Candidates Voice Views

Fee Increase Seems Probable

by Marianne Flagg
News Editor

Elections are being held today and tomorrow to fill five positions in the Associated Student Body Senate.

All candidates interviewed expressed resignation about the possible fee increase in the Spring semester of 1981. They reluctantly favor an increase, if the only alternative is tuition or loss of faculty members.

The Arbiter was unable to reach School of Business candidate Robert Bennet for an interview.

The only close race for the Senate appears to be in the School of Business. There are four candidates running for one available spot.

Mike LaTour, who is running for re-election, said his experience as a senator and as a business student can help him maintain "an active role in representing the student interest in a political sense."

LaTour said his previous experience in financial underwriting and budgeting is "a key part of the job," and that he was "much more qualified" for the senate in that area.

He said he helped organize an anti-1 Percent Initiative rally and actively supported activities of the student lobbyists.

"The most pressing concern students face is being made to pay fee increases because the State Legislature can't do its job effectively," LaTour said.

"None of us wants to see a fee increase and we must function to make our feelings known to the State Board in relation to it."

LaTour was previously elected to the Senate during the 1978-79 term.

Mike Klappenbach, candidate for the School of Business, said he sees the lack of an adequate amount of un-reserved parking spaces at Boise State and the inability of freshman students to get into classes as the two most important issues facing students.

Klappenbach said he thought the possible spring semester fee increase was "important, but out of our hands."

"The only thing we can do is lobby, and I don't really see that happening," Klappenbach said. "It looks like there is going to have to be one."

He said he felt the fee increase would be temporary and that it would not extend beyond three semesters.

Klappenbach, who has been a student at BSU for seven years and has a degree in Finance, said that the locking out of "2000 students" because of accreditation standards was unfortunate, and that similar lock-outs could be prevented in the future.

"They (the Business School) don't have to add new teachers, but they could have more part-time staff," he said.

Classes in Business could also be scheduled in other buildings on campus "if they needed the space," Klappenbach added.

Liberal Arts Majors

Computer Service Aids Career Seekers

by Laurie Johnston
Associate Editor

Liberal Arts majors are not the only ones with career problems.

Even business majors, who presumably are riding the direct route to success, find that the business world offers a variety of positions with many responsibilities and remunerations. With the inevitable scramble for jobs at graduation, particularly in today's tight job market, the chances of landing the one that insures satisfaction are limited, to say the least.

The time to start thinking about your future is now, whether you are a freshman or a senior. If you've been putting off such considerations because you don't know where to start, head for the office of Career and Financial Guidance.

There, both human and scientific resources can help clear up the muddle of impressions students may have now, and can significantly add to their awareness of what is out there where college ends and the "real world" begins.

One of the big draws in the Career Guidance Department is a very approachable and compliant computer. A remarkable feature of this electronic marvel is the unimposing appearance. Even more remarkable is the ease with which one can extract information.

An instruction booklet contains a questionnaire which a student must fill out.

Then, after putting the answers into the computer, the computer will print out the careers that should appeal to you, on the basis of your answers.

If you are amazed at the computer's suggestions, ask it why it thinks you would make a better baker than a banker and it will tell you which answers eliminated "banker."

This is one test that will let you change your answers. The computer will tell you exactly how to proceed. For example, if you tell the computer that you wouldn't think of taking a job with a starting salary of less than $1250 per month, you may find that you end up with a narrow range of options.

Church Visits BSU Campus

by Ryndy Reed
Associate Editor

The Boise State University Students for Frank Church held a rally for the Idaho senator in the Boisean Lounge of the Student Union Building during the noon hour on Monday.

Senator Church received a round of applause when he entered the lounge and he received even more during his speech to the students.

The Democratic incumbent is running against Republican Congressman Steve Symms. The two men are waged against each other in one of the most hotly contested political campaigns in the Idaho history.

The candidates are ideologically on opposite sides of the political spectrum and their supporters are all wondering which one will emerge the winner on November 4.

Senator Church outlined the advantages of being a citizen of Idaho.

He spoke of the "great green glory" of our national forests and other public lands. Church went on to outline the goals of the Sagebrush Rebellion, which he said would ultimately see these public lands under the title of private owners.

Church said that "Idaho is not for sale" and that if the Sagebrush Rebellion is successful there will be a great change in Idaho. He urged the students to try and help "nip this movement in the bud."

The senior senator from Idaho, Church said that he has been effective in watching out for the state's interests in Washington.

Church said he has sponsored many bills that have helped the senior citizens of the nation and has been instrumental in helping to guard Idaho's natural resources and water.

Church reiterated his position against gun control.

He said that his opponent had introduced 136 bills to Congress and that none of them had passed.

Church had several things to say about the world political scene. As chairman of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, he said he has been in a position to monitor the position that the U.S. has in the world.

He spoke of the "favored place" the United States occupies in the world. "We are a strong, sturdy nation and we must not forget it" he said.

After speaking for about 30 minutes, the Senator answered questions from the audience.

Several students questioned him on his positions about nuclear power, campaign financing and his ability to work with Reagan if he is elected president. He said that he would be willing to work with any president, Republican or Democrat, if he felt that the president had the country's best interest foremost.

Opportunities

Information on the Truman Scholarship is now available in the Honors Program Office, Ed. 707, 385-1121 from Dr. William Mech, program director.

Eligible students must meet the following qualifications: full-time student of sophomore standing, 3.0 GPA; U.S. citizen or U.S. national; selected a major that will permit admission to a graduate program leading to a career in government; have a demonstrated interest in a career in government at the federal, state or local level.

Local deadline for scholarship application is Nov. 17, 1980. Interested students should contact the Honors Office.

The Washington Center for Learning Alternatives will sponsor a three week symposium on the 1981 presidential inauguration and national policy making for undergraduate, graduate and foreign students Jan 1-23, 1981.

Highlight of this year's symposium will be the inauguration of a President, and the swearing in of the 97th Congress.

The symposium, Washington Winter '81, will provide students with an opportunity to analyze and discuss the inaugural process as it relates to larger national policy concerns.

Applications will be accepted until Nov. 17, 1980. Early applications are recommended so that special inaugural arrangements can be made.

For further information, write: Director, Washington Winter '81, 1705 DeSales St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 (202) 659-8510.

Announcements

Two women educators from Africa will be in Boise Thursday, Oct. 23 as part of the national African Educators Program.

Lucy Pepra-tawiah, Mampon/Ash, Ghana, and Rejoice Ngongo, Stranger, South Africa, will speak at a noon luncheon exchange at Boise State University, and at an afternoon tea, from 4-6 PM in the house of Governor John Evans.

The luncheon, which is sponsored by the Boise branch of the American Association of University Women and the Phi chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, will cost $2 per person. Reservations can be made by calling Edwena Eyre, 344-2884, on or before Oct. 22.

Support the Broncos for their last two home games, this weekend and Homecoming weekend, by hitting the Giant Pep Rallies Friday night before each game. The event is on the parking lot of the Brass Lamp Pizza Parlor on Vista, and Coors beer is free with legal I.D. and student I.D. (non-students will pay a nominal price for beer). The rallies are sponsored by the local Coors distributor, Brass Lamp, and the B.S.U. Athletic Department.

Dr. Dennis Donoghue, prof. of political science at BSU, will speak Wed., Oct. 29 at 8 PM in the Boisean Lounge of the SUB on "New Trends in American Electoral Politics."

Admission is free for the presentation which will cover the decline in partisanship, the increased role of personality and the mass media in American politics.

Donoghue will also make predictions for the 1980 elections.

The only U.S. Presidential candidate to appear at Boise State University, Libertarian Ed Clark, will speak in the Nez Perce Room of the Student Union Building Saturday, Oct. 25, from 12 noon-1 PM. His appearance at BSU is sponsored by the Boise State Students for Clark organization. The public is invited to attend.

The BSU Honors Program is sponsoring a seminar of candidates for the Ada County Commission Thurs. Oct. 23, room 163 Science-Education Bldg. at 4 PM. Admission is free, the public is invited to attend.

Bryant Eastman will show his work in Gallery I of the new Museum of Arts from Oct. 5-31. He is a former BSU student who studied under BSU Prof. John Killmaster.

The BSU M.O.A. will be open Monday-Friday, 9:30-4:30.

Stephen Smith, an advertising design major at Boise State, is exhibiting his acrylic paintings in Gallery II, Rm. 256 of the Liberal Arts Building.

George Gledkill, a graduate student, is also exhibiting his ceramics in Gallery II.

The Physics and Engineering Dept. of BSU is sponsoring a free lecture-demonstration "Energy for the Future-The Breeder Reactor" by Chuck Spets, Oct. 30, 3:30 PM, room 112 Education Bldg.

Spets, a nuclear information specialist of Oak Ridge Associated Universities, Tenn. will discuss the nation's fuel and energy options and the future role of breeder reactors.

Dr. Jerry Jose, a foreign language professor, will open Boise State University's foreign language colloquia this year with a lecture on Fernando Arabal's play, El cementario de automoviles, to be given Wednesday, Oct. 29 at 4 PM in the Student Union Teton Room.

The public is invited to attend the free lecture which is sponsored by the BSU Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures.

 Melissa Coon, a sophomore in marketing, is running as a write-in candidate in the School of Business. Coon said her decision to run for the Senate arose from her desire to "get more involved with student government."

"I'd be real interested to see where my money's going," Coon said.

Coon said she was "not too hip" on a fee increase, and that "students shouldn't have to pay much more." "Our taxes should cover [funding for in-state residents]," she said.

"Basically, I would like to see students get more of a say, because I don't think we do get much of a say," Coon said.

Not only will the computer detail the duties and responsibilities of a potential job, but it will describe the training usually required, the hiring procedures, the demand for that particular occupation and the potential salaries, both starting and eventual.

The computer will suggest courses of study and books available that may be helpful. It can even tell you if there is another school that you should consider with a particular job in mind.

You can use the computer at any time. Anyone in Room 117 of the Administration Building can help you get started, and from then on the computer tells you what to do.

Even if you get lost, you simply type in "HELP" on the keyboard and the computer will calmly list your next moves.

There has been no need so far to schedule appointments for the computer's use, but that may change when the word gets around.

If you feel that you would rather discuss your future with a human advisor, you can do that too. Career counseling is available as well as workshops on job-hunting, interview training, and help with such details as the preparation of a dynamic resume.

1973-1980 — Education Appropriations

One of the major functions of Congress is the appropriating of funds for government programs. Incredibly, Steve Symms has consistently voted against all education appropriations. Of special interest — In 1976, President Ford vetoed the Education Appropriations bill because Congress has insisted on funding for category B students under Impact Aid (PL 984) against the President's recommendation. Congress voted to override the veto — House of Representatives vote; 379-41; Senate vote: 88-12. Symms voted against overriding the veto. Church voted in favor of the veto override.

1975—Education for the Handicapped

In July of 1975, Congress came down firm on the side of equal education opportunities for the handicapped children of the nation. In a landmark decision for the handicapped, both the Senate and the House voted for a bill to provide a free, appropriate public education for handicapped children. Passed the House; 404-7 Passed the Senate: 87-7 Symms Again voted no.

1977—Law School Libraries

In 1977, the American Bar Association threatened the accreditation of the University of Idaho Law School because the institution was unable to adequately fund textbooks for the law school library. Two minor bills were introduced, one by Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island and Rep. Nedzi of Michigan. Both bills amended the U.S. Code to provide libraries of all accredited law schools may become depository libraries of government publications. Of special interest to Idaho — Passage of the bills provided the law school with an annual federal publication list worth $8,000 to $10,000. Fire and Brimstone Sermon

Students Hear Bible Preacher

by Don Barclay
Arbiter Editor

The normal morning routine at BSU was broken last Wednesday when a traveling Christian fundamentalist preacher gave a surprise sermon on the lawn near the Business Building.

Lay preacher Paul Franklin, who gave his address as "the coast," carried a large banner emblazoned with an exhortation to read the Bible and the Biblical quote "Beware of False Teachers" during length of his sermon.

A milling crowd of up to thirty or forty persons listened to Franklin deliver his fire and brimstone sermon. The crowd was mostly ambivalent towards Franklin until he began to speak out against abortion and women's rights, at which point several women in the crowd shouted back taunts at Franklin.

One woman made an obscene gesture at Franklin when he referred to all women who would have an abortion as "murderesses," and Franklin retorted by saying that the only reason a woman would support abortion was because she enjoyed "jumping in the sack and liked sex as much as the man did."

Some students in the crowd expressed derision at Franklin, but after the sermon several students went over and expressed solidarity with him.

The bearded Franklin, who was wearing a "God Bless America" baseball cap, jeans, and a back-packer's nylon coat, told the Arbiter that he spends part of his time working in order to finance his trips around the West preaching the Bible.

Franklin does his traveling in a brown van that sports Biblical quotations and Reagan for President stickers. Franklin is not aligned with any organized religion but believes that it is his duty to spread the word of God by preaching in informal "non-witnessing" situations.

Like many Bible-oriented preachers, Franklin believes that the preaching of the word has become a soft-sell in "the calm Christian church" and that it is necessary to put the fear of damnation and a sense of personal responsibility back into Christian preaching.

When asked if his "Beware of False Teachers" banner might apply to him, Franklin admitted that it was a "legitimate question."

"I'm not interested in starting any kind of a movement however, I'm just interested in turning people onto preaching and reading the Bible," he said.

Franklin also said that his support of the pro-military, pro-capital punishment Reagan is justified in the Bible and is not contrary to Christian philosophy.

"Capital punishment was used in the Bible," Franklin said, "as when God punished Cain for killing Abel."

"Unlike the Jews, Christians aren't supposed to establish a kingdom on earth and the Bible, it says that there is need for governments."

Speaking on the Reagan military philosophy, Franklin said, "As far as where Reagan's head is at, he doesn't want to take over the world but is realistic enough to see the need for defense."

"He advocates a strong military and so do I," Franklin said.

Franklin said that he didn't meet much resistance to his preaching during his travels and that it didn't take much personal courage for him to stand up in front of a possibly hostile crowd and preach.

"Compared to the boldness of the guys that preached in the Bible, I consider myself a flake."

Over each year have supported the same voter. Your remarks on HB 377 concerning voter registration have been duly noted by Boise State, as we have also been working with the Capital High students on this legislation.

Hopefully some day we can get a reb on voter equity. Good work Roger. You have us in your camp.

said she would like to see realized.

Holt said that in addition to revitalizing the Student Health Services Advisory Board, she wants Boise State to develop effective educational programs on alcohol, drug abuse, and blood pressure screening.

Her situation as a nursing student in the pre-Baccalaureate program, an RN, and an older student, provides her with the ability to "see several sides," and to help returning older students cope with the pitfalls of re-entering the educational system.

Holt said she realizes what a "hardship" a fee increase would impose on students, but that she realizes such an increase is "inevitable."

"I only hope it will be temporary," she said.

Bob Stroud is seeking re-election from the School of Education.

The enjoyment he receives from working in the Senate and in politics is the motivating force in his desire to serve another term in the Senate, Stroud said.

He cited the ailing athletic ticket situation and parking problems as among the most important problems facing BSU students.

The most pressing concern for students is the possible fee increase next Spring.

"I'm in favor of the fee increase only because there has to be one," Stroud said. "I just hope they keep it as small as possible."

The most serious academic crisis which could arise as a direct result of financial hardship at Boise State is the loss of quality faculty members, Stroud said.

Elections will be held today and tomorrow. Polling tables will be located in all buildings on campus.

Ticket Controversy Still Hot

by Meg Fereday
Arbiter Staff

Enacted following a meeting of BSU Senate and athletic personnel, the new athletic ticket policy requires each student to show his or her student card and photo ID upon picking up student tickets.

The student activity card is also required at the gate for admission to the game.

"It's a tough policy, but I think it's fair", says ASB President Sally Thomas. "The meeting we called was to form such a policy—the agreement was unanimous to protect the students."

By the Wednesday before the Idaho game, there were no tickets left, and a substantial amount of the tickets that were sold had gone to UI students.

This week, tickets have sold just as fast for the Weber State game, however, the policy was waiting for "it"—"it" being the onslaught of students eager to pick up their allotted 5000 full-time tickets and 1500 part-time and guest tickets.

This time, there will hopefully be enough tickets to go around to all BSU students desiring them; that's a ratio of 5000 full-time tickets to approximately 6000 fulltime students.

Under the new policy, every full-time student is allowed a ticket plus a guest ticket.

Every part-time student pays $2.50 per ticket and can also buy one guest ticket. "The only complaint we get is when we run out of guest tickets," Ron Stephenson said.

Stephenson, who sells tickets in the varsity center ticket office, stressed that the BAA has nothing to do with the student ticket sales; the BAA is concerned with the season ticket sales only.

"This policy was determined by the ASB Senate with the Athletic Dept. The Athletic Dept. can make no 'hard and fast' rules." (In ticket sales policy).

Students interviewed about how they felt about the new ticket policy gave these responses:

Nancy Ryan said, "I think it's stupid. I'd rather just bring my ticket to the game" (and not the student ID card as well). Chris Copple said that "it puts a lot of pressure on people who have to buy tickets for guests," meaning that it is possible to buy only one ticket extra.

Mom and Dad have to have two children at BSU in order to get guest tickets.

"I think it's adequate—a good policy that'll cut out cheating," Donald Johnson said as he waited in line. One anonymous person wrote in the Student Ticket Sales suggestions book that Photo ID should be next year's policy.

Mary Foley of the ticket sales desk says that the Weber State game will probably be sold out by Wednesday, as there were approximately 500 student tickets and 175 student-guest tickets left today.

Debaters Take on Senate Politics

Tomorrow in LA 203, the Boise State Debate Club sponsors a great event for 1980: a four member student panel will analyze and discuss areas of candidate agreement on issues, candidate disagreements, and also the directness of address to questions asked in the Church/Symms debate.

Beginning at 8 p.m., the debate will be monitored over T.V. units; after the debate of candidates, the panel and moderator discussion begins. The panel consists of students from rhetoric, debate, and persuasion classes. Discussion will involve pre-determined questions concerning the debate.

The purpose of sponsoring this event is to encourage viewing of the televised debate, and to involve persons critically in the political process.

Peace Corps Slates Effort

Recruiting representatives for the Peace Corps and VISTA (Volunteers In Service To America), will be on the BSU campus Tuesday thru Friday, Nov. 4-7. The visit comes approximately 20 years from the day that John F. Kennedy issued his call, from the steps of the University of Michigan, to international service through the Peace Corps.

Deanne Amaden, former VISTA volunteer and recruiting team leader, will be located at an information booth in the S.U.B.

lobby on the BSU campus Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 4-5 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Individual interviews can be scheduled for Nov. 6-7 through the Career & Financial services office, Admin. Bldg, Rm 117. A special Peace Corps and VISTA film seminar is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 4, from noon - 1:30 p.m. in the Teton Room of the S.U.B. Both students and community residents are invited to the seminar. Local residents are encouraged to come to the campus for information about the programs.

CAREERS IN POWER

 MORRISON KNUDSEN

Interviews on Campus
October 29

That's what the M-K Power Group offers. We're building to meet tomorrow's energy needs, with full capabilities for the electric utility industry — fossil, nuclear, geothermal, solar, and advanced technologies. And a full range of services to support those capabilities: design, engineering, construction, and construction management.

Power — we think it's what the future's all about. If you think it's your future, too, see your placement director and arrange for an interview. If you have additional questions, call toll-free. We'll be glad to discuss the future with you.

M-K POWER GROUP: SERVICE TO THE POWER INDUSTRY

Editorial

Vote Student in 1980

In the national election of the president, and in the statewide elections for U.S. Senate and Congressional seats, there are a lot of issues to consider when choosing among candidates: foreign relations, the economy, domestic policies, all are vitally important national issues. Voting for a candidate to a national office on the basis of his stand on just one issue would be extremely short sighted. In the races for the Idaho Legislature the situation is somewhat different however; the number of issues are fewer, their impact is less than on the national level, and it is thus more understandable to vote for a candidate on the basis of one or two particular issues.

As students, one of our principle concerns in Idaho Legislative races should be how the candidates stand on the future of higher education in our state. With the passage of in-state-tuition a very real possibility in the next legislative session (an increase of $200 per semester is quite conceivable if in-state-tuition passes the legislature), it is up to students and their sympathizers to vote for state representatives and senators who will uphold the rights of Idaho students, particularly the right to a reasonably low priced education in their home state. And a low cost education should be a right; while the recent Idaho philosophy of making the user pay may apply when paying for snowmobile trails or parking lots for inner-tubers, it shouldn't apply when paying for higher education—a well educated person has considerably greater value to this state than an exhilarated snow-machinist or a wet tuber.

Student's successfully uniting to vote for legislative candidates is not just a pipedream either; Idaho legislative races are small enough that a united student vote could very easily swing an election in favor of a pro-education candidate. The most striking example of the power of student vote is in Boise's District 15, where well over fifty percent of the population is composed of students, enough by far to elect two pro-education representatives and a pro-education senator. To make a student vote of this type work, however, it is necessary for students to not vote straight party lines in the legislative races, and for students to find out who the pro-education candidates are. To assist in this the Arbiter will try to keep readers informed as to who the friends of higher education are in this year's legislative races and to publish the past education voting records of legislators running for re-election. By the way, it is also necessary for students to register so that they can vote; this can be done until October 29 at the county court house.

Jully Thomas

The State Board of Education has officially notified students of the Board's intent to set a hearing for their December meeting for the purpose of determining whether or not to raise student fees effective Jan., '81. The increase to full-time students, if adopted, would be $50 per semester; to part-time students, $4 per credit hour; and to out-of-state students, $100 per semester. The increase would be in effect for one semester only: Spring '81, according to the notice of intent.

Except for the increase to out-of-state students (who can be charged tuition), the fees are earmarked for other-than-academic needs of the universities and colleges thereby remaining within the widely accepted definition of fees instead of being tuition which is considered illegal to charge to resident students.

Because of this splitting of fees and tuition, students' money goes into physical plant maintenance, athletics, bonds to pay for buildings, and the like. None of the dollars collected from students can be directed toward direct academic costs such as faculty salaries or academic supplies.

So, here comes the rub. Students attend college to achieve an education. Their major asset to that education comes through direct academic routes, and the consistent sentiment on the campuses is "we'd rather our $40 go toward the library or faculty salaries than toward upkeep or football." And $40 is $40, what's the difference whether someone calls it fees or tuition?

The difference is threefold: philosophical, political, and financial, each one of major importance to students.

Philosophically, citizens of the State of Idaho, recognizing that education leads to the strengthening of the Republic (the Territorial Charter rephrased), stated their intent to provide Idaho residents with "free Common Schools." The framers of that charter recognized that a more highly educated citizen returns to the state more dollars in taxes, greater community involvement, and stronger social concerns. This recognition, in its implementation, has kept Idaho a tuition-free state for more than 100 years.

The political arena has witnessed many struggles over tuition to Idaho's resident students of higher education. So far the intent of our state's founders has withstood the attacks, but they keep coming. The '81 Legislative Session is almost certain to see yet another bill introduced which would make tuition legal in this state. Well, why not? Especially why not when students want their money to go toward academic support? The answer is complex and here because of space, oversimplified.

The '81 Legislature will be under tremendous pressure to fund education, health and welfare, highways, cities, counties, nursing homes, etc., etc., etc. This is not a wise time to present "gratis" revenue sources to people who could be looking for almost any answers, regardless of the consequences to any one constituency; i.e., students. The cut at Boise State this year is over $600,000; with the above proposed fee increase, only about $350,000 will be raised. It doesn't take much arithmetic to see that a $100 per semester increase would not be out of line if students fees were used to take up all the slack.

And the political question of tuition-or-no ties in with the philosophical question. If tuition becomes legal to Idaho residents, what happens to the benefits derived from "free Common Schools" and the promises made to students in 1867?

Given the above information, the financial implication of tuition in Idaho should not be too hard to figure out. Wherever tuition is legally charged, students have shouldered an increasingly large burden of higher education's costs. True, in Idaho students for the most part pay lower fees than students pay in our neighboring states. But it is equally true that Idaho students receive less appropriated dollars than do students in our neighboring states. Before we offer our pocketbooks up on the altar of higher education, let us be certain that the general citizenry, through the legislature, also comes through with its share of sacrifice.

When it comes to higher education, students benefit and so should be willing to pay. But the state also should be willing to pay for the benefits it receives—a truth acknowledged by those who came before and a truth which must be acknowledged by those in power today.

The hearing to increase fees will be held in Boise December 4. If you have something to say or want to say something, pro or con, that is your chance. If you need information about the increases or on how to go about being heard by the Board, contact myself or your ASBSU senator.

Seating at the Stadium

Discrimination

There are many more important issues than student seats at BSU football games and I have sent my opinions on those issues to the Statesman, however, I feel the ticket situation needs to be commented upon.

The new rules do not benefit students, they discriminate against them. Many students, particularly non-traditional and evening students are employed and do not have the time to stand in a long line to pick up their tickets. It is very helpful to them to have someone else pick up their tickets.

The real problem in this situation is not non-students using student tickets, the real problem is that approximately half of the student side of the stadium is reserved seating. I suggest that all reserved seats on the student side be eliminated and that as many tickets as there are seats be printed for students and guests. At the end of the week, whatever tickets are left can then be altered, such as having a hole punched in them, and those tickets can be sold as general admission tickets. I also suggest that each ticket be for an assigned seat. Such a procedure would certainly eliminate the problem of students not being able to attend the games. It would still be on a first-come first-serve basis, but it would provide all students with an opportunity to have a ticket.

As to non-students using student tickets, why not? If the student doesn't want to use the ticket it is the student's right to let someone else use it, since the student has already paid for the ticket. When I was an undergraduate at this institution, I never went to the games and I always let someone else use my card to

Our haircuts have a personality. Yours.

It's true. Every haircut is custom designed. We carefully analyze your hair, facial structure, lifestyle and personality to help determine just the right way to cut your hair.

So you see? It's not by accident that your haircut's a perfect fit.

That may seem like a lot of fuss over a haircut. But at the Imagemaker we do everything that way. That includes perms, coloring, make-up and a lot of other special services. For all this meticulous planning, caring for your hair will be simplicity itself.

And that's not all. We know that lots of people tend to be a little uncomfortable in a beauty salon. What with all the noise and clutter, it's no wonder. The Imagemaker is different. With an elegant yet simple layout, our salon is most comfortable. You can enjoy a cup of freshly ground coffee, or perhaps some fruit juice, a terrific selection of magazines from all over the world, or just sit back and listen to some fine music. It's really a very nice place to visit.

So there you have it. The Imagemaker. Guess you can say we're unique too... just like you.

get tickets. That was my right and my decision.

We can all face the fact, however, that it is not the student's welfare that is being considered in this situation. The money-generated by the reserved seats is what is being considered. Incidentally, of all the drunks I saw at the BSU-U of I game, the drunkest were two middle-aged men dressed in suits who staggered their way to their reserved seats on the student side.

Burt Who?

By John Hayden

Who is Anthony Burtsky, and where does he get off? The latest review of Robert Redford's film Ordinary People had no valid criticism whatsoever. What does this critic do? Teach English?

According to Antonio, Redford's discreet and self-conscious shots of Warm Springs and Harrison Boulevard type abodes in the autumn smelled as nice as your tidy bowl. Then due to his lack of critical support, his review smelled like a North End septic tank. Another contrast from last week's article, likening Timothy Hutton's portrayal to an aging Beaver Cleaver compares to suffering through an article written by Anthony Burtsky instead of Gene Shallit. This literal piece deserves nothing more than a (d-) for aesthetics and a (c) for effort. Nice try!

Maybe our future Walter Kerr should take a look for himself if he wants to consider his entertainment alternatives. In recent weeks at BSU Ingmar Bergman was here with two powerfully moving films, Autumn Sonata and The Seventh Seal. Is it music you want? Istvan Nadas happened to drop by the university and will be returning with a seminar the 29th. What about this coming week? Woody Allen's Stardust Memories debuts in Boise. Student films brings us Three Women, Citizen Kane, and The Philadelphia Story. The latter which will also be brought—from out of the mothballs—to the community this Spring by the BSU Theatre (I) Arts Dept.

Speaking of mothballs—since when is an American classic sitting in mothballs? Our Town is a play as timeless as any Shakespearean work.

So, Mr. Burtsky, your "invaluable criticism" (?) and your purple diatribe was appreciated by no one more than yourself.

As Thornton Wilder put it in his classic of the mothballs, "We're more civilized now-or so they say."

UNDECIDED? VOTE BULL!

When it comes to campaign charisma, nobody draws crowds like "The Bull." Schlitz Malt Liquor is a proven vote-getter at campus parties throughout the country. It's got the big, bold taste that politicians of all persuasions can rally around . . . the taste that's made "The Bull" America's Number One choice in malt liquor.

Remember, there may be other candidates with great taste, but Schlitz Malt Liquor is the only one that tastes great!

BSU vs. Weber

Wildcats Vie for Title

by Bud Humphrey
Arbiter Sports Editor

Showdown. That's the word the local sports pundits are using to describe the upcoming Weber State - Boise State football game, this Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Bronco Stadium.

Present owner of first place in the Big Sky Conference despite their 32-7 loss to Northern Arizona last week, Weber has won 3½ games (the half game against Idaho State — they'll play the other "half" Nov. 15) in league play at home. The rest of the Wildcats' conference season is away, and the Cinderella team that held Nevada-Reno scoreless (Reno is heading strongly for a conference crown along with BSU, Weber and Idaho) may take a spiteful pounding on the road.

It's the defense that has won most of Weber's games this season, and linebackers Mike Humiston and Danny Rich key it. Even with the NAU embarrassment, the defense only allows 18.2 points a game.

If there's a weak point in the Weber defense, it's probably in the secondary. Free Safety Mark Massey, an all-conference junior, is among the Big Sky leaders and dangerous in interception territory, but the unit gives up 183.3 yards a game passing.

Two quarterbacks, Bill Tantillo and Rich McKee, run a below-average (for the Big Sky) passing game, but good enough to average 203.3 yards in the air and feed Curt Miller 20 passes so far for 332 yards and 3 touchdowns. Running, the Wildcats are less than impressive, with only 71 yards per contest.

What the BSU defense will have to do to stop Weber's passing game, according to head coach Jim Criner, is "to stop them from throwing to the tight ends and the screens to the backs. We got hurt in that area last week."

In last Saturday's contest against Cal State-Fullerton, BSU rolled 26-11 over the visitors, and almost completely stalled the Titans' offense until the last quarter, when the reserves were in and it was too late to make any difference.

The running offense for BSU didn't get warmed up until late in the first quarter, when a Cedric Minter-keyed drive finished with a Joe Aliotti touchdown pass to Terry Zahner.

Breaks and mistakes turned out in BSU's favor on the next drive, which almost fell flat deep in BSU territory but for a roughing the kicker penalty against CSF on a punt play. Later, on an off-tackle run by David Hughes, the ball was fumbled at the 17 yard line. Duane Dlouhy, ever-alert Bronco tight end, scooped up the ball which had squirted clear of a pile of CSF defenders, and ran for a touchdown. The Kenrick Camerud extra point attempt was blocked, and BSU led 13-0.

The Titans answered back with a short drive that led to a 43-yard field goal by Vince Abbott. Two quick turnovers, including a Dan LeBeau interception (Larry Alder had picked off another pass earlier in the game) gave the ball back to the Broncos. Terry Zahner, who gained 107 yards Saturday, muscled the ball through for another TD in the final minute of the half.

The defense kept CSF from scoring in the third quarter, due largely to the efforts of linebacker Dan Williams, who had 17 tackles, and trenchmates Randy Trautman and Ray Santucci. After some offensive trouble, Aliotti tallied a 12-yard TD pass to Lance LaShelle early in the fourth quarter, before CSF scored their only TD.

The Weber State game will be broadcast over KBOI Radio, 670 a.m.

Harriers to Host Meet

(UA) — Highest class cross-country ever run in the city of Boise will be featured in the BSU Invitational this Tuesday, Oct. 24 at 2 p.m. on Eagle Hills Golf Course. Most of the teams that will compete in the Nov. 15 Big Sky-Western Athletic Conference regional championships, again in Boise, will be represented in the meet.

Defending national champion University of Texas, El Paso (UTEP) will field a contingent of African runners, led by Michael Musyoki, that is expected to repeat as NCAA champs.

Also running in the 10,000 meter meet will be Brigham Young, Wyoming, Utah and Air Force from the WAC; and all Big Sky schools except Northern Arizona. Nevada-Reno and Weber State are expected to run toughest in the Big Sky.

The Bronco men's and women's harriers each took second place in the Idaho State University Invitational last weekend.

Volleyball Keeps Winning

(UA)—After a 3-2 weekend and heading home for a tournament, the Bronco volleyball team stands 10-5 in the season and 3-3 in league competition.

In the second league tournament of the season in Ellensburg, Wash., BSU defeated league foes Central Washington, 12-15, 15-8, 15-10, the University of Portland, 15-5, 15-8 and lost to Western Washington, 16-14, 15-6. The Broncos split matches with league independents, the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, and the University of Alaska, Anchorage, defeating UAF, 15-, 15-6, and losing to UAA, 15-9, 15-13.

"We did some fine things this weekend. Pam Wadley, Beth Bergin, and Rhonda Cochran played steady throughout the tournament", said coach Darlene Bailey. "We have now had a look at all the teams in our league and can't about preparing for the next meeting with each one".

Big tournament action is coming to BSU, host to the Treasure Valley Invitational, Oct. 24-25. BSU will play WSU, Walla Walla, and NNC. Times for the Broncos matches are: Friday at 3:00 p.m. vs. NNC, 6:00 p.m. vs. Walla Walla, and 7:00 p.m. vs. WSU.

Hockey Gets Aggressive

(UA)—In their most aggressive game to date, the BSU field hockey team tied the Washington State College 1-1 last Saturday in Ellensburg, Washington. The Broncos held the Cougars scoreless until the final 46 seconds of the game.

Sophomore forward Joan Pittaway, who scored the Broncos' only four goals over the weekend, scored that Boise State goal with Laura Roletto assisting.

Diane Jenkins, BSU goalie, registered eight saves as the Broncos stopped the Cougar attack.

The Broncos handed the University of Idaho a 1-0 loss on Saturday morning. The win was the second over the Vandals this season. Pittaway and Roletto teamed up for the winning goal.

Friday's action saw Bronco Joan Pittaway make two goals against Central Washington College for a 2-0 win.

"Overall it was an excellent weekend of play. We're starting to gel, especially on defense. We played well without our top scorer and team captain, Sue Schenk," summarized Coach Jayne Van Wassenhove. Schenk injured her left knee in practice a week ago and is sidelined for an indefinite period.

The BSU team travels to Ashland, Oregon this weekend to play in the Southern Oregon State College Invitational Tournament.

The Broncos face the University of Pacific on Friday at 11:30 a.m. and the University of California-Davis at 4:00 p.m.

"All three California teams should be tough. Field hockey teams are developing throughout California at the high school level and the competition is improving drastically," commented Coach VanWassenhove, "Chico State should be the toughest team we face in the tournament. They were ranked third in the nation earlier this year."

Presently, the Bronco field hockey team has an 8-2-2 season record.

Sosnowski Rests-- But Not For Good

Steve Sosnowski. Remember him? He was Boise State's starting right side defensive tackle for the first four games of the 1980 football season. Starting, that is, until the opening of the third quarter in the Broncos 18-17 loss to Montana State, when the 6'6, 262-pound senior fractured his left ankle, prematurely ending a successful collegiate career.

But while Sosnowski won't return to the BSU lineup like he has after past injuries, his athletic career is hardly finished; Steve doubles as a shot putter on BSU's track team and still has aspirations of playing professional football. For the time being, however, Sosnowski will have to content himself with non-athletic endeavors—the break in his fibula, although a clean one, is complicated by a dislocation of the ankle joint and severely torn ligaments, requiring a rehabilitation period of four to five months.

It is not the first time that Sosnowski has had to sit out of athletic competition. Since transferring to Boise State from UCLA in the Fall of 1978, the senior interior lineman has sustained several injuries.

As a redshirt in 1978, Sosnowski had a bone chip in his left ankle, while last year playing virtually the entire season with torn knee ligaments. In Boise State's narrow victory over Nevada-Reno last year, Steve incurred major damage to the knee and was forced to miss the season finale against Cal-Poly.

Yet, this year Sosnowski was back at full strength. "I seemed to be playing better with every game," Sosnowski reflected. "I was doing things the way I am capable of doing them."

Clearly Sosnowski has the capability. As a high school senior in Salinas, California, Sosnowski was recruited by some 150 major colleges, including such powers as Ohio State, Michigan, Washington and UCLA.

Rodeo Team Places Near Top

(UA)—While more glamorous sports hit headlines regularly for lesser feats, the BSU Rodeo Club team has quietly piled up enough to gain an early second-place rating in the Western region.

Jade Robinson of Bliss, ID has emerged as the region's all-around leader, as in Provo Sept. 26-27 he teamed with Clint Walker to win the team roping event, then placed second in bareback riding, third in bullriding and fourth in steer wrestling. In Cedar City a week later, he team-roped to fourth place with Walker, and placed in bareback as well as calf roping.

Karl Knapp

Sosnowski chose UCLA, playing second-string defensive tackle both his freshman and sophomore years. During Steve's freshman year, the Bruins were at one time ranked third in the nation, and eventually went on to play in the Liberty Bowl.

So why the move to Idaho and Boise State? "I didn't like living in the atmosphere down there," said Sosnowski. "The transition for me was easy—it's not that difficult to move from a big school to a smaller school."

"The competition is the same," stated Sosnowski. "It is every bit as intense in the Big Sky, and the schools you're playing against are just as good. The Big Sky just doesn't have the number of scholarships that the bigger schools have."

Ironically enough, it was the knee injury last year that led to Steve's involvement in track. Although he was a 60-foot shot putter (with a 12 pound shot) in high school, Sosnowski had not competed since that time until last season. "I went out for track in order to strengthen my knee, but I've come to enjoy it immensely," said Sosnowski.

Steve's best mark of 51'8 (with a 16 pound shot) came last year in a dual meet win over Montana. But whether or not Sosnowski throws well enough to win the Big Sky is not really important, for Steve derives his satisfaction from just simply competing on an individual basis.

"The biggest thing is that you're competing against yourself—if you record a personal best, you've improved yourself," Sosnowski explained. "I enjoy the team concept of playing football, but it's a refreshing change to compete on an individual basis."

Perhaps Sosnowski wasn't quite ready for that change just yet, but it has occurred nonetheless; and although Boise State may have lost a fine defensive tackle, they still have the services of an up-and-coming shot putter.

Runner Alert!

(UA) — Running fanatics, this is the chance to show your real stuff. The Intramural Co-ed Cross Country Run will happen Saturday, Nov. 1.

Teams must consist of no less than five and no more than seven BSU students, faculty, staff and/or spouses thereof, who are not members of the Varsity Cross-Country teams, nor have earned a cross-country letter within the past year. Scores will be computed from the placings of the top five finishers on each team, at least one of whom must be female.

To enter, you must have a team roster into the Intramural's Office, Aux. Gym 102, by 5:00 p.m. Wednesday, October 29. If you have further questions, call 385-1131.

Provo saw BSU finishing third to CSI and the host club, UTC-Provo, in the men's division. Rob Juker showed his region-leading class in steer wrestling, placing second to help Robinson and Walker to a 270-point performance.

The cowgirls finished behind USU and CSI, as the regional barrel racing leader Amy Patterson, placed second in her event and Cindy Johnson also seconded in breakaway roping, to give BSU 145 points.

Cedar City, in addition to Robinson's performance, saw Juker team with Sean Powers for second place in team roping, while Walker gained extra team roping points alongside Jill Fillpinni. Juker and Powers each gained points in steer wrestling, while Walker placed fourth in the saddle bronc event. BSU placed third behind CSI and Weber State, with 300 points.

For the women, Patterson won the Cedar City barrel racing, followed at third by Terri Clark. Fillpinni's points in team roping and breakaway roping added to the team total of 185 points, good for a second behind USU.

Eight rodeos remain for the BSU club, coached by Tim Waldron. If they maintain a second or first standing in the region in spring contests, the Broncos will be one of the teams to represent the western region in the 20-team College National Rodeo Finals in Bozeman, MT next June.

Bolder Selections Called For

BSU Theatre Revives "Our Town"

by Holly Reeves

The Boise State Theatre Department opened its season Friday night with Thornton Wilder's Our Town. The production was directed by Charles Lauterbach; the set was designed by Frank Helse; the light designer was Judy Pittman. Yes, well...I must admit that for a cynic to review this play is almost barbaric but so it goes. At the outset let me express what amounts to absolute disgust at the very selection of this play. Disgruntled ex-Theatre Majors (of which I number) have for years nurtured the illusion that an administrative change in the Department would herald a new era of "sweetness and light"; a veritable resurrection of culture and...and...well, so much for that silly idea. The sentiment has long been that given the supposed provincial morality of a typical Boise audience, presenting a contemporary play containing something like controversy and intellectual pith would be an affront to the public and ultimately suicidal for university theatre. Such a notion, however, rings truer as an excuse for mediocrity. Of course, there have been a few titillating moments—a flash of 30-year-old Beckett or 20-year-old Albee—but, these moments of provocation have been rare. What really puzzles me is why, after such a "notable" history of safety, it should suddenly be necessary to regress even further. Our Town is a nice high school production (it gives lots of people—lots to do), however, it is a mealy-mouthed study in morality and hardly fit for a university repertoire. This is not to say that the piece lacks universal elements—something to the tune of: Oh Golly! life goes sooo fast and we are sooo blind and never appreciate anything until its ALL OVER. Okay, granted not much on originality but we'll go so far as to say that such a milksop theme might have some significance.

In spite of being hampered by such an insipid script, the Subal production offered some redeeming performances. David Painter was absolutely outstanding as the stag manager and demonstrated a degree of professionalism rarely seen on a local stage. Nancy Lee as Mrs. Gibbs turned in a performance of surprising maturity and compassion; Paul Rodgers as the milk man Howie Newsome was totally convincing and delightful; Lisa Meredith as the town gossip Mrs. Soames was a true champion of comic relief; Debbi Daniels as Rebecca Gibbs was effective. The romantic piffle of the play revolved around Margaret Grenke and Ed Colkins and um... they were indeed "youthful". The rest of the cast left a lot to be desired although specific examples slip my mind.

Let's see... the set was O.K., the clouds were "purty"... Ho Hum.

Stalks of Wild Hay

I can shake the wild hay, and wet seed sticks to my hand.
The white lower stalks seem soild. Yellow flowers
Grow in the sun, with dog fennel, near apple trees.
White petals carry to this water. So plants breed.
But I, the man who would have put up his life
Against less pleasure than yours, against your black hair
And your deep mouth, ask that no man my friend
Find me in this wild hay now or tonight
To remind me how worthless this was which was so dear.
It is late for me to see grass-stalks my first time,
And for this trouble of spirit to come to an end.

"Dracula" Electrifies Viewers

by Ryndy Reed,
Associate Editor

The Boise Little Theatre production of Dracula opened last Friday evening and will continue its run until Saturday, Oct. 25th.

This production is one of the most technical ever presented on the BLT stage. The many special effects are instrumental in enhancing the scary environment of the play. It is exciting when doors open and close all by themselves and when Dracula emerges from a cloud of mist. There are several extremely effective effects that leave the audience breathless with surprise.

Director Scott Beseman should be applauded for his talents. He has managed to coordinate a complex script and polish it into a first class theatrical production. He also did the set design, which added atmosphere to the play.

The cast is also to be congratulated on their abilities. It must have been difficult to work with cues that were often silent effects instead of another actor's lines.

The play itself has great appeal. Vampires have been a part of European folklore for centuries and they are just as fascinating now as they have ever been. There has always been a mysterious romantic and erotic aura surrounding Count Dracula and John Eichmann's portrayal of the count adds to that sensual feeling.

His demeanor and eerie gaze are electrifying and he brings the "undead" Count into existence for the audience.

Patrick J. Russell, a Boise State University student does an excellent portrayal of Renfield, the poor pathetic, little man that has been used by the Count. Russell gives the bizarre character a touch of sanity which gives the audience an empathy for his terror and his hopeless situation.

The rest of the cast is seen as a desperate group of humans who are nearly hysterical in their attempts at stopping the evil Dracula. They respond well to each other and are convincing in their desperation.

All in all, Dracula is a splendid production. The BLT has once again given the people of this town a dramatic and entertaining diversion.

The Arbiter
Book Review

Wolff, Geoffrey. The Duke of Deception. Berkley Books, N.Y. $2.75

by Don Barclay

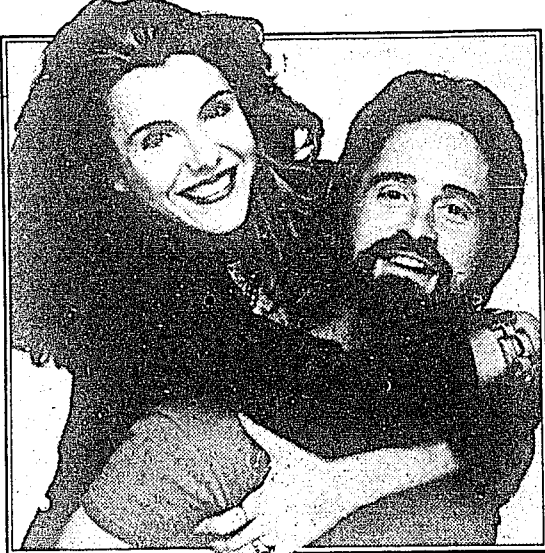

In the first chapter of Geoffrey Wolff's The Duke of Deception, Memories of My Father, the author writes that, "In writing about a father one clammers up a slippery mountain, carrying the balls of another in a bloody sack, and whether to eat them, worship them, or bury them is never cleanly decided." By the time Wolff had finished his version of Life With Father he has, to some extent, committed all three of these filial acts. Although at times written with obvious love on the part of the son, this is one father-son story that is unlikely to ever grace the pages of Reader's Digest or similar sentiment mills. Wolff's father (Duke of the title) is not a stereotype loving father; in fact, the Duke is a liar, a con-man, and an arrogant runner up of bad debts, who manages to be a good father. While one might expect the story of a life with such a man to be bleak in the sense of a life of poverty and jail, The Duke of Deception, is not bleak in this way: Duke Wolff was such a good con-man that he managed to talk his way into high paying jobs and out of the clutches of the law for most of his life. This story is bleak due to the underlying sense of shame and self-worthlessness that the Duke's lies (such as passing himself off as a war-hero and a descendent to royalty) try to make up for. The shelter the Duke seeks in his lies is such a necessity to him that he can't even admit their falsehood to his own family, and this eventually brings havoc down on the Duke and his descendant. Wolff has written a sensitive book that is never sentimental in his exploration of the curious relationship that binds fathers and sons. A remarkable exception to the standard drivel that usually surfaces when sons write about their fathers.

The Talkies: A Film Buy-Line

Marianne Flagg (★ 1/2)

I am hardpressed to give Stardust Memories even one-and-a-half stars, but the first 20 minutes and intermittent jokes throughout the film are pleasant.

The big problem with this Woody Allen film is its relentless and abrasive tone, and its shameless copying of Fellini's 8 1/2.

Allen says all he intends to say (and does it quite effectively) in the beginning of the movie, and spends the remaining time ex-cruciatingly repeating, with jackhammer subtlety, every point he's already made.

To add to this un-Allen-like flaw, the movie is entirely absent of any interesting characters or relationships. The movie is peopled with hopelessly bored (and boring) neurotics.

In one overly long sequence, Charlotte Rampling goes through her parade of suicide looks. After 30 seconds of this one wishes she would complete the deed.

Allen does not have to repeat his "early funny films," but to live up to his talent and potential, he should have more to say, and he certainly should attempt to say it with a defter touch.

I hope this is only a dry lull in an otherwise brilliant career.

Karl Knapp (★)

Woody Allen has been labeled self-indulgent, narcissistic, neurotic, and depressive; in Stardust Memories, Allen is blatantly all of these things. But so what? Does anyone really care besides Allen himself? While Allen's insight is subtly shocking in Annie Hall and masterfully conveyed in Manhattan, it is nothing more than a simple rehashing of the same old stuff in Stardust Memories, a film that is mediocre at best. If you want to find out what an idiot you really are, see Stardust Memories, for Allen has a way of pejoratively categorizing everyone, including himself.

Donald Barclay (★★)

At one point in Stardust Memories Woody Allen (who plays of all things a film director) tells about a joke he once wanted to put in one of his films but never did. That scene pretty much sums up Stardust Memories, a narcissist film stretched out with some of the jokes that Woody Allen never got to use in his other films. While second rate Woody Allen is better than a whole lot of films makers: first rate stuff, it is fairly disappointing fare for anyone going to Stardust with the expectation of seeing a really good Woody Allen film. As about a hundred different creeps in the film say, "I liked his early, funny movies better."

Anthony Burt (★★★)

I despised Interiors, Woody Allen's Ingmar Bergman rip-off, yet find the Woodman's Fellini film, Stardust Memories, wry, melancholy and charming. The difference between the two derivative films is one of degree. There was no Allen in Interiors—it was all Bergman. But Allen's new film is not all 8 1/2—at least 4 1/4 of the film is based on the balding, frenetically philosophical, success and sex-obsessed schlemiel character Allen invented many movies ago. This time he's a too-successful movie star/director fending off a world of fruit-loops (us), courting three women (most notably, sensual Charlotte Rampling), pleading with Star Wars visitors for inter-galactic wisdom (they reply in a chipmunkese suspiciously like Woody's voice at 78 rpm), and tracking down a rampaging Big-foot named Hostility (played by Joseph Summo). Despite Fellini's surreal style, the movie's tone is Allen's—akin to the mood of his last film, Manhattan. If you enjoyed Manhattan and love Fellini, you won't want to miss Stardust Memories.

23-24-26 Double Feature:

Citizen Kane
Acclaimed as the best American film ever made, Citizen Kane was written, directed, produced and performed by Orson Wells. It is an incredible cinematic achievement, telling the story of newspaper tycoon Charles Foster Kane.

Philadelphia Story
Rich, spoiled Katharine Hepburn divorces Cary Grant—only to rediscover his virtues in the nick of time in this deliciously elegant, unpertinent comedy.

30-31-2 Single Feature:

Nosferatu
Towering over the competition, Murnau's Nosferatu, a German version, is contrasting impressionistic sunlit images of the natural world with the expressionistic figure and nocturnal presence of the vampire. Murnau creates a poetic allegory of innocence, death and sexual repression that has lost none of its power to disturb.

S.P.B. movies are shown each week — 3 times a week in the Student Union Building Ada Lounge. Show times are Thursday at 3:00 p.m., Friday at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday at 6:00 p.m. Prices are:

Boy oh boy oh jeepers. My all time favorite movie about the newspaper business is going to be showing at the SPB films this week. Yes media fans, it's (trumpet fanfare) Citizen Kane. Starring that wonderkind of wonderkind, that celestial fat-boy of celestial fat-boys, that drinker of wine and modulator of voice; Orson Wollst Huzzah, Huzzah. I think Citizen Kane is just about the best movie ever made; even if Don-the-editor lets the film go to his head, what with making everyone's life around here miserable by running around shouting "Stop the presses" when there aren't any presses at the Arbiter, and having that sled hanging in his office. Which brings us to this week's question. What is the significance of the word "Rosebud" in the movie Citizen Kane? The first four people to trot up to the Arbiter and tell Cathy our brainy secretary the correct answer will win themselves free tickets to the Thursday afternoon showing of Citizen Kane.
