Bruce McClugage's column has gotten me to thinking about how people react to the word "God" and those who say it frequently. I have observed some not so inspiring behavior from people who get into discussions about God.

A friend and I were out for an evening stroll through downtown Boise on a balmy summer night a few years ago. Downtown Boise on a Friday night seems to be the hunting ground of choice for evangelists during the summer.

I remember one incident in particular. A young man was standing on Main Street, passing out tracts. A man and his date or wife were walking toward the young man. He turned to them and asked them a question.

"Have you heard of Jesus?"

The man said, "I'm not interested." The young man said, "If you reject Jesus, you'll go to hell. It's true. If you reject Jesus, you'll go to hell."

My friend winced and said, "I didn't want to see that. That wasn't pleasant."

I had to agree. While I respected and admired the young man for standing up for what he believed in, I found his method of persuasion to be mildly abrasive. I don't think persuasion based upon fear is the best method to utilize.

Another incident occurred on the BSU campus. A man, his wife and two children used to stand in front of the business building with signs. Scripture was written on the signs. He would stand with his sign, rain or shine, and quote scripture to passing students. His method of persuasion also seemed to be based upon fear and intimidation.

At one point in the day, a crowd of students gathered. The man and the students soon entered into a verbal volley concerning who was right regarding truth and whether or not he had a right to be there. I remember feeling particularly sorry for his wife and two little kids. They stood their ground silently with their signs. It must have been a mildly intimidating experience for his kids, seeing the crowd of students and their father raise their voices at each other.

This was another unpleasant example of what happens when people discuss God. I walked away from that scene feeling slightly disturbed.

However, not every discussion about God ends in a shouting match. The Jehovah's Witnesses used to come to my door every Saturday morning, regardless of the weather. I could count on them knocking on the door at around nine o'clock. A father and his nine-year-old daughter would be standing at the door when I opened it. After I showed the family dog back inside, we would talk about what the latest issue of Awake! and Watchtower had in it. These are the magazines they distribute.

Our conversations were always pleasant. I never lost my temper and started shouting. Neither did the father. His daughter was also always pleasant. While we never agreed on anything and neither one of us converted the other, we enjoyed our chats.

The Arbiter is the official student newspaper of Boise State University. Its mission is to provide a forum for the discussion of issues impacting the campus and the community. The Arbiter's budget consists of fees paid by students of BSU and advertising sales. It is distributed to the campus and community on Wednesdays during the school year. The first copy is free, additional copies are $1 each, payable at The Arbiter offices.

THE WEATHER

It is a far, far better thing to have a firm anchor in nonsense than to put out on the troubled seas of thought.

Social workers examine violence this week

"Social Workers and the Challenges of Violence Worldwide" will be the focus of a satellite videoconference hosted by broadcaster Charles Kuralt and a conference this month in the Student Union Building.

Kuralt will explore what communities around the world are doing to stop violence in a live interactive videoconference at 7 a.m., Feb. 9 in the Student Union Hatch Ballroom A. The videoconference will be broadcast to more than 300 universities, medical centers and other sites nationwide. On-camera guests include a former Los Angeles gang member who is now an author and youth advocate, and an Indian activist who battles gender discrimination. The sponsor is the National Association of Social Workers Violence and Development Project.

The BSU conference will begin with a keynote address at 7 p.m., Feb. 8 by Bill Wasmuth, executive director of the Northwest Coalition Against Malicious Harassment.

At 1:30 p.m., Feb. 9, small-group discussions will cover the role of the media regarding violence; mediation and conflict resolution skills; poverty, racism and violence; and social workers’ personal, professional and ethical responses to violence.

The conference is sponsored by the NASW, Hispanic Human Service Providers Association and the BSU School of Social Work.

For fees, registration and other information, call social work professor Marie Hoff at 385-1568 or NASW at 343-2755.

Programs slated throughout February focus on body image

Eat right, get fit, pump up. Body image has become a national obsession. Is that good? What kind of impact does advertising have on how we perceive our bodies? Why do more and more young men and women suffer from eating disorders?

These and other topics will be discussed in February for "Body Image: Societal Issues," a series of free programs sponsored by the Women's Center at Boise State University. All events will be held in the Student Union Building.

A highlight of the month will be an educational panel discussion on "Body Image: A Holistic Approach" at 7 p.m., Feb. 13 in the Barwell Room.

Panelists are: Dr. Michele Boyer, psychiatrist; Dr. Cynthia Clinkingbeard, endocrinologist; Cynthia Ellis, licensed professional counselor; Kelly Shrumm, registered dietician; and Tina Wright, exercise specialist.

The program is co-sponsored by The Fitness Experience.

Four brown bag programs that meet from noon-12:30 p.m. in the Alexander Room will explore body image and related topics. The schedule is:

Feb. 7 — "Body Image and the Media" presented by Millie Smith, a licensed professional counselor who specializes in women’s issues, body image and eating disorders.

Feb. 28 — "Body Image: University Perspectives" panel discussion facilitated by Terry-Ann Spitzer-Gibson, a BSU professor of health, physical education and recreation. Panelists are: Chris Morse-Herod, counseling department; Jayne Nelson, Health Services; Judy Lombardi, Art Department; and Sandra Scheckel, History Department.

For information, call the Women's Center at 385-4259.

Fish and Game director to speak at Student Night

The Institute of Management Accountants will be having its bi-annual Student Night on Feb. 20 at the Owyhee Hotel. The social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. with dinner served at 6:15 p.m.

Jerry Conley, director of Idaho Fish and Game, will be the featured speaker. Conley will focus on the monumental task of managing the fish and game population in the state. The policies he has addressed while in office will no doubt surface as well as those that have just cropped up.

This is an opportunity for students to meet local business leaders and potential future employers. Students must sign up in the Accounting Department, located on the second floor of the Business Building, by Feb. 14. The event is sponsored by local businesses.

For information contact John Bull at 887-6482 or Dave Nix at 385-1252. Student Night is open to all college students regardless of degree plan.

UI Presidential Screening Committee narrows candidates

The University of Idaho Presidential Screening Committee has trimmed the number of candidates for the presidency from 16 down to 10.

The committee, which met in Moscow Jan. 30, forwarded the list to the State Board of Education, which conferred in Boise Feb. 5 (after The Arbiter had gone to press) to determine the process and schedule for selecting a new president from among the candidates.

The position opened up last summer when Elisabeth Zinszer left to become chancellor of the University of Kentucky. Only one of the candidates, A. Larry Brunen, is at U of I already. Brunen has been employed at U of I as a professor in the Department of Food Science and Toxicology since 1993. J. Kirk Sullivan, vice president for Governmental and Environmental Affairs at Boise Cascade Corporation, is also among the 10 remaining candidates.

All the other candidates come from states other than Idaho.

Upcoming IMPORTANT deadlines

Feb. 12 — Last day for Leadership Quest nominees to reply to Student Union and Activities to attend the day-long seminar on Feb. 16.

Feb. 16 — National Student Exchange application deadline. Call 385-1200.

Feb. 17 — Last day to submit papers for scholarship and information presentations during "EcoPychology: The Interconnectedness of Human and the Environment," the College of Social Sciences and Public Affairs 1996 Spring Conference, slated for April. Call Jerry Moore, 890-3007.

Feb. 23 — Last day to drop classes, last day to completely withdraw from all classes.

Campus Crime

Jan. 27 — 14-hour mental hold, Student Union Building

Jan. 28 — carrying a concealed weapon, University Drive and Orinery; driving while suspended, University Drive and Capitol Boulevard; resisting and obstructing, University Drive and Capital Boulevard; resisting and obstructing, University Drive and Linonak Street.

Former Ben & Jerry CEO speaks at SUB

by Eric Ellis
Staff Writer

On the evening of Jan. 30, BSU's Student Programs Board presented Fred "Chico" Lager, the former president and CEO of Ben and Jerry Homemade Inc. The corporation makes the world-famous P.C.-friendly Ben and Jerry's ice cream.

Lager quit as Ben and Jerry's CEO of 10 years in 1991 to write a book, Ben and Jerry's: the Inside Scoop, and to hit the tour circuit. His speech featured many Deadhead-style roadtrip stories about Ben Cohen and Jerry Greenfield, the founders of the ice cream company.

Although Ben and Jerry started with virtually no business knowledge and even less ice cream knowledge, the "scoop shop" they started in an abandoned gas station in 1977 is now a $150 million a year corporation which is publicly traded. Lager was careful not to depict the company founders as idiots who bumbled into huge success. He pointed out that actually, they are a pair of hard-working idiots who bumbled into huge success.

Their corporation is unique in that it has a social mission statement. It holds that the company has a social responsibility which requires them to use decisions and profits to the benefit of our global community as much as possible. They use non-traditional suppliers such as the Zen Bhuddist bakery that makes brownies for their Double Fudge Brownie flavor and provides shelter and counseling for homeless people. They give scoop-shop franchises away to non-profit groups as a permanent source of funding. At the end of the year, the company even donates 7.5 percent of its pre-tax profits to non-profit organizations who apply for grants.

Lager's most telling anecdote about Ben and Jerry, best friends since junior high, had them playing David to the Pillsbury Corporation's Goliath. In the early '80s, the partners decided to retail their ice cream through supermarkets as well as through their company-owned scoop shops. They wanted to sell in Boston, Pillsbury, who had just bought Hagen-Dazs for $8 million, had them black-balled. When the pair began to approach stores asking them to carry the rich, super-premium ice cream, Pillsbury issued an ultimatum to the stores. If they carried Ben and Jerry's products, they would no longer be able to carry Hagen-Dazs. Though this is an anti-trust violation, Ben and Jerry did not have the resources to fight Pillsbury in court.

The solution? Guerrilla marketing: they sent Jerry to Philidelphia to picket Pillsbury's headquarters. For 10 days he marched alone with a homemade sign which read, "what's the doughboy afraid of?" They made national news and thereby generated far more publicity than they could have bought at that time. "It was the equivalent of probably a $40- to $50-million advertising campaign," said Lager.

Although one of the company's mission statements is "If it's not fun, why do it?" the moral of Lager's story was thin: "No small business ever became successful without a lot of hard work." When he finished speaking, he treated the audience to a lot of really great ice cream.

Noise concerns push Liberal Arts Building project completion date to mid-March

Noise concerns push Liberal Arts Building project completion date to mid-March

Diana Caldwell
Special to The Arbiter

Don't call the office of the BSU architect to ask about the wall tile replacement project now under way in the Liberal Arts Building.

Vic Hosford has been inundated with calls from students and faculty according to Kathy Hendricks, administrative assistant. "We've received at least 50 calls, either to find out what we're doing or to complain about the noise," she says.

The project, begun before the end of the fall 1995 semester, calls for the replacement of crumbling wall tiles posing a safety hazard in the hallways of the building. The ceramic tiles will be replaced with sheetrock now stacked in piles throughout the building. Originally, the noisy portion of this project was scheduled for completion before the commencement of spring 1996 semester. "But buildings on campus are used year-round," explains Hendricks, "and the demolition noise interfered with activities in the building over the Christmas break."

The contractor on the project, Park Towne Construction of Nampa, received a stop order on Jan. 18 to review construction and resulting noise in the building. According to a Project Update document issued from the architect's office on Jan. 25, "all noise generating work will now be performed after hours 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. and on weekends." The stop order is expected to increase the budget for the project. The deadline for completion has been extended to mid-March, some 15 to 20 days beyond the original completion deadline.

Out of Doors

Fish & Game to trap and relocate wild turkeys & elk.

Wild turkeys will be trapped on an area west of Council, and the flock will be relocated to an area west of the North Fork Salmon River and east of the Garden Valley region. The birds will be given a new home in the Council area, where predation is less and they will be less likely to humanely die of starvation or other issues. Wild turkeys are also relocated to an area west of Council, and the flock will be relocated to an area west of the North Fork Salmon River and east of the Garden Valley region. The birds will be given a new home in the Council area, where predation is less and they will be less likely to die of starvation or other issues.

Big game on the move...always carefully

Big game competition in Southeast Idaho has big game animals on the move, making them more vulnerable to automobiles. Drivers are advised to use caution as they drive through these areas.

The number of the yearbook will increase by weather, water conditions, equipment problems or schedule changes. If driver error, this will be stored when conditions become favorable.

Call for papers for "Ecopsychology: The Interconnections of Humans and the Environment"

The Social Sciences and Public Affairs Conference Committee cordially invites scholarly and informational presentations concerning issues regarding humans and their relationship with the environment. Topics can be structured around any discipline or department as long as they explore the relationship and/or any critical issues that surround. For example, the relationship may be explored using psychology, sociology, anthropology, biology, economics, ecology, political science, philosophy, health science, or any other you choose.

Deadline: February 17, 1994. For information, write to Biren B. Kothari, President, Social Sciences and Public Affairs Conference Committee, Boise State University, Boise, ID 83725. For more information, contact Jeremy M. Mozley.

Glenn Bock pulls his GMC Sonoma onto West University Drive, negotiating traffic and pedestrians. After speeding up and slowing down to avoid cars, he turns south onto Michigan.

“There must be something happening in the SUB tonight,” he says.

Bock has been patrolling Boise State University’s grounds for 23 years. He started in 1973, and remembers a time when students were less friendly toward authority figures. Bock thinks the Vietnam War left college students wary of police and politicians.

Bock also thinks that has changed.

“Students now look at themselves as potential victims and are more careful,” Bock said.

The size of the campus has also changed. Bock now patrols BSU property across Boise Avenue and Capitol Boulevard. He remembers a time when the campus was much smaller and easier to patrol. He also remembers a time when there was less theft.

Pulling into the BSU Children’s Center parking lot, Bock talks about theft and what he thinks causes it.

“I’ve noticed a correlation between theft and drinking and you’re always going to have a certain percentage of thefts.”

An increase in the number of people on campus also concerns Bock.

“There are between nine and ten thousand people at a basketball game. There is a significant increase in the chances of thefts being committed.”

Growth also takes a toll.

“Used to be years when I could tick off the number of thefts per semester. I can no longer do that. We’ve seen an increase of theft with growth,” Bock said.

He walks through the hallways of the Children’s Center, checking doors. A janitor appears from around a corner and jumps, startled.

Bock explains to the janitor that he’s checking the building a little early and then continues to patrol the halls.

“Custodians are a line of defense as far as security goes. They are fairly involved in keeping an eye on the campus.”

The building secure, Bock returns to his Sonoma.

“We get three or four calls a night. Most of them are motorist assist calls. On some nights, there are no calls at all.”

Bock pulls onto Boise Avenue and drives towards Capitol Boulevard. January and February being cold months, he doesn’t see much action.

“We get busy during the fall, September and October. If the weather is real nice, more people are out doing things.”

He pushes into the ITT parking lot. The two buildings are dark and deserted. Some of the parking lot lights don’t work. Turning on his flashlight, he starts to walk around the outside of one of the buildings.

“Lack of lighting concerns me. People are tempted about how the campus is different from others. A lot of the students are older and are parents. You don’t get a bunch of 40-year-old college students trying to stuff a phone booth.”

Bock explains to the janitor that he’s checking the building a little early and then continues to patrol the halls.

“Transients used to live in empty buildings on that lot. The buildings were bulldozed and torn down and they left for a while. They showed up a couple of months ago. They dug pits and then put stuff on top of them to stay warm. In one of the corners of the lot they have a barrel they light fires in.”

After watching the figures huddle together, Bock enters the building. Shaking the door to make sure it is locked behind him, he starts down a hall, pointing his flashlight into empty classrooms.

“We try to keep an eye on the university’s assets. I drive around checking buildings and later on do a foot patrol.”

Checking the main entrances on his way out, Bock swings his flashlight around the parking lot, illuminating dark spots. Satisfied that no transients are on the immediate grounds, he gets into the Sonoma and drives towards the Village and Heights student housing.

Bock likes what he sees when he pulls into the parking lot at the Village.

“This is a good security setup. There’s a pay phone by that foot path and three levels of windows looking out on the cars in the parking lot. This type of design discourages theft. It makes it difficult for someone to attempt something,” Bock said, cruising the parking lot.

Pulling back onto University Drive, Bock talks about how the campus is different from others.

“Since it’s a commuter college, we don’t have the problems other campuses have. A lot of the students are older and are parents. You don’t get a bunch of 40-year-old college students trying to stuff a phone booth.”

Kehoe exhibit comes to SUB

by Jared Dick

Staff Writer

Links between people are created in many different ways. Telephones can connect people to their next door neighbor or someone in a different time zone. "Cyber-surfers" use the Internet to chat with people across the country with a few clicks on the keyboard. Television allows viewers to see what is happening to people around the world. "Making Links: Contemporary Prints from Eastern Europe," the recently opened art show in BSU's Gallery 2 and the first international art show in the University's history, offers yet another source of connections— that of visual arts.

The exhibition brings 163 works of 22 artists from England, Russia, the Ukraine, Poland and Hungary to Boise, courtesy of Peter Ford and Christine Higginott's Off-Centre Gallery in Bristol, England. Their medium of printmaking includes etchings, woodcuts, linocuts and lithographs. Ford finds this to be an extremely expressive form of visual arts, as "some of the most revealing insights may be reserved for these more intimate forms."

One of the links made through the art is that of past to present. Many of the pieces offer a glimpse into the history of the areas where they were produced. For example, the etchings of Nikolai Batakov, from the series "Perestroika," offers a glimpse at the symbolic caged birds trapped by the "old guard" members of the cold war era. Pavel Makov's etchings share his impressions of his place of residence in Eastern Ukraine, as influenced by Eastern mysticism, old maps and the writings of Igastio Silone and James Joyce. Jan Samotloch's pieces reflect and evoke personal feelings associated with his "melancholic" home region of Silesia, South Poland. Boris Zabirekikh links the past to present through celebrating, through his prints—in the tradition of Pavel Filonov (1881-1941)—the folk tales, architecture and traditions of rural Russia.

Richard Young, Gallery Director at BSU, is responsible for the layout of the exhibition. He makes reference to another important link between American and European art that the show provides—that of artistic heritage.

"A lot of our aesthetics are based in the European ideas, so it links us with our past. It shows local artists that the types of ideas behind their work are not that different from their own, which is always amazing: metaphorical single images, vegetable forms, all are similar subject matter to the ideas of artists in this state or in this country." Young finds this commonality to be where the "core of art is, where people in different cultures can bond together."

Ultimately, this seems to be the crux of the art show—to bring another culture to Boise in order to show that there are links that bind the world together in areas that may not seem too obvious. Young hopes that the audience will understand that there is a "one-world culture that can be linked by art." Perhaps, by recognizing and understanding these links that tie us to one another, a world will emerge where ignorance based prejudice no longer exists.

This exhibition is currently open in the Visual Arts Center's Gallery 2, located in the Public Affairs/Arts West Building (Campus School). The BSU presentation (at present, the exhibit's only North American venue) will last until Feb. 23. In conjunction with the show, Peter Ford of the Off-Centre Gallery in Bristol, England will be lecturing on the exhibition and directions being taken in European printmaking on Jan 26.

There is a "one-world culture that can be linked by art."

Idaho artist Bill Kehoe has been painting with oil on canvas for a little over five years. And though his work has been displayed in two galleries, he has never had an exhibit of his own...until now.

From Feb. 9-29, BSU will present Kehoe's first solo show in the Student Union Gallery. A reception will be held in the gallery from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 9.

A 30-year veteran of the military and federal government, Kehoe—who works out of a studio in Wilder, near his home—took up painting after retirement.

"Painting is something I always wanted to do, so I got started (after leaving the military)," said Kehoe of his artistic experience.

Kehoe's exhibition will feature a collective retrospect of 25 paintings he has done over the last five years. His work features landscapes, seascapes and abstracts, with emphasis on the natural world.

When asked what serves as his inspiration, Kehoe said, "I paint about life experiences." His military career has provided a plethora of these. He has traveled the world twice, going from Vietnam and Japan through Europe, to Mexico, all through the U.S. and to Hawaii.

Kehoe has sold pieces throughout the entire Northwest, as well as south of the border in Mexico and up north in Canada.

Of his exhibit, Kehoe said, "I would just encourage students to come out and take a look at it." So please do. Come to the SUB and see the work of a truly great Idaho artist.
Break out the Prozac:
The Wall comes to BSU

by Steve Jacob
Staff Writer

Get ready, Floyd fans! Pink Floyd's The Wall is coming to BSU on Friday, Feb. 9 at 11 p.m. in the Special Events Center.

This '70s classic, known for bringing out the bong-tokers, pipe-hitters and acid ingestors, has been a staple in the cupboards of rock fans for nearly 20 years. So where did the inspiration for such a bizarre flick come from? According to band member Roger Waters, the story is a smattering of experiences and perspectives of the lifestyles of many generations.

In a 1979 interview with Tommy Vance, a Radio One DJ with the BBC, Waters explained that the idea for The Wall came from ten years of touring rock shows. He went on to elaborate about his experience performing for jam-packed, faceless crowds of rowdies, describing how, unlike most rock stars, he found the experience disheartening. He and the other band members felt that performing to such large crowds was an "alienating" experience which created a "wall" between them and their audience.

On that premise, Waters began to write what would become a smash hit album and later a blockbuster cult film. (The album, The Wall, came out before the movie was even conceived.) But alienation between a band and their audience is only one of the perplexing and pernicious messages that seeps through the cracks of The Wall; it is also the near-life story and experiences of Waters himself.

In the film, a young child (whom Rogers calls "Pink") is left by his father, who must go off to fight in World War II. Rogers explains that his father was killed in the war and that many of the baby-boomers from his generation can relate to the feeling of hopelessness and desolation that he experienced during this period in his life. Specifically, this feeling is expressed in the song "War-Babies," but, as Rogers explains, the song "could be about anybody who gets left by anybody."

In the famous vignette, pitting fed-up grammar school children against their tyrannical school teacher, Rogers reflects upon his experience in school. He defines his school days in an all-boys grammar school as "awful," noting that the primary goal of summers is no problem. In fact, biking along the greenbelt on a warm spring day is a very good way to improve mental health. However, when the air whipping my face and taking my breath away is a not-so-balmy 10 degrees, it's hard to think anything except, "WOW! So this is what the ice ages felt like!"

Sound familiar? Winter got you down?

BSU's Student Programs Board has the perfect solution. On Friday, Feb. 9, the Toucans, a national touring steel-drum band will be stopping at our frigid campus (more specifically, at Brava!), bringing to our "Land of the Perpetual Inversion" music from the " Lands of Sun and Water."

The steel drum was invented on the Caribbean island of Trinidad, made from steel oil drums, cut to various heights and tuned to various pitches. The hollow, almost xylophone-ish sound is easily recognizable. In fact, if you've seen Disney's hit movie, The Little Mermaid, you've heard a steel drum.

So why are steel drums so popular? It seems that this instrument of humble origins holds its perennial place in American pop-culture because it brings to mind exotic images of the tropics. Warm, salty breezes. Warm, sandy beaches. Towering palm trees. Leisure. Carnivals. Parties. Open-air markets. Moonlit strolls. Romance. Love. To snow-bound Norte-Americanos, the steel drum brings to mind everything that we wish for in our lives — especially in winter.

And in case you've only heard a steel drum in the hit song from The Little Mermaid, "Under the Sea," the Toucans will give you the opportunity to actually see what this instrument looks like — as well as see it in action.

The Toucans will be playing from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. as part of SPB's "BSU Unplugged" concert series. While you are enjoying the sounds of sun and water, picturing yourself on a sandy beach. As you sit in your warm, plush seat, you can look out the windows and watch the bundled masses fighting the cold.

Steel drums. The Toucans. It's the perfect mockery of winter.

The Perfect Mockery of Winter

by Rhett Tanner
Arts and Entertainment Editor

Though I do own a car, my bike is my primary mode of transportation. Though I don't have to deal with such annoyances as parking and traffic, and though I greatly appreciate the cardiovascular workout, biking does have its disadvantages.

Like the weather.

Summer's no problem. In fact, biking along the greenbelt on a warm spring day is a very good way to improve mental health. However, when the air whipping my face and taking my breath away is a not-so-balmy 10 degrees, it's hard to think anything except, "WOW! So this is what the ice ages felt like!"

Cassatt Quartet to perform Feb. 9

As part of the Boise Chamber Music Series, the award-winning Cassatt Quartet will return to Boise on Friday, Feb. 9, for a performance in the Morrison Center Recital Hall. The quartet was last in Boise in 1990.

Poets will be performed from Beethoven's "Op. 18, No. 4," Haydn's "Guinea's Third Quartet," and "Quartet Op. 71 No. 2 in C Minor" by Brahms.

The Cassatt Quartet was originally formed in 1995 as the management of the Juilliard Young Artists String Quartet residency program. The group has traveled throughout North America and abroad, performing in halls such as Alice Tully Hall, Fox Kennedy Center, the Thetre des Champs-Elysees in Paris and Monte Carlo. In December 1995, the quartet won first prize in the 19th Banff International String Quartet Competition. They were also awarded a special prize for the best performance of a contemporary work.

The quartet will spend time practicing some of their student ensembles during a master class on Saturday, Feb. 10, at 10:30 a.m., also in the Recital Hall. The master class is free and open to the public.

The Quartet's US tour is supported in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. Tickets for the performances will be available one week prior to the concert at $13.50 general and $9 seniors. (For more information, call 385-1201 for more information.)

BSU to hold Vocal Jazz Festival and Concert Feb. 9

More than 30 junior high and high school jazz bands from Idaho, Wyoming and Oregon will perform at Boise State University on Friday, Feb. 9, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the HSU annual Vocal Jazz Festival. The festival will be the site of a concert by the BSU Vocal Jazz Ensemble at 7:30 p.m. in the USF Special Events Center.

Chairs for the festival include vocalist and pianist Sharon Bradbury and double bassist Bob Martin, formerly recording artists with The Rit, a Boise-based vocal jazz ensemble. The show will be at 8 a.m. at the concert. The 15-member Vocal Jazz Ensemble will also perform several compositions by Bradbury and a vocal arrangement by Martin.

Other festival directors are Boise native Tom Morgan, now percussion instructor at Washington University in St. Louis, Ken and Mel Chad, BSU alumni and current director of church choirs at Eastern Washington University.

The visiting junior and high school bands will perform short programs that will be critiqued by the directors. Solists will be eligible to receive Outstanding Soloist Awards, chosen through the audition of The National Association of Jazz Educators. The chairmen will also attend workshops on various jazz topics under the leadership of the guest directors.

"This is mainly an educational event," said BSU music professor and festival director Jim Mark. "The festival is non-competitive, but the directors will be looking for outstanding musicians who will receive special awards.'

All daytime events will be held in the BSU Special Events Center and the BSU Student Union Hatch Ballroom. These events are free and open to the public. The annual vocal held at the Special Events Center. Admission is 50 at the door. Call 385-4101 for more information.

Persuasionist John Baldwin to perform on Feb. 11

Boise State University music professor and persuasionist John Baldwin will present an "Allanons of Sound Drum Music" on Sunday, Feb. 11, at 4 p.m. in the Morrison Center Recital Hall.

Baldwin will perform solos and accompanied works. Accompaniment will include plates and marimbas on sound drum music. Talented SSM general, SSM seniors and free to BSU students, faculty, staff and students.

The Boise Art Commission on the Arts releases report on the arts and youth at risk

The Boise Art Commission on the Arts has produced a 16-page report, "Youth at Art—An Artist Working with Youth at Risk," that details ten artist residencies conducted in Boise, Sept. 1993 to Dec. 1994 as part of the Family Center Arts Project. The FCAP provided quality experiences in the arts for first-time juvenile offenders and other youth at risk of offending.

The booklet is a guide for agencies and individuals who provide services for at-risk youth. It is easy-to-understand language, Young at Art explains how experiences in the arts can be fundamental to the success of their efforts.

Our new self-help approaches can work to strengthen kids perspectives of themselves. The arts channel their energy toward creativity, healing and positive expression," says Margaret H. Knight, executive director.

In the next several weeks, copies of this report will be distributed to juvenile probation and school resource officers, juvenile court judges, police department personnel, social service agencies and legislators.

The Family Center Arts Project provided the focus for the commission's current youth at risk program, the "Youth at Work and Community Initiative." This initiative—currently being finalized in connection with Boise State University—will enable community members to enable youths through the arts to take responsibility for their place in the community and demonstrate the value of the arts in addressing social needs.

Individuals, organizations and agencies interested in ordering the "Youth at Art report or obtaining further information about the "Youth at Work and Community Initiative" may contact Joyce Serven, Youth at Work and Community Project Director at 800-435-FUND ex. 34 or (208) 334-2119 ext. 34.

The Boise Art Commission on the Arts is a state agency dedicated to making the arts available to all Boise residents through 13 offices throughout the state, which are appointed by the governor.

State Arts Commission to meet in Boise

The Idaho commission on the Arts will hold its winter meeting Feb. 9-11, 1996, at the Shoshone Inn in Boise.

At this important meeting, the commission will discuss the impact that the proposed reductions in federal funding of the National Endowment for the Arts will have on Idaho's arts.

"We are deeply concerned about the effects of losing close to $250,000 in funding to Idaho as a result of the federal budget cut," expressed Margaret H. Knight, executive director of the Idaho Commission on the Arts.

"We the meeting, we will discuss all avenues every program and service we currently provide and determine how we can continue our commitment to the arts. We will be doing this—there's no way around the fiscal reality," Knight added. "Before the meeting is over, the commissions will approve the fiscal year 1997 budget, reflecting significant changes."

The commissions will begin their deliberations in full session starting on Friday, Feb. 9, at 8 a.m. They will continue the discussion through Sunday morning with a break for short committee meetings from 8 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Saturday morning.

The commission meetings are open to the public and interested parties are encouraged to attend. Please contact the Art Commission for a complete agenda at 800-435-FUND or 334-2119 in Boise.

The Idaho Commission on the Arts is a state agency dedicated to making the arts available to all Idaho people. It is governed by 13 citizens from throughout the state, who are appointed by the governor.

BMI Student Composer Award Competition

The 44th-annual BMI Student Composer Award competition will award $15,000 to composers younger than 26 years of age. The awards encourage young composers to create concert music and, through cash prizes, aids in continuing their musical education.

Deadline: Feb. 9. For more information, contact Ralph Jackson, the Director of the BMI Student Composer Awards at 320 W. 57th St., New York, NY 10019 or call (212) 830-9703.

Showhegon Special Fellowships offered

The Showhegon Special Fellowships are nine-week residency programs for six advanced visual artists working independently in rural Maine from June 15 - Aug. 17. Showhegon provides participants with a concentrated period of independent work done with the critical assistance of some of the art world's most prominent artists.

Deadline: Feb. 9. Write or call Showhegon at 200 Park Ave. South, Suite 1116, New York, NY 10003, or call (212) 529-0505 or fax (212) 473-1342.

Religious poetry sought

A $1,000 grand prize is being offered in a religious-poetry contest sponsored by New Jersey Rainbow Poets. The contest, which is open to everyone, will award $28 prizes in all, totaling more than $2,000.

"We think great religious poems can inspire achievement," Frederick Young, the organization's famous contest director, says. "We're especially keen on inspiring beginning poets, and we think this competition will accomplish that. Idaho has produced great poets over the years, and we'd like to discover new ones from among the Boise-area grassroots poets."

Deadline: Feb. 15. Poems may be written on any subject, using any style, as long as there is a spiritual inference. A typical poem might be a love poem or nature poem. One that inspires. Winners will be notified by the end of March and will be invited for free publication. All entries will receive a winner's list.

To enter, send one poem only of 21 lines or less to Poetry Contest, 103 N. Wood Ave., Suite 70, Linden, NJ 07036.

13th-annual Lewis-Clark Juried Art Exhibition call for entries.

6th Annual Great Garbage Binge Art Show

The 6th Annual Great Garbage Binge Art Show is a nationally juried competition open to artists of all media. Produced by the Bozeman Recycling Coalition, the art show is an exhibition of work that is representative of current ideas, trends and realities in the use of recycle art or mixed media.

The Great Garbage Binge Art Show is about the insights artists have regarding the dawn of the environmental crisis. The 6th annual show seeks entries that critique consumerism and wastefulness or suggest inventive possibilities for resource use and management.

The exhibition will be held at the Emerson Cultural Center, Bozeman, Mont., from April 5 to May 31. All media are accepted in two- or three-dimensional forms.

This year's show will be juried by Helena artists Dick Notkin, an internationally recognized ceramist, recipient of three NEA grants and a John Simon Guggenheim fellowship; and Phoebe Toland, a mixed media and abstract painter with an M.F.A. from Montana State University.

Deadline: Feb. 16. Cash awards of up to $1,200 will be given. Entrants will be charged a $15 fee for up to three slides. For information and application forms, send an SASE to Rick Keating, 1715 Bello St., Boise, ID 83702 or call 338-0631.

Broncos take first win

‘Our mistakes are when we hold back and get conservative. We need to go out and attack that piece of equipment.’ --Sam Sandmire

by Jim Klepacki
Sports Writer

The Boise State women’s gymnastic team won its first meet of the season on Friday as they easily defeated Seattle Pacific, 192.1 to 186.2.

The night was a triumph for the Bronco gymnasts as the team tied the school record for most points scored in a meet. The record was set during the 1993 season when All-American Julie Wagner scored the first and only perfect ten in Bronco history.

“It feels great to break the school record, especially this early,” Head Coach Yvonne ‘Sam’ Sandmire said. “I believe things are going up from here.”

En route to tying the school record, six gymnasts set personal best scores. On the floor exercise alone, each Bronco gymnast set a personal best for herself. According to Sandmire, they did this by throwing difficult skills. Five of the six in the lineup performed a double back somersault. Sophomore Heather Werner performed two in her routine.

“We’re taking the strategy this year, that we’re putting in our difficult early. We thought if it’s not consistent, we’ll start pulling it out mid-season,” Sandmire said. “I think it’s paid off for us.”

The crowd got a taste of the difficulty from freshman Carri Roelof. On the uneven bars, Roelof executed two release moves, a Geinger and a reverse hecht. She then moved to the balance beam where she performed a back hand spring to two layouts in a row for the first time.

Boise State dominated the event finals, capturing the first three spots in each event. Werner earned the vault and floor exercise title, while Senior Leslie Mott won honors on the balance beam and uneven bars. Sophomore Johnna Evans won the all around.

The Broncos take to the road this weekend to face their next challenges, the University of Nebraska and Michigan State University. Last year Boise State hosted both teams in the Pavilion and lost to both of them. The have never traveled to Nebraska or Michigan, so they are on uncharted territory.

“They’re going to be good, but I really believe we’re much improved. We’re more balanced this year,” Sandmire said.

To be successful at these upcoming meets, Sandmire says her team will need to improve on the balance beam.

“We need to work beam with a little more confidence,” said Sandmire. “Our mistakes are when we hold back and get conservative. We need to go out and attack that piece of equipment.”

Sandmire also said that the Broncos will need to keep improving on their consistency on the uneven bars. They already set a new school record on the bars this year and would like to do it again.

The meets against the University of Nebraska and Michigan State will be away on Feb. 9 and Feb. 11.

The Broncos return home on Feb. 16 to battle head to head with Washington State. Sandmire invites students to come out and support their team. She say people do not realize that they can, and are encouraged to, be vocal at the meets. Booing and yelling are allowed.

“We’d love to see them, I know they’d be entertained,” Sandmire said.

Wrestlers lose in home dual

Arbiter Sports Staff

The Oregon Ducks won their first three matches on its way to a 20-16 Pac-10 Conference victory over Boise State on Feb. 3.

Four Broncos wrestlers walked away with wins over the Ducks.

Senior Charles Burton defeated Kevin Roney, 10-4, for his 24th win of the season against 2 losses.

Sophomore Dustin Young broke Oregon’s three individual match winning streak at 142 pounds with a pin at the 2:14 mark of the match over Blake Tompkins.

Boise State’s first two wins came from the last two matches of the day.

Junior Jeremy Clayton defeated Nathan Sullivan, 7-5, at 190 pounds and heavyweight Shawn Stipich finished over Rick Polkingham, 3-2.

Boise State’s overall record drops to 1-4 this season with their conference record dropping to 1-2.

The match marks the first of five at home for the Broncos.

They return to action this weekend hosting matches Feb. 10 and Feb. 11 in the Pavilion.

The team will take on Oregon State on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. and the University of Wyoming on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Broncos Stampede Bengals

by David Nelson
Sports Writer
J.D. Hulture scored a season-high 21 points as the Broncos men used a strong second-half showing to down the Idaho State Bengals 71-51.

BSU jumped out to an early 14-1 lead, not giving up a field goal to the Bengals until 7:34 remaining in the first half.

"That’s incredible," said Broncos head coach Rod Jensen in a post-game radio interview. "I thought that put them on their heels. I thought that start was real big for us."

With three guards suspended for recent team and legal violations, ISU faced the Broncos backcourt with a stingy and constant half-court trap.

BSU playmakers found their first-half shooting to be as chilling as the sub-zero temperature in Pocatello.

Bronco guards Jerry Washington, Joe Wyatt, and Shane Flanagan were scoreless in the opening half. Instead of forcing opportunities to score, the Broncos ballhandlers spotted some open teammates.

"With their way they were trapping us and the with the way we design our offense, there’s a lot of movement by the big guys inside," Jensen said. "I thought our guards of making an extra pass to find the big guys inside for open shots."

Phil Rodman, Scott Tharpe, and Hulteen paced BSU with inside scoring, which caused the Bengals to make adjustments in their second-half game plan.

"Idaho State had to adjust to our big guys scoring," Jensen said. "That let our guards see the basket a lot more. Thank goodness they knocked some down."

The Broncos guards hit five three-point shots in the first eight minutes of the second half to outscore the Bengals 41-25 the rest of the way.

This weekend the Broncos take to the road once again. With an Idaho team looking to avenge a 76-72 overtime loss in Boise, the first-place Broncos have an idea what to expect Friday night in Moscow.

"I think Moscow is just as tough (a place to play at) as is Idaho State," said Hulteen. "The fans are really rowdy. I think the young guys got a big impression (at Idaho State) of how it’s going to be up in Moscow."

"That’s going to be another big-time game," said Washington, who is making his first trip to the Vandal campus. "They’re a really good basketball team. We know they’re going to come out after us."

The Broncos will be facing the Eastern Washington Eagles in Cheney Saturday night.

Seven hours of tennis in one match

Three days full of matches are over for the BSU women's tennis team. The match on Feb. 2 against New Mexico ended in a 4-5 loss after seven hours of grueling matches. The Broncos came back three hours later to defeat Idaho 5-4.

Number 1 singles Gayleen McManus, No. 2 Maria Capano and No. 4 Kim Vocker went undefeated on the two matches.

To go along with her victory in singles, McManus, along with her doubles partner Summer Redondo, No. 3 in singles, defeated New Mexico No. 1 doubles team.

The last match of the home stretch handed Boise State a 5-2 victory against Northern Arizona on Feb. 3. Redondo (6-3, 2-6, 6-1) and Devon Pfeiffer (6-4, 0-6, 6-3) finished the sets falling to Sylvia Pasahidis and Micki Barna of Northern Arizona.

Broncos win with individual performances

by Brian Gaus
Sports Writer

The indoor track & field season is under way. So proved the Boise State men’s and women’s teams last Saturday with a slew of fine individual performances at a double-dual meet against Idaho State and Brigham Young University hosted by ISU at Pocatello.

The Broncos notched some dominating wins and solid back-up efforts in most events but still fell prey to the over-all depth of BYU.

The men scored 66 points to BYU’s 80, with the women falling short 55-83. Against ISU, the Bronco women were victorious, 77-60, with the men being downed 63-83.

"It would have been nice to score more points, but I’m very pleased with some of the outstanding efforts I saw today," BSU Head Coach Ed Jacoby said.

When the Broncos did win, they won with authority. Distance runners Brenda Funk (3,000 meters, 10:24.23), Cormac Smith (mile, 4:13.89), and Nisib Bienne (800m, 2:12.79) recorded big wins, as did sprinter Marti Arguelles (400m, .56.61) and field athletes Abigail Ferguson (triple jump, 39’08.25”) and Julie Jenkins (high jump 5’06”).

But most impressive was the 1-2-3 sweep of the 55-meter high hurdles by BSU’s Ryan Reza (7.68), Brian Davidson (7.76), and Ian Hatada (7.96)-Davidson earning second by time in winning a different heat than his teammates. Nothing but Bronco blue at the finish line.

Although he didn’t win his event, BSU’s Mike Brown had two notable efforts over 400 meters. In the open event, Brown started uncharacteristically less aggressive than usual and was edged for first, :49.13-.49.25. But running the second leg of the 4x400m relay, Brown produced a scorch that brought BSU from a distant third into the lead.

The Broncos eventually finished third, but Brown’s unofficial split was an eye-opening :48.00.

"In the open 400m, I let the others control the race which was a mistake. I took out my anger in the relay," Brown said.

High jumper Jenkins faced the daunting responsibility of being the only Bronco athlete entered in the event, meaning the BSU points ship sank or swam with her effort. She rose to the task magnificently, overcoming both pressure and a ridiculously cold Holt Arena (45-50’) to clear 5’6” on her initial try for the win.

In Houston two weeks earlier, Jenkins had cleared 5’10”, giving her an NCAA provisional qualifying mark. She currently sits as tenth best in the nation with the top fourteen marks invited to the NCAA Championships in Indianapolis on March 8-9.

At Houston, Jenkins had delighted onlookers with an impromptu celebratory dance with her coach.

"Julie had a big performance with the 5’10” mark and sometimes there’s a natural physical and emotional period down after that," Jacoby said. "It was somewhat unexpected and nothing to be concerned about."

"I didn’t feel sharp today," Jenkins said. "But I think it was mostly because I was concentrating on winning rather than getting a specific mark. Also, the arena was so cold I hated getting out of my sweats."

Jacoby, who came directly to the meet from a coaching clinic he helped conduct in frigid Chicago, didn’t seem to notice the Holt conditions.

The 23-year veteran BSU coach, now in his last season before retirement, chose to focus on the men’s shot put, where good things were happening for the Broncos.

Chuck McTheny, last year’s Big Sky Indoor champion won the event with 56’00.25”, with freshman Jarred Rome earning third with 54’10.25”. McTheny, a senior with only outdoor eligibility, competed unattached but will rejoin the BSU team in March.

"Chuck did a fine job today, and Jarred had four throws over 54’," Jacoby said. "That was four (of six) throws beyond his previous personal best. He will be a force to be reckoned with in the future."

Track team remains in Pocatello for Mountain St. Games

Pocatello will again be the destination for the Boise State men’s and women’s Track & Field teams as they venture east for the Mountain States Games.

The meet, hosted by Idaho State, will not be team scored, giving a greater emphasis on individual rather than team goals.

Boise State will send only select athletes to the meet with the focus of using the competition and facility to better prepare the Broncos for the Big Sky Conference Championship in Bozeman on March 1-2.

"The Mountain States will be a good meet for us as far as getting ready for the Big Sky in two ways," Assistant Coach Randy Mayo said. "First, the track at ISU is very similar to the one at Montana State (200 meter banked) and it’s always good to get a chance to race on it before the championship. Also, the Mountain States is set up with rounds for the sprinters and we need to experience that before Bozeman."

"Round" sometimes referred to as "heats," are preliminary races where the top finishes qualify for a final race later in the meet. Although sprint races are speed events, the introduction of rounds adds the necessary for a stamina component in an athlete’s training and conditioning in order to shake off the fatigue accumulated in the initial race. Clearly, the BSU coaching staff has addressed this need in their athletes.

You must eventually choose

BY BRUCE MCCLUGGAGE

At last! I finally get an impassioned response to my column.

"Why the hell do you always have to mention God in your columns?" she asked rather loudly. She held the newspaper up over her head as if to threaten me with it.

"You outspoken Christians make me want to puke," she said with finality.

I reached for a nearby trash can. Well, there we have it. Someone finally has enough guts to ask about the "G" word. Then they turn around and say they are going to throw up on you if you answer them. Christians are often found between such rocks and hard places. On the one hand they seem to have transcendent truths to share with the world. They think these truths will really fix the problems we slog around in down here. On the other hand, they don't want to carry around a barf bag for the weak of stomach who start to turn green when they hear the "G" word.

This really doesn't relate to those mustyhead Christians who keep a better eye on the latest fashions or a sports teams' win-loss record than they do mention of these things they have now opened the door to their possible existence.

Have we ever walked in that poor Christian's shoes or listened to him? It's not that we are that sensitive. The problems we slog around in down here are much, much bigger. But don't ever count us out. We jostle on the same issues to show it doesn't exist. We just don't get math so they say God doesn't exist. If one never mentions his God? Maybe all these years he has felt no longer content to allow our heads to be held by the world. They think these truths will really fix the problems we slog around in down here. On the other hand, they don't want to carry around a barf bag for the weak of stomach who start to turn green when they hear the "G" word.

Maybe the university would be more friendly if it recognized the fact that a few people of every sex, age, race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, etc. don't understand math and mechanics. Why ignore the men who need some extra preparation before beginning a technical program? Perhaps different course titles should be used to open up access to just keep things "neutral". Never mention God or worthy of the arena in writing your papers and giving assistance needed by many groups of people, including women.

Dear Arbiter,

Your Jan. 17 review describing The Instinctuals' CD "Ow Wow Man," as "racist" and "ignorant" is nothing new. Boise's cultural gatekeepers have been passing on our head and calling it rain for quite some time.

Artists ahead of their time and place have historically attracted ridicule from unenlightened observers. We'll continue to break ground and those who long for something new will find us.
