Fee increase proposals run the gamut

BY MONICA PRICE News Reporter

The Boise State Faculty Senate has confirmed the value of diversity teachings listening Tuesday afternoon when they approved the abilities of a diversity requirement to the university's curriculum. Judy Torres, ASBSU director of diversity affairs, said students will get more value from their education as a result of the new curriculum. Torres stressed that the change was necessary to create a production environment that is "open," as Sen. Fred Kennedy was quoted in the Student Programs Board, March 11, 1996.

Decline in foreign students concerns colleges

BY WALLACE BUCKMASTER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON POST NEW SERVICE

AUSTIN, Texas—Officials have expressed anxiety that new visa rules are discouraging international students from applying to the University of Texas at Austin. Moreover, it is feared that the university's ability to recruit foreign students will be hampered by the growing costs of education.

The universities are being put in a difficult position as they try to accommodate an increasing number of international students while managing the costs of education. Some university officials have expressed concern that the new visa rules are making it more difficult for international students to enter the country.

The University of Texas at Austin has seen a decline in the number of international students applying for admission. The university's enrollment of foreign students has dropped by 14% this year, partly because of new visa rules.

In interviews with more than a dozen university officials, some university officials said they were concerned about the impact of the new visa rules on their ability to recruit foreign students and retain them.

Lawful gay marriages a matter of time

Lawmakers like Mr. Reed have many misgivings about gay society. They seem to believe that gay society would grow if left alone, however, and that it would be less of a matter of the law. I suppose that if they were left alone, they would be a much more serious threat to society.

The police are doing a good job in the area. I have no problem with gay marriage, but I am concerned about the consequences. What will they do with gay marriage?

I think that gay marriage will have a positive impact on society. Gay couples are more likely to have children, for example, and this will help the population grow. Gay couples are also more likely to vote for political candidates who support gay rights, which will help the political process. Gay marriage will also help to reduce discrimination.

I believe that gay marriage is a matter of time. The legal system is slowly but surely coming around to the idea that gay marriage is a good thing. It is only a matter of time before it becomes legal in all 50 states.

I hope that lawmakers will consider this issue carefully. Gay marriage is a complex issue, and it is important to consider all of the implications before making a decision.

The other thing that we need to know is that gay marriage is not going to be an issue that we need to worry about in the near future. It is still a matter of time before it becomes legal in all 50 states.

I believe that gay marriage is a matter of time. It may take a few more years, but it will happen. Gay couples are more likely to have children, vote, and contribute to society, and it is important to allow them to do so.

The cold weather upon us this fall means one thing -- it's time once again to find a warm home in the Pavilion.

With a new court and second-year Head Coach Greg Graham, the men's basketball team is looking to climb the ranks of the Western Athletic Conference. All five of last year's starters will return, including last year's WAC leading scorer and pre-season first-team All-WAC candidate, senior Aaron Haynes.

Last season playing the forward position, Haynes averaged 14.9 points, 5.7 boards, and was fourth on the team in minutes played. Other returning starters have proven to be just as crucial to the program's success. Seniors Joe Skiffer, Bryan Defares, Booker Nabors, and junior Jason Ellis will all play large roles in the 2003-04 Bronco program.

Skiffer will return as the team's point guard averaging 4.1 points, 3.1 assists, and was second in minutes played with 31.5. Skiffer has shown his defensive capabilities to be unlimited.

Defares is returning off an outstanding year compiling 14.4 points a game, shooting 31 percent behind the three point arch, 3.1 assists per game, 4.8 boards, and also lead the team in minutes played with 33.8. Nabors, a Boise native, will return at the guard spot providing the team with his 7.1 points per game last year.

Kobe Carl, a red-shirt freshman will also look to contribute at the guard spot with a quick shot from behind the three-point arch.

Larry Davidson, another red-shirt, will compete for playing time at the forward position.

Losing only two seniors from last season the Bronco's have added three junior college transfers: guard/forward Jermaine Blackburn, guard Franco Harris, and seven-foot center Mattias Johansson.

The Broncos also signed two from California, guards DJon Harper and Eric Late. With all of the new faces, coupled with the new look of the Pavilion, fans can anticipate an improved and exciting mode of basketball at these home games.

Haynes said Bronco fans will definitely have something to cheer about this year.

"I'm excited to show the fans how hard we've been working. It's going to be a fun and exciting year, for the fans and for the program," Haynes said.

AARON HAYNES returns as the pre-season first-team All-WAC candidate and the senior leader of the Bronco this season.

Annual Celebration of Women in the Arts hits downtown Boise

BY CRYSTAL ANTHEM

It's that time of year again. The air will soon be filled with the sounds of sleigh bells, Christmas lights andpunked shoppers, but if you've spent your year focused on the event, you'll be the one of a club packed with a recent women rocking the stage.

The 10th Annual Celebration of Women in the Artsis slated for November 14th at Hannah's Downtown. The event features national and local artists and music acts to celebrate their diversity and richness in both their individuality and commonalities.

The presentation features prominent artists from a variety of disciplines such as music, visual arts, comedy and literature. Everyday, the CNB public information officer, Crystal Anthem, said, "They say the event is a great place to see and be seen." The event will be held in the main room of Hannah's Downtown.

"There are 200 performances this time, including about 75 visual artists at 15 booths and 125 musicians. It's a weekend celebration with a range of entertainment; everything from comedy and drama. Every year, we're adding more entertainment," said Brian Mayer, director of the event.

"It's 21 and up, but we do have all ages on stage. The nature of the event really isn't that serious," said Mayer. "The kids think it's a great idea and probably because their work is usually so serious."

"This is their first time to be on stage of any kind and that's what it's all about," said Mayer. "We're glad that you chose to respond."

"The issue of domestic violence is one area where the public can really look at what's going on and help provide support," said Mayer. "We've had a great response and we're still trying to get more people involved in the process through our Art. The main idea is to show people the issues that women are working to help, whether it's domestic abuse or any other of the women's issues that we see in a trancelike state after the sound of a trained vocalist, which she is - rather than the technique scope of an ex-film major - which demonstrates how we can

"I have a really strong relationship with my voice," she said. "It's something that I've been working on for years. It's the voice that I use to communicate with the world."
