U of I, ISU to expand presence in Boise

New facility may increase competition in Treasure Valley

By Andy Benox

Boise State will be getting some company from its area neighbor, the University of Idaho. The University of Idaho and Boise State University, along with the Idaho Department of Water Resources, plan to break ground on a new academic facility to be located on Broadway Avenue.

"It will be bittersweet for us," said Idaho State University President Mike Clifton. "We have been talking to Boise State and ISU about some of the health care issues to be offered to the community, and the timing is good to break ground next spring."

The facility will be a mixed-use campus. The Idaho State Board of Education (ISBE) has approved plans for the $7.9 million annual bond payment.

The ISBE wiII have the right to sell portions of the facility if bond repayment becomes an issue.

The mixed-use campus will be a new concept for Idaho State. However, lease payments by the two universities and the Department of Water Resources will provide the majority of bond payments.

The group hopes to have the ISU Board of Trustees vote to proceed with the project in the fall.

Senior finance professor Jerry Wallace, U of I vice president for finance and administration, said that tax revenue generated by those leases, but pointed out that the project is currently being worked on, with no longer be necessary once Idaho Place is built.

on one's 21st birthday; it is something that must be responsibly is not something that magically materializes. Parents want their child to have an immature view of society it is, the child will become a social taboo, practically a bragging right: "I got stoned last night's party." Parents need to wake up and take responsibility for their child's potential drinking problems. The United States treats alcohol more or less as a student who was raised in a home where alcohol is naive. Because of social is a well-known fact that alcohol is naive. Colleges and universities one could find both the ability to be a terrible, scary experience, complete with binging and even worse is even more scary, experience, complete with binging and even vomiting. The ability to drink moderately is something that magically materializes, in a child; however, it is not a skill that is learned and acquired. To believe a student will go to a party with a parent tells the student was 300 words or fewer. Please include your letter to the editor: letters@arbiteronline.com. Letters are subject to editing. HURRY! Positions fill fast!
Six quick outdoor trips

By James Patrick Kelly

Now that classes have begun, outdoor excursions are hardly a priority for students anymore. But with Boise's close proximity to great hiking, camping, and mountain biking, it doesn't take long for one to get away from the stress of academics. Here are a few picks for outdoor enthusiasts with busy schedules.

Hiking: The Boise area has many options for hiking enthusiasts. Most Treasure Valley hikers opt for sub-alpine trails with lots of trees and water, but high-desert hikes are equally as beautiful.

Boots of Peay area at Swan Falls: This canyon in the north of Treasure Valley offers some of the most beautiful views of the Treasure Valley. It is a great way to stretch after a drive in the desert and get a vertical workout. The hikes are easy to moderately difficult and require much time or effort, and is a great place to see the desert in all its glory.

Getting there: Drive two miles north of the junction of State Highway 78 two miles to marked-turn off. Turn left (east) on the signed gravel road, then go 1.5 miles to end of road.

Pum Creek: Spectacular desert beauty and an invitingly watertaf
t for the local points of this easy day hike. The 7.5 foot waterfall cascades into a shallow pool, which is crowned by a deep green swimming hole. The hike is easy to moderately difficult and requires much time or effort, and is a great place to see the desert in all its glory.

Getting there: From Mountain Home, take Highway 51 east 15 miles, then turn southeast on Highway 78 for two miles to marked-turn off. Turn left (east) and go one mile to park entrance.

Bilu junior Lawrence Haus gets some air in the foothills.

Camping: Southwest Idaho boasts a wide variety of camping possibilities, ranging from highmountain to rugged desert locations. For a quick getaway or an extended weekend trip, the Boise area has something for every style of camper.

Shaver Butte: This annual event north of Boise is one of the most beautiful of the year. The views are amazing and the location is ideal for anyone looking for a quick escape.

Getting there: Follow Highway 51 east 15 miles, then turn southeast on Highway 78 for two miles to marked-turn off. Turn left (east) and go one mile to park entrance.

Mountains: Boise area is located in the beautiful mountain region of southwestern Idaho. The area is home to some of the most beautiful mountains in the state and is a great place to find solitude and relaxation.

Getting there: Drive two miles south of the junction of U.S. 30 and U.S. 95 west of Mountain Home. Turn right (east) on Bruneau Dunes State Park. The area has several trails that traverse past massive granite monoliths and through the pine forest.

Golfers may want to check out Squaw Creek Road to trailhead. The area has a picnic area with an impressive view of the Treasure Valley and the Snake River.

Orange County, Calif., at a bluegrass show in Thile, artist Sean Watkins and fiddler Sara Watkins, met mandolin player Chris Thile, who performed on the 1997 soundtrack. Nickel Creek fuses bluegrass, folk and jazz into a hybrid newgrass sound. The band started out primarily playing bluegrass, but are also picking up mandolins, fiddles and acoustic guitars. Three young players are Nickel Creek from southern California—not a likely cross over into the mainstream musicians—who have helped the musical genre gain new life virtually overnight. The Arbiter to the movement.

Nickel Creek brings newgrass to California-not a likely cross over into, the mainstream. It's just Nickel Creek and producer Alison Krauss. The band started out primarily playing bluegrass, eventually adding other musical influences to their mix. "It's like having paintbrushes in all different sizes and shapes. Each brush paints color in a different way," mandolin player Chris Thile said.

"What we're trying to do is grab a really interesting musical influence to their music," bluegrass musician Gillian Welch said. "It's just Nickel Creek with special guest Gillian Welch at The Morrison Center on Sept. 4 at 7:30 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at all Ticketweband Select-a-Seat locations, or at The Morrison Center box office. Since 1971, Boise State University and the University of Idaho have battled annually for bragging rights, and each year the winner earns the title "The best in Idaho.

No other football game in the state is more intense—the players and fans alike.

Since the Broncos (then Boise State College) joined the Western Athletic Conference in 1962, the two teams have faced each other in state rivalry games in the last seven decades. Boise State won Vandals beat the their first Big West match-up.

They were members of the Big Sky Conference that year with an 8-3 game, they still won the Big Sky against Chico State. They went on to win the Camellia Bowl Conference. Boise State won Vandals look to rebuild program.

In 1971, the Broncos beat the Vandals, claiming the Big West title and then went on to win the Humanitarian Bowl, which Idaho won the year before.

In 2000, the last year of Big West play, the Broncos were conference champions again.

Although the Vandals lost the first game, their first Big West match-up.

Both teams first met in 1971, 23-7. Since then, the Boise State program has turned the tables though, beating Idaho by an average of 35 points in each game.

"There is no other rivalry in the state," said Bob Curtis, who is no stranger to Bronco-Vandal games.

The two teams changed conferences again in 1996 when they were members of the Big Sky Conference. Boise State went on to win the Camellia Bowl against Chico State.

Even though the Vandals lost the first game, they still won the Big Sky Conference that year with an 8-3 record.

Broncos ‘steamroll’ new blue turf

Rubber granules make for messy practice

By James Patrick Kelly

During practices some of the players had problems regulating their shoes on the loose rubber, but no major injuries were reported. Senior tailback Brock Forsey, who will be the featured back this season, said he believes that by the end of the season, this problem will be solved. The new Astroturf, installed by Southwest Recreational Industries, the fake grass company, in 1965, is designed to reduce player's injuries and is more vibrant blue than the old faded turf. But the 350 tons of rubber granules intended to allow players' shoes to have better traction.

The team’s job is to beat the granules into the playing surface like steamrollers on concrete. Until this happens, the playing surface looks more like AstroTurf, yet the players have problems getting used to it. "Most of the kids don’t like playing on Astroturf,” Hawkins said. "They’re pretty excited about it, but it’s close to the real thing.”

Astroturf features a thinner bottom pad at additional cost, yet adds much-needed cushioning for the players. "Gordy Beynaum [athlete] director said the extra cushions will allow players to return to full game decisions,” Huff said. "We’re just a good team with the best time of my career.”

Brock Forsey #36

After one of the most prolific offensive seasons in Boise State history, Forsey is looking forward to staying healthy. "I’m going to be a good ball carrier,” Forsey said. "I’m going to have a good game.”

Forsey was named to the Western Athletic Conference All-WAC selection for the 2002 season.

Forsey finished the season with 30th in the nation in rushing yards. Forsey averaged 100 yards in the Bronco victory over New Mexico State.

As the Bronco entered its fourth season in the Western Athletic Conference, Forsey showed that he was not a one-year wonder. "We’ve been playing well this season," Huff said. "We’re not perfect, but we’re getting better every week.”

Senior center Scott Huff has been selected as a pre-season candidate for the Doak Walker Award.

The Lombardi Award is given to the outstanding offensive and defensive linemen in college football. The Doak Walker Award is given annually to the nation’s outstanding running back.

The Bronco football team will be featured on ESPN, at 7:30 P.M. on ESPN2, which averaged over 34 million viewers last year.

Big XII vs. Nebraska

For the next two years, the Big XII conference will be a major component of the Boise State football team’s schedule.

Senior defensive rover Democrat, Quintin Mikell, has been named to the Doak Walker Award Watch List, which is given annually to the nation’s outstanding running back.
