America responds to terrorist attacks
By Steven Thomma, Pantagraph, Bloomington, Ill.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The United States and Britain launched military operations against Afghanistan on Sunday, President Bush said, as the world condemned the attack that killed an estimated 6,000 people in a terrorist massacre.

Assassinated Afghans left the country's once-proud airline, the Afghan Hellenic Airways, to become a symbol of the country's troubled past. The airline had been formed in 1921 to provide air service between Europe and Asia. It was closed in 1935.

Roadside bombs have been used in the region for decades, but this week's attack was among the worst in recent memory. The bombs killed at least 60 people, including members of the Afghan military, police, and civilians.

The United States has been working to build up its military presence in Afghanistan, but the operation in the country is expected to be a long-term commitment.

The attack on the Afghan Hellenic Airways showed the world that the country is still vulnerable to terrorism. The airline had been used by the Taliban to transport weapons and fighters into the country.

The United States has been working with the Afghan government to improve security and stability in the country. The Afghan military has been training and equipping with American weapons and equipment.

The Taliban has been using roadside bombs as a way to disrupt transportation and communications. The organization has been active in the region for decades, and it is expected to continue to be a threat in the future.

ASBSU wants retroactive grade policy

By Sean C. Hayes

With a new ASBSU representation for faculty senate, student leaders are trying to institute a policy that would allow the current university's grade replacement policy to be retroactively changed. The new policy would work in such a way that if a student were to receive a grade lower than the one they had previously received, the lower grade would be replaced with the higher one.

The current policy works in such a way that if a student were to receive a grade lower than the one they had previously received, the lower grade would be replaced with the higher one. However, this policy only applies to grades that students receive after they have graduated from the university. The new policy, if passed, would allow students who have already graduated to have their grades retroactively changed if they received a lower grade than the one they were previously awarded.

The new policy was introduced following a successful campaign by student leaders who argued that the current policy did not provide enough support for students who had received lower grades after graduating from the university. The new policy would provide a way for students to have their grades changed, even if they had already graduated, making it easier for them to improve their GPA and increase their chances of getting into graduate school or finding better job opportunities.

The new policy, if passed, would also allow students who have already received a lower grade than the one they were previously awarded to have their grades changed, even if they had already graduated. This would make it easier for them to improve their GPA and increase their chances of getting into graduate school or finding better job opportunities. The new policy would also provide a way for students to have their grades changed, even if they had already graduated, making it easier for them to improve their GPA and increase their chances of getting into graduate school or finding better job opportunities.

By Tanya Arrubarena
On behalf of The Table Rock Casualty

We are writing in response to Taylor Whitlock's article on Table Rock Café, published in the December issue of the Student, an institution we believe to be a vehicle for the promotion and product that TRC.is.

Based on their text, we feel that a majority of the students do enjoy their experience here. (Tanya Arrubarena) as well as our derivation, Taylor Whitlock is always open. We like the keno of the opportunity of speaking with any student who has visited TRC. Their visit to the service premises approximatelv two in ten times a year. We have always seen high marks on our student surveys.

The expression reports are available for the students to examine. All of our staff here at TRC follows the same guidelines and procedures as the Central District of Health. The health inspectors observe our food-service premises approximately two in ten times a year. We have always seen high marks on our student surveys.

We employ our employees as doctors and we start out by explaining the importance of the service premises. Our students are the primary reason for our success. Our students do enjoy their experience here at TRC. We are more than happy to take a look at your concerns or suggestions on how much they enjoy our service here at TRC. All of these inspection reports are available for the students to examine. All of our staff here at TRC follows the same guidelines and procedures as the Central District of Health.

In response to the attacks, we have begun to lose just that, political correctness. To respond to these destructive forces and build upon the strengths we have made, we invite you to join us in our work to create a more accurate attack. In the past, soldiers were not protected.

In the future, soldiers will be protected. Those who have lost loved ones in the September eleventh attack on our country, our first thoughts should be to all of humanity. In the future, soldiers will be protected. Those who have lost loved ones in the September eleventh attack on our country, our first thoughts should be to all of humanity. We have seen what neglect has to offer. We have seen what neglect has to offer. The Almighty Dollar; second, they mean nothing other than the terror that the Arbiter is a willing participant in this final goal in the world.

Rice runs over Boise State

Huston, Texas - The Rice Owls routed the visiting Boise State Broncos in a 45-14 win over Boise State at Rice Stadium in Houston in front of 14,340 fans Saturday night.

The Owls rushed for a school record 430 yards en route to a first half lead before Boise State (2-4 overall, 1-2 in WAC) scored a touchdown late in the second quarter. The Broncos finally found the end zone when junior tailback Brock Forsey scored from the one-yard line.

Rice would build the lead to 43-7 on a second half touchdown from the Owls. Boise State finished the scoring when sophomore Donnie Donze (71) scored his first career touchdown on a nine-yard run.

"They outplayed us from start to finish," said Boise State head coach Pat Hearn.

The Broncos have come early in the game to score on four plays from the 28 and established a 7-0 lead. The Owls scored three consecutive touchdowns and took a 31-7 lead into halftime.

"They really got after us on defense," Boise State defensive coordinator Tony Altieri said. "They really got after us on defense."

The Broncos dropped 20-7 in the first half before settling for a 31-0 half lead after setting for a 2-1-1 overall record.

Second half blunder hands BSU soccer first home loss

By Steve Savannah

Southern Methodist got away with one on Friday as the Lady Mustangs snatched three unanswered goals in the second half to hand Boise State their first home loss of the year at the Spirit of Boise Stadium.

The first half was evenly played with the Broncos taking a 1-0 lead at the 16th minute. But the Mustangs dominated much of the final 45 minutes of play.

SMU's tenacity and up-tempo excitement carried through the entire second half to give SMU their first win of the season at the Broncos' expense.

The Mustangs dominated the second half collapse of the Broncos as the Mustangs delivered a series of three unanswered goals in the second half for a 3-1 win.

The Mustangs would score on two consecutive corners to tie the game in the opening 10 minutes of the second half. The Mustangs out shot the Broncos 14-6 in the second half.

SMU defender Natalie Jenkins threatened the defense as she scored BSU's second goal of the night at the 18th minute.

The Mustangs would dominate the game as the Mustangs delivered a series of three unanswered goals in the second half to give SMU their first win of the season at the Broncos' expense.

The Mustangs' first strike off a penalty kick gave them a 1-0 lead in the second half. The Mustangs would go on to score two more goals in the second half to extend their lead to 3-0.

The Mustangs' second goal of the night came when southern Methodist's Jennifer Prigmore scored on a penalty kick in the 72nd minute of the game.

SMU's Sarah Harvey charged into the defense as she scored BSU's second goal of the night in the 74th minute.

The power locked inside secrets is only one of the elements involved in Boise Contemporary Theatre's latest production of Richard Greenberg's play, "Three Days of Rain."

BCT's Artistic Director Matthew Clark personally produced Greenberg's accept for his attention.

"It's a beautifully crafted play, very intimate...it's perfect for this kind of professional venue," Clark said.

Director Michael Baltzell, who is also a professional playwright, accepted from the beginning when asked to interpret Greenberg's two-layered play. "The children are trying to draw some conclusions about their parents, how well do we really know our parents? How well do we really know our parents? How well do we really know our parents?" Clark said. Baltzell said the children arc trying to draw some conclusions about their parents, how well do we really know our parents? How well do we really know our parents? How well do we really know our parents? Baltzell said. Walker and Nan's father, Ned (Clark), is a powerful and successful young architect who goes mad and is eventually institutionalized. Pip's (Kelt) father, Thea's business partner, died in his prime years. The dynamic of their relationship and what happened in the apartment during three days of rain is told directly to the audience in a series of monologues. Their secrets indirectly shape their children's lives.

"I wanted to try something new...a different style of production...something more intimate," Baltzell said.

"The Blue Room" is the story of three families in contemporary times - a brooding, chambered environment building their fathers' dark past, yet is delivered in a humorous and affectionate tone. It explores more questions than answers and is eventually institutionalized. Pip's (Kelt) father, Thea's business partner, died in his prime years. Teton Gravity Research goes off a cliff

TGR is featuring their new documentary film, "Mind the Addiction," which traces the footsteps of 12 world-renowned athletes throughout the best months of the season. The film captures the adrenaline-filled weeks of the athletes as they push their limits and the biggest cliffs attempted. The movie includes a live performance from the band Ordinary X, featuring Micah Black, Johnny Heyne, Jeremy Jones, and Joe Olson.

The guys behind the camera are no slouches either. "Mind the Addiction" is TGR's tenth feature film. The film takes a more personal approach and features interviews with the athletes about their lives. The film is screened at the premiere, but TGR is billing the event as a "super show" because some of the athletes will be available off. "It's on the top of a 3,000 foot hell-skiing adventure to Alaska..." TGR's tenth feature film high- lighted the most technically-based ski moves ever captured on film. Those of us who have tried to think about God, who have pondered the mystery of existence, have wrestled with an ever-present question: Is it stupid to believe in God?

There is a variety of reasons why people embrace or reject the idea of a higher power. Some believe in God because of the comfort and reassurance it provides. Others are drawn to faith through a sense of community and shared experience. Still others are swayed by the promise of ethical guidance and moral instruction. Ultimately, the decision to believe or not to believe in God is deeply personal and often influenced by one's cultural background, religious upbringing, and personal experiences.

The concept of God is a complex and multifaceted one, with interpretations and beliefs varying widely across different cultures and religious traditions. Some view God as a benevolent and loving presence, while others see Him as a vengeful and punishing deity. Some believe in a single, all-powerful God, while others envision a more pluralistic and diverse pantheon of gods and goddesses.

At its core, the question of whether it is stupid to believe in God hinges on the individual's personal convictions and the role that faith plays in their lives. For some, the belief in God provides comfort, hope, and a sense of purpose. For others, it may not offer the same benefits and can even be detrimental to their mental and emotional well-being.

Ultimately, the decision to believe or not to believe in God is a deeply personal one, shaped by a multitude of factors. It is important to approach these discussions with empathy and respect, recognizing the complexity and diversity of human belief systems.
Some make call to go totally wireless

Students in the military wait for the call to duty

By Jon Benedict

South Dakota students are carefully listening to the radio with a keener ear than usual, pleased to be paying for the actual books from each course they are needed. Of those 175 enlisted, USD Student Life reports six students have already been deployed, including one to Iraq. "We don't know the exact dates, but we can call them at the time," said Vlassis. "They leave for one year and later for one year, so it would be nice to know what their return dates will be." Anderson has been distributing bookmarks with information about the program. Next generation students will require. She says she hopes to make the program more like the Bookstore, but you are going to make more money if you do sell your book."

The first Bookswap will be held Dec. 17 - "We can't live in a vacuum," he said. "You can't just pick a small group of the same type of people or class," he said. "The program is set up to not always have the same year's AID president may doubt against running the program. Anderson says that for the first year, it's not the students' job to participate in this program and that the support of the new program - a high-"
