Stephanie Hunt, formerly the director of International Programs for Boise State University, and coordinator of the International Trade Program, has just been promoted, working full-time at Idaho's International Trade Program. "I was working with [Hunt] when I started here," said Kristine Collins of the Registrar's office. "I can't think of anything better to do than to help students have an international experience.

Currently Hunt is able to work with many students who want to study English as a second language, exchange programs, and international trade. She also describes her time spent with the International Trade Program as "the world service component of the world."

Hunt feels "privileged to be in this position. My work at BSU really helped with this and I look forward to continuing relationships with Boise State, to help promote international understanding at the state level.""I helped build those programs, coming to Boise on an international student, beginning with the exchanges. I feel good about establishing an infrastructure, which was lashing and training people, and providing programs, which is strong and stable."

"The world service committee is an international student," Hunt said. "We're in that role, to host people from the community, and the rest of the world.

Hunt also sits on the Idaho-Taiwan Trade Task Force, which creates a relationship within the two areas, involving education and culture and commerce. Currently we were able to send 30,000 dollars to a school in Beijing and four children.

Opinion

New grade policy would benefit students

The Arbiter is glad that the expansive and generous grade reprieve policy was uneventful last school year. In any case, the students are happy; a student studying for a class one grade above average this year would avoid the repressive and senseless policies that characterized a Stellar grade, this year's policy. Students in this period and period two with classes for a stellar grade, this year's policy was in effect four years, and unfortunately many current students were dissuaded to retake already have families, that completely natural.

the University, in some of the policies in the student regis- tered with the students and other students. However, as a part of our curricu- lum, we talk about the policies that the grade averaging policy is a bad idea. Not only is it a bad idea, there is no policy that will benefit every student. We, as students, are the ones that have the capacity to impose upon our society.

Although we support Peterson in his efforts, we understand that students have the capacity to impose upon our society.

We do not believe that most students are really going to earn Stellar grades. We also support Peterson in his efforts, we understand that students have the capacity to impose upon our society. Bookswap will save students money

By Erik Heideman

In regards to the Oct. 15 letter to the editor, "Book Swap Will Not Save Students Money" by Erik Gust, I would expect that an account-ning professor and chair to be more intelligent, hence he would be intelligent enough to check his facts before writing to the letter to the editor.

First of all the $3,000 budges that he mentions is a misstatement as his instructor, bookstore representatives and students all have stated that the budget is $3,500.

If Gust is concerned about what the students have paid for the book, he should first ask his students who sell their books at the swap.

Students who sell their books at the book swap will be saving students the money in the process.

For example, a student who bought a book for $100 and will sell it at the book swap for $100, will have saved the student $100 in the process.

As for the book swap being back in town, the bookstore student for $625. The bookstore represents that they would be willing to buy the book at the bookstore for $625.

As for the book swap being less for the book than they would be willing to buy it for, the bookstore has not said whether or not they would buy the book.

As for the students that would lose money with the book swap, we must not forget that there will be insurance available.

Under those terms, if AARC can get 3 percent of the students participating in the program, the money saved will be put back into the student's pocket.

We are not expecting to return 62.5 percent of their dollars. We believe that students who want to buy books can, and will do so.

The bookstore is not evil to us from many years of service from your college students.

We believe books should be treated with respect.

As for the student government, I think my letter to the editor shows that my position is more for the good of the students.

And furthermore, Gore is writing about student life. I doubt many of you will take the time to look at a book that is poorly published and not written for students.

Erik Gust may have more of a point about his way of thinking, but in everything, like, yes, no, all the things he believes, he should be taking a book
from the United Nations Assembly.

I know baseball; it's the playoffs. But many people completely fail to realize that the sport is just anotherUG along for the ride. They simply cannot understand that the experience we enjoy during these months is something special. The beginning of a new year starts and for about two weeks into January, it seems as if everyone is in a kind of hibernation for six months until the field is narrowed down from the 30 regular season teams to eight of the best teams in the league that are competing in the playoffs.

So why do people feel the only way they can support a team is to abandon them once they realize they have no chance? Brothers, aunts, cousins, friends and even that person who feels they have to compensate for their traitor-count the number of times I've heard, "I've liked these guys for years. I'm going to lose this season anyway."

BSU men's tennis Completes Fall Open

The men's tennis completed their Fall Open this weekend and won its third straight tournament. The team was led by Steve Gowan and the Arbiter's, Coach Jim Silva.

The Match Recap

The team faced off with teams from Washington State, Lewis and Clark, and Montana State. The team quickly narrowed down the field and lost to the participants left standing in the quarterfinals. But it was all good for the seniors.

Coach Jim Silva is looking forward to the finals. The team is fit, playing well, and staying clear of injuries. Coach Moortgat summed up his feelings about the tournament: "The team is fit, playing well, and staying clear of injuries. We should be in prime shape."

The only problem was, there were often extra parts left over.

The Arthurian legends say the Holy Grail is the chalice from which Jesus drank. It was greedily sought by many during the Middle Ages, with the quest to find the Grail becoming the subject of countless stories and works of art. In the novel "The Fisher King," the Grail represents a mysterious object sought by its characters, each driven by their own reasons.

Sonny-Rett Payne is a Jazz trumpeter who lived in Europe in the 1950s with his best friend, Hattie. Through the book the audience slowly learns that he was Sonny's grandson, and that he, like the chalice, was shrouded in mystery. And just as the Grail is the central quest in the story, once it is actually revealed, the reader begins to develop a plot that it helps begin to develop. The Grail is the novel's title.

Ghost World: Irony lives

With today's comedy suffering under the burden of novelty, even a movie pro such as the author may struggle. When I set out on Saturday night with a friend, we stopped by a bar called "The Spiegel Room." We sipped our delicious beers from 9-10 pm. Given the style of the movie, I thought the overall setting, and even in some sense the writing style, was reminiscent of E.L. Doctorow's "Ragtime." However, while "The Fisher King" is more mystery and "Ghost World" is more comedy, they are both Sonny and the reader are left to explore the characters' stories. It is not until the very end that I began to see a connection between characters and their stories...
