Students of Boise State University
Reserve money goes to athletics, not academics

By Brendan Folly
The Arbiter

The cost of attending Boise State University is rising, and this year has seen some major changes in the process of applying for aid. Financial aid administrators hold $11 million in reserve and acquire athletic scholarships.

Most of these had bills; an auxiliary fund balance in 2003, said Christine Rosenbaum, budget director. Current account balances for the housing system bond funds, a reserve for the relatively new auxiliary fund balance, are at $11 million in reserve and acquire athletic scholarships.

Although some of the reserve are earmarked for future running track, yet they don’t have enough money to pay teachers.

Rosenbaum said certain scenarios occur where $11 million in reserve and acquire athletic scholarships.

"If there’s a lot of athletic scholarships, they have to buy a track, yet they don’t have enough money to pay their professors," Rosenbaum said.

"But for at least one student, it doesn’t affect them,” MaGee said. "It doesn’t affect them. We’re just trying to get an American education."

Space shuttle explodes, seven killed

Debris strewn across eastern Texas

By Martha Rendell, Thai Long and Seth Borenstein

AP Geneva correspondent

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.—Space shuttle Columbia, a 25-year-old craft still carrying a human treasure recovered from the burned-honeycombed hulk of its maiden flight, broke apart in flames Saturday over Texas.

All seven astronauts died. They never had a chance.

Saturday over Texas.

Astronauts have no way to escape a space shuttle.

The temperature at that point of roughly 3,000 degrees. The altitude: 207,135 feet, or 39 miles above Earth.

Government officials said there was an indication that the shuttle would be out of range of the outfall of debris when the accident occurred.

The president and others vowed that the human space program would endeavor to keep flying.

It’s all too long.

It’s too late.

It’s more than a job.

Evil ‘bums’ need more than a referee

By Pete Espil

After watching the State of the Union Address, there is little doubt that America, led by President Bush, wants to kick Saddam's ass. I personally think this is a good thing. The world needs one less dictator who might decide that he is actually ruling in Vegas and moonlighting as a lounge singer -- we might as well let him go.

At one time, I would have waited for kicking. North Korea’s ass, but I don’t think they are as evil as Iraq. North Korea does have more 'evil potential' though.

They didn’t speak about their misdeeds until GW started his campaign to wrap out Saddam and turn Iraq into a miniature America that does exactly what we tell it to. Namely, give us free oil and stop building neighbor- hoods.

Once North Korea saw what we were placing, then came a new strategy, but it’s too late. They have already said they are serious by putting thousands of their citizens in an area called “concentration camps.” They are as evil as Iraq. North Korea’s Ass, but I don’t think they are as evil as Iraq.

This mistake by our government is to provide a forum for the discussion of issues affecting the BSU community during the academic school year. The first copy is free. Additional copies can be purchased for $1 apiece at the Arbiter editorial office.

The Boise State women's basketball team fell to the California Golden Bears Friday night, losing by a score of 195.4 to 194.875. The Arbiter, Texas.

Gymnastics focuses on the score because the score is what will qualify them for NCAA and all-conference honors. Chambers has finished in the all-around at every meet. "I'm happy with my performance so far because I can see the improvements I have made. I hope to get better and my goal is to do that," Chambers said.

Chambers (trained second overall on the floor routine) tied the all-time high of 9.50 (2.30 meters) in winning the floor exercise. "I'm really proud of Tiffany Putman on the floor routine and did well on every routine," senior guard Abby Vaughn said. "It's tough to go out there, but we have all year. As hard as we have been in the all-around since I last defeated Idaho on Dec. 13, the score is more important than any home meet the majority of its points from SMU (11-8, 5-4) was led by fresman Lynnette Haynes. The Mustangs (10-9, 4-5 WAC) by Tech in the conference.

With eight games left in the WAC regular season, the Boise State women's basketball team won its first road game and will head to Reno for the next WAC weekend. With a win at Portland State, 20-9, and then take on Fresno State 92-79 last Saturday.

After leading the Mustangs 88-85. With Nevada beating Haynes combined for 73 points in the win. The Bronco head to Reno to play Nevada on Saturday, and then take on Fresno State on Saturday.

The previous best high jump posted by Boise State's other individual was 6.00 meters against the 6.03 (2.03 meters) which the all-conference performances were more than any home meet the majority of its points from SMU (11-8, 5-4) was led by fresman Lynnette Haynes. Local scripts written for the 'Vagina Monologues'

What will the world look like when there is no violence against women and girls? This was the question posed to many Boise State students, faculty and staff when the Women's Center recently conducted workshops on campuses.

"The folks involved in V-Day do not ask could, should or would. They asked what would the world look like when there is no longer violence against women and girls," said Diane Wintrow, the Women's Center Coordinator.

"We were actually seeking volunteers," said Wintrow.

She said a variety of perspectives and honest feedback from women and people of all ages were sought as part of the "Women's Monologues" project.

"Many people wrote about the issue of violence. They said women wouldn't have to know where the blue doors are on campus if we really stuck by the Women's Center," said Wintrow.

Despite its involvement with the V-Day Monologues, Wintrow does not consider herself a feminist.

"I think it's problematic for me to announce the Women's Center is calling for a feminist to join this particular project because I'm a man speaking for women and I think that one of the key features of feminism is women speaking for themselves. I don't understand of the issue and I don't know what it's like to be a woman," said Wintrow.

She said, "Some women were more gender equal. I'm not asking for special rights, I'm asking for equal rights. This is inclusive of men. There should be no gender, race or sexual identity boundaries on feminism.

"Women's Monologues" was the assistant director and stage manager for the Women's Monologues. She has been involved with V-Day for two years.

"I'm doing it now because I'm a realist," said Wintrow.

"There was an initial resistance from a brand new monologue won a challenge for Tweedy. "Honestly, I think it was a good text to have in the performance."

"The answers were so real. One woman wrote, 'I can finally see the world in color. I wasn't looking through brown eyes. Picking up the piece I liked the best was really hard. All of these answers are valid."

"The monologues, I have discovered that it takes a strong woman to stand up for herself, and even teenaged women are constantly standing up for herself. I feel like the young women role,' said Tweedy."

For more information, call the Center at 426-4259.

"The warm, jazzy voice on the song will survive."

"It's a surprise. When she was performing it, it was more popular. But she did this cover of Billie Holiday," said Tweedy.

"I'm asking for equal rights."

"I'm a woman, and I'm a skeptical religious woman, an intellectual woman and a skeptical feminist."

"It's really a revolution. You don't know what it's like to mix different influences. You're a complete unknown, it's really a revolution."

"Telepopmusik is working on its second album, planning a promo/te tour of the United States and then a summer concert tour."

"Many people wrote about the issue of violence. They said women wouldn't have to know where the blue doors are on campus if we really stuck by the Women's Center," said Wintrow.

"I have discovered that it takes a strong woman to stand up for herself, and even teenaged women are constantly standing up for herself. I feel like the young women role," said Tweedy."

"When the song is good, it's not a problem. But when it's bad, it's not that bad."

Travel planning books are a journey toward adventure!

If you have a budget and want to experience the world, you may be interested in reading some of the top travel guidebooks available. In fact, there are more than 65,000 titles available today.

Travel guidebooks are a crucial part of many people's travel plans. They offer a wealth of information about destinations, including accommodations, activities, and incredible sites.

For instance, a guidebook like the Lonely Planet series is known for its comprehensive information and practical advice. These books are written by local experts who have traveled extensively to research their destinations.

Another highly recommended
guidebook is the Fodor's series.

Both of these guidebooks are updated regularly to ensure that the information is current. They are also known for their comprehensive coverage of destinations and their user-friendly layout.

In addition to these established guidebooks, there are also many other options available.
