The staff at Boise Community College in Idaho has been asked to keep an eye on the number of students who have failed to pay their tuition. The college itself is responsible for seeing that these students do not harm other students, and that they do not disrupt the educational process.

The Boise Community College's Data Processing Office has established a special food program for BC students, under the guidance of a faculty advisor, Alice Lake, who has interviewed faculty advisors and the students themselves. The program is designed to provide free food to all students, regardless of their financial status. The food is obtained through the cooperation of various organizations, including the Boise Community College Student Senate and the Boise Community College Alumni Association.

I would like to congratulate the Boise City School Board, and the Booneville Community College, for their effort to bring the community together. I have been involved in this project for several years, and I am pleased to see the progress that has been made.

I would like to thank all the students, faculty, and staff of Boise Community College, for their hard work and dedication. I am confident that the future of Boise Community College will be bright.

TOKYO—Japan's surviving "war criminals" are, almost without exception, the first to denounce efforts to try them for war crimes. But they, too, may find themselves on the defense against charges ranging from murder to war crimes. The cases being tried at the Tokyo war crimes tribunal are so complex, and so many other war criminals are involved, that the tribunal is faced with a task that is virtually impossible.

HOW TO BALANCE A COLLEGE BUDGET

1. Set a budget for yourself. Keep track of your expenses and plan your spending accordingly.
2. Look for scholarships and grants. There are many organizations that offer scholarships to students who meet certain criteria.
3. Consider part-time jobs. Many students work part-time while in school to help pay for their expenses.
4. Use a checking account. Keep track of your spending and avoid overdraft fees by using a checking account.
5. Save money. Set a goal for how much you want to save, and work towards that goal by saving a little bit each month.
