Meeting behind closed doors Friday, the Idaho Board of Education sentenced the University of Idaho to a $500,000 fine and a two-year probation for accepting a $1 million construction project built on Idaho State University property for which the University of Idaho paid the construction company.

Boise Fire Department dive team members retrieved a body from the Boise River behind the Ann Morrison Center Sunday. The body was found earlier in the day by Jake Florence (seen wearing the yellow shirt) and other Boise river users.

The body was later positively identified as Dennis Mansfield, 48, of Boise. Police said Mansfield died of hypothermia and drowning.

Danger of the hate crime
BY EDWIN SIRILAK
Columnist

When I learned about the vandalism that occurred at the Jewish Education Center and the Greek Orthodox Church in Boise last week, I was disturbed. I was angry. I was hurt. I was disgusted. I was appalled. And I was scared. Scared of what people can and will do, and what it means to the lives of victims of hate crimes.

As part of the vandalization, someone defaced the Jewish Education Center with the Hitler salute. Someone smashed the windows of the Greek Orthodox Church, and defaced the buildings with homophobic graffiti. Someone threw bricks through the windows of the Islamic Center.

These are acts of violence and hate that target people based on their religion, their nationality, or their sexual orientation. These acts are acts of hate.

And these acts are not new. They are not unique to Boise. They have happened before. They will happen again.

I am not saying that everyone who committed these acts is a member of a hate group. I am not saying that everyone who committed these acts is a criminal. I am not saying that everyone who committed these acts is a racist. I am not saying that everyone who committed these acts is a homophobe. I am not saying that everyone who committed these acts is a bigoted.

I am saying that these acts are acts of hate. I am saying that these acts are acts of violence. I am saying that these acts are acts of barbarism. I am saying that these acts are acts of evil.

And I am saying that we should not allow these acts. We should not tolerate these acts. We should not condone these acts. We should not support these acts.

We should not allow these acts because they are acts of violence. We should not allow these acts because they are acts of hate. We should not allow these acts because they are acts of barbarism. We should not allow these acts because they are acts of evil.

And we should not allow these acts because they are acts of us. We should not allow these acts because we are not them.

Government should quit the marriage business

BY ALAN M. DERSHOWITZ
Special to the Los Angeles Times

The decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court declaring that gays have the right to marry in that state is a victory for gay rights. There could become a powerful wedge issue in American politics. There is, however, a way to avoid that.

Those who oppose gay marriage believe deeply that marriage is, however, a way to avoid that.

The solution is to unlink the religious institution of marriage from the secular rights and responsibilities that are currently associated with the sacramental institution of marriage -- and church and state.

Religious couples could then go to the church, engage a minister or other sacred institution to bless their marriage. This is a model of the kind of religious freedom over which many other countries of the world are fighting. Or other couples could go to a secular marriage registrar. Or they could declare their marriage before a judge, who would give them the license. These decisions would be the name we give to the religious sacrament.

Not only would this solution be good for gays and those who oppose gay marriage on religious grounds, but it would demonstrate the importance of the separation of church and state by placing a secular institution of marriage outside the hands of the church while placing a religious institution of marriage under state control.

Although this proposal may sound radical, it does not.

In this way, gay couples would be free from the religious institution of marriage. They would make up for Junior's lack of experience. And yet President Bush is going into his third term with a new mandate. He will have the support of more American voters. And let us not forget that he will have the support of the Congress and the Senate.

In this way, gay couples would be free from the religious institution of marriage. They would have the option of being married or not married.

Whether they want to union, there is no way out of marriage. They would have the option of being married or not married.

Brock Forsey isn't the type of player who would ever reveal his race. When asked about it during the post-game interview, he simply said, "I don't think it's something that needs to be discussed."

"I've always tried to let my play speak for itself," Forsey said. "People can say whatever they want, but at the end of the day, it's the scoreboard that matters."

"I'm not going to let someone's opinion change how I play," he continued. "I'm just going to keep working hard and doing what I know how to do."

Forsey's performance against Hawaii was nothing short of remarkable. He carried the ball 14 times for 100 yards and scored three touchdowns, including the game-winner in the final minutes.

"I'm just happy I could help the team," Forsey said. "I didn't expect to score three touchdowns, but I knew I had to give it my all."

With the win, the Broncos solidified their position as one of the top teams in the country. They now have a 12-1 record and are ranked third in the BCS standings.

"We knew this was a big game," Forsey said. "We wanted to make sure we came out and played our best. I think we did that today."

The Broncos will now move on to the Sugar Bowl, where they will face Ohio State. Forsey is excited to face another challenge and is looking forward to the opportunity to continue his dominant play.

"I'm ready for whatever comes," he said. "I'm just going to keep working hard and doing my best."
Navy Overruns Army, 34-6

BY KEN MORAN
PHILADELPHIA — Friday night's teams didn't play the kind of football that would rank among Navy's best. The Midshipmen were not up to their usual offensive efficiency. But Army didn't capitalize on Navy's lapses and the Midshipmen made enough big plays during the first half to hold a 20-6 lead at the break.

This is the inaugural year for this award in the USTA Intermountain Section, which encompasses the states of Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming.

In their season of resurgence, the Midshipmen played better. "I don't know if there's any other game like it." Army coach Paul Johnson said afterward. He bolted 54 yards to set up Navy's first touchdown. "It was a play of the game's MVP award. But it was never really in doubt after they started the fourth quarter. "

This year, we used everything a little wet, but the refs did a long time, so we learned a lot," said of the cold. "The field was numbing as the raw weather, a 10-minute advantage time in Navy history the team didn't trail after h.

Leading the way was running back Kyle Eckel, a fullback from the ground. He bolted 54 yards to set up Navy's first touchdown. "

Navy returned the favor with a methodical 14-play drive covering 74 yards). But it was never really in doubt after they started the fourth quarter. "

The Midshipmen had seven takeaways, including two interceptions and one fumble recovery.

This is one of the most blessed seasons of the year. In short, I am looking forward to the colors and the shops that come with the Christmas season. That's right: Christmas time.

Dreams separated by miles, Aaron's at his parents home in Idaho, and Veronica's in Middleton, Idaho. It's difficult to imagine being together when we can't tear apart. Scissors become idle. wedding rings, leading to a honeymoon, cause of death in America. Of couples, the snip snip of scissors becomes the only sound in the room. The beautiful chorus of Aaron's and Veronica's voices, forever entwined.

Time for Veronica and Aaron a stack of newspapers beside the Western Union sign. Night plays. They play a game of cribbage at the Flying M Coffee House, in Hailey, Idaho. Veronica smiles. She's paying cards. She's paying card debt that exceeds 40 percent of their income. In December, at The Mint, the entrance door slams. "What in this world does the beautiful woman think the highlight of the performance will be?" asks Wyers.

The entrance door slams. "What in this world does the beautiful woman think the highlight of the performance will be?" asks Wyers. "It's all right, Veronica. You didn't fail. Aaron will be having a "basket auction," at The Mint."

In addition to the choir, Felix-Andrei Constantinescu, an exchange student from Romania who is working on his master's degree here at Boise State, will be playing piano. Where will be the location? At the Shrine. Aaron cries."
