These people were on hand to tell the reporter their plans

By Sharon Barnes

What are the main issues on campus? Should the Public relations man have a vote on the Senate when he is appointed? What big name groups do you plan to bring to Boise State College? What do you plan to do at the Idaho Student Government Association?

There are a few of the questions recently asked the candidates for ASB offices here at BSC.

Fellow wants to be president

"The prime concern of the student is the quality of education," Gary Felt, candidate for ASB President, stated that his platform is one of improving the whole educational system through student body government. Students should have the right to help draw up the curriculum and also to be involved in the hiring and firing of faculty members according to Felt.

Felt would like to see a plan for a statewide lobby both on the state and national level develop out of the ISGA. "I would like to see the state reality of the three institutions diminish on a student level." This would set an example for the legislators.

Felt said he would like to see a system in the state where all three colleges would come under one name. Each school would have certain branches.

Felt wants to put the emphasis back on education

2M Co. cites itself as best

"The 2 M Co., Wayne Mittlesider, candidate for ASB President, and Felt are the candidates for ASB Vice President." Their platform would include four main issues. These issues include communication and feedback system. Committee reports of the senate and financial breakdown should be published for students. A weekly fact sheet published would be a social calendar. To foster better communications between ASB officers and major groups. Initiation of a cultural program, including art shows, lectures, classical and folk music groups is needed at BSC.

Who's a yo-yo???

Arbiter lists ASB candidates

The following people have turned in a petition and will be on the ballot in the upcoming ASB election. President: Wayne Mittlesider, Gary Felt, Gerald Renick. Vice-President: Ieland Mercy Jr., Gary Johnson, Larry Homstad. Secretary: Michelle Morrison, Jinx Cato, Kristin Williams. Treasurer: Delroy Crazier, Patrick Lee. Social Chairman: Ed Weier, Michael Reppert.

We wish these people along with all people running on a write in basis the best of luck.

Hmm... feels like 20-pound bond to me...

Improving the student activities program in a major role. Initiation of a cultural program, including art shows, lectures, classical and folk music groups is needed at BSC.

Current movies, dances, concerts etc., will improve the entertainment program. Setting of national integration to the students. The plan concludes the third phase of the plan to improve student activities.

More students should be given the opportunity to participate in student processes according to the 2 M Co. Students should have a voice in the planning for BSC events.

"It's important to know the traditions, establishing intercollegiate relations with other colleges in Idaho and better contact with the community are included in the plan to improve BSC's image.

According to Mittlesider, "the ISGA, if properly managed can be an effective voice and meeting area for the students within its own boundaries. With the proper interest and time devoted to this group the students of the state of Idaho can become an effective part of the future through voicing their pet opinion on pertinent issues and answering common problems."

Mercy stated the public relations director should not vote in the senate. Mercy felt voices the public relations director was appointed officials that is not elected by the majority of the students. He said, "however, he said, "the public relations man is important enough to be in the executive ladder and have his opinion recorded in the Senate minutes."

Homstad stands on director role

Larry Homstad, candidate for ASB vice president, stated there are free major issues to be faced in this campaign. These issues include: Faculty evaluations, concern for hiring and firing of faculty, BSC fiscal life, high book store prices and communications between students and the senate.

Homstad stated that men and women of fraternities and sororities should be able to govern themselves.

Concerning the Public Relations Director, Homstad said, "As long as he is appointed official and not an elected officer, he should be able to vote. Now he is not a voice of the student body."

To elect  .......

A guide to electing ASB officers

1. What is his GPA?
   A candidate with an average grade point would undoubtedly be a hard worker. If he has a high GPA, he would be seeking to the leadership of the ASB. If he is making his way to take care of our business. Same for a person with a low GPA.

2. What is his major?
   A candidate in a major that will benefit the position he is seeking will carry some prior knowledge into the job. Therefore, election major, has ideas of what is on your mind. And demand anSWl. TS.

3. What is the extent of his experience?
   Has he worked with a professional in a position is the best. You can be certain of this if he worked under a student official and let an job frequently. However, be careful that you do not fall into a trap. The candidate may have worked on a committee or board under the jurisdiction of the student body and still may not have the same knowledge of the nature of student government.

4. What is his platform?
   A platform is the simplest of all campaign preparations. Usually a platform is so general that it may be impossible to find a candidate taking a stand on anything.

5. Are the other moral issues on campus?
   So many of our peers are falling victim to present drug laws. Does the candidate state that he will or will not take a position on drugs?
   You may ask yourself what possible reason could be given for a candidate taking a stand on a moral issue such as drugs.

6. What are his plans?
   Ask questions of your candidate.
   Many times we attend the election speeches without ever asking about things that bug us. And yet, when these officials have served a while, we sit around complaining that so-and-so isn't doing his job.

7. Tell the man. Ask questions which give the other candidates an idea of what is on your mind. And demand answers.

8. Before you go to the elections Prepare a mental list of campus issues that you have been considering this past year. If the student candidate does not mention these, then you logically ask, "Where were you this year?"

9. Exercise your power of decision
   At no other time this year will you be able to have a say in your student government. You may not have an idea of which student government involves on this campus, but if affects whether you take time to vote or not.

Your curriculum is programmed following the advice of student leaders. You pay heed into the coffers of the student body. How do you know if you are being a good voter?

Consider for a moment that you are having to pay an increase in student fees. Is that increase in money enough reason to take time to vote? For you, the student who will be a voter.

10. Think it over.
   You have a vote in state and national elections. If you were to given universal suffrage on the basis of the way you conducted yourself in student elections would you get to vote?

Mountain Bell
The crisis of upheaval

The prime specialty on the menu of social problems is pollution. There are courses that accompany this dish: a salad of litter and a cup of polluted water, served to an accompaniment of unpleasant noises.

Lately the public awareness has been stimulated to a point where it wants to push away this disgusting diet it has been feeding itself for the decades the problem has existed.

But the silent majority is also the dormant majority. Routines rarely give the public enough time to do anything but talk about what should be done. It somehow doesn’t occur to them that it will take everyone to discard this well-worn menu.

Instead, most of the activism is left to the college campuses—and now the students across the nation are responding to the challenge of cleaning up the accumulated mess they inherited.

Scientists tell us that unless smog is curtailed we will soon be enveloped in a new ice age created by the very lack of sunlight. They warn of the extinction of many species of fish and animals that our children will not see if the present trend of pollution continues.

BSU’s planning to begin moving on the campuses of our witting country. Boise State College is no exception.

On April 9, college students will begin a campaign to clean up the Boise River. But to make this project successful, organizations are going to have to urge their members to participate.

The project for cleaning up our campus is only a beginning. Already planned is a campaign to clean up our city on April 19. Pledged support by local organizations will initiate the city-wide program to make Boise the example for other cities to look at.

Boise State College students will clean up the Banks of the Boise River, the Boy Scouts will clean in the residential area and the Bogus Basin Ski Patrol will remove litter from the slopes of the Bogus Basin.

And the campaign does not stop here. On April 22, a planned “Teach-In” in the SUB will demonstrate ways in which we can further clean up our city and keep it clean.

If the program launched to keep Boise the cleanest city in the United States is successful, other cities across the nation will become our audience and applaud our actions. Thus we become a stage group presenting our program to other cities.

But the play is audience-participating. If we can set the example, other cities will follow, and follow with the excitement of knowing the problem can be solved by concerned people.

To insure the success of the clean-up campaign, all organizations on campus should pledge active support and play their part in the program to stimulate the removal, for once and all, the pollution that mars our city and country.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor,

In reading the last issue of the Arbiter I was faced with a strange experience. That of thinking. Since this ungodly aspect of man is not peculiar to this particular school, or even, to our great state, I was surprised.

How could this be? How can I find that I am opposed to our great traditions of ignorance?

I was looking at my friend's article in the school paper and felt that I got there: that's what mom and dad said. Oh, you know what they say, go to school and learn not to question. But when those dirty old professors filled my head with knowledge, and I proceeded to enlighten mom, she called it a communist point, made me cut my hair, and made a quick school switch—sound-familiar?

Now I'm attending another school of higher education, I hope! But some teachers of questionable character still maintain that I need to know facts, and what's wrong with this world according to the United States excluded, of course.

Here students, thank God, have the sense to be capitalistic. Down with love toward the man and to hell with the helping poor.

Kill a commie for Christ and we'll burn the rest—now forget, this isn't Spain. Anyway, I know those skinny, discolored heathens are no good, don't we?

When I hear people trying to change our inherited ignorance and challenge our right to stupidity, I really get burned up.

We are not to rid the world evils, overseeing the horrors of poverty, hating your brother if he doesn't live the way you do, self-imposed ignorance about the "real" world, spathy to all and all the other good Christian ideals make an 100% American right wing.

So I say "God" make us strong enough to save the peoples of the world—we have the right, don't we?

Don't believe everything you read, if I were you.

Dear Editor,

In regards to the opinion column that was published in the March 27 Arbiter on the alleged "Anarchism of Nampa" to the ESC, Campus, I would like to make a few comments.

These comments are designed to neither defend and/or offend the decisions of the ASB social committees, but to present a few of the facts. Number one, you know as well as I do that there are no adequate facilities in the entire Boise Valley to adequately stage a concert of the scope of B.S.T. To my knowledge, the social committee checked into various facilities in Boise and found none of them suitable.

Unusually, gymnasiums are not designed to hold musical concerts, unless you intend to "come back the next night" and listen to the echo put on the concert.

Also, I can hear now the cry of "highway robbery" if the ASB would stage the concert in the gym and have to charge between $5 and $10 PER STUDENT and pack the place to the limit then make the guarantee to get such groups as B.S.T. in You as well as I know that the "exclusive" Boise State student could not afford the price of admission. The hope is to find a larger place to hold the concert, draw a large crowd and charge less green. As you so aptly mentioned, the stadium is still under construction. Capital and Boise High auditoriums are both too small, as is Capital's gym, which fooled a lot of people during the Springfest comments. An outdoor facility at the fairgrounds is still under construction, and the main building at the fairgrounds has none of the sound qualities "unsurpassed!"

The next closest facility that would be close and still halfway large enough is the Meridian Speedy groups. Presumably, the concert is supposed to be on a weekend, but that would be easy with the Modified Races starting on April 19. The next closest place is Nampa, and you know what.

If I remember correctly, there has always been the complaints at Boise State, and in the Boise Valley in general, that no big-name groups ever appear there. I heard more noise in the BSI when IFI signed Led Zeppelin when we could have somehow heard them.

Well, you see if we want big names, the students have to pay for it. The activity would surely go broke if BSC had it in the gym. It is possible, however, that through advertising the students at BSC could make a go of it by paying around two books a head and drawing students from the high school bands, BSC, NNC, C of J, TVCC and possibly IFI and UI of I, that in addition to persons from outside the college community.

I'm not arguing either in favor or disfavor of the social committee's decision. But remember, if you want a dance, you have to pay for it. Also remember that even opinion should be based on facts, the fact that Boise State needs a Performing Arts Center Right? As you so aptly mentioned, the stadium is still under construction. Capital and Boise High auditoriums are both too small, as is Capital's gym, which fooled a lot of people during the Springfest comments.

Candidate Pat Lee lists assets

Pat Lee, a junior accounting major, is seeking the office of ASB Treasurer.

Lee was in the scholarship chairman of Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity and a member of the Newman Club.

His interests include snow and water skiing, cycling, swimming, tennis, hunting and traveling.

Lee's political platform includes a three-point plan:

1. Reviving the Finance Board to aid in evaluating requests for funds before being presented to the senate; this will help to determine the request.

2. Revise the constitution to include a guideline as to who qualifies as a funded organization.

3. Maintaining a current meeting balance sheet with monthly reports given to the senate so they may determine how much money is spent on the different activities.
Available ASB candidates comment on your government

"Communication" was emphasized as the main goal facing the new ASB secretary, Miss Michelle Morrison, who was elected as the first female candidate for ASB secretary. When asked how she plans to get the minute out to students,

"We will have a newsletter each week to keep students informed," Miss Morrison said. "We will also have regular meetings to discuss important issues." She added that the goal is to "communicate with the students and understand their needs." Miss Morrison said she would like to see student organizations' mailboxes in the ASB offices as well as in the student center. Copies of minutes will be made available to students not having mailboxes.

According to Miss Morrison, the ASB secretary is a dynamic responsible woman whose vote on the Senate and Student Council budget makes her a very important member of the officer of the school.

"Efficiency, dependability and responsibility make up the framework of the officer and the desire to do the best I can for BSC is the key."

Cato desires to kill apathy

"I will be a student working for students," Miss Jinx Cato, candidate for ASB secretary would like to see more student control in the decision making process of Boise State College. Miss Cato's plans include working as an effective lobbyist for students.

Cooperation between students and ASB officers was cited as a major responsibility by Miss Cato. Miss Cato feels apathy can be cured at BSC by making the campus a more fun and exciting place.

“Clean up your own back yard” will hopefully become a working philosophy for Boise State College.

Beginning April 9, BSC will begin a constructive demonstration to clean up the campus and the city of Boise in preparation for an “Ecology Teach-in” April 22, the day designated as “National Earth Day”.

Everyone knows what pollution is and what threats it poses, now we have to start doing something about it. The “Ecology Teach-in” is to show and explain what can be done on a community level to curb our pollution problem... Explained Dick Nadeau acting speaker for the BSC student Body.

Following the campus cleanup, the students and faculty of BSC, local clubs and organizations will begin a campaign to clean up Boise April 19.

Boy Scouts will be cleaning in the residential community while the Boise Basin Ski Patrol will be cleaning the route to Boise Basin. BSC students will clean the banks of the Boise River along its course through the community.

Instructors at BSC have been requested to provide part of their class time to discussing pollution, or inviting a guest speaker, beginning April 20. At noon April 22, with an Ecology Teach-in is planned for the city of Boise in the BSC Student Union Building until 7:30 that evening.

The “Teach-in” will consist of movies, slides, exhibits, lectures and panel discussions on what can be done to “clean up our city.

Nadeau added that he was looking for people in the community to donate their time and tow trucks to help in towing off old car bodies blemishing the community.

Senator says students should send grievances to administration

by Bill Vost
March 23, 1970

At 5-10, the meeting was called to order and the flag salute led by Vice President Jim Tibbs.

BSC President, John B. Barnes was then introduced to the senatorial body.

He asked all students having questions for the Senate Student Union add on any other building project to contact Mr. Putnam, the school architect, at his office in the Administration Building.

Dr. Barnes then announced plans for a new freshman dormitory. It will be that of two seven story towers located on the Capital Boulevard end of campus.

The floor ground will be a lounge and recreational area while the remaining six will be living facilities.

Although this is the only dorm funded at the present time, two more are planned. Dr. Barnes added that because of the nature of the structures, they could easily be used as co-educational dorms.

The first floor, having a capability of forty students, was completed for completion by the Fall of 1971.

In addition to on-campus housing, Dr. Barnes said that the school is also working with private concerns, encouraging them to build student housing.

A total of 20 acres of land four blocks south of the Administration Building is available to investors for this purpose.

The commencement committee report was then given by Senior Class President Gary Dance. They propose that the traditional commencement speaker be replaced by a senior student chosen from the Senior Student Council. Discussion was held on the proposed commencement revisions. It was brought up that the person with the highest G.P.A. is not necessarily the best speaker, and since the class president is popularly elected, perhaps he would be the most representative example.

A report to this effect was made and passed by unanimous voice vote.

A joint resolution was introduced by Apple and the Thorpe question concerned a proposal on the firing of faculty and staff.

The purpose of this resolution, as explained by its proposers, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick, was to take the controversy and heartache that arises when a problem of this sort occurs. Patrick recognized the fact that hiring and firing of faculty and staff was an academic function. But he stressed that the students had the right to present grievances.

He felt that this was so because it is the students who have direct contact with the faculty, and are, therefore, in the best position to judge their merits.

According to this plan, the students would initiate, through the use of petitions and investigation. The information resulting from this investigation would then be published.

A motion was made and then passed that there was a state of emergency. A unanimous voice vote was then made in favor of the resolution.

Gary Dance presented a proposed amendment to Section 1 Part B of the Constitution. This would give an additional resolution to the Student-Faculty Relations Board to approve at least 3 candidates for each position on the faculty evaluation committee.

Another emergency session was called and the amendment was approved by a vote of 13-1.

A report was then given by the faculty evaluation committee. A question was raised as to the necessity of this committee if the policy of the Student-Faculty Relations Board was to be followed.

It was pointed out that this committee could become an integral part of the student evaluation. They would be able to provide facts and point out a necessity for investigation proceedings.

Requests for funds by the Band and Choir were submitted. Discussion on this subject will begin at the next meeting.

Felt wants us to decide education question at BSC

The primary concern of the student at Boise State College is the quality of education he receives at this institution. It stands to reason that the quality of education at Boise State College should be the primary concern of the elected representatives of these students. My strong conviction that students have the ability and the right to shape their own education compels me to seek the election to the office of Student Body President on a platform which supports this conviction.

The voice of the student should at least be heard in matters concerning his education and in that sense - his whole life. If elected President, I would attempt to set up a system through which the voice of the student could be heard in "high places".

In this limited space it is impossible to outline in detail my plans for instituting such a program. Briefly, this program would provide a Student-Faculty Relations Board to investigate alleged educational irresponsibility on the part of faculty, as expanded speaker program, grants at no additional cost to the students, an expanded and improved faculty relations committee.

At this point, the question of funds is necessary. Requests for funds by the Band and Choir were submitted. Discussion will begin at the next meeting.

BSC President, John B. Barnes was then introduced to the senatorial body.

He asked all students having questions for the Senate Student Union addition on any other building project to contact Mr. Putnam, the school architect, at his office in the Administration Building.

Dr. Barnes then announced plans for a new freshman dormitory. It will be that of two seven story towers located on the Capital Boulevard end of campus.

The floor ground will be a lounge and recreational area while the remaining six will be living facilities.

Although this is the only dorm funded at the present time, two more are planned. Dr. Barnes added that because of the nature of the structures, they could easily be used as co-educational dorms.

The first floor, having a capability of forty students, was completed for completion by the Fall of 1971.

In addition to on-campus housing, Dr. Barnes said that the school is also working with private concerns, encouraging them to build student housing.

A total of 20 acres of land four blocks south of the Administration Building is available to investors for this purpose.

The commencement committee report was then given by Senior Class President Gary Dance. They propose that the traditional commencement speaker be replaced by a senior student chosen from the Senior Student Council. Discussion was held on the proposed commencement revisions. It was brought up that the person with the highest G.P.A. is not necessarily the best speaker, and since the class president is popularly elected, perhaps he would be the most representative example.

A report to this effect was made and passed by unanimous voice vote.

A joint resolution was introduced by Apple and the Thorpe question concerned a proposal on the firing of faculty and staff.

The purpose of this resolution, as explained by its proposers, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick, was to take the controversy and heartache that arises when a problem of this sort occurs. Patrick recognized the fact that hiring and firing of faculty and staff was an academic function. But he stressed that the students had the right to present grievances.

He felt that this was so because it is the students who have direct contact with the faculty, and are, therefore, in the best position to judge their merits.

According to this plan, the students would initiate, through the use of petitions and investigation. The information resulting from this investigation would then be published.

Ever since Jim Thorpe had his Olympic medals taken away for alleged professionalism, his pay for baseball game (the question of professionalism has affected the Olympics and other amateur sports activities.

The earnings of today's amateur athlete do not come from the games themselves, such as $500 for winning a foot race from New York to Philadelphia. Now the earnings come from manufacturers of sporting goods. Probably, the most widely known payoff comes in skiing.

The reason skiing is such a high paying amateur sport is that the skiers are plagued by what is known as a "race-chaser." These men generously supply all the needs of the top racer from ski to poles to cars. (Don't usually comes through with a car for the US Ski team, not each individual).

The reason skiing is more vulnerable than other sports is not the people, but the time and money it takes to ski continually. A racer has to have not the people, but the time and money. (Downhill, Giant Slalom, and Slalom) each costing about $200. Then the bindings run about $50 a pair and boots about $150. Then there is clothing. No Levi's, but some skis and pants and at least one downhill suit.

As you can see, it's quite easy to run up an investment of $1,000 without paying for the skis. Another costly aspect of skiing is the time it takes, if he is to compete in eight or nine meets a year, he could spend a lot of money on air fare, hotels, cars or car expenses.

True, if the racer is on the national team, the teams send them free, but what about the good racer not yet on the national team? With the increase of recreational skiing across the country, the increased TV coverage of meets, both professional and amateur, most of the ski companies have devised some sort of mark to show the TV audience who skis on whom skis.

The most sought after commercial of all time is Jean-Claude Killy, ex-French Olympic team member and winner of three gold medals in the Olympics during the amateur races leading up to the Olympics in 1960, a winning Killy showed a well known brand of French ski in about every picture. He used them, yes, and he won.

The name on the skis was small, but if you looked, there it was, Rossignol Strato, big as life.

Americans were also getting into the spotlight in those days, but not their skis. An overly moralG pilots said "no ads." Hence came the adhesive tape and the names were covered.

The Olympics were Killy and quickly turned pro. He endorsed Nevada bindings, Killy hats, United Airlines and Chevrolets. No Rossignols.

Happy New Year! 1969 coming. More endorsements by Killy an everybody. The pro circuit is growing and that the advent of the TV ski.

A new type of advertising hits the TV screen as letters as wide as the skis are impossible to miss.

By the end of the 1968-69 ski season, the old familiar Head ski has a new family member hearing the name of that old Rossignol man.

Not only are the new skis much better racing than the old Head, but Jean-Claude ski on them.

This year brought about some more commercialization of the ski world. Ski boots now have the name prominently blasted so that if you are not familiar with the colors and designs on the boots, just look at the letters -H.E.-

A lot has happened. The amateurs (7) are now endorsing products. (See photo) This particular skier is still racing on the amateur circuit and supposedly receives no money for his ski. You make up your mind.

Killy, America's top amateur won the combined gold medal in Val Gardena, Italy and turned pro the same day. He probably signed all kinds of endorsement contracts because nobody sells American products like an American hero.

The next weekend, he won the world professional slalom and narrowly missed the gold in the giant slalom. $6,500 your first week as a pro isn't bad.

Killy, remember him? He now has a TV show. The show offers $10,000 for anyone who can beat Killy. "Hey kid, stay 3 rounds with the champ and we'll give you $10." The show airs Sunday afternoon when all the skiers are skiing or doing their homework. Don't they aren't there pros in other amateur sports?

Thins nab fat victory

The Boise track team scored an impressive victory against the College of Idaho in a dual meet last Friday. Not was the 99-42 margin impressive in its own right, but the fact that they are holding their meets without a track to practice on.

The Broncos took a firm hold on the meet after Bruce Smith and Jim Cofferty finished 1-2 in the 120 high hurdles. All the Coyotes could do was watch as the Broncos came home first.

This week the Broncos are at Eastern Washington to do battle with the Navigators.
