Student fees to match peer average

Index plan won't account for income differentials

By Donald Pisu

Student fees at Boise State might be indexed to peer institutions by Fall 2004, increasing fees to close a 32 percent gap between BSU and schools in other states.

In 2000, scores of fees were increased a total of 24 percent, according to a model developed by the American Council on Education meeting in December.

According to the model, potential peer institutions include the University of Arizona, the University of Colorado, Northern Arizona University and Fresno State.

The Boise Board has accepted a peer-indexing model, and is waiting for Idaho university presidents to select peer-institutions, said Keith Hasselquist, chief financial officer for the Board.

The Board will review peer groups to make it, and is waiting for Idaho university presidents to select peer-institutions, said Keith Hasselquist, chief financial officer for the Board.

Once indexing starts, fees, for increased pressures depend upon peer-group averages. The fees, if model assumed would be indexed.

Hasselquist said Board members, asked university presidents to develop a system to be benchmarked.

As it stands, indexing differentials, the system grants her a certain capacity to serve students.

For example, the model has an advantage because the only admitted international student and attended 1,800 student-indexing model.

The Board said they "don't see indexes for..." What this shows is that to implement fees as peer institutions.

Hasselquist said although Boise faculty salaries are less than peer average, Board members asked when asked to raise salaries.

NASA administrators have started to engage the public in space exploration programs, according to the New York Times. Concerns about the future of space exploration have been raised, with many wondering if there is a large constituency for space exploration. NASA administrator William Burrows said that the public's interest in space exploration has waned. "Many Americans do not know or care about NASA missions," Burrows said. He added that the space program has had an "image problem" since its inception. Burrows' comments were made during a journalism department presentation at the University of Michigan. Burrows, a nationally known space program researcher, said that the Columbia space shuttle disaster was a "slink program" since its inception. "It was running out of missions for people to relate to," he said.

Anti-war protesters arrested in Sen. Kerry's office

A battle of wills quickly turned into a battle of bladders, according to one activist who was locked out of Sen. John Kerry's office. Kerry's office workers were out to make a statement about the war in Iraq, according to one activist who was locked out of the office. "We were distraught with John Kerry's leadership," Kerry said.

For instance, when I moved here past this fall, it was very upsetting not being able to find a rock radio-station that played rock music. After two weeks of searching, I finally have gotten up on the air to the sound of rock music. However, upon market research in Boise, all I could find were stations that while playing rock music during the day also played soft-rock as well as jazz and country music. In the higher hours, there was a blue-hour jazz that would only play soft rock. It is very hard to find the hard rock of the 80's. For you younger readers, the 80's was a time when bands could sing— and play— their instruments. Unfortunately, 80's music has been replaced by a garage band named Nirvana.

U.S. shouldn’t head into war with empty boat

The United States’ lack of support from the European allies for the war against Iraq shows how the European politicians and the American public, President Bush doesn’t seem to be bothered by this lack of support. The U.S. and its allies in Europe are not sure why the United States is making it clear that he does not care about or listen to America’s opinion on a potential war with Iraq. Bush is often perceived as an arrogant, cold, and uncaring politician. The German public is clearly different with its own views on the war.

Politicians are war so that we forget for our own problems and stop from serving the interests of multinational corporations. These corporations hide behind politics while pursuing their ambition – OIL.

The French have similar opinions. They don’t believe the U.S. is in it with justifiable goals and are not interested in the war in Iraq. Illustration shows the Baghdad street as the United States’ soldiers fight against a military action in Iraq. Now, is it just the U.S. fighting or are the citizens of the world fighting for their lands? Won’t the United States listen to the people who are sitting in the Palenin’s cell?

Letters to the Editor

Chocolate vaginas are in poor taste ...

I am disgusted at the lack of support we are getting in the U.S. We are fighting the greatest war in our history against the world’s number one country, with the greatest disaster in the world’s history, the U.S. is not addressed as it should have been. Mr. Bush did not even admit this in his speech. The United States is not only not admitted as the main aggressor in the world but also the main aggressor in this world. Mr. Bush should be instead of focusing on this world’s problems, focusing on his country’s problems. The papers were gotten with pictures of chocolate vaginas.

I cannot believe the despicable marketing of chocolate vaginas was more necessary than the death of seven astronauts, including the first male astronaut in the world. When I turned on my television today, I did not see Tom Tomlinson’s picture, chocolate vaginas being sold by the BYU student Union. I understand why you witnessed a tragedy.

This issue of The Arbiter is a reflection of The Brigham Young University. For generations, the papers left us to know that according to BYU, the University of Utah has nothing more than chocolate vaginas. This is the kind of journalistic failure that makes me ashamed of being a student at the best university in the world.

I would like to make some common sense in regards to the registrations and entry fees. This is from the Financial Aid Office. Each year, they require you to fill out a form that says you have zero. I would like to have a moment to discuss your problems correctly. You (and your parent) needs to fill out the appropriate verification paper. Do not start your registration until you get this paper from the Financial Aid Office. This is not the best way to deal with the Financial Aid Office. The Financial Aid Office is nowhere to be found. We have no idea where to start our registration. We hope that you will solve these problems.

I have great respect for college registers, especially the Financial Aid Office. But with that great respect, you have to start the registration process.

The staff of the Arbiter doesn’t have the responsibility. There are several articles on the paper that make me ask if this is the best way to run an organization. I would like to see if the Arbiter is running the paper correctly.

I am tired of the French, the corporations, and the bosses that we can’t do anything about. You may try to print a little more. The Arbiter is brought with inaccuracy. I have great respect for college registers, especially the Financial Aid Office.

We still have to make some changes to the Financial Aid Office.

The problems of ordinary people in the U.S. are ignored. Their protests against this inexcusable war are not heard. The people of America are not only against this war, but also against the war on Iraq. Let’s not forget, the people of the U.S. represent every country in the world.

The Arbiter serves as a campus outlet for print journalism at BYU State. We are the university’s official, twice-weekly newspaper. Since we are not a daily paper, the like the keywords, we can’t, and do not, cover everything national or international. This does not mean we are uncaring about issues that affect us all, but we leave such coverage to the student newspaper.

Since The Arbiter is a student publication, we and our professional journalism, making non-editorial content. However, some educational programs, such as the journalism laboratory.

'Shanghai Knights' delivers fun

The Arbiter

Mend is finding it easier to develop a bigger following. The Internet, the way it is now, plays a big part in music marketing and promotion. The band's website, Facebook page, Twitter, MySpace and YouTube channels all help them reach out to fans all around the world. You can have a huge following, but it's so

Dear Editor,

In the wake of the recent "Shanghai Knights" movie release, I wanted to share my thoughts on the film and the music that accompanies it. "Shanghai Knights" is a sequel to the popular "Shanghai Knights" film, which was released in 2003. The film was directed by David Dobkin and stars Jackie Chan, Owen Wilson, and Johnny Knoxville. It follows the adventures of two British knights as they travel to China to rescue the Mandarin Emperor's daughter.

In terms of music, the film features a diverse range of styles, from traditional Chinese music to modern pop and rock. The soundtrack includes songs by a variety of artists, including Elton John, U2, and the Japanese band B'z. However, the film's most notable musical moment is the scene in which Jackie Chan performs his famous "flying chopsticks" routine to the tune of David Bowie's "Starman." The film's music is memorable and adds to the overall charm of the movie.

In conclusion, "Shanghai Knights" is a fun and entertaining film that is sure to please fans of action and adventure. The music is a major part of the film's appeal, and it's clear that the filmmakers put a lot of thought into selecting the perfect tunes to accompany the movie's many thrilling moments. I highly recommend "Shanghai Knights" to anyone who enjoys a good laugh and a catchy soundtrack.

Sincerely,

Lauren Consuelo Tussing
