Dr. Chaffee Celebrates 61st Birthday, 34th Year at College

Dr. Eugene B. Chaffee has devoted 30 years of his life to the students and the college. In 1939, when he became president, the college had a student body of 150, and through the efforts of President Chaffee, the college has grown to a student body of over 1,000. The college has also expanded its curriculum and added new programs of study.

The college has expanded from a small girl's school to a rapidly expanding four-year institution through the efforts and guidance of Dr. Eugene B. Chaffee, president of the college.

Dr. Chaffee has devoted thirty-four years of his life to the college, where he became president in 1939, and through his efforts he has helped with the transformation of the college into a community junior college. In 1939, the college became a four-year institution, and in 1964, it was granted the status of a four-year institution.

From then until 1964, President Chaffee helped to formulate Boise College into one of the best junior colleges in the nation. In 1964, the state legislature authorized it to become a four-year institution, with President Chaffee at the helm.

President Chaffee has served as president of the American Association of Junior Colleges, junior college representative on the executive council of the National Association of Manufacturers, and member of the executive committee of the National Commission on Accrediting. President Chaffee has also served as president of the American Association of Junior Colleges, junior college representative on the executive council of the National Association of Manufacturers, and member of the executive committee of the National Commission on Accrediting. Only recently participated in the White House Conference on International Cooperation in Washington, D. C.

We hope in the near future to see President Chaffee continue to serve as president of Boise College, for once again the institution needs a great leader to formulate and build it into an unequaled position in Idaho and the country.

BC to Be Featured On KTVB Special

Boise College will be featured in a half-hour television special on KTVB Channel 7, this Friday night at 7 o'clock, the college public relations office announces.

Material for KTVB's Education Special, in two parts, was filmed on location and includes interviews with the presidents of Idaho colleges. The question presented is: "Can Our Colleges and Universities Accommodate the Growing Number of Students?" Part I of "A Special Look at Idaho's Tax Supported Colleges and Universities," was shown on Thursday night on Channel 7, and featured the University of Idaho and Idaho State University.

Boise College will be featured, along with Northwest Idaho Junior College, Lewis-Clark Normal and the College of Southern Idaho, in Part II, Friday, March 11 at 7:00 p.m.

Happy Birthday, President Chaffee!
We are working with people during the best years of their lives. There is something latent good in every young person, and when we help him to find himself, to bring out the best in him, we are doing something extremely worthwhile.—President Eugene B. Chaffee.

Dr. Chaffee Praised

As we celebrate the first anniversary of our designation as a four-year degree-granting institution, it is appropriate that we extend appreciation to the many people who have contributed to Boise College President Eugene B. Chaffee, who will be on March 16.

Almost half of Dr. Chaffee's life has been spent in leading BC, skillfully steering the small, frail institution, nourishing it through hard times, and helping it grow into its present status.

Times haven't always been easy and the road to success hasn't always been wide, but there have been local problems of crowded classrooms and inadequate facilities. There have been national problems when the United States entered World War II, and another conflict in progress summons our youth to defend their country.

There have been many financial problems—first that work that BC opened, the banks closed. And the problems haven't all been solved. There will be many more problems brought about by our experience. And the years ahead will bring new problems. Dr. Chaffee's excellent leadership has helped Boise College find the way down the road to success and his hand is still guiding us today.

Happy birthday, Dr. Chaffee. We are looking forward to another successful year under your leadership.

Our Fine Faculty

Do you, the students of Boise College, recognize the fact that the faculty we have is one of the finest in the country, and the reason for this is the diligence of President Chaffee in his search for good instructors? Not only are we blessed with an outstanding number of well qualified instructors, but almost all of them have had a hand in fields other than teaching.

Dr. Chaffee personally interviews each person he is interested in as an instructor for Boise College. Not only are his choices well equipped through professional and pedagogical experiences in other work and are from different parts of the country. This varied background of each teacher gives us, the students, the benefit of a broader, more interesting view to help us in our search for knowledge.

Because of the concern of the president of this college, we can be proud of the group of highly trained and dedicated instructors available in the college. The students, the Illumnl, and the administration wish to thank President Eugene Chaffee for his dedicated service to the college. The students, the Illumnl, and the administration wish to thank President Eugene Chaffee for his dedicated service to the college.

HELPING TO PRESERVE: A traditional craft of the Ozark Highlands in Missouri. Sherry Miller of Boise College is shown weaving on an old-style loom at the School of the Ozarks in Point Lookout, Missouri, where she attended school for one year.

Materials chiefly used were wool, cotton, and an aged, wooden loom. Founded in the United States as a means of making clothing for the family. Although preservation of this craft has been hindered by the background, individuals such as Sherry Miller, Boise College home economics major, have studied it and have made and worn the tradition alive.

The Ozarks is a liberal arts college offering academic, cultural, and vocational training. As written in the college's bulletin, attention to studies, emphasis upon work, and its location in the campus life are chief concerns of the student body. Cars, campus, and a variety of associate and general courses make up the campus tradition.

The town itself, Point Lookout, has its own post office, buildings constructed by the students, a bakery, furniture factory, library, church, grocery store, canning factory, printing shop, and a meat packing plant. The Ozarks is the move of Miss Helen Miller, State Librarian, and is currently living with her watchful eye.

Library Changes Numbering System

Miss Ruth McIlravy has announced that the changes in the Library's classification of books follow the Dewey System. Following the necessary approval by the College Administration, the Library is abandoning the former system of numbering and substituting the larger, more logical system of the Dewey System and classification. From now on, all new titles processed by the Library will bear the distinctive letter-number notation used by the Library of Congress.

The change from Dewey to Library of Congress classification follows an increasing trend of research and study among academic libraries all over the country. Mrs. McIlravy, in her search, found the Library of Congress to be more satisfactory and economical than the Dewey System, especially as collections grow beyond 100,000 volumes. While our reflection is below this figure, we should anticipate it in a few years.

The Library of Congress classified system is organized into a system of classes for the logical and easy arrangement of the classification and a finer division than Dewey, so that both numbers and letters are used. These classes, which in the Dewey System only numbers are used in the Dewey System, are further divided, subdivided, and letter combinations as needed, and are further expanded by the use of numbers for subject matter as required.

Many of the areas which are split by Dewey are brought together under the Library of Congress numbering system.

Graduated Classes Offered This Summer

Graduate assistantships at Portland State College and at other institutions in the Northwest area will be offered in seven fields of study including psychology, education, and sociology. Assistantships for first-year graduate students will be offered in the fields of education, social work, and science. Students in psychology and education will be offered assistantships in the library.

Said a variety of musical modes. Solutions derived from this response were the three choruses performed by Heidrun Wall, who then directed another group, the second choir, under the chairmanship of Fr. Fischer. As a result, the musicians chose to incorporate elements of their own country and make their work more meaningful in Berlin, Germany. But they chose instead to incorporate new techniques and some of the teaching at the Berlin College of Education.

By the nature of any organization, it is difficult to keep all the reports from this group. The group hopes that you will have an opportunity to organize a bus- ness; to draw up a contract, pay your corporation tax, find suitable stockholders, hire capable employees, subscribe to prospective newspapers, create your product, and then hope that the public will respond? To learn the answer, you can ask any Golden Z or Intercol- legiate Knight, and you'll learn that this is just what they have been through, in organizing, and producing the Miss Boise College Pageant.

LETTERS to the Editor...

Dear Editor:

I should like to present the opposite side of the argument regarding an editorial in last week's issue entitled "Debating the Opinion Column." First of all, the debate team does not have a considerable sum of money allotted. In fact, it is only enough to finance three worthwhile trips by the team; even this number is certainly a minimum amount of tournament money in any college. Secondly, we have participated in debate this year. A short trip to the city of the film "Breathless" makes this a good time to explain the position of the Foreign Film Committee. The committee proposes a mas- tergroup at an audit in line with attempts to select outstanding films that will appeal to the largest audience possible, and it is the selection of films of varied types. Because the committee desires the interests and the misidentifications of language and faculty members in its program. It has had the opportunity to discuss, comments and suggestions from members of its audience. The film committee would prefer to prepare films before the audience so that the committee will not have to select films which contain controversial subject matter. Although the themes of certain films may be subject to questions by scheduling films in modern moral, and although the films may present characters or situations which the film is itself "immoral" unless it presents objectionable material for its own sake, that is to say, it panders to prurient interests. As long as a film audience is composed of individuals with diverse interests, not all of them will appreciate such films equally. As long as film producers attempt to be successful with life imitations, many of whom may consider it art, it is times unsound. In order to intelligently supervi- sion whether the students and homeworkers who viewed the film are acquainted with the world outside the college because, as it has suggested, the film was a "Breathless Film." Those viewers who took the time to utter and to react to the film have found, that there was intellectual content. We were particularly interested in the editor to suggest that most people are "tasteless" when most people seem to have been in the Foreign Film Committee. We would like to suggest that most people are "tasteless" when most people seem to have been interested.

Dear Editor

There are many people who think that this school is not one of the most select of the world's college because of its interest in the foreign film. Student Loan Requests Reviewed by IBM Computer in Pa.

Students applying for Pennsylvania College loans and scholarship aid are getting a hearing from an unexpected source—an IBM computer.

The computer, the first to be used in such a program, is screening student applications to the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency for funds. The result, says Executive Director Kenneth R. Reeder, is far more "consistent" decisions.

Governor William W. Scranton stated Pennsylvania's new state-operated program, which guaranteed loans is one of the most successful in the country. He said the broad-scale program is the first to give students a guaranteed financial aid, consisting in part of a direct grant and a guaranty loan.

The program for needy students, he said, "will be handled by computer and it will be free of politics.

According to Mr. Reeder, "There are 196 checkpoints in each application to cover every detail and once a patient has filled in on more than 12,000 to 15,000 applications, you'd be bored to a few a day, and it will reflect in the final decision."

The computer, however, impartially and quickly judges each application only on its merits. "We have built the whole into the system that guarantee every student a fair hearing," explains Reeder, "and the computer doesn't make mistakes."

New Pilot Program Offered by UAL

A program whereby "new time" pilot applicants—those with no flying experience—have quality for training as a United Airlines flight officer, was announced by Charles M. Mason, vice-president, president.

Mason said, the expansion of United's Pilot Advance Acceptance Program (PAAP) was aimed at male college graduates between 20 and 25 with no flight time or with less than 50 hours needed for a private pilot's license. Such applicants would be assured of a slot at United's Flight Training Center in Denver upon obtaining the private or commercial pilot's license on their own at a United company agency-operated school within one year.

It liberalizes former requirements by United through a Chicago bank. Loans of up to $3,000 are available and repayment would not start until the student has completed United's 10-week flight training course. A commercial license—102 hours study—constitutes a $2,900 investment.

William A. Dattson, chairman of the board, last month indicated that it was necessary to hire men from college and train them in pilots from scratch. Mason also said that the tremendous interest in this career in the past, at least a private license was required for consideration by United.

The nation's largest airline, confronted with an unprecedented increase in air travel and a fleet which will grow to 330 jets by 1970, announced last November it needs 1,600 more pilots over the next two years.

"United is the only airline offering a PAAP program," Mason said, and that is why we are expanding it to cover the entire market. The original PAAP program, introduced in September, 1964, and designed for aspiring pilots already holding a private license, but lacking a commercial license, will be reconstituted. It has been the source of at least 70 flight officers.

United also has two other programs—one for applicants who have both licenses, but lack in instrument rating and another for pilots who meet all the qualifications. United hopes the expanded PAAP program will increase the instrument rating instruction.

Mason emphasized that the burden of "time" in his presentation is the "time" pilots do not represent a lowering of standards. United still hires only one out of 20 applicants who meet the basic requirements. U.S. Civilian Citizenship, height 5 feet 7 to 6 feet 4, excellent overall physical condition and vision corrected to 20/20 with glasses. A rugged flight attitude is a must.

It has been determined that low time pilots have been very successful in the 17-week second officer training course. Mason said, "We pay $500 per month, plus an additional $4 per day."

Based on a maximum schedule of eight hours a month, United flight officers earn $850 a month after two years, $1,200 after three years, and $1,800 after five years and in 10 to 12 years—the normal progression to captain—is up to $30,000 annually.
