Posters pulled
Candidate asked to edit ‘gutter’ words

Chris Langill

ASBSU Senate candidate Mack Sermon replaced his campaign posters last week after the student Election Board deemed the posters offensive.

Sermon’s posters read “Mack Sermon. ASBSU Senate. No Excuses. No Bullshit.”

The four-member Election Board voted unanimously for a change in Sermon’s 50 posters based on physical plant guidelines prohibiting the “vulgar use relating to gutter language,” according to Election Board Vice President Amber Erickson.

ASBSU contacted Sermon Oct. 29, telling him to remove the posters himself or the board would remove them. He was also given the option of filing a statement of fact to dispute the board’s decision, but Sermon declined to file because of lack of time, he said.

“The request by us was to change the wording of it to something a little more subtle,” Erickson said.

The Physical Plant policy which the Election Board referred to is taken from a 1984 document titled “Guides to Physical Plant Services.” A July, 1987 amendment to the policy changed the definition of obscene materials from “of prurient interest with no socially redeeming value” to “disgusting to the

Crammed space, poor heating and cooling, lingering asbestos problems haunt BSU’s older apartments

Karen James

While BSU is planning drafts for new student apartments, and shelling out over a million dollars to buy units across Capitol Boulevard, it has become apparent that not all of the current residents are happy with their homes.

Welcome to The Manor, student family housing at BSU.

While the Manor offers a place to stay at a reasonable price, many residents contend the small apartments and too hot, don’t have adequate refrigerator and the ceilings are lined with asbestos.

“We die of heat in the summer,” says Amy Johnson, Manor resident and mother of two. “It makes me weak, I have nowhere to cool off. The kids get naked and run through the sprinklers. But I can’t do that.”

Johnson and her children—Canaan, 4; and Brittany, 7—have withstood the heat in the apartment for two years, but hope to move as soon as they can.

“I’m getting married, and I can’t imagine four people living here. It would prove physically impossible,” she said.

Johnson is one of a few residents living in a remodeled unit. The upgrade includes lighting in the kitchen, a full refrigerator and a "Johnny" cabinet in the bathroom.

“I don’t think I should have to pay $12 extra a month for remodeling which brought my apartment up from standard,” Johnson said. Before the remodeling, Johnson kept bath towels in her bedroom dresser and, weather permitting, milk on the doorstep.

“I don’t think the rent is too high, but it is for what we’re getting,” she says. To conserve space, cooking utensils are tucked to the kitchen walls. "You have to throw everything out that you don’t absolutely need. They (the management) need to set a priority for families, I won’t miss this place at all.”

All Manor residents face a tenant-approved rent increase for 1993, the largest increase in 5 years.

“There is a lot of interest in our apartments,” said Janie Bingham, university apartments coordinator. She admits residents have expressed dissatisfaction with the refrigerator size, but says the apartments were built “to economize and use as little space as possible.”

“I was embarrassed, and am, and have been wanting to remodel them,” said Dr. Richard Knock, director of Student Residential Life. "It’s stupid,” he said of the small refrigerators designed for family use.

The "encapsulated" asbestos lining the ceilings was recently discovered at The Manor by Morrison-Knudsen. Following the asbestos discovery, University Manor and University Heights residents were issued a letter describing the asbestos as "intact and encapsulated" and presently posing no threat to students.

Manor Apartment Manager Teresa Lintel said as long as the asbestos is

Beta Sigma Epsilon hands out condoms, information in SUB

Beta Sigma Epsilon did their part to assist AIDS Awareness Month last week by distributing free condoms in a display booth at the SUB. The display included a ten-minute animated video called “Safe for Life” that is intended to teach the importance of practicing safe sex.

The local fraternity purchased 1,000 condoms from Planned Parenthood and then made stickers to be affixed to the packaging. The stickers advise everyone that they personally would like to be in. For me to be a good senator I need to put in about 40 hours a week and right now in my life, that’s not something I want to do,” Selle said.

A third candidate was originally removed from the ballot for breaking a campaign rule, but successfully petitioned to be put back on.

Craig D. Kenyon was originally omitted from the official ballot for missing a mandatory candidate meeting. Kenyon then filed a Statement of Fact with the ASBSU Judiciary on Oct. 29, and had his name reinstated onto the ballot.

All 19 candidates are invited to a debate on Monday, Nov. 9 to answer questions about their positions and their reasons for running for the Senate. The debate will take place at high noon in the Student Union Building.

The ASBSU Senate meets in the Senate Forum at the following times:
- Caucus: Tuesday, 4 p.m.
- Formal Session: Thursday, 4 p.m.
- Budget and Finance Committee: Tuesday, 3 p.m.
- Student Affairs: Tuesday, after caucus

Two incumbents drop: ASBSU Senate field narrows to 19

Jon Wroten
News Writer

The presence of 19 candidates will set the scene for an exciting ASBSU Senate election on Nov. 11 and 12. The largest field of candidates in recent memory holds in most recent history are competing for nine Senator-At-Large positions.

The original field of 21 was trimmed to 19 with the late withdrawal of current Sen. Shannon Ashbury and Donna Selle. Ashbury has withdrawn from her classes to care for her new-born baby daughter.

Selle cited time constraints and a desire to explore other avenues as her reason to withdraw, but left open the possibility of a future run for ASBSU Senate.

"There are some organizations on campus that I’d like to get involved with and the senate is extremely time consuming. The job description says 10 hours, no way! It’s more like 40 to be put back on."

Elvis considering an education at BSU

Shelley Wilson
News Writer

In addition to a fire alarm, Elvis made an appearance at the Association of College Unions International Conference Oct. 22 in the Student Union Building.

College and university employees, members of student government and student programs board members were some of the 250 involved. Of those attending the conference, 198 were from out of state.

"Rosalee Sorrels gave the opening banquet call Idaho flavor," said Brian Bergquist, a conference organizer. After dinner Thursday, guests were treated to a taste of Idaho when Sorrels performed western stories and songs.

A fire drill sounded during the opening-night banquet, right after salad and rolls were served. Most people grabbed a roll and evacuated the building immediately.

The ALC-instigator, a spoof on the tabloids used to promote an event, reported that Elvis was seen at the conference hotel. Actually, an Elvis look-alike sang a couple of songs at the Saturday-night banquet.

"From the perspective of a student, it was neat to see how excited students from other campuses were to be at Boise State," said Ziddi Msangi, student conference chair. "As a result of this conference, the College of Southern Idaho has joined this organization," said Msangi.

Fire alarms pester SUB

The fire alarm dazoned on as 250 conference guests calmly spooned poppy seed dressing on their garden salad Thursday in the Student Union Building.

Everyone thought it would be a false alarm. They were right. The guests were evacuated from the building while the fire department investigated the alarm.

The union has experienced an average of three to four false alarms a month, said Barry Burbank, SUB business manager. The fire department now charges $250 each time it responds to a false alarm, he said.

They found and repaired a major source of false alarms last month, said Burbank. Now they will be identifying individual sensors that might need recalibrated, he said.

New alarm systems often have problems with false alarms that tend to taper off as problems are discovered and eliminated, said Burbank.

There are rules out there and we have to follow them," she said. "If you don't feel any ill toward the board for their action, but he questions their decision. "I don't feel any ill will toward the Election Board. They think they're doing their job. But they're launched a major attack on political free speech, which in a democracy has got to be your most precious right,"" the Student Bill of Rights, which states "There are rules out there and we have to follow them," she said.

Seron said he wasn't angry with the board for their action, but he questions their decision. "I don't feel any ill will toward the Election Board. They think they're doing their job. But they're launched a major attack on political free speech, which in a democracy has got to be your most precious right," the Student Bill of Rights, which states "No rule shall restrict any student expression solely on the basis of disparagement or fear of its incident or motives."

Seron is a former committee chair on the Student Board and also ran for Idaho House in 1990. His campaign ads read "Mack. Sermon. No Bull."

Fifteen thousand points of light can't be wrong. The urge to do campus and community service is breaking out at BSU like a virus. At right, Junior Holly Shelman pitches in for Make a Difference Day. Others are raking leaves, putting in the phone and taking to the streets...

November is full of opportunities to get out there and pitch in

K. Neilly Cordingley

BSU is out to explode with service project opportunities. On Halloween the Kappa Sigma Fraternity and the Alpha Phi Omega Sorority protected trick-or-treaters from the heavy traffic on Harrison Boulevard during their 6th annual Halloween Watch. According to Tristan Purvis, 16 students are to participate in the Halloween Watch, 20 were expected for the Kappa Sig's 5th annual Table Rock Cleanup on Nov. 1. The cleanup traditionally lasts 2 or 3 hours, according to Purvis.

Vance Griffin said, "There's just tons of glass—at least half of the garbage is broken bottles." A truckload of garbage goes out. Griffin said. In addition to picking up the broken glass, the Kappa Sigs will be repairing a Table Rock bench.

Into the Streets is a nationwide volunteer drive Saturday, Nov. 7, beginning at 9 a.m. at Bravall in the SUB. After a welcome, volunteers will participate in service projects from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. according to Jennifer Sheets, an ASBSU senator.

There will be 13 service projects, said Sheets, at 13 different locations. Some of the projects are taking up Morris Hill Cemetery, working in the E-Ada soup kitchen, painting the Ronald McDonald House, doing yard work for elderly citizens, enrolling kids at the Christian Children's Home and giving homeless shelter donators.

The goal of Into the Streets, Sheets said, is "to inspire students to volunteerism and to develop a sense of community commitment to community service."

A part of a mission statement written by Sheets declares: 'We are committed to solving the problems faced in our community as diverse, compassionate, active adults. We strive to create an atmosphere that encourages individual self-development as ethical, concerned, responsible and humane citizens."

To sign up, contact Jenny Sheets at 385-1440.

Rake Up Boise, Saturday, Nov. 14, from 9 a.m.-11 a.m., is a project which will help senior and handicapped citizens who are unable to rake up their yards.

The BSU Association of Classified Employees, the BSU staff and faculty invite you to participate in the satisfaction of campus and community service.

There are so many possible service projects cropping up that ASBSU is trying to implement a Volunteer Coordinator position to keep up with them all.

ASBSU has never had a volunteer coordinator, and according to Sheets, "the goal is to get that position."

The desire to volunteer is strong, she says. There are so many service projects going on, Sheets says, because BSU is "linked to a national drive for volunteerism."

ASBSU encourages students to get involved. "I think there's a psychological effect when people volunteer. People feel better about themselves when they volunteer. It will prepare students for responsible citizenship." Sheets said. "There are some universities that require students to volunteer before they can graduate."

Comm lab makes a difference

Stan Oliver

A BSU communications lab has taken on a precedent-setting project this semester. The group of students are working with the United States Connection to organize, promote and oversee Boise State's first-ever Make A Difference Day.

The event, an all-day affairs, will be held on Saturday, Nov. 7th. Although the individual events will be taking place in various locations throughout the Boise area, the Volunteer Connection's offices at 5220 Franklin Road will serve as the command center for the entire project.

Make a Difference Day institutes an ongoing process. People who are unfamiliar with volunteer work are enlisted to perform vital community projects which might otherwise be passed over for lack of community response.

The lab group—CM 216/316—conceived this project as a means to improve the quality of life in Boise even as its population continues to grow.

A calendar of events for Make a Difference Day projects follows:

• Hayes Shelter Homes: General clean-up and minor repairs at the Hayes Shelter facility. Paint and cleaning supplies are needed. Volunteers needed: 12.
• Senior Programs of Boise/Ada County: Minor repairs and cleaning at homes of senior citizens. Volunteers should bring own tools and supplies. Volunteers needed: 25 plus.
• Cystic Fibrosis Foundation: Call every evening to receive television auction and/or carry auction item out for display. Volunteers needed: 20.
• Holiday Parade Association: Need people to serve as traffic controllers and parade pacers, to coordinate parade line-up, to distribute entry numbers and distribute signs and to assist in the horse area. Volunteers needed: 17.

For this year's effort, there will be six national awards of $1,000 each, plus 10 honorable-mention awards of $250 each given to selected Make a Difference Day participants. There will also be a local award of $100. The award money will be given to the charitable organization of the selectees' choice.

The phone number for those who want more information on the projects listed above or on other projects not listed at press time is 345-4357.

During political campaigns, issues such as family values and single parenthood often get blanketed in a fog of statistical rhetoric.

Hilda Scott, author of "Working your way to the bottom: The feminization of poverty," states that in 1989 72 percent of all women between the ages of 16 and 64 could not earn enough money to support themselves and one child without being dependent upon other resources. But I am a student of economics, and this is just one set of data that fail to concern me to what are the other costs involved in being a single parent? I include your phone calls, all those opportunity costs—the cost of giving up another chance. What am I giving up when being single?

Freedom—often I find myself very angry. Anger is what I have to say "no" all the time to the children every time they want to buy something, even small things that were always in the budget before. How angry when the children hurt them- selves, because I don't know how much further in debt that might put me, and that will make me appear to be a neglectful parent. I am saying all the things that "we" used to give them, such as fun time-caretaker activities, that I must now say "no" to.

Confusion—Along with feeling angry, I feel guilty. The kids are just as angry at me for saying no as I am having to say it. And for some reason, when someone is mad at me, I feel that certainly at some level it is my fault that they are hurt- ing. I have done something that hurts my children, something I can't repair, something that won't go away.

Time—I'm still attending school and am working my hours a week just to pay general necessities of my household. What I have to say is that I'm just not available to say "yes" to your concern. What explains this, the jobs are on campus, and the nature of their concern is such that I can only offer you until 4:00 p.m. every day. And I can't tell you how many times the children have literally cried all the way to BSU about having to leave all of their free time. It seems these days no one has any of that. I am perpetually behind at work and school, and I have no time to do research, nor have I cracked a book but once or twice.

Well being—As is the case with many divorced and divorced parents, I am embroiled in litigation, which is especially emotionally unbalancing. And what about self-esteem, which raises our self-esteem to new heights? And we watch our selves survive and eventually thrive—this is a very empowering process.

More importantly, our children watch us go through this process and they learn along with us. That's why most of us persever (to quote Bart Simpson), shame on you for not killing me strong to me. I'm banking on you, the most powerful woman in America about 10 years from now.

Dear Editor:

Turn on the television and it is very apparent that elections are near. Every day we are bombarded with the newest poll results and "expert" evaluation on who is winning what race. In the final days before election day, everyone urges people to vote to see making such an important decision as voting passed on. I am a second ad or poll results. Here in Idaho I am alarmed at the campaign noise. Dark Kempthorne has run an alarming campaign. Kempthorne claims to be an "outsider" and yet according to documents he filed with the Idaho secretary of state's office, 50 percent of his new contributions are from political action committees.

Furthermore, Kempthorne's campaign is run by three of Steve Symms' staffers, and Kempthorne admits that "Senator Symms and I have a great deal in common on basic philosophy" (Op-Ed, 20 Oct., 26). Idaho does not need another U.S. Senator like Steve Symms.

I urge everyone to look into the other candidate, Richard Stallings. His record stands as a testament of what he will continue to do for Idaho. Stallings has been an educator for 20 years and is a moderate Democrat. Stallings has always voted against congressional pay raises, favoring cutting the government and supports a balanced budget amendment.

In the last few days before the election, get to know the candidates, get to know your questions and make an informed decision.

Vote!

Dear Editor:

Hey Joe, where you going with that accusation in your hand? You speak of accountability of purpose and the seniors pushing their unions and yet you seem to have little or no basis for your inflammatory accusations.

I voted on Senate Bill #11 according to the campus union leaders. As a student of your campus, I see no basis for your inflammatory accusations.

In the event that you or anyone else wishes to know more, come see me. My office hours are listed at ASBSU and Senate meets Tuesday and Thursday at 4 p.m. In the event that members of the College of Health Sciences should feel strongly against my vote, come see me and I will offer you my refund your 11 cents.

Shame on me, Mr. Lundgren? "At Contrary" (to quote Bart Simpson), shame on you for not knowing all of the question before pointing fingers.

The Arbiter runnig an alarming campaign

Dear Editor:

This is a letter to the editor of the Idaho State University newspaper, The Arbiter. I am writing to express my concern about the recent campaign statements made by Senator Scott. I believe that Senator Scott's campaign has run an alarmingly negative campaign.

In my opinion, Senator Scott's campaign has focused heavily on attacking his opponents rather than on discussing his own policies and plans. This is not a healthy way to conduct a campaign for office.

I urge you, the readers of The Arbiter, to look beyond the negative rhetoric and consider the true issues that face our state and our country. I believe that Senator Scott's campaign is not the right choice for our state's future.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Off-Broadway show tickets for students at a BIG discount

Cheelen Myers
Culture Editor

Students who crave culture but are short on cash can see touring Broadway musicals at discounted prices. "Fiddler on the Roof" is just one musical presented by IJA Productions that is offered to students at a special price.

The motivation for lower ticket prices is to give students the chance to see quality shows at affordable prices, according to IJA Productions President Jack Alotto.

"Fiddler on the Roof" is a classic musical that is still appropriate in our society today. The play was written in 1964, but is still relevant. It tells the story of Tevye, a milkman, husband and father of five single daughters. The family lives in the village of Anatevka, where traditional values run strong.

A free lecture will be presented by Guralnik at 10 a.m., also in the Morrison Center Recital Hall, titled "Music & Dramatic Presentation."

Joy Harjo

Multicultural Understanding" Harjo's discussion will focus on how to use literature to enhance multicultural studies. The Native American Studies Association of BSU will give a reception in Harjo's honor after the reading. The reading/lecture is free to the public.
The interesting problem with realism fall is that it capitalizes most on the materialistic, magical, and philosophical elements that are left in the human spirit. This is not to say that realism is without value, but it is important to consider its limitations and to recognize that other forms of art, such as surrealism and expressionism, offer different perspectives and approaches to the same questions.

Wayne Thiebaud

Modernism was a search for utopias both local and global. The public has always been the catalyst for change, for it is the people who insist on new solutions to old problems.
Artists who have shun the traditional styles of their times, in favor of personal expression and experimentation, have contributed to the development of modernist art. These artists have sought to break free from the constraints of traditional art forms and to create new forms of expression that are more appropriately suited to the times.

The futurists and surrealists, the aestheticians demonstrated and prepared the way for the modernist movement. Their works are still a testament to the power of imagination and the willingness to break free from the thanks of the past. They have left behind a legacy that continues to inspire artists and thinkers today.
New faces bring change to Broncos

Although the season has just begun, the Boise State basketball team is going to have to get used to some changes. The Broncos have a whole new look this year, as only four players return to the team and—and the rest of the team across the country have been shifted to their friend by the NCAA. Practice for the 1992-93 season began on Sunday, and BSU head coach Bobby Dye said he is looking forward to getting started.

"You're optimistic, but at this point in the season everyone's optimistic," he said. While Boise State only has four returners from last season's team, they could be the keys to a winning season. Center Tanoka Hail and forward Bobby Dye said he is looking forward to getting started.

The Broncos will need strong performances from the four seniors and maybe some look, up to him to a team that hasn't played together very much.

But Dye, in his 10th year as the Bronco coach, isn't forcing any of them to take over the leadership role. "As I said to them, they don't have to be the leader, just the leader," Dye said.

Usually by this time of the year the Broncos would have a couple of weeks worth of practice. But this season the NCAA has pushed back the opening day of practice for basketball teams by four days. "It's not as if the middle of October like it used to be," Dye said. But with a team that hasn't been together all the time, the Broncos could have used the extra practice time.

"I think the fact we have two less weeks certainly doesn't help the situation," Dye said. "We're going to have to go quicker than we'd like."
