Matt Weinstein’s motivational Magic.

Women Improve Performances

BSU—Improved performances from all BSU women’s cross country runners was the outcome of the Gan responsive training meet, in Eugene, OR last weekend. The 5,000-meter course was run at Lane Community College and a total of 87 women ran in the race.

Topping the Boise State runners was senior Kathy Kenworthy, who finished the course 18:46:7 for a 17th place finish. Junior Judy Smith was the second Bronco finisher, crossing the line in the 19th position. Freshman Cindy Crow was 25th. Judy Anordon, in her first race of the 1980 season finished 33rd and was fourth among BSU runners.

“We had excellent performances by all athletes. Each woman ran lifetime bests. This is particularly significant in light of the fact that the past week was our highest quality and quantity workout week this year. Our athletes were not rested for this one because we wanted to work for the Regionals. I was extremely pleased with our performance as a team,” said BSU coach Joe Neff.

Tennis

Broncos Top ISU

BSU—Varsity tennis at ISU got a solid fall start, as the Broncos beat Idaho State 7-2 in a match played at the Boise Racquet and Swim Club last weekend. The Broncos swept the six singles matches and one of the three doubles matches. Winners for BSU included Steve Appletton at number one, Eddie Perkins at two, Chris Langdon at number three, Mike Macabi at number four, John Click at number five and Heath Swessy at number six.

The number one doubles team of Appletton and Langdon also won. The Broncos will travel to Pocatello this weekend to play the Bengals once again.

But what must be really depressing for the latter group is to hear Ohia State coach Earl Bruce talk about the Buckeyes’ lousy start when they only beat Syracuse 31-21. He said that the Buckeyes “are looking forward to Ohio State by that score. It would undoubtedly lift them out of the cellar.”

The results of the Tuesday night game against Northwest Nazarene College were not available as of this writing.

Sophomore Kristi Brookby and Brom Tweetsie from Boise State were sent from Bailey for outstanding overall performances so far this season. In the number one position on the team, setter Bergen and hitter Brookby appear to be headed toward another shining season. Also outstanding has been freshman hitter Lisa Picketing, who killed 15 plays against the Montana teams.

Despite these early successes, Ohia State coach Earl Bruce talks about the Buckeyes’ lousy start when they only beat Syracuse 31-21. He said that the Buckeyes “are looking forward to Ohio State by that score. It would undoubtedly lift them out of the cellar.”

The Broncos have continued their grueling workout sessions with coach Joe Neff following the season’s first meet, Sept. 25 at the Peltur Invitational.

The meet should prove to be important for the three Big Sky teams determining league competition and team strength. The Broncos will also be hosting the Big Sky Conference-District 7 championship meet in Boise, Nov. 15.

This weekend the Broncos, Griese and Miller will compete in a five-mile run in Julia Davis Park in Boise. The meet will begin at 11 a.m.

The Boise Gallery of Art

The Boise Gallery of Art has begun its program of Fall Art Classes featuring a variety of instruction for children and adults. Children’s classes are scheduled to occur on Monday-Saturday afternoons and adults are on Monday-Thursday evenings. Classes begin at varied times through December 8th. All classes take place at the Gallery and are taught by a highly qualified staff of instructors. Students are introduced to a variety of techniques and ideas; all provide individual instruction in a group class situation. Encouragement to express own ideas is primary.

Art Instruction Offered

Classes featuring a varied selection

Children’s classes are scheduled on Monday through Thursday evenings. Offerings include Watercolor, Chinese Brush Writing, Drawing, Still-life Glass, Color and Design in Painting, and Stained Glass Lamps. Two additional offerings for adults include a workshop for teachers, parents and school volunteers entitled, “Children’s Visual Arts,” co-sponsored by Boise State University’s Department of Continuing Education and offered for 2 units of credits through the Teacher Education Department. The Gallery also continues to offer a Tuesday evening, non-instructed, Life Drawing Session at 7:30pm. To enroll or for further information visit or call the Gallery, 670 S. Julia Davis Drive, 234-8330.

The Boise Allied Arts Council

The Boise Allied Arts Council has come a long way since it was first incorporated, in 1968, to encourage cultural growth and serve as a federation of arts organizations, businesses and individuals.

BAAC is still a non-profit organization and offers 14 new membership services designed to assist fine arts. Bailey, a natural performer, is totally at ease and in-character before the camera. The other performance consists of only two short scenes starring Henry, the carnival fat man. In one, Harold sings “The Fan Man Blues.” It’s an incredibly touching scene—a pure trembled lament issues from a mountain of flesh. In the other scene, the fat man alone, silently dancing and repeating in the rain, fully clothed. Otherwise, Carry is Freaks (the 1980’s movie which chronicled the lives of a carnival’s special people) gone bad. The script is a mess. The clashing subplots: Joey Foster walks through the film. Gary Busey over-acts his way through, and the conclusion pure tacked-on Hollywood-ending.

Boise Group Grows

The Boise Allied Arts Council has been so phenomenal that volunteer help is now needed. In fact, the 1999 membership has already quadrupled.

The Boise Allied Arts Council is located at 777 S. 8th street, in the Marketplace. For information, volunteer, and season ticket purchases, call, 344-7955.

Talented Brothers Join

To Exhibit Their Art Work

The Boise Gallery of Art will open to the public an exhibition of recent drawings and paintings by The Roberts Brothers: George, Michael and Robert, on Saturday, October 4, 1980 which will extend through Sunday, November 2.

George Roberts of Boise, teaches at the Art Department of Boise State University, Michael and Robert both reside in Iowa City, Iowa.

In preparation for their showing, diligently on works for this exhibition, Friday, 10 am-5 pm.; Saturday, then technique reveals and that they be developed beyond the use of the materials used to produce them. To have a slick character where any mastery of materials was evident was to be avoided. Content is also important. From that point, the brothers worked diligently on projects for this exhibition which, in the completion, arrival and gathering of all together, began to show aspects of their association as relatives.

The concept for the whole exhibition is unique in that seldom family associates, artists as well. An additional quality is that all brothers have had similar educational experiences, many of which have been with the same instructors in the same schools.

The Gallery hours are Tuesday-Friday, 10am-5pm; Saturday and Sunday, 12 noon-5 pm; closed on Monday. Suggested donation for the Gallery for adults is 50 cents and Senior Citizens and children 12 and under, 25 cents.
Groups Give Exhibits
Fair Provides Exposure
Laurie Lowe, Arbiter Staff

Hot air balloon rides, a live band, exhibits, 5-cent frisbees, cotton candy and informative fun is what the Student Activities Organization presented when they held their fourth annual Organizational Fair Sept. 24.

The Fair, held on the lawn between the Special Events Center and the SUB from 9:30-2:00, Tables were set up side by side on each side of the sidewalk with various organizations using them. The Fair intended to achieve a carnival atmosphere.

A tent was set up on one side of the tables with a live band playing near the Spec Center. The band played country music and rock n roll.

As an added attraction hot air balloon rides were available for $.50 per person.

There were exhibits to see and things to buy, all centered around the main purpose of the Organizational Fair—the organizations themselves.

The Organizational Fair was designed with two purposes in mind. The first was to give each recognized BSU organization the chance to publicly identify themselves to the BSU students and make them aware of the variety of organizations BSU has to offer.

The Fair gave students the opportunity to choose if they would like to be involved with an organization.

The second purpose was to give the organizations a chance to use the event as a fund raiser. The organizations varied from the Student Social Workers Organization, the Business Department, and the BSU Student Programs Board to Driscoll Hall, the Towers, Campus Crusade for Christ, and a table for Frank Church.

The non-blue portions of Bussy's performance. Back when he was with the lyrics, "Life is a carnival, two bits a short"; two bits just about sums up which parts of this cinematic carnival are really worthwhile.

Hopscotch
Algy Swineburn (★★½)

The person I saw Hopscotch with called it a "mode of transportation film." Since the screen was often filled with panoramic shots of vehicles ranging from the Concorde to a hydrofoil to a pint sized British police car, I had to agree. But aside from a Transportation fixation and a miserable attempt to revive the Glenda Jackson-Walter Matthau reparte first done in House Calls, the film was really quite fun. Matthau plays an ex-CIA agent who writes an expose of the spy business, as revenge for trying to put him out to pasture with a desk job, and then leads his angry former boss on a world wide chase punctuated with practical jokes. The jokes are loads of fun and the ending is the best joke of all. If you hate the government and like Walter Matthau then Hopscotch (which could have been called Oscar Madison Comes in From the Cold) is for you.
