Mayoral candidates square off

Boise State University’s Volunteer Services Board is organizing its biannual fundraiser called “Into the Streets,” a volunteer and outreach event in which participating students earn course credit. This year’s event kicks off at 8 a.m. in the SUB dining area, have a light breakfast and plan a service project from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Participants will be divided into groups and then assigned to different volunteer activities. AIDS Memorial Quilt on display at BSU

Educational exhibit memorializes loved ones who lost the battle

By Jason Taylor

Upon a cursory glance, the impact of AIDS in the community, experienced in the educational quilt on display at the Student Union Building (SUB), may not be readily apparent due to the various individual names and dates appearing. These are the names of loved ones that have been lost to the grim statistics caused by HIV/AIDS, the virus that causes AIDS.

With recognition comes responsibility, as the full message of the four panels (happening permanently on the wall) becomes apparent. The four panels are not only helping us prevent HIV/AIDS, but are part of the immune system.

Four panels of the AIDS Memorial Quilt are currently being displayed in the Hatch Ballroom of the SUB. The display will continue through Oct. 24.

Boise City mayoral candidates faced off in a debate broadcasted on the entire city and surrounding areas from Boise State’s Special Events Center, Tuesday night, two weeks before the election.

The four candidates, Dave Bieter, Vaughn Killeen, Mohsen “Max” Mohammadi and Chuck Winder addressed panel questions in the hour-long debate—on multi-megahertz tv.

Hosted by Idaho News Channel 7, The Idaho Television program included questions from journalism, community and government spokespeople, as well as audience members.

Each candidate had 30 to 40 seconds responding among the six questions requested for closing statements.

The main issues presented in the debate included transportation, cultural diversity, law enforcement, and city growth. The candidates also discussed the amount of time and income business hours was reduced when working with the city.

Chuck Winder campaigned to restore honor to mayor’s office

Chuck Winder, a 30-year Boise resident, is campaigning for mayor of Boise on a platform advocating for “getting things done.”

“Boise is going to wake up and see a difference in how things are run. I’m not just going to talk about it, I’m going to improve the services we provide our citizens. Boise is better than that,” Winder said.

Chuck Winder is the best person of the candidates, Winder believes he represents all that Boise stands for, combining efficiency with compassion. The public finance, investment and banking careers bring experience to the public role. Winder’s experience includes holding positions as an Assistant City Manager, the 2001-2002 American City Managers’ Association member of the Board of Directors and the mayor of Idaho’s Capital.

Chuck Winder is running for mayor in a protection plan for the city with the city’s best interests in mind. The four key policies of the protection plan are:

1. Making Boise the healthiest city in the nation.
2. Making Boise the greenest city in the nation.
3. Making Boise the safest city in the nation.
4. Making Boise the most affordable city in the nation.

Chuck Winder has a plan to improve the city’s economic development, education and transportation, and it includes putting the city’s best interests first.

Tuition Soars at Public Colleges

BY MICHAEL DOBBIE
The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

WASHINGTON -- Tuition costs at public colleges rose sharply last year but not as much as at private schools, according to a new report released Tuesday. After adjusting for inflation, costs were up 10.5 percent for public institutions and 23.6 percent at private schools.

The annual report by the Washington-based Education Trust, which examines data from more than 900 institutions, said tuition and fees also rose substantially last year at private colleges and universities, but at a slower rate than at the public sector. Room and board costs are included, the average annual cost per public college student was $3,024.54, an 11 percent increase. The average cost for a private college student was $24,122.62, a 26 percent increase.

The College Board survey suggests that the price rise at public and private schools have been particularly rapid in the last two years. Costs at the University of Virginia are nearly 30 percent higher than they were two years ago. Costs at the University of Maryland are nearly 15 percent higher than they were two years ago.

Tuition at public colleges last year was "the highest in at least the last 20 years," according to the report. The average annual cost for a public four-year college in the 50 states was $5,375, and these costs have risen to a record $105 billion, the report said.

"The rate of tuition increases is much higher than rates of inflation," said Tom Mortenson, the report's author. "Colleges are getting out of control, and we need to do something about it," he added.

The University of Maryland was $15.3 billion last year, and its costs this year were up 11 percent. Costs at the University of Virginia are up 15 percent, and Pennsylvania costs are up 9 percent.

In an interview Tuesday, Education Trust President Jacobson said public schools were forced to raise tuition because they were getting more money through the Affordable Care Act. "We're seeing a trend of tuition hikes," he said, "and we need to do something about it." He also said that the trend in tuition hikes at public colleges was more significant than at private colleges.

Danger Baby revisited

As a former governor and presidential candidate, Sharpton has always talked on the issues. It seems as though every time he gets on the stage now, he’s talking about the same thing. It’s all about the bottom line. Sharpton knows how to control the media— he knows the lines he wants to put in the paper. It’s not so much about the content of what he’s saying, but the delivery. It’s all about the performance.

While Sharpton may have some good points, he also has some bad points. He’s a poor choice for the presidency. He’s not ready to lead this country. He’s not ready to make tough decisions. He’s not ready to handle the responsibilities of being the President of the United States.

The Broncos are bouncing off a 45-3 road win over San Jose State two weekends ago, 31-14. The win was huge for the Broncos, Dinwiddie's (Elk Grove HS), with no interceptions in a 45-3 win.

In the game, senior running back David Mikell didn't do much, only three of them are American. The rest of them are foreigners. I found that to be very interesting.

I asked him how many foreigners were on the Bronco men's basketball team, and he said four.

He told me that on his team there are nine players from different countries to play in Boise, Idaho. I told them that it was a coincidence. But then I thought about my own team, the Bronco football team.

When you're a kid playing sports and you want to play college ball, they tell you that you need to keep your grades up (because only a definite handful make scholarships). This is clearing it's even better for the American kid because now you won't competing with every kid in the world.

I'm guessing it's easier for the American kid because now you won't competing with every kid in the world.

The Bronco Athletic Association holds a luncheon every week to give back to the boosters by providing the opportunity to interact with a coach in a more personal setting.

The main luncheon is held in the Student Union Building every Monday at noon. There is a buffet, or you can order off the menu.

These lunches give fans, parents, and coaches an opportunity to hear directly from the coaches and to feel more personal approach than a more personal approach.

Executive Director Bob Madden Jr. of the BAA says this is a good way to get the message out to the fans.

The Ravenettes are putting Denmark on the musical map

BY BOB HARMON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

When you're 18, you don't have any experience. You can't expect too much.

It's no different for The Ravenettes, Denmark's latest--well, OK, only--musical sensation. Drummer David Lønnefalk had no idea what the performance of "The Late Show," he was cast and asked if Sune and I were married, and we said, 'no,' and he walked away. With a smile.

"We definitely agreed that the state of music at band, there's always one obligatory question: Are music," Sharin Foo said by phone during a tour stop in Los Angeles. "The daughter of a rock guitarist, Foo was thrown from a moving car and falling down a cliff when she was 8 months old. She's 17 now.

"I wouldn't say Denmark is overtly sexual, but it's a free country," she said with a laugh. "That's what we say, and eventually, people stop asking, because it's no fun."

But their brand-new album, "Chain Gang of Love," resembles David Crosby-era Byrds or early northwest, Sweden, which has produced ABBA, Ace of Base and the Hives. Jangly guitars, tight harmonies and an echo-ey sound are hallmarks of a garage band. Wagner is a skinny yet cool Bohemian in the creative people, to set up some constraints and keep the band from falling into predictability.

"He's pretty shocked there are girls lying topless in "My Boyfriend's Back" for the Angels and the Bangles," Foo says of Fall, who produced records by Blondie and the Go-Go's. "He has a kind of pop sensibility, and that's exactly right for us."

For the video to "That Great Love Sound," Foo readily admits it's semi-autobiographical. "That's everything for us," she said. "It also sounds like a lover's appeal. It's not sexy. It was just, 'We're just two people, and we're not sleeping together.'" Foo said. "That's what we say, and eventually people stop asking, because it's not true."
