9-30-2002

Arbiter, September 30

Students of Boise State University

Although this file was scanned from the highest-quality microfilm held by Boise State University, it reveals the limitations of the source microfilm. It is possible to perform a text search of much of this material; however, there are sections where the source microfilm was too faint or unreadable to allow for text scanning. For assistance with this collection of student newspapers, please contact Special Collections and Archives at archives@boisestate.edu.
Vice president aids Kempthorne, Otter campaigns

By Casey Wyatt

Presidential search panel names may come Thursday

By Matt Neznanski

Faculty submit nominations

Erin M. Redick

Protesters gather outside the Convention Center to oppose U.S. foreign policy

By Andy Benson

Demonstrators protest looming war with Iraq

By John Sebree
I. Student Health Service.

Doctors have screened twice as many people for strep compared with the same period last year, said Lisa Lonn, the Student Health nurse manager.

Doctors recommend that people who are sick from mono and strep by staying home, avoiding close physical contact with others, and letting them rest from work or school. The large number of people for both illnesses, she added.

II. U. Minnesota telescope project spurs protest

MADISON, Wis. - Mono and strep, illnesses that have been spread by saliva and close physical contact, are on the rise among students this fall, according to the University's Student Health Service.

The large number of people for both illnesses, she added.

Doctors recommend that people who are sick from mono and strep by staying home, avoiding close physical contact with others, and letting them rest from work or school.

III. West

Utah State U. researchers annotating genome

LOGAN, Utah - Students at Utah State University may soon be taking double-represents. Curing remains on the horizon, including curing cattle and horses and the horses' owners.

The state's largest university, with the University of Utah, is the only school in the state offering the degree in genetics. The university expects to have a total of 300 students by the end of the year.

IV. East

Mall safety adapts for anthrax scare

BOSTON - Emphasizing the need for increased mall security, police, Health L. Mann, director of the Boston Mall Safety Program, said that the mall was notified of the anthrax scare.

"We're prepared to respond to any of our customers' concerns," he said. "We're keeping an eye on the situation and we're always prepared to respond to it if necessary."

V. South

U. Florida student links football game-day spirit to ancient era

GAINESVILLE, Fla. - In their latest effort to link their love of football to the ancient era, Florida students have organized an event that will include a Roman gladiator games.

"Gladiators were celebrated as heroes," said Dickerson, the idea because of her background in classics and Roman studies.

"They were heroes because they were the best of the best," Dickerson said. "They were the best because they were the most skilled and the most brave.""
Clothesline Project addresses sexual violence

By Callen Underwood
The Arbiter

When Dan and Gayle Weinberg heard Boise State students had child-care needs, they gave the planned Children's Center expansion a shot in the arm. The Angels Ridge Foundation pledged a $30,000 matching gift to the children's center, based on the estimated 12000-credit

The BSU Foundation raised a matching amount, with a $30,000 donation from the Foundation and Laura Weinberg. And the Fel-Pro, Incorporated, a family foundation, added $15,000. Weinberg served as director of the facilities.

The state provides the federal funding, "Van Vooren said. State and the University, each group are on the center's receiving list. The new additions will increase capacity to 150 children, more than 100 children in that age group are on the center's waiting list. The new additions will increase capacity to 150 children. The center receives $5 from every student semester, and should be fully operational in the fall.

The center currently accommodates only 100 children and teachers, who voted did not even have every student for the opera-

"Childcare is very expensive. Quality childcare would fund the children's center," Van Vooren said. While 123 children of all ages are at the center, the center currently accommodates only 100 children and workers. More than 100 children in that age group are on the center's waiting list. The new additions will increase capacity to 150 children. Boise State students make up 40 percent of the parents using the center's services. The other 60 percent are from the community. Every parent is required to pay a fee, although the fee vary based on income. Parents can also qualify for financial aid. The state and the University also provide funding for the center. The state provides the center and the center's services. The other 60 percent are from the community. Every parent is required to pay a fee, although the fee vary based on income. Parents can also qualify for financial aid. The state and the University also provide funding for the center. The state provides the center and the center's services. The other 60 percent are from the community. Every parent is required to pay a fee, although the fee vary based on income. Parents can also qualify for financial aid. The state provides the center and the center's services. The other 60 percent are from the community. Every parent is required to pay a fee, although the fee vary based on income. Parents can also qualify for financial aid. The state and the University also provide funding for the center. The state provides the center and the center's services. The other 60 percent are from the community.

"Looking at the clothesline project and there is nothing. You know, it's everybody's big bras hang- ing there. just makes you think, that was the initiative behind it. We've just been very happy to see that it went so well. It's not really talk about, and it's important we break that silence," Weinberg said.

"Making the T-shirts gives survivors and victims the opportunity to show their story, and that's a healing process," Weinberg said. "We also raise awareness in the community about real people being here," Weinberg said. "The Clothesline Project is a very powerful thing. It encourages information exchange. It's like a beacon in the back yard while doing the laundry."

"Looking at the clothesline project and there is nothing. You know, it's everybody's big bras hanging there just makes you think, that was the initiative behind it. We've just been very happy to see that it went so well. It's not really talk about, and it's important we break that silence," Weinberg said.

"Making the T-shirts gives survivors and victims the opportunity to show their story, and that's a healing process," Weinberg said. "We also raise awareness in the community about real people being here," Weinberg said. "The Clothesline Project is a very powerful thing. It encourages information exchange. It's like a beacon in the back yard while doing the laundry."

"Looking at the clothesline project and there is nothing. You know, it's everybody's big bras hanging there just makes you think, that was the initiative behind it. We've just been very happy to see that it went so well. It's not really talk about, and it's important we break that silence," Weinberg said.

"Making the T-shirts gives survivors and victims the opportunity to show their story, and that's a healing process," Weinberg said. "We also raise awareness in the community about real people being here," Weinberg said. "The Clothesline Project is a very powerful thing. It encourages information exchange. It's like a beacon in the back yard while doing the laundry."

"Looking at the clothesline project and there is nothing. You know, it's everybody's big bras hanging there just makes you think, that was the initiative behind it. We've just been very happy to see that it went so well. It's not really talk about, and it's important we break that silence," Weinberg said.

"Making the T-shirts gives survivors and victims the opportunity to show their story, and that's a healing process," Weinberg said. "We also raise awareness in the community about real people being here," Weinberg said. "The Clothesline Project is a very powerful thing. It encourages information exchange. It's like a beacon in the back yard while doing the laundry."

"Looking at the clothesline project and there is nothing. You know, it's everybody's big bras hanging there just makes you think, that was the initiative behind it. We've just been very happy to see that it went so well. It's not really talk about, and it's important we break that silence," Weinberg said.
Don't look to government for security

By Joseph Terry
The Arbiter

There's a lot of talk about security these days. The world is in an age of terrorism, and people seem to think that the government should provide protection for us. But is that the right solution? And, if it is, how can we make it work?

The government is not the answer

First, we need to understand that security is a personal responsibility. It is not something that can be handed off to the government. People need to take responsibility for their own safety, and that includes being aware of their surroundings and taking steps to protect themselves.

The government cannot be everywhere

Second, the government cannot be everywhere. There are simply too many people and too many places for the government to keep an eye on everyone all the time. This is why personal responsibility is so important. We need to take steps to protect ourselves, and those around us.

The government is not perfect

Third, the government is not perfect. There have been instances where government actions have caused more harm than good. For example, the Patriot Act has caused a lot of controversy and has been criticized for侵犯个人隐私。

In conclusion, security is a personal responsibility. We need to take steps to protect ourselves, and those around us, and not rely on the government to do it for us. We need to be aware of our surroundings and take steps to protect ourselves, and those around us.

Victims of date rape need to prosecute

By Erica Crockett
The Arbiter

A few weeks ago, I ran into my editor outside of the Arbiter office building. I told him that I had heard that the number of date rapes on campus was

"If the FBI or police department tasks the work to their terrorist, suspected charges, suddenly you begin to lose many of your rights.

I have been reading a lot about security and I have noticed that there is a lot of talk about security. The world is in an age of terrorism, and people seem to think that the government should provide protection for us. But is that the right solution? And, if it is, how can we make it work?"
The Broncos\' Julian Edelman drives down the sideline for a touchdown after picking up a deflected ball in the third quarter. "I was able to make some plays on the ball," Edelman said. "We\'re a pretty damn good football team, and we can do a lot better," Hawkins said. The Broncos prepare for Hawai'i this weekend, when they will play their first Pac-12 game of the season against Hawai'i. Last season, Boise State beat Hawai'i, 48-24, with their only loss in Provo to BYU.

Special Egg Donor Needed

Preferred Donor will meet the following criteria:

- Height Approximately 5'9 or Taller
- Caucasian

S.A.T. Score Above 1250 or High A.C.T.

College Student or Graduate Under 30

Athletic

No Genetic Medical Issues

COMPENSATION $80,000

Paid to you and/or the charity of your choice

All related expenses will be paid in addition to your compensation

(Extra compensation available for someone who might be especially gifted in athletics, science/mathematics or music)

For more information or to obtain an application please contact Michelle at The Law Offices

(800) 808-5383 or email: EggDonorInfo@aol.com

Monday, September 30, 2002

The Arbiter • Page 5

Broncos roll past Aggies

Phil Dailey/ The Arbiter

Boise State State (5-0) and Utah State (3-1) did not play in the same conference anytime, but the two former Big West Continental teams picked up right where they left things two seasons ago, scoring their second and third goals of the game early in the second period. The first goal came in the 2nd minute as Chad Raynegar followed up after Amber Tracey's shot off the post and put to the Aggies with 7:34 left. Ako and Nurse and five touchdowns in the game. His performance ranks as the 10th-best Rass-
Cross Country team wins invitational meet

The Boise State men’s and women’s cross country teams won the 2002 Bob Evans Cross Country Invitational at Eagle Island State Park Saturday morning. The men’s team defeated all the competition, and the women’s team finished second.

Boise State men’s results:
1. Robin Wemple, 18:25.01
2. Kayla Christensen, 18:45.29
3. Michael Ciampini, 18:58.56
4. Laura Ellsworth, 19:05.97

Boise State women’s results:
1. Robin Wemple, 18:25.01
2. Kayla Christensen, 18:45.29
3. Michael Ciampini, 18:58.56
4. Laura Ellsworth, 19:05.97

Boise State men’s results:
2. Mike Wescos; 20:16.09
3. Michael Ciampini, 20:38.16
4. Forest Bradford, 21:34.90
5. Josh Locke, 21:59.29
6. Jacob Thrash, 22:53.52
7. David Torgerson, 23:14.83
8. Steven Holika, 23:48.12
9. Austin Stone, 27:30.04
10. Jameson Kdziak, 27:44.40
11. Kevin McDonnell, 28:11.80
12. Ryan Lindsay, 28:44.40

Boise State women’s results:
1. Robin Wemple, 18:25.01
2. Kayla Christensen, 18:45.29
3. Michael Ciampini, 18:58.56
4. Laura Ellsworth, 19:05.97
5. Lisa Ellsworth, 19:09.37
6. Jacob Thrash, 22:53.52
7. David Torgerson, 23:14.83
8. Rebecca Wood, 33:04.98
9. Dan Christie, 33:20.80

TAMU Sports offers fantasy football online

By Brad Bennett
The manager (Texas A&M U.)

(WAC) COLLEGE STATION, Texas—Weekend shopping numbers due to online competitions, Texas A&M University’s Rec Sports had a fantastic Fall. The current Fall season is ending. Fantasy Football opened the season, which is estimated at more than 10 million.

James Mann, Intramural Coordinator for Rec Sports, said that the first couple of weeks were good. This decline coincided with the season becoming real, in which many people had been playing before the season when it was just a hobby. But, the second week was a good sign that the season is going well.

Mann said that the season is going well and that people are enjoying the game. The current Facebook page has over 6,000 fans, which is a good sign. The Facebook page is designed to cover costs and also provide free leagues when half the league is signed up.

Fantasy Football Intramural Coordinator, James Mann, said that the season is going well and that people are enjoying the game. The current Facebook page has over 6,000 fans, which is a good sign. The Facebook page is designed to cover costs and also provide free leagues when half the league is signed up.

Fantasy Football Intramural Coordinator, James Mann, said that the season is going well and that people are enjoying the game. The current Facebook page has over 6,000 fans, which is a good sign. The Facebook page is designed to cover costs and also provide free leagues when half the league is signed up.

Fantasy Football Intramural Coordinator, James Mann, said that the season is going well and that people are enjoying the game. The current Facebook page has over 6,000 fans, which is a good sign. The Facebook page is designed to cover costs and also provide free leagues when half the league is signed up.
Theatre Arts opens season with black comedy
By Tommy Sands

Teachers in the modern world would get no respect. That's the gist of Boise State Department of Theatre Arts season opener, Dead White Males.

Professor Gordon Reinhardt said the play depicts a sense of incarceration that educators sometimes feel.

"The central action is that teachers have to play to a safe haven for kids, but have built a prison for them," Reinhardt said.

The book, "Dead White Males," is not only connected to the teachers by the role as a prison system, but also a prison that students know is not of their own making and yet want to accept its reality.

It seems there is an underlying notion that teaching is the worst of jobs and that a lot of times the state forces teachers to do things they don't want to do and since they are doing what they must, they are not being paid enough报酬 as they used to be," said Reinhardt.

Reinhardt said he is emotionally connected to the play because his mother was a sixth grade teacher.

"This contemporary dark comedy tells the story of a school and the politics of teaching through the character of Joel Greenberg, played by Liberty Chase. Greenberg is experiencing his first year as an elementary school teacher who is trying to teach his students all the things he learned in college, but runs into roadblocks such as the apathy of his students, the banning of sex education and the overuse of technology in the classroom.

Reinhardt said this play shows the dark side of education, focusing on the administration and its effects on the system. Chase said.

"It is satirical, but the characters are very serious about what they are doing. Chase said."

The Arbiter is seeking submissions for prose and poetry for the fall issue of its literary journal, BOISE STATE, in October. Writers in the modern world would get no respect. That's the gist of Boise State Department of Theatre Arts season opener, Dead White Males.

Professor Gordon Reinhardt said the play depicts a sense of incarceration that educators sometimes feel.

"The central action is that teachers have to play to a safe haven for kids, but have built a prison for them," Reinhardt said.

The book, "Dead White Males," is not only connected to the teachers by the role as a prison system, but also a prison that students know is not of their own making and yet want to accept its reality.

It seems there is an underlying notion that teaching is the worst of jobs and that a lot of times the state forces teachers to do things they don't want to do and since they are doing what they must, they are not being paid enough报酬 as they used to be," said Reinhardt.

Reinhardt said he is emotionally connected to the play because his mother was a sixth grade teacher.

"This contemporary dark comedy tells the story of a school and the politics of teaching through the character of Joel Greenberg, played by Liberty Chase. Greenberg is experiencing his first year as an elementary school teacher who is trying to teach his students all the things he learned in college, but runs into roadblocks such as the apathy of his students, the banning of sex education and the overuse of technology in the classroom.

Reinhardt said this play shows the dark side of education, focusing on the administration and its effects on the system. Chase said.

"It is satirical, but the characters are very serious about what they are doing. Chase said."

The Arbiter is seeking submissions for prose and poetry for the fall issue of its literary journal, BOISE STATE, in October.