DEDICATION CEREMONIES FOR BOISE STATE STADIUM

Boise State College's most nearly completed expansion opens for sport enthusiastic tonight as BSC faces Chico State on the new Astro Turf field. At a cost of $3,000,000, the new Physical Education Building and Varsity Center, the stadium and all its features encompasses approximately 391,935 sq. ft.

The stadium proper seats 14,600; about 6,000 more than old Bronco Stadium. Another main advantage is seen in the fact that with all the high school games played on the field, the Astro Turf will be easier to keep in shape than true grass; while a grassy surface tends to get hard with the tremendous number of games the nylon Astro Turf will keep its resilient surface.

It will not cause grass stains or muddy uniforms. Nat Adams and Associates did the architectural work; contractor was Skyline Construction Co. from Salt Lake City.

Palmer Putnam, BSC project coordinator, says the contractors and sub-contractors are to be complimented for their excellent cooperation in working and paying over time to meet the deadlines for the first games.

Dedication Ceremonies will begin at 7:15 p.m. tonight with performances by the high stepping Broncettes directed by Hank Haust.

Wayne Mittelider, BSC Student Body President, will represent the students. Boise Elks Lodge No. 310 representatives will open the ceremony and other past exalted rulers of the Elks will present a special Garrison flag to the college.

Following, the national anthem and flag raising, distinguished guests, Lyle Smith, represents the BSC Athletic Department; Ranek Rein, Jr., President Bronco Athletic Association, William Hett President BSC Alumni Assoc. will be introduced.

Sharryl and David Macmillel whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Macmillan of Eagle, will represent the generations of students that are to come and be a part of this institution of higher learning. Other very distinguished guests will include T.G. Mahas, President of Skyline Construction Co., Nat Adams, a representative of Adams-Price Associates Architectural firm, President Elvon Hampton, President of the State Board of Education, Joe McCollum, Vice President of the State Board of Education and chairman of the executive committee for BSC, Dr. John B. Barnes President of Boise State College.

Some students encountered the problems of only applying for financial aid and not to attract new students.

The strict watch on priority entering the building helped to keep things running smoothly. The lines were unnecessary, Hunt feels. If students come only at their scheduled time, they will be able to enter the gym quickly.

A real problem was the seniors. They came in through the doors out of sequence and efficient distribution of packets was impossible.

Hunt will meet with administrations for a critique this week and final enrollment figures will be released later.

STUDENTS AID FROM MACHINES

Profits from campus vending machines, except those at the stadium have been earmarked for scholarships, the office of the President announced.

The scholarship money will be used to help students already enrolled at Boise State, and not to attract new students, officials said.

IT'S GETTING BETTER ALL THE TIME

"Hectic" is the way Guy Hunt, director of admissions, described registration last week.

Hunt is the key man in this year's registration program, and it was through his direction that many innovations came about. For instance, a system of relay teams and hot-line telephones replaced the loudspeaker and announcing class closures. Also, the data center devised a more efficient and simpler style packet.

Administrators and students were generally pleased with registration and events flowed smoothly. However, some problems were encountered.

Some students entered the back doors of the gym and picked up their class cards without their packets. Hunt feels tighter security should solve this type of problem.

Freshman had difficulty in getting the desired classes and hours, but this is due to lack of machins, not registration.

ARBITER

Vol. 3 No. 2

Friday September 11, 1970 Boise, Idaho
The Boise State College Homecoming Committee has scheduled J.B. King for October 22. The Arbiter is initiating a roving reporter feature this week and to start it off, this question was asked: "Have you ever heard of J.B. King, and how do you feel about his coming to Boise State for $8,000?"

Following are the replies of ten students:

Alexandra Watkinson: "Yes. He is worth $8,000."

Siegel Branson: "Yes, I am very, very excited. It is the first time a good musician will be on campus."

Jerry Stearns: "No. Well, hell, if he's good let him come."

Dwayne Flowers: "Right. He's worth $8,000. It's a long time coming. Should have gotten recognitions sooner."

A.J. Mitchell: "Yes. He ought to draw a large crowd, but I don't know if the college will like him. I know I do."

Kathy Orr: "No. B.B. King? They're gonna blow it again like they did last spring with Blood, Sweat and Tears."

Diana Ramey: "No. $8,000 just to sing? It's too much."

Richard Walker: "No. I'm glad I'm not footing all the bill."

Dean Butler: "No. I don't know what he does. I think it's a good idea, but too bad we have to in Three Dog Night."

Charlotte Ellis: "No. That's nice. Where are we going to get the money?"

Registration termed better at BSC

For a new student coming to a college campus the result can be at least frustrating and at worst mentally disastrous.

Yet Boise State College can boast of at least one plan that other institutions in the state do not have.

For example, Idaho State University has a registration process which uses the entire gymnasium complex and takes the better part of two or three hours. Connections done at the actual registration time. Students who are not fortunate enough to be assigned an early hour can expect to wait in line up to one full hour because of the "bottleneck" at the beginning of the whole affair. But that's not all.

It's easy to become lost in such a place, but at Boise State College you can get around in half the time.

All of this pertains to returning students. For the new and impressionable freshman, stepping into the institution, registration can take as long as four to six hours. Even at Boise State similar prices used to be heard. But times are changing and fortunately for the new student Boise State is also.

As a transfer student from ISU, this writer accomplished the "dreaded task" in a mere 40 minutes. Simplicity is beauty.

Demo Candidate Cecil Andrus
Answers Arbiter Election Questions

ARB: "Mr. Andrus, do you have any comment on speculation that BSC may gain university status in the foreseeable future?"

ANDRUS: "I think anyone who has been active in state politics or is knowledgeable in the field will recognize that BSC will soon be the largest institution in the state in regards to population, and we’ve got to prepare for this. I think it is very likely that in 10 years we may have reached the point where we will have only one university-type system. It’s not in the cards right now, there are too many pitfalls, too many expensive situations that this would create. I don’t think we can point this at any given time but sometimes in the foreseeable future, because you’re going to see a trend in federal aid that will be going toward universities, and

Endowment funds are wrapped up in this situation, but the local officials around the state do not want it to be a threat to its private colleges and universities. I think we’ve got to prepare for this, we’ve got to prepare for a cost to the state and for changes in the state that have to be made.

ARB: "That doesn’t seem to be an adequate supply of funds to the state for those who have gotten a college education. Most of Idaho’s graduates have to go elsewhere to seek employment which their qualifications most suit them. What steps would you take as governor to attract industry to Idaho?"

ANDRUS: "Industry is a pretty broad term. Are we talking about oil refining, mining industry, pollution industry, clean industry or are we talking about year-round employment? We have to look for full time employment by employers who will come into the state on the basis of becoming part of our community on the ground rules, and this includes pollution abatement procedures and the rest of the package.

ARB: "Boise has no real industrial, yet almost always we have smog. Do you intend to do anything about the establishment, emission controls for automobiles, for example, as cars are the prime source of air pollution?"

ANDRUS: "Air pollution and water pollution are of great concern to Idaho. We must protect what we have, and we must be resolute in what we have. We do not become a Los Angeles-type smog town or a against the other," but we aren’t at that point in time either so we’re going to have to take care of first things first. On a priority basis, and the challenge that faces BSC right now is that we’ve got to bring up the quality of undergraduate work so that the students get what they’re entitled to.

They have to have our comment on the future of education in Idaho, especially in regard to what I would call the "kinder gardens."

ANDRUS: "I supported establishing kindergartens to support the quality of the accelerated program and it is not that I’m against the other," but we aren’t at that point in time either so we’re going to have to take care of first things first. ANDRUS: "I supported establishing kindergartens to support the quality of the accelerated program and it is not that I’m continue on the same line. I feel they are a very necessary part of our overall educational program. They have to be state-supported kindergartens in order to give a uniform curriculum. We have kindergartens in Idaho now, but they’re at the lower part of the spectrum of ‘Head Start.’ The federal government is paying for it through the poverty program.

On the other hand we have kindergartens for the children of those who can afford to pay whatever it is to send their children to a kindergarten but what of all those in-between? They are the ones who are left out, and if you put it on a voluntary basis in the districts you are not going to change anything. Some districts will have it and some will not, and it won’t be the districts that suffer, it will be the children.

"It is necessary that the program be state-supported and that we go after it right now. It’s not going to get any cheaper if we wait five or ten years. And I think we should go after it right now.”

ARB: "What about the state’s educational system?"

ANDRUS: "If elected, I will immediately establish a group that will actively seek industry that will come in on our ground rules, because you have something here that’s valuable if we take care of it. That is our environment. Look at the Boise Cascade office building going up right here. They’re building here because of the air and the clean water and the Boise Basin and the Foothills and the hunting and fishing, the educational opportunities right here at BSC.

ARB: "What are your views on the indecencies war?"

ANDRUS: "I served my tour of duty in the Korean War and am familiar with the Asiatic mainland, and believe the United States cannot win a war unless it mobilizes the Asiatic mainland without using all the capabilities of the weapons that the U.S. has. Therefore, I’ve always opposed the war we have approached it from the military standpoint over there.

"I think you can sum it up by saying that we’ve got to resolve that problem, the sooner the better. We cannot continue to lose the banker off the police force of the world. How long can we continue at this pace? We let the problems we have to get ahead of us, and we push them aside while we continue to pour this money into a rat hole over there. We have to think of the balance between the problems over there and ours here."

ARB: "Mr. Andrus, do you have any comment on speculation that BSC may gain university status in the foreseeable future?"

ANDRUS: "No way. This is an area where I feel that we come to the formula distribution of funds and direct the funds to the young men and women who are students in institutions of education. "It doesn’t matter where they are geographically located. The only time you would get into something like that is at the higher level of graduate school. Then you could possibly as of today start talking about ‘at the expense of one
CONSUMER REPORT

by Gerry Locklear

In almost any credit transaction the creditor or lender will demand some form of security.

Security is something from which the lender can recover his moneys if the borrower fails to repay him in full. If borrowing from a friend or if you are using a charge account, the security is usually not going to be a very good credit rating. For a bank or credit union the security may be the signature of a friend or relative who acts as a co-signer. In this case, the co-signer agrees to accept responsibility for the unpaid balance of the loan if the borrower defaults payments.

Most often the creditor will demand a pledge of property as security. The security, commonly referred to as collateral, may be property the buyer owns, property to be purchased, or both. Also, in almost any credit transaction, the borrower will be asked to sign an agreement.

The two most common types of credit agreements are the conditional sales contract and the chattel mortgage.

The conditional sales contract is usually used when the seller is supplying the property and the goods being purchased are the security. The chattel mortgage is usually used when taking a loan from a money lender and the property is to be the property described in detail and hard to find himself. He finds himself drawn more and more to the protest rallies, meetings, and arguments rather than to buy their rhetoric as relevant to his own life.

Incidents build upon each other, in the cause. In the end a choice is demanded between all our young men and the noble idea. The hero chokes the noble route and from there on there is nothing but the sound of breaking glass.
DEAN HENDRY STRESSES INVOLVEMENT PHILOSOPHY

by Jane Dunn

Dr. W.T. Hendry, Dean of Student Personnel Services, is one administrator who really gets things done on the Boise State College Campus.

As he says, he just carries out the philosophy of the college as directed by President John Barnes, through coordination of student services. He has used his jurisdiction of the offices of Admissions and Records, Financial Aids, the Deans of Men and Women, High School and College Relations, Placement, Health Services, Housing, Student Activities and related campus organizations.

Hendry and his staff give the leadership and direction in advisory capacities to the Associated Students, campus organization leaders, the Alumni Association and the Student Union Management Board.

The Dean says his main function is to assure student desires are met, and see to it the college provides a real life situation for students. Another function of his office is to discipline discipline when school rules are broken.

He is chairman of the Student Conduct Board which was established to assure rights of students are protected. The Student Judicial Committee formulates disciplinary measures.

Another function of his office comes under the heading of financial aids. He has to authorize all student requisitions for money.

Dean Hendry comes from Florida and has obtained degrees from the University of Michigan and Arizona State. He has worked as a teacher and counselor in Florida, California, New Jersey and Idaho. He has instructed graduate students and seniors at UCLA.

He does observe Boise State compared with other schools after one year on campus? "It has the foundation of education. I find it very refreshing in terms of growth, motivation, students, faculty and staff."

"First there is the philosophical concept you don't find anywhere else. In most places you do not find this growth climate where students are given the opportunity to get involved."

The greatest challenge this year he says is "to provide an all-service area to fit the needs of the students." Hendry says in the socialization process administrators are supportive of academic programs.

Since housing is one of the most controversial issues on campus, Dean Hendry was asked what is being done. Why was the stadium built instead of erecting student housing? He says buildings are planned on priority basis. The stadium was on the architects boards for years, and has just become a reality.

Student housing is being provided on and off campus. The new women's dorm will be completed next year, and when the complex is finished, six towers of living quarters will grace the campus. He stresses much time is required for even purchasing furniture for example Bronco Center. From the time all the fixtures are ordered and installed, furnishing can take as much as six months time.

Dean Hendry is coordinating the registration evaluation. He says, "I think registration went well this year because the procedure was aided by student requests."

This week all the deans of the different schools within 3SC conferred to evaluate the system. Students have been contacted for their opinions. The end product is to propose recommendations for the spring semester.

Dean Hendry says he feels student government is becoming more effective. "Student organizations should be run by students, and you get a lot more education outside the classroom. Ninety percent does not come out of the textbook."

Dean Hendry sees the objectives of the college in "First education. We are faced with growing pains. We must adjust to meet changing demands. People will get involved when they find a meaningful idea."

A second objective is to identify students' needs and provide the vehicles where those needs can be expressed. Dean Hendry's definition of education is "an ever growing expanding experience, new dealings in human relations to provide security for individuals."

He says when you provide a climate like Boise State's, big excitement with pure adult relationships happens. The Student Personnel Service is there to ask how they can help to make people more productive. Hendry says the goal this year is to motivate students through involvement.

McKelvey proceeded to tackle such subjects as civic, commercial and anthropology with vigour, and the result of it was the one thing a comic wants -- laughter. It's safe to say that Yarborough has made another big discovery. The singing tenor helped the well-known Still Rose on his way to the top in the comedy realm -- and a pay name Still Cosby got his start with the folk singing touring body once upon a time. But, as the saying goes, on with the show.

There was this blues singer who plays the guitar. His productions of "Ahleuie" -- Trans continental Blues" and the shows similar likenesses to another blues artist here-to-before mentioned. And, oddly enough, Josh White is considered by Anderson as one of several good friends he has in the business. Not that this bit of information has anything to do with a review of a concert, but it is helpful when one considers individual style, and Anderson has plenty of it.

Performing artists undergo rugged conditions when they are on the road. It was under the two artists lasted as long as they did in BSC's archaic structure called a gymnasium that they did. It was clear physical conditions were far from being adequate. At this juncture it is appropriate to add a suggestion or two.

Although conditions are such it is difficult to stage such presentations because of bulky construction. It would seem the Student Union Ballroom would be more applicable for such concerts. Even more ideal would be the Capital High School Auditorium. Such a sort of an agreement might be reached by officials of the two institutions for the future.

Due to those who missed the so-called "low budget" entertainment, a word to the wise. Next time it comes around, take it in. You may priz.

MEET MISS BSC

Roll out the red carpet for the 1970-71 Miss Boise State College -- Miss Julie Ricchins. Julie is a 5'4" blue-eyed b.o.d., and a sophomore at Boise State. A 1969 graduate of Nampa High School, Julie is presently lining in Boise with her parents, the Robert Ricchins of 7016 Manarow.

Julie's reign as Miss Boise State began last April when she was selected from 2 groups of girls by an interview process. Along with title came a $600 wardrobe for the Miss Idaho Pagent a full-year Boise State tuition, and a trophy. Miss BSC's duties include representing the college, vying for the title of Miss Idaho, and carrying out other duties as named by the Associated Student Body. Other than having to relinquish her title, Julie is looking forward to the next Miss BSC competition in April as an official pageant will be held.

Hobbies of our Miss BSC include snow skiing, painting and drawing, and attending spectator sports. Modern dancing, her Miss Idaho Pagent talent, is also a favorite pastime. Julie is also a member to the Alpha Chi Omega sorority on campus.

Attention: P.E. Majors. Uniforms are now on sale in Mr. Bowman's office in the gym, 3:00 tp 5:00 p.m. on weekdays.

Scores Big

by Brent Peterson

Add a very funny fellow and a swinging blues singer on the order of Josh White Jr. and the result is a hilarious musical ball for some two hours.

The first concert of the season, sponsored by the Associated Students, was called a "low budget" type. After the disaster of last spring, it is indicated by several student officials that this is the direction entertainment at Boise State should move. At first thought, the idea of low budget entertainment turns one cold. As it happens, one thinks low budget entertainment means poor attractions. But such is not the case, and the George McKelvey-K.C. Anderson fare was far from being a poor attraction, and that's an understatement.

McKelvey got his start with Glen Yarborough and spent most of the last year on tour with the folk-singing star. Now he is on his own and "has his own car," when you couple good humor with solo performances you're bound to obtain funny results and McKelvey is no exception.

"The best comedy takes off on people," claims the Philadelphia-born artist. "talking to people about people relieves the daily pressure that goes with life."

If that sounds philosophically, it was meant to be just that. In an interview with the young comedian last year at Idaho State University, this writer found our performer in good spirits and, at the same time, that comment seems to be right on the mark. It is a commentary on modern life.

But that's an understatement.

Enthusiasm

Enthusiasm towards Boise State College's first football game in the new Bronco Stadium is growing, according to Sandy Ogden, secretary of the Athletic department. Season tickets sales for the coming Bronco football games have far exceeded last years. The tickets went on sale August 1 and will continue to be sold for $20 until sold out.

Students with BSC cards will be admitted free to home games. Guests of students will be charged $1. Seating for all students will be on the east side of the new stadium.

The west side of the stadium is for general admission, $2 per ticket, and the reserved section $4 per ticket. Tickets for all Bronco home games may be obtained at the BSC athletic department office in the new Varsity Center. Further information is available by calling 440-1632.

Several special memberships in clubs are available by contacting the athletic business office at the Varsity Center. Presidents Club is a special covered section on the west side, center section. Selected seating arrangements, plus designated parking offered in the Buckaroo Club. BAA membership offers an opportunity to support BSC athletic programs as well as voting on "Player of the Week." For information on how to join, call 286-1285.

All Bronco games, home and away, are broadcast live and direct on KIDO Radio in Boise. Dial 620 AM for all the action.

Tuesday, Sept. 20

A self-confident attitude will come about and many will find favorable opportunities. Certain problems will give answers that have previoously been elusive. Optimism is high.

Wednesday, Sept. 21

Introspection may replace the outward attitude of yesterday, but new activity is still emphasized. Be cautious not to overwork or worry. Dependability is the key word.

BARGAIN?

... only a professional knows

Today, all diamonds have determinable value. If a stone has any worthy quality to it, a jeweler can obtain the standard price for it and doesn't need to sell it to you "wholesale." Many so-called 'bargains' diamonds have first been marked up in order to be "shocked down." It is no more to buy your diamond from a reputable firm with experienced purchase and appraisal than it is to buy a camera from a reputable firm with experienced knowledge of photography.

BOISE STATE COLLEGE TO PLAY FOR FIRST TIME IN BIG SKY CONFERENCE

by Bob Radloff
Abiriter Sports Editor

Boise State College takes the cover off of a new season and stadium. The Broncos for the first time will be playing as a member of the Big Sky Conference.

According to Jim Fancher, BSC Sports Information Director, Boise State hosts Chico State College of California, a member of the Far West Conference. The Wildcats finished second last year with a 9-1 record.

Chico has 23 returning lettermen to form a nucleus. Two All-star candidates to watch are Channey Turnbow, halfback, and Dennis Scott, defensive lineman. Turnbow, 5-10 190 lbs., was the leading rusher last year in the conference with 1140 yards. Scott is 6-1, and weighs 225 lbs.

Defenders to watch are Randy "The Fleece" Washington, a 6-1 151 lb. linebacker, and Dewey Williams, 6-1 212 lbs., defensive end. Jim Andrews, 5-9 163 lbs., will be at the helm as quarterback. Norris Sadler, 5-11 190 lbs., will be running free the fullback spot. Steve Sheldrake will be starting at a linebacker spot on defense.

Newcomers to the squad are Bob Stone, 6-2 and 250 lbs. defensive tackle, Al Davenport, 6-3 250 lb. offensive tackle, and Jewell McCullar, 6-2 230 lb. linebacker.

Boise State College faces Boise State University when the team faces Union High School at 7:15 p.m., and kickoff immediately follows.

Attention: Physical Education Majors. There will be a meeting for persons interested in a P.E. Majors Club Monday, Sept. 11, at 7:00 p.m. in the gymnasium.

Broncos are Ready to Play in New Arena

by Tony Smith
Arbiter Sports Writer

Boise State's Broncos are straining at the reins in expectation of thundering down on the new Astro Turf football field for the new season.

Hordes of spectators as well as players will provide the new Boise State football complex with its first grueling workout tonight at 8 p.m. as the Broncos host Chico State in the season's first gridiron battle.

According to Jim Faucher, Sports Information Director for BSC, there are 52 returning varsity players and 43 prospective freshmen.

The Broncos had a 9-1 winning season last year with the offense piling up 19 touchdowns to eight for their opponents.

Season points for the opposition totaled 105 points, to the Broncos' 306 points. In passing BSC completed 105 of 249 attempts to 93 completions of 313 attempts by other teams.

Bronco gridders pounded out 167 first downs in comparison to 117 from opponents. The gap widened in total yardage as the opposition came up with 2169 yards by the hooves of scrabbling Broncos with 579 yards added by punt returns alone and 489 yards pushed upon kickoff returns.

If the statistics are to be as good as they were last year, the new stadium should prove to be beneficial.

Players will not be plagued by uncertain weather conditions, mud, dirt or snow.

The playing field is made of billions of tiny grasslike fibers of nylon, very similar to foliage on manufactured Christmas trees. The field costs $300,000 and is nearly indestructible. It will withstand all the temperatures weather has to offer and will take the punishment of pounding feet and sprawling bodies.

Thirty to forty thousand gallons of water are needed to wash the green rug, and unless it is dried and the water worked out, it is capable of holding approximately ten thousand gallons of water.

Surrounding the playing field is a track of rubberized asphalt as flexible as a hard mattress.

The stadium is expected to seat about 14,500 people. Current seating plans call for students to sit in the stands on the east side of the field.

with the general admission persons sitting on the west side.

Students will be admitted to the games on activity cards, and with an extra dollar, dates and friends will be admitted.

The architecture of the stadium has included spacious walking areas under the stands as well as a walk-way entrance to the second story.

Radiating heat will be a feature to some spectators as heating units will be placed on the underside of the overlap on the second story.
