Students of Boise State University
Summer enrollment up 46 percent this year

By John Huntington

Boise State students seem to be looking for the best possible opportunity to continue their education by enrolling in Boise University. At a rally for spring semester, the Boise State University student government chairman said he was "looking forward to seeing what we can do next year." The rally was held to thank students for their support.

"I think that we're doing a good job," said the government chairman. "I think that we're doing a good job because we're doing a good job." The rally was held to thank the students for their support.

Politics, poetry, music and "the philosophical and sociological effects of drinking beer through a straw" are some of the things that can be heard on Laura Wylde's Student Radio show "Jedi Art." The show was a success, and is a mixture of music, skits, editorials, politics and more. Laura Wylde's long-term career plans, for example, are to continue the show, and she encourages listeners to be active and involved. "I want to do something that was less academic, less editorial, and more silly. I wanted to be the same stuff, but without such a dark edge to it. We wanted to talk about politics," McDougle said, and poetry. Wylde adds that McDougle and she worked together on the radio program. McDougle graduated last year. Together, their unique chemistry must the show a success. "When I was a freshman and I went together, we just had a second-grade sense of kindness that really played off each other well," Wylde said. After graduation, Wylde produces the show alone. Wylde is a passionate advocate for some political environment. Not only does "Jedi Art" provide political awareness, but it also teaches listeners about music. "We are interested in the public side of how the media is, and what local events or worldwide events that are going on... We kind of play and find our own topics with what's going on politically and worldwide and act accordingly and act responsibly," said Wylde. "I have a little more freedom than what's going on in the mainstream," she added. "It's something that you want to be in the world." And so it starts with a fundamental personal change.

Although, Wylde is graduating, she plans to continue "Jedi Art" next semester. As for Wylde's long-term career plans, she hasn't ruled out music radio as a job option. Imagine what would happen if you called the program "Jedi Art" the listener an active and influential advocate. "I think it would be terrific left on as a hobby. I think as a career it is a bit more unpredictable, but if you get up to the point where you were producing, like working and producing instances and stuff like that. I still think creative. I don't want to watch Magic 93.1... I'm completely going in a different direction. I might have a radio studio, but that's as far as I would think in going with it."

Ons and Outs: Ons that they can play and they have a strict routine format with no creativity. "But I don't know if "Jedi Art" will last," Wylde said. "Jedi Art" is fortunately on the opposite spectrum of commercial radio. Rather than specific recipe of popular tunes and packed plans of popular dialogue, "Jedi Art" gives the listener an active and memorable listening experience, and Wylde encourages listeners to call in and be creative. Imagine what would happen if you called the producer of a mainstream local radio station to offer your suggestions? You might not get much of a warm welcome. However, "Jedi Art" provides a warmth welcome, and willing to new ideas from its listeners. Listen to "Jedi Art" the first and third Thursdays of each month at 8 p.m. on AM 730.

The American Whitewater said, "Although the field features some of the biggest names in the sport, local paddlers will have a chance to showcase their stuff against the best."

The Boater X Race, a head-to-head competition for position as they negotiate a Horseshoe Bend venue on the North Fork of the Payette, begins Saturday at 9 a.m. A portion of the event proceeds is benefitting American Whitewater and Boise State's Outdoor Center.

The freestyle event gives athletes the chance to showcase their stuff against the best. Men and women are competing separately in professional, expert, and sport divisions. A portion of the proceeds benefits the ICF (International Canoe Federation). The entry fees go with the entry fees for the ICF.
