Emissions Tests Called For Boise Pollution Threatens Lungs

by Marianne Flagg
Arbor News Editor
A spokesman for the Boise State University Student Environment Health Association said Friday that the great majority of Ada County's air pollution problem is the result of carbon monoxide emission from automobiles, and that if mandatory automobile inspection and maintenance does not occur, the health of county residents would be seriously jeopardized.

"Truthfully, Boise's carbon monoxide pollution could effectively be eliminated, whenever necessary," according to the Boise State University, Idaho Association of Idaho residents would be seriously threatened with air pollution to health, according to the spokesperson for the group, said Ada County's carbon monoxide level, and Boise in particular, is frequently more than twice the allowable national air quality standard. In a public service announcement from the Health Association, Mr. Daniels said, "In late 1977, the Ada Department of Health and Welfare designated Northern Ada County as a non-attainment area for carbon monoxide.

For the past week, Ada County has had a carbon monoxide rating of over 150, way above the federal standard; according to the Ada Planning Association. The Planning Association estimates that carbon monoxide standards are violated in Ada County approximately 65 days per year.

Mr. Daniels said his group hopes that by publicizing the severity of the situation, students and faculty will call upon their State legislators to support passage of a vehicle inspection and maintenance bill during the 1981 legislative session.

McDaniel and other members of the association, in conjunction with members of the Environmental Protection Agency, have stationed themselves in the lobby of the Student Union Building for the past week in an effort to gather signatures on petitions indicating BSU student and faculty support for the bill. Thus far, 150 signatures have been gathered.

The bill, should it be passed, would encourage voluntary inspection and maintenance during its first 30 miles or 30 days, to be followed thereafter by an enforced, mandatory 1-M-Y program.

Studies of the success of the inspection and maintenance programs in other states indicate that between 25 and 30 percent of all cars comply with the regulations in the first year of implementation, to between 25 and 30 percent of all maintenance stations.

ACTIVISM RISES

(CPS)—Long before most Americans have sorted out the myriad of political issues, students have been taking a more active stance toward their campus activities. Brie Larson, senior, student senate speaker, says, "I'm optimistic about students and their ability to change the university." Janis Fine, vice president of the Student Association of State Universities in New York, "The Reagan victory may be the unifying factor which makes us all realize we must fight together," Larson says.

Fine notes that at a recent association meeting "people are scared out of their wits at the result of the election..." She thinks that a "real shock will reveal a need to fight together.

Indeed, a variety of activities are being organized by college students. Contacted by College Press Service, a broad range of events were reported throughout the United States. Continued on page 2.

Alcohol Awareness Takes Needed Role on Campus

Alcohol: its use and abuse. How much do you know about it? Do you drink too much? Are you a social drinker or a problem drinker? These are the questions which the Alcohol Awareness movement is trying to answer for the increasing number of students who find alcohol a part of, if not central to, college social life.

"I think the statistics show alcohol is a number one problem not only on college campuses but nationwide. The purpose of the program is to educate and prevent and not to condemn alcohol use but to educate as to its ramifications," Freeburn said. "I think it's a positive thing," Freeburn said. "I hope it will provide some direction in education."

Thomas said: "I think the following activities are needed on campus. Funding will be provided by the Student Activities Committee.

Freeburn also stated that efforts would be made to obtain government and other funding, as well.
Stevens Point, a school not known for activism, sent seven students to greet the election news with anti-Reagan chants. Within minutes, the number swelled to about 600. Greg Ludke, one of the original screamers, says the demonstration was entirely spontaneous.

Mike Pucis, vice president of the student government, says the rally was "the first time we've ever had any kind of student protest against anything on this campus.

Just what students were protesting is open to question. At Berkeley, anti-Reagan slogans evolved into anti-ROTC chants. At Stevens Point, students shouted "Reagan sucks."

Most leaders interviewed think harder issues—like a new military draft—will need to be sustained to stifle these stirrings.

"Students won't have to wait for a draft or anything like that," Fine says. "Reagan will cut financial aid and abortion benefits. That alone should be enough to get students out of their shells."

"If he (Reagan) starts messing up with aid to students," adds Edward Wilde, legislative director of the U.S. Student Association, "the liberal and conservative students will be brought together to fight this. It will hit at their very ability to continue to go to school."

Kim Katchermyer, director of the United Council, a Wisconsin student association, agrees. "I am sure it would be very easy to mobilize students over this cause (financial aid) if anyone in Washington harms it."

A Reagan policy statement on education released during the campaign promised the Reagan administration will re-establish earmarked for specific financial aid programs into "block grants," which states can use as they see fit. Also, states will be charged with paying for certain unspecified aid programs Reagan plans to abolish on the federal level.

"There are other issues leaders expect students to pursue," Barbara Klose of the Students for a Non-Nuclear Future predicts students will have to "triple our efforts" if only because she expects "Reagan will put a clamp on any kind of progressive legislation."

David Landau of the American Civil Liberties Union asks student help on civil liberties issues as "a top priority."

Dr. Howard Kornfield of Physicians for Social Responsibility thinks the Reagan landslide puts anti-nuclear proliferation groups on the defensive, and a premium on activism. He says his groups thinks students will be especially responsive to recruits during the Reagan era.

Later this month a meeting at Kent State will be hard to organize the Progressive Students Network, which some student leaders privately hope will become "the next SDS." David Statt, a group spokesman, says a PSN rally on inauguration day in Washington, Jan. 20 will only be the beginning.

The last United States president to serve two full terms in office was Dwight Eisenhower. John Kennedy was assassinated before running for re-election, Lyndon Johnson withdrew from the race effort largely because of Vietnam, Richard Nixon resigned during his second term, Gerald Ford never won his first election, and now Jimmy Carter has been turned out of office after his first four years.

When a person enters a university it is almost inevitable that ideas and opinions foreign to that person's previous existence will be encountered. Some of these new ideas and strange opinions will be fought quite strongly, yet in many colleges the student will learn to accept some new ideas; and by the time the period of formal education is over the student will have already accepted some new ideas; think for oneself are really the essential elements of all learning, and the serve to bind such diverse fields as nuclear engineering, economics, and theatre arts all together as fields of education.

Perhaps for these reasons, it is the educated person who has the most to fear from the rise of the narrow-thinking Moral Majority in this country. While other special interest groups are the broadest philosophical sense. The Moral Majority isn't interested in the literal thinking of the educated; person: they feel they have all the answers and consider it heresy that any thoughts other than those their single-tracked minds come up with could be acceptable. The very name of the Moral Majority implies a sort of bigotry and intolerance that the educated person wholly indicates that to be in the minority is inherently bad; and Morality, assuming a single-tracked mind could be acceptable. Of course, the Moral Majoritists of the world have every right to let Jerry Falwell dictate how they think and live; in fact, if they all got together and called the Head Shop and the other bastardized movies and their two children.

The Innocent Bystander

A Bad Actor

Ah, Hollywood! That time zone where dreams are made— and broken. For every Hollywood star there are a thousand stories of heartache and defeat.

Here's one such story unearthed only this week by that famed Hollywood reporter, Hedda Parson:

"Our hero is a handsome, likable, struggling actor. He is struggling with a wife and child. He had made half a hundred B movies, all of them good B movies, none of them great films. His future seemed secure, if not spectacular.

"But behind alluring Hollywood's painted lips, lies a poisoned tongue. A start, her attention spurned by our hero, starts a vicious rumor. Soon it is being whispered in the Brown Derby as the Coconut Grove that he is, in truth, a lousy actor." No producer will him.

He trudges hopelessly from studio to studio, returning each night to the shabby auto court he shares with his loyal little wife and two children.

"I'm afraid it's re-fried beans and coleslaw, " cries our hero. "He's got the look of death about him."

Wrestlers Head for Rebel Open

(BSU)—Straight from an impressive tune-up at home, the Boise State wrestling team traveled to Las Vegas for a dual meet with Montana State on Nov. 28, and then joins nine other schools in the Rebel Open hosted by Nevada Reno on Dec. 2.

Action will begin at 11 am PST and should conclude at 4 pm PST. The Rebel Open will be BSU's first season-scored meet.

Montana State is a question mark as far as Coach Young sees it. He gives his team a "50-50 chance" of winning the Division I-AA meet.

Host Las Vegas, Arizona and Wyoming have good wrestling programs and might be starting Young and should be tough to beat this week.

James Williams at 140 lbs., and Harold Wiltman at 196 lbs., highlighted a strong Bronco showing last week at the BSU Open. Both were award winners in BSU's best effort in their own tourneys in several years.

Oll Pelly SLO dominated the action, however, with six wrestlers claiming championships.

Three Boise State wrestlers placed second in their weight classes. They were Scott Barrett, a redshirt at 132 lbs., Homer Lord at 173 lbs. and Brita Braesh at 183 lbs.

Boise State Against Santa Clara

Broncos Pair Off

(BSU)—Bronco basketball officially begins the 1980-81 season this Saturday, November 29 at 7:30 pm in the Bronco Gym when another team of Broncos, the University of Santa Clara, comes to Boise for a non-conference season opener.

BSU played an exhibition game against Athletes in Action, Canada last week and dropped an 81-60 game to the experienced team of former college players.

Santa Clara, a 15-12 team last season that finished second in the WAC conference, is coached by Carroll Williams, in his 11th season guiding the club. His career record is 143-125.

BSU anxiously awaits the chance to get back to action after a one point loss at Athletes in Action, Canada. BSU was led by JC transfer Eric Bailey who banged in 30 points in his debut with the Broncos. He was 14 of 22 from the field and had nine rebounds.

Lehn said he expects Santa Clara to be a very disciplined team. They "run a few offenses, pass the ball in and out, play patient offense and shoot the high percentage shot. I know we have a good deal of work to do in the defensive area to prepare for them. If we make mistakes, they'll take advantage of them," he added.

Football Makes Playoffs

BSU—Two legends in Big Sky football have come to a close. Frank Hawkins, owner of more yards on the ground than anyone except Tony Dorsett and Charles White in the history of college football, closed his career as fullback for Nevada-Reno with a big 255 yards against Idaho, best this year in the league.

Yet, despite an 8-3 record, a top-ten national ranking, and a Big Sky Conference championship for the Broncos, they are still not assured a spot in the playoffs.

What we want to know is, on what basis does the selection committee allocate a spot in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs?

Division I-A universities don’t have to worry about being selected for postseason competition in the same manner that the I-AA schools do. First of all, there is no official "national championship" at the I-AA level. The only school only "wins at the polls," so to speak.

The problem is really quite simple at the I-AA level—you win the PAC-10, you win the Rose Bowl, you win the SEC, you go to the Orange, Peach, or Sugar Bowl. As least with Division I-A schools there are a number of opportunities; a team does not have to be undefeated to be ranked number one to play in a bowl game.

Something that almost seems to be the case with the Broncos is how their bowl game prospects for Boise State has done virtually everything it possibly could have to assure itself a trip to the playoffs, and yet has still faced a real tough competition in the latter stages of the season.

If Idaho State had defeated the Broncos last Saturday night, for example, the Broncos hopes might have been put permanently to rest. And who would have gone in the Broncos' place? Probably Idaho State, a team that would have finished 6-1-1 had they defeated Boise State.

Or perhaps even Oregon with a 5-3-1, a team that has lost to both Idaho and Idaho State, but who just last weekend defeated Weber State 70-35.

But Idaho State did lose 20-14 to Portland State and for Portland State did play a couple of horrendous games which should reduce their playoff chances considerably.

The Broncos know as a team that there is nothing to lose in the season, aside from a lack of conditioning. Coach Young doesn’t see a major problem developing this early in the season. "They will be ready by this weekend," said Young.

Although several wrestlers suffered injuries from a lack of conditioning, Coach Young doesn’t see a major problem developing this early in the season. "They will be ready by this weekend," said Young.

Women Cagers Open Season

(BSU)—The Boise State University women's basketball team opened the season with a home game against the Idaho State Bengals on Tuesday, Dec. 2 at 7:05 pm.

In 1979-80, Boise State defeated ISU in both of their meetings. BSU went on to finish the 1980 season with a 9-15 overall record and 2-0 in both of their meetings.

BSU went on to finish the 1980 12-15 overall record. BSU played an exhibition game against the Broncos, the University of Wyoming have good wrestling programs and might be starting Young and should be tough to beat this week.

out of 200 ballots cast, the Broncos, with 141, finished second in the WAC.

Warfield Entertains

Comedienne Marsha Warfield will perform at Boise State University Dec. 4, at 11:30 a.m. in the Special Events Center. Admission will be $3 for the general public and $2 for students.

Warfield is a young black comedienne from Chicago who performed the 1979 San Francisco International Stand-up Comedy Competition. She moved to Los Angeles in 1979 to follow the comedy nightclub circuit. Richard Pryor signed her as a regular performer on his television series pilots. She has made guest appearances for Mac Davis, Alan King, and on other television specials and talk shows.

Her success in winning the International Comedy Competition led to a contract with CBS to develop her own “sitcom.” Recently she has been on a cross-country tour, warming up audiences for singer Teddy Pendergrass.

Warfield’s appearance is sponsored by the Student Programs Board at Boise State. Tickets may be purchased at the BSU Student Union Information desk.

最 love issue of the year and the city's favorite. The film is worth the price of admission just to see Hawn trip around in the pouring rain, masquerading dozens of a's, shouting when she can't get out of this woman's Army and wear high heels again.

Karl Knapf- (4-4-4)

Four Europeans find themselves in a raw sea to see a disheveled Goldie Hawn tangle with Europeans, predators, and her husband. (Great film) at Lovers and Liars for a triumphant Foreign in Private Benjamin. In both films, Goldie ultimately realizes what she's looking for those guys are, as she struggles to her independently. Yet, while Lovers and Liars centers around Goldie's boring escapades with Giancarlo Giannini, Private Benjamin (at times) is more; not only does Goldie frolic with her Frenchman, but she's become a household icon.

Anthony Burt- (4-4-4)

After winning Goldie Hawn in last week's Lovers and Liars, it was a good thing that the be-fuzzled comedienne turn up a winner in Private Benjamin. The film's plot is the oldest schtick--if you recall Francis the Talking Mule movies. It follows how immigrant Turkish Meyer (Larry Lewis) runs off a free woman. What's new, of course, is that it's a woman who does something more; in the army, for the first time, Hawn is perfectly cast as the blond who begins as a blue-eyed bomb but discovers she's more than a piece of male.

Donald Bailey- (4-4-4)

In Private Benjamin, Goldie Hawn plays the part of Judy Benjamin, a naive, simple, white-widowed, Jewish-American princess who, at age 28, tries to control her life by having an affair with an organ using French Gynecologist. By the film's end, however, Benjamin comes to realize that she neither needs the Army or her overpowering man, and trumps off a free woman. All this has been said many times on film, but few years, but Private Benjamin is saved by some great comedy sequences. Particularly funny is the scene in which the women soldiers swap bedtime stories as a parody of every male Army film ever made.
