Student Employment Office offers job opportunities

Stefanie Wood & Doreen Martinek

News Writers

Boise State University's Student Employment Office (SEO) wants to help students find jobs to keep them busy in between classes and over the semester break. Part-time, full-time, temporary, skilled and unskilled positions may be found through SEO.

In the past, students needed to stop by the SEO to peruse the many job listings available. Now, with a new web site, students can access job information via Internet. With the use of a password only given out to Boise State students by the SEO, access to the entire listing will stay within easy reach of job-hunting students. Students must contact the SEO office with their identification numbers to receive the password.

"It is a great place to find the perfect position," says Randy Smith, Job Development Specialist for SEO. "We have 444 off-campus positions, 20 non-work study on-campus positions, and 63 on-campus work study positions currently listed."

The number of on-campus listings do not run as high as their off-campus counterparts. Some are available through SEO, but individual offices also post listings on their doors or departmental bulletin boards. Smith suggests students stop by the department of their choice to ask about any open positions. "What we advertise is just a drop in the bucket of what is open on campus," Smith adds.

Prospective employers, on- or off-campus, will feel impressed and remember the applicants who stop in to inquire about job positions even when no opening has been posted, Smith says. This seems especially true, he notes, when a student makes inquiries within the area of their major.

Job positions available through the SEO include clerical, food service, custodial, newspaper writing and radio newscasting. The hourly rates for most positions offered through the SEO range from $5.75 to $7.50.

SEO officials provide students basic resume and interviewing tips before referring them to prospective employers. The most important item for students to remember when looking for a job should be to "present themselves correctly," Smith says. All applicants for on-campus positions should "dress and present yourself according to the position." Those looking for a situation off-campus should "present themselves at a notch above," Smith suggests.

The latest job openings can be perused at leisure at the new Student Employment Office Web site: <http://www2.idbsu/seojobs/searchjobs.htm>. Resume and interviewing tips may be found at the same location. Or, interested students may stop by the Student Employment Office, located in one of the newly remodeled offices in the Administration Building, Room 118. Job Development Specialists Randy Smith or Roxanne Gunner may be contacted at 426-1745. They can be found there Mon. through Fri. 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Side note:

Every year as an added incentive, one student is chosen as the Student Employee of the Year. The SEO sends out forms to employers every December. The winner, who must be nominated by their supervisor, receives a plaque designating them as "Top Student Employee of the Year," a gift certificate for a local restaurant or bookstore, and a small monetary award.

The Career Center offers students many ways to improve their chances of finding just the right position for themselves after graduation. Besides job listings, tips on how to write a resume and how to handle an interview, students may also open a file to keep those all important reference letters.

The center gives new graduates an edge in looking for the perfect way to use that diploma they worked so hard on for four or five, or six, or seven years. It also assists alumni in the job hunt for up to five years after graduation.

Services provided at the Career Center include seminars on preparing resumes, writing cover letters, how to present oneself for an interview, and even videotaping practice interviews with counselors so prospective applicants may watch them later and make adjustments to their approaches if necessary.

Director Dick Rapp suggests students write down thoughts and questions before heading to the center. "This goes for any time someone needs to ask questions."

Listings of available employment opportunities are added as they are received from employers. A JobLine, which students may call on a daily basis after registering with the center, gives information on current openings

"Reports indicate about 85% of job openings aren't advertised," Rapp says. A guide containing telephone numbers for area businesses allows students to call prospective employers to check on openings.

and times when employers may be on campus for interviewing purposes.

"Reports indicate about 85% of job openings aren't advertised," Rapp says. A guide containing telephone numbers for area businesses allows students to call prospective employers to check on openings.

About 10,000 job vacancies find their way to the Career Center each year. "These openings are in all different areas — education, business, industry, non-profit organizations, sales, managers, nurses, social work, the list is endless. School districts list vacancies exclusively with colleges and universities," Rapp says.

The positions listed may be local, regional, or country-wide, Rapp notes. If a student wants to move to an area with no listings here at Boise State, the Career Center "helps identify and track down openings in that area."

The center also has counseling available to help students with any issue related to career-decision making. This may be especially helpful to those students not sure of which major to choose, or what they want to do when they finally receive their diploma.

Further information may be found by viewing the Career Center's web site at: <http://www.idbsu.edu/career> or calling them at 426-1747.

Internships provide opportunities at Boise State

Stefanie Wood & Doreen Martinek
News Writers

Students who want to try out a job field should look into registering for an internship. Internships provide students with experience working in a professional capacity in their chosen field of study. Various businesses, nonprofit organizations, and government agencies offer internships for college students.

Fabiola Juarez-Coca, the coordinator of the Boise State Internship Program, encourages students to obtain an internship because it will "make a student more marketable." She estimates

1,400 students intern annually in the Boise area. Boise State limits each student to a maximum of twelve internship credits towards graduation requirements for a degree. While Internships do not have to correspond with the semester; students often work during summer and winter break.

According to Juarez-Coca, organizations which offer internships "know they are hiring students so they are very willing to work around class schedules."

Each hour of credit awarded requires 50 hours of work. Boise State limits each student to a maximum of twelve internship credits towards graduation requirements for a degree. While most internships are for three academic credits, one or two credit internships are possible. Internships do not have to correspond with the semester; students often work during summer and winter break.

The flexibility of the internship program allows students to create their own internship. Many students receive credit from their current employer as long as their work is relevant to their major.

International internships are also available for students through Juarez-Coca. She has applications available for student internships in a variety of countries.

Juarez-Coca's office is located in the Career Center and she encourages students to consult with her. Juarez-Coca may be reached at 426-4351, or e-mail her at fjuarez@bsu.idbsu.edu.

For more information regarding internship opportunities within a specific major contact the Internship Coordinator in each academic department on campus or check out the Boise State internship website at <http://www.idbsu.edu/internship>.

NU LOOK CAR WASH On Call SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

- Apply
- Get selected
- Sign a one year commitment to be "on call" for two predetermined days per week over the course of the year.
- Attend a paid orientation and training session on car washing and customer service.
- Call in on your scheduled days.
- Come to work and get paid for that day if we need you. Go study, go play, go do something else if we don't.
- Meet your "on call" commitment for your car wash "tour of duty" and receive a $2,000.00 Scholarship.
- Students must remain enrolled and in good standing at their respective schools and colleges during their commitment period.
- Successful scholarship recipients will also be invited to participate in Car Wash Partners Management Training Academy, an accredited curriculum soon to become a benchmark of excellence for service training.

One key to your degree just might be a little "ignition tuition". Nu Look Car Wash, with two full service locations in the Boise area, has a unique offer for those enrolled or headed to a local college or university.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE?

All students, 18 years of age or older, who are enrolled in or have been admitted to an accredited local college, university or trade school and have maintained a minimum 2.5 grade point average are eligible to apply. Preference will be given to students who have completed one year of college and anticipate three additional years until graduation.

APPLICATIONS:

Applications may be obtained from the cashier's desk at Nu Look's Broadway and Fairview locations.

spent last fall on my Uncle Fred's farm in Filer. He grows farm-fresh flocks of furry flamingoes. Each flamingo features fine feathers with flamboyant, form-fitting, funky fringes. Uncle Fred gets frustrated when the frolicksome flamingos fail to fornicate freely and frequently. He frantically feeds them frankfurters, fumigates their formals and offers them foppish freebies, but the foolish fowl fail to fathom that the fumes of their flustered flatulence smells of formaldehyde. Because of their fascist fatalism, they fail to flee by flight and act fettered.

He fastidiously uses a flashlight but always finds fault with their feeble Fallopian tubes, force-feeding them phenobarbital flambee, festive pheromones, and photo-sensitive food but the fickle flamingoes only produce fearful fiascos. Flabbergasted, he allays their fears with phrenology, but the faithless, false-hearted fiends foil him with faint feints to the foot while singing falsetto. He foretells a far-out future for them by feeling their foreheads, accuses them of felony, and foresees phenomena involving feral ferrets with fearsome faces wearing fedoras and fighting to filet the finicky feather-bearers. Fog-bound, he dons his frivolous footwear, never forgetting to dance the foxtrot with one forlorn but flirtatious floozie - formerly a femme fatale - to keep her from freezing or smelling like fish.

A friend to the feeble-minded, Uncle Fred distributes French fries every Friday, especially to fussy freshmen who frequently filibuster while fighting about forgotten foreign feudalism. He forbids folksinging while flagrantly drinking frosted Fresca. "Don't fiddle with those frozen feces!" he frowns. As a farmer, he is fanatically against fraterzining with flashy feminists who fondle him or offer him flapjaks or even first aid, or find themselves fascinated by his fantastic physique. After some fanfare, he did fabricate a ferocious faux-pas with the phonograph, and was filmed in a far-fetched flying machine flagging a phony phallus to fend off the photographers. "Perhaps," he philosophizes, "it's all a matter of 'fowl-play!'"

Sit, Sheriff, Sit.

Damon Hunzeker

Columnist

Canyon County, Idaho. I don't know much about the place, except that it's located over there. I don't know anyone who lives in the area, so it's populated entirely by other people. But I do know this much about them: their sheriff is a callow, myopic, despotic knave.

Sheriff Nourse has released a pack of drug-sniffing dogs upon innocently parked cars in Canyon County. If the canines' olfactory senses detect anything of the narcotic persuasion, the owner of the car will be arrested. On the positive side, the sheriff is saving us a lot of time and money by circumventing such pesky impediments as warrants and probable cause. Next on the pathetic gutter-snipe's agenda—encouraging landlords to administer urine tests to potential tenants. At least I think that's the plan. I'm just interpreting the words of one of the sheriff's supporters who told me, "If I don't get the rent money, I should have the right to pee on my tenants until they surrender."

Speaking of the sheriff's supporters, he claims to have public opinion on his side—which seems irrelevant. Hitler enjoyed a high approval rating too. So does Celine Dion. This is a constitutional republic, not a democracy—and except in the case of elections, public opinion remains the last refuge of the benighted. Otherwise, the Constitution becomes a slippery, meaningless piece of soiled parchment.

...we have criminalized the consumption of illicit substances by humans lest they descend into addiction, while dogs are now legally obligated to sniff drugs.

Actually, that's already happened. The Tenth Amendment reads: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." And yet we readily accept the presence of the following federal agencies, among others: the IRS, the EPA, OSHA, the Department of Education, the Department of Labor, the National Lewinskatory Project. So if the federal government is going to ignore its constitutionally imposed restrictions, I suppose states and counties may as well behave similarly—but not before enacting a few changes.

Currently, the Fourth Amendment reads: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized." I propose the following amendment to the Fourth Amendment: "All of the preceding is void if the searches are conducted by doggies."

And while we're at it, I don't think treason should be illegal as long as the covert activities are supervised by trained lemurs.

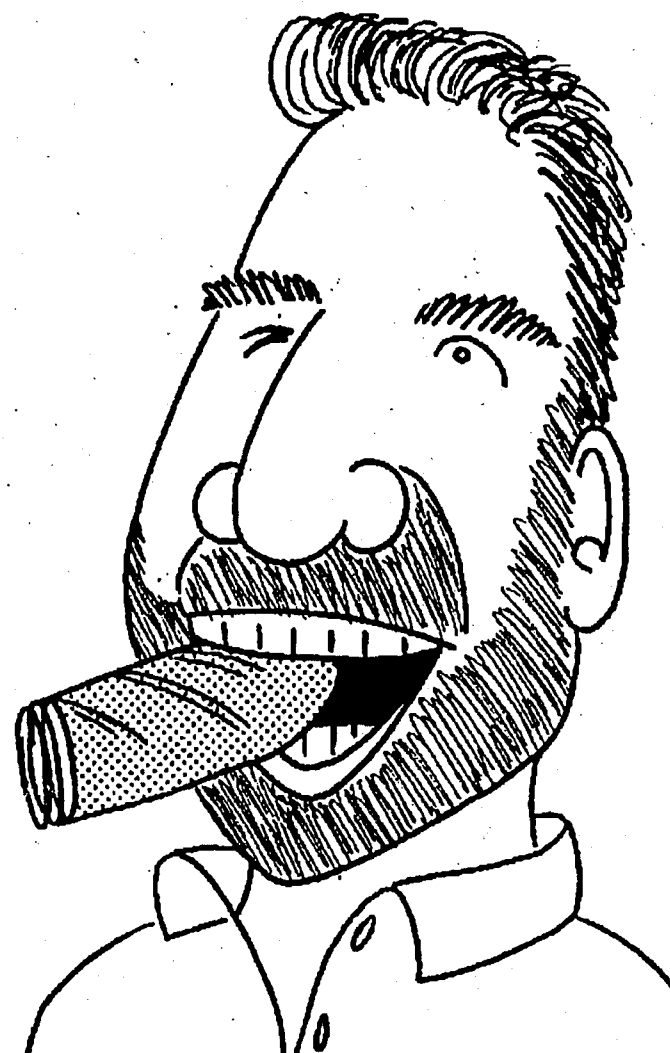

Incidentally, as a grimly ironic aside, we have criminalized the consumption of illicit substances by humans lest they descend into addiction, while dogs are now legally obligated to sniff drugs. Eventually, they'll get hooked—and our taxes will fund the Snoopy Rehab Center. The streets will wind up infested by desperate potweillers, red-eyed beagles—and I hesitate to even mention the crank labs.

Anyway, Sheriff Nourse's argument can be summarized accordingly: if you aren't doing anything wrong, you have nothing to worry about. You know, because drugs are against the law—which, for some reason, is supposed to stay sacred. But it was also illegal to provide sanctuary to escaped slaves from 1850 to 1864. Did the legislative implications make it right?

Well, I gotta go. There's a dog scratching on my door with a warrant in his mouth.
