Parking addition to add 513 new spaces

By Erin Willis

The addition will make 513 new spaces available at Boise State University. The $4.5 million addition, located on the northwest corner of Bronco Stadium, will add parking spaces on campus as the university plans to accommodate increased parking needs.

University officials expect the structure, situated on the state's GroupWise system, history professor Andy Benson, to meet the increased parking demand until 2015. Although those spaces are advisory, the main complaint is that people can't find parking for their cars.

John Suddreth, director of Parking and Transportation Services, is working with a design team to create a building that will be more decorative, with brick along the southeast wall, making a less prominent building.

"We're really proud of this building," Suddreth said. "It will be a handsome building.*"

The project is expected to begin in the fall and be completed by August 2003, with up to 200 of the spaces expected to be vacant during peak times.

In the meantime, the main complaint is that people can't find parking for their cars.

Faculty sabbaticals suspended next year

By Ted Harmon

The Idaho Progressive Student Alliance (IPSA) is at risk, according to ISU chapter president Debbie Suh, because of the university's budget cuts.

The IPSA gained notoriety last February when about 20 activists interrupted a Senate meeting to protest the war in Afghanistan, and Suh said that next year will be a very challenging year for the alliance. She also added that the university's Board of Trustees has changed the rules for sabbaticals and that the alliance is facing, when employees are being laid off and services are being reduced, the threat of losing access to services, such as housing, for its members.

"In view of the dire fiscal situation facing, when employees are being laid off and services are being reduced, the threat of losing access to services, such as housing, for its members, it was decided that it would be inappropriate to fund paid leave for any faculty member," IPSA Co-President Devin Kelly said.

The policy states, "Sabbatical leaves cannot be granted where the ongoing program of the professor or other faculty member is under review and/or is being considered for non-renewal.

"The policy is significantly worse than the one that was in effect last year, which had several faculty members who could not take sabbaticals because the university had not made a decision on their status," Buhler said.

"The policy is a contractual obligation to its professors was not technically backing away from a contractual obligation," Feldman said.

"The wants clear the strength of the allegation that the present university leadership has failed to offerings and services are being reduced, and the policy was the best we could do in a bad situation," Buhler said.

"We were told that handling would alter the terms of the contract," Feldman said.

Pro-life politicians advocate pro-death policy

By Nate Williams

Hypocrisy abounds in the halls of power, that seemingly most righteous of all groups, the anti-abortion movement. Specifically, I’m talking about the Republican Party, which partly bases its platform of family purity, pro-life beliefs, and fiscal conservatism, on the principles of the Constitution. Such a belief system would seem to be in line with the Constitution, which guarantees the right to life, and taxes the means of achieving justice. However, the ruling class of the Republican Party underlines this contradiction with legislation that undeniably contradicts the Constitution in an extreme example.

The so-called pro-life movement has been a major force in recent American politics, with candidates like Mitt Romney and Rick Santorum running for office on the campaign trail. These candidates have promised to cut funding for Planned Parenthood and other pro-choice organizations, and to enact policies that would restrict access to abortion. However, the pro-life movement has also been involved in other activities that suggest a disregard for constitutional principles.

One example of this contradiction is the recent Supreme Court decision on the Affordable Care Act, which included a provision requiring health insurance plans to cover birth control. This provision was immediately challenged by anti-abortion groups, who argued that it violated the First Amendment right to freedom of speech. The pro-life movement supported this challenge, which ultimately resulted in the decision being upheld.

This decision is troubling for several reasons. First, it shows that the pro-life movement is willing to ignore constitutional principles in order to achieve its goals. Second, it suggests that the pro-life movement is willing to use the courts to advance its agenda, even when the evidence is against it. Finally, it highlights the contradiction between the pro-life movement’s stated goals and its实际行动.

In conclusion, the pro-life movement’s support for the Affordable Care Act decision demonstrates a disregard for constitutional principles that is troubling. It shows that the pro-life movement is willing to use the courts to advance its agenda, even when the evidence is against it. This suggests that the pro-life movement is not as concerned with the Constitution as it claims, and that its true goals are more aligned with political power than with constitutional principles.

Slavery reparations debate turns ugly

By Jerel Thomas

The purpose of the opinions pages is to provide a platform for people to voice their thoughts and ideas. It is through these opinions that we can understand different perspectives and engage in thoughtful dialogue. However, when opinions turn into personal attacks, it becomes difficult to have a meaningful conversation.

The recent debate over slavery reparations has been a prime example of this. Reparations are a complex issue, and there are valid arguments on both sides. However, when personal attacks are made, it becomes difficult to have a productive conversation.

One argument against reparations is that it would be unfair to those who did not participate in slavery. However, this argument ignores the fact that the system of slavery was built on the exploitation of black labor. It is not fair to those who participated in slavery to say that reparations would be unfair to them.

Another argument against reparations is that it would be a form of reparations. However, this argument ignores the fact that the system of slavery was built on the exploitation of black labor. It is not fair to those who participated in slavery to say that reparations would be unfair to them.

In conclusion, the debate over reparations should be about finding a fair and just way to address the harm caused by slavery, rather than personal attacks. It is important to remember that the issue of reparations is complex, and that there are valid arguments on both sides. However, it is also important to engage in respectful dialogue, and to avoid personal attacks.

Jarl Thomas’s ‘pay gap’ column fails to enlighten

By Mandy Bricker

Part of all of us, obviously find that a pay gap doesn’t do all of one another, when the pay gap is supposed to be about a lot of the same things. And it is important to note that the gap is a result of systemic inequality. The pay gap is not just about one’s race, gender, or sexual orientation, but it is about the entire system of capitalism. When one looks at the statistics, it is clear that women, people of color, and LGBTQ+ individuals are disproportionately affected by the pay gap.

In conclusion, the pay gap is a result of systemic inequality and is not just about one’s race, gender, or sexual orientation. It is important to recognize the systemic roots of the pay gap and work towards creating a more equitable society. It is time to demand accurate and equitable payment, and to work towards a world where everyone is paid fairly and consistently.
Powell's condom comments far from shocking

By Ben & Jenette Hayes

Last week, hard-line conservative family values advocates were up in arms when radio host Laura Ingraham quoted Secretary of State Colin Powell, dined to suggest that the U.S. should support the use of condoms in response to AIDS, saying it was "an approach to the possession of personal health and safety that is consistent with all the tenets of Bush's philosophies, discussed candidly in movies, discussing sexual (i.e., health) education and . . . sex is something worth dying for . . ."

Ingraham was quoting Powell, who suggested that the Bush administration support the use of condoms to prevent the spread of AIDS. Powell later clarified his comments, saying he was not endorsing the use of condoms as a way to prevent AIDS, but rather was suggesting that the U.S. should support countries that were already providing condoms to their citizens.

While Powell's comments were met with criticism by some, there were also those who supported his stance. Many saw it as a necessary step in the fight against AIDS, and a way to help those in need.

"I think Powell was on the right track," said one supporter. "It's not just about morality, it's about saving lives. If we can provide condoms to those who need them, we can help prevent the spread of AIDS and save countless lives."
Steelheads victorious in first ever student night

By Phil Dolley

The Arbiter

For those who enjoy exciting hockey at a cheap price see no further than the Idaho Steelheads and Wednesday the Steelheads offered every Boise State student just that. For $10 BSU students gained access to a seat and a small beverage, beer included with proper ID. The league leading Steelheads played host to the Long Beach Ice Dogs. The Ice Dogs came into the game in second place of the Southern Division only to be sent home with their tails between their legs. The Steelheads knocked off the Ice Dogs 4-2 to improve their home ice-winning streak to 15 games. The game was played in front of a crowd of 4,558, over 100 of which bought the $10 student ticket.

The Steelheads were led by Terry Ryan and Scott Swanson each scoring a goal in the victory. With the win the Steelheads added to their lead in the division with 34 wins and have a 6-2 record against the Ice Dogs.

There was also exciting action during the first intermission, which included performances by the Boise State cheerleaders and BSU's Harvey Neef Main Line Dancers. Main Line Dancers Angela Eaton and Mandi Write took full advantage of opportunities to perform in front of an energetic Steelhead crowd.

"It was fun," said Eaton, "I love coming to Steelhead games, it was exciting to dance on the ice." "It was great crowd and a lively atmosphere," added Write.

Shawn Greer, a junior at BSU was at the game in support of the Main Line Dancers but also read about the $10 tickets in the Arbiter, which sponsored the event. With a good showing at the first student night the Idaho Steelheads and the Arbiter would like to make every Wednesday night BSU student night.

Upcoming Wednesday night games at The Bank of America Centre include games against the San Diego Gulls on March 6 and the Colorado Gold Wings on March 20.

Bronco women close out home season in style by Dariea Shindle

The Boise State women’s basketball team completed in the season in good fashion Saturday night with a decisive 73-51 victory over Fresno State at the state-of-the-art Taco Bell Arena. Boise State set all the tone in the game by winning the first quarter 23-12, and then building up a lead throughout the second half. Boise State led by as many as 21 points in the game, and did not allow the Bulldogs to come any closer than 13 points throughout the game. The women’s team finished the season at 9-14, 4-6 in the WAC league. Fresno State finished the year at 9-15, 4-6 in the WAC league.

The Boise State women’s basketball team dominated the game from start to finish. The Bronco’s first three baskets of the game came on free throws by senior guard Mindy McCutcheon and junior forward Jocelyn Thompson. Boise State’s lead then grew to 13 points, 17-4, at the 10:54 mark of the first quarter. The Broncos kept the game out of reach for the Bulldogs. Boise State shot 51 percent from the floor and 71 percent from the free throw line in the game.

Mexican co-worker once gave me: eat menudo for a hangover. and pozole for a cold / flu. Or is it the other way around? Either way, one can't go wrong because both dishes make you feel "muy excelente."

Besides the menudo and pozole, El Gallo Giro, which means "the yellow rooster," offers a wide variety of authentic Mexican cuisine. No kidding, this is the real stuff. The Carnitas, which is tender, slow-roasted pork shoulder, would make Pancho Villa cry tears of joy. Other mouth-watering specials include Carne Asada; grilled skirt steak seasoned with red pepper and lime, Chile Verde; slow-simmered pork in a spicy tomatillo sauce, Tacos de Pescado; real Baja-style breaded fish tacos and Pollo Mole; grilled chicken breast in a traditional pepper and peanut sauce. Al entrees are served with rice, beans, pico de gallo and a choice of flour or corn tortillas.

El Gallo Giro also has tortas on the menu, which are tasty Mexican sandwiches made with freshly baked telera bread (French rolls). The combination plates are also deserving of digestion, especially if you combine enchiladas with tamales or chile rellenos. And taco lovers will surely be pleased with the large al a carte taco menu, which has nine fillings to choose from. These tacos are the real deal—no imitation here.

El Gallo Giro's prices are industry standard and the plates are Grande. But, what really keeps the people coming back is the great service and wonderful food at this charming little haunt in downtown Kuna. Muchas Gracias.

Spring appears to be sprouting, so, a hike in the Snake River canyon near the Birds of Prey Area is a good way to take part of that mountain air. And most importantly, a short walk around the beautiful pond is a worthy justification to stop by El Gallo Giro in Kuna for some of the best Mexican eats in town. It is a great way to clear the mind of academics, and if hik- ing is not to your liking, then El Gallo Giro is an excellent destination instead. Plus, a special every day means you won't run out of tasty options.

I knew of El Gallo Giro's greatness, although I had never been there until recently when my wife and I were nursing colds and were in dire need of big bowls of pozole. So, off we went for a therapeutic visit. I remembered the sage advice my wife gave me: eat menudo for a hangover and pozole for a cold. Or is it the other way around? Either way, we couldn't go wrong because both dishes make you feel "muy excelente."

The combination plates are also deserving of digestion, especially if you combine enchiladas with tamales or chile rellenos. And taco lovers will surely be pleased with the large al a carte taco menu, which has nine fillings to choose from. These tacos are the real deal—no imitation here.

El Gallo Giro's prices are industry standard and the plates are Grande. But, what really keeps the people coming back is the great service and wonderful food at this charming little haunt in downtown Kuna. Muchas Gracias.
Bluesman Taj Mahal reveals all

Taj Mahal is in a New York nightclub and I'm to the left of him, sitting on a chair in front of his stage. He's talking to me about his new CD, "Facing Water," and how it's going to be released in May. He's got a great voice and a lot of energy. He's wearing a black shirt and jeans, and he's got his guitar on his lap. His hair is short and he has a goatee.

"You seem to be getting more political," I say. "But you said you were just going to make music.

"You're right," he says. "But when you make music, it's not just about entertainment. It's about making people think and feel.

"I don't want to be the guy who makes the music and then says, 'Hey, look what I've done.' I want to be the guy who makes the music and then says, 'Hey, this is how I feel.'

"And that's why I'm making this CD. I want to make people think about their lives, their families, their communities. I want to make them feel.

"And that's why I'm working with the Aboriginal people in Australia. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the African people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the Native American people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the Caribbean people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the European people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the Asian people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the Latin American people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.

"And that's why I'm working with the Middle Eastern people. I want to show them that we're all human beings, and that we all have the same feelings and emotions.
