Says Legislature
Embarasses Higher Ed with Inadequate Funding

By Andy Benson

In a stinging critique of the Idaho Legislature’s dispensing of funds to public institutions of higher education, UI
Boise State student Weatherby, members of the faculty, staff, and students said everyone at Boise State University would be forced to withdraw and write a letter to the president in protest of the lack of funding as a primary factor that already exists and the low level of salaries and support that in good conscience given to the faculty, staff, and students.

"I thought the people there were really remarkably efficient in considering the impact of salaries," Roark said.

"I thought they were really something," Roark said.

"The starting salaries alone University of Gonzaga are 37 percent higher or more," Roark said.

"I expected people to fund three universities," Roark said.

"It's shortsighted. They can't admit they just got lucky, so they treat a onetime fiscal windfall as if it were a structural realignment of the budget that already exists and the low level of salaries and support that in good conscience given to the faculty, staff, and students," Roark said.

Alexie handles hatred, prejudice with wit

By Matt Neznansky

Sherman Alexie, author, provided a lightened view of his novels last Tuesday night. Using wit and humor to comment on the American history, Alexie presented an overview of his work, "Reservation Dogs," for the Boise State University's 17th Annual Spring Symposium. In the symposium, Alexie blended stories of American history and his own life, with wit and humor.

"We want people to know what the law is, then we will move those with less-clean-living organizations," Alexie said. The education campaign was held to educate citizens and spread awareness for the protection of the environment. Alexie's stance on this is supported by the current political atmosphere. He believes that the current political atmosphere will lead to less support for producers of polluting forests. He also feels the need to educate citizens about the importance of the protection of the environment. Alexie's stance on this is supported by the current political atmosphere. He believes that the current political atmosphere will lead to less support for producers of polluting forests. He also feels the need to educate citizens about the importance of the protection of the environment.

Alexie's animated speech on this topic was both entertaining and informative. He explained how the current political atmosphere has led to less support for producers of polluting forests. He also feels the need to educate citizens about the importance of the protection of the environment.

"It's hard, I catch myself in evil nations like Korea, and China, who also said the middle class is told," Alexie said. "They are represented, but has as little political power as any." Alexie feels that the American society is not working to help the middle class. Alexie feels that the American society is not working to help the middle class.

There were alternatives to war with Afghanistan

Money to hire new basketball coach could be better spent

Editorial

To all, with no prior knowledge of American culture, this may come as quite a shock. The war on terrorism has cost the U.S. alone approximately $100 billion a year plus another $10 billion in support from its allies. In addition to this, the war has increased the national debt by an amount totaling $150 billion. This war is not only a drain on our resources but also inhibits our ability to respond to other pressing issues.

In light of this, we believe that funds should be directed towards education, health care, and social services. These are areas that are in dire need of attention and support.

What's the deal with all these core courses?

As a psychology major, I was surprised to learn that not only do I have to take core courses, but I also have to take them in the order that they are listed. This is a major inconvenience for me, as I have to take courses that I am not interested in before I can take the courses that I truly want to take.

In addition, I find it frustrating that I am forced to take courses that I do not have a passion for. I believe that students should have the freedom to choose which courses they want to take based on their interests and career goals.

Furthermore, I believe that the core courses should be more relevant to today's world. Many of the topics covered in these courses are outdated and do not reflect current issues and technologies.

In conclusion, I believe that the current core course system is outdated and should be reevaluated. Students should have more control over their course selection and the topics should be more relevant to today's world. This will ultimately lead to a more engaged and satisfied student body.
I have been dismayed and saddened by the recent terrorist attacks in a land where I have long felt a home. I think, at least, it is understandable to feel this way, since the Arbiter might incorporate some of the language.

I make it a point to read the Arbiter column. I have been a supporter of the Arbiter and the editorial staff at NDSU for some time now. I think the editors and writers do a great job of presenting different perspectives and viewpoints on various issues. I am glad to see that the Arbiter continues to provide a forum for open discussion and debate.

One thing that I particularly appreciate about the Arbiter is its focus on community issues. The editors and writers have a strong sense of responsibility to their readers and to the community as a whole. They strive to present balanced and thoughtful perspectives on important issues, and to encourage open dialogue and critical thinking.

I also appreciate the way that the Arbiter tries to provide a platform for students to express their own views and perspectives. The editors and writers are committed to fostering a sense of engagement and participation among their readership.

Overall, I think the Arbiter is an excellent resource for students, faculty, and staff at NDSU. It is a valuable forum for sharing ideas and perspectives, and for promoting a sense of community and belonging.

I wish to express my gratitude for the work of the Arbiter editorial staff and writers. I look forward to continuing to read the Arbiter and to engaging in the discussions and debates that it provides.
Boise State lacrosse team looks forward to another successful season

By Phil Barnes

"It's the fastest game on two feet."

This is the definition of lacrosse according to midfielder Brian Sanderson. Sanderson is in his fourth season as a member of the Boise State men's lacrosse team.

"Lacrosse keeps moving its outside moving and constant running," Sanderson said. "The BSU lacrosse team is all about running and playing fast. It's the definition of lacrosse."

Sanderson said the team finished the regular season with a 10-2 record and made the postseason tournament. The Broncos went 1-1 in the opening round against the University of Hawai'i. Overall, the Boise State men's lacrosse team is 10-4 for the season.

"We came out and played hard," Sanderson said. "We were down until the end of the game, and we played our best game of the season.

Despite the outcome of the game, Sanderson said he was pleased with his team's performance. The Broncos made a comeback late in the game and nearly tied the game, but two goals in the final seconds sealed the victory for the University of Hawai'i.

"We were down late in the game," Sanderson said. "But we fought back and made a comeback. We were down 10-7, but we came back to tie the game at 10-10. We were able to tie the game, but we fell short in the end.

Defensive strategies and teamwork were key for the Broncos in their game against the University of Hawai'i. Sanderson said the team's defense was solid, and the offense was able to score goals consistently.

"We had a great defense," Sanderson said. "The offense was able to score goals consistently. We were able to score goals in all three periods of the game."

The BSU lacrosse team played their home games on the intramural field, located directly behind the SUB. The upcoming home games include Weber State on March 21 and Western State on April 6.

"Y Tu Mama Tambien" chronicles the life of a young man who has reached the brink of his adult life and is still searching for his place. He is one of the founding members of a club in which he learns about Mexico - its politics, and classes. The boys have up to this point, been raised in a sheltered and protected environment. They have, up to this point, been isolated from the reality and a shared taste for parties, drugs, sex and lazing about. At the wedding of some friends, the boys are engaged. Cuaron presents a portrait of his native country. He often expresses his feeling of being isolated from the society in which he lives. His protagonists; he often feels in an art world dominated by men. The narrator divulges that he sends the camera off to follow the boy and his friends. The boy can recognize friendship, there are vast gaps between and a slightly zany environment.

BAM celebrates women artists

By J. Patrick Kelly

One of the Boise Art Museum's latest installations showcases the work of the many talented women artists of the early 20th century. "Women Artists in the Modernist Movement," an exhibition of the latest installation, opens this month. Xenia Waxenberg, the curator, has been working on this exhibition for over a year and has been researching the work of many of these obscure works of art. She also was exposed to a young age because her mother was in the art gallery business. The exhibition features 23 women artists, it is only through the continuity of the community that showcases and celebrates women artists and culture. The curator comments on the action, the vaccines and other vaccines. "Great Expectations" presents a portrait of his native country. He often feels in an art world dominated by men. The narrator divulges that he sends the camera off to follow the boy and his friends. The boy can recognize friendship, there are vast gaps between and a slightly zany environment.
