New Stadium Promotes Win Over Chico State

Football fans numbering 14,028 watched Boise State College defeat Chico State last Friday night in the first game to be played in the new Bronco Stadium.

Opening night attendance was the largest ever to watch a BSC football game. Capacity of the stadium was almost reached, and plans are being formulated to expand seating capacity to at least 25,000 by adding an upper deck on the east side. A horseshoe on the south end is also planned.

In dedication ceremonies preceeding the 49-14 Bronco victory, the Association of Past Exalted Rulers of Boise Elk's Lodge 210 presented a Garrison Flag to the school for use at all athletic contests. The flag has a 20-foot hoist and a 30-foot fly. It was carried onto the Astro Turf by 16 past exalted rulers.

The ceremonies were conducted under the score-board on the south end of the field. Earl Kirkpatrick, past exalted ruler, represented the Past Exalted Rulers Association, as he gave the flag to ASB President Wayne Mittleider.

In the short ceremony those introduced were Lyle Smith, representing the Boise State athletic department; Wanek Stein Jr., Bronco Athletic Association president; Nat Adams, architect for the new stadium; T.G. Mahas, contractor for the complex; William Ilett, president of the Alumni Association; David and Shary McMillan, representing future students; Elvon Hampton, Chairman of the State Board of Education; BSC President Dr. John Barnes; Boise Mayor

Jay Anyx; and Gov. Don Samuelson.

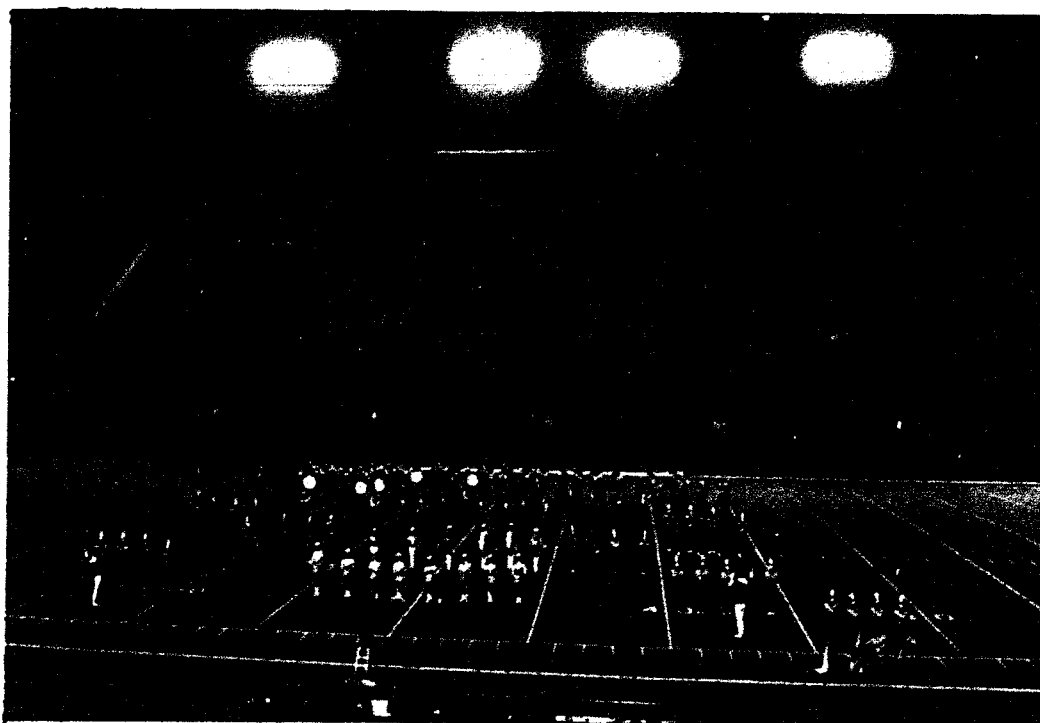

ASB President Wayne Mittleider dedicated the stadium saying it marks the beginning of progress for BSC and the state of Idaho. He said, "I am proud to present Bronco Stadium which was completely financed with student funds." He said closing the purpose of the ceremonies was to be short to get on with the gridiron action. He introduced Dr. Barnes.

He said, "Boise State and the state of Idaho are indeed proud of this fine facility dedicated today, and we are extremely grateful to the student body of this college for financing the Stadium and Varsity Center."

"The students of Boise State are also, through a student fee revenue bond, paying the entire cost of constructing and equipping the School of Business Building and about 50 per cent of the cost of our new Vocational-Technical Building and the total cost of the Physical Education addition.

"No longer can we say that students have their hands out. Boise State students are indeed providing recreational and educational facilities for themselves and for the future students who will attend this college."

He extended his thanks to Skyline Construction Co., for an excellent job done on a restricted time schedule. He presented gold and silver belt buckles to Mittleider and ASB Vice President Leland Macey.

Mishap Mars Dedication

The Boise State College Bronco Stadium Dedication ceremonies were marred Friday as Wally Benton, president of the BSC Skydivers Club, plummeted to the ground during an exhibition.

As more than 14,000 football fans watched, Benton made what appeared to be a perfect descent from his Cessna 172 plane. As he floated below the upper deck of the stadium, his Paraplane chute tossed him back and forth as if he were on a string, and he crashed to the ground.

Upon impact, Benton lay motionless as stunned spectators looked on. Fellow skydivers, police, school personnel and medical assistants ran to the scene of the accident. Moments later an ambulance pulled down the asphalt track, lifted Benton on to a stretcher and sped out of the stadium to St. Alphonsus Hospital.

He was to have presented the game ball for the first gridiron action in the new stadium. Moments later from 11,500 feet in the sky three other parachutists, Larry Honstad, Gary Gray and Tom Sullivan, successfully landed in Bronco stadium, unaware of the accident. Officials failed to notify them in time not to make the jumps.

Sunday Honstad said the probable cause of the mishap was a wrong turn on Benton's part. He said the Paraplane chute is a new innovation for the BSC skydivers, and they have been using them for one month. The cutaway equipment has been out on the market about one year.

Honstad added Benton had been in Europe this summer jumping with the new craft and reported no difficulty. It was speculated a cross current may have caused the chute to somersault, but he said the Paraplane would have easily maneuvered the wind and gone through.

Tuesday Benton was listed in Satisfactory condition at St. Alphonsus, and plans were being readied for insurance claims. Dr. W.W. Hendry, Dean of Student Personnel Services, said 27-year old Benton has Blue Cross insurance through the student plan at BSC, and other arrangements are being worked out under the school insurance program.

During a visit with Benton Tuesday, Hendry said he is responding to treatment. Both of his legs have compound fractures, and he is suffering head injuries.

He said there is a chance his right leg will mend properly without bone grafts. At this time doctors say both limbs are in satisfactory recovery condition.

He suggested that flowers, gifts and letters not be sent for another week. At this time only family members are being admitted to visit with Benton. He said notification will be made when Benton may receive messages and visitors.

Before a stunned crowd, Wally Benton lies unconscious after crashing to the ground during pre-game ceremonies.

Black Studies

by Sharon Barnes

Why is a Black studies program being initiated at BSC when the campus is predominately white? According to Mark Hansen, English and Afro-American Literature instructor at BSC, the Black Studies course can "contribute to understanding between people." "Recognition that's long overdue, the fact that Black Americans exist in this country," in another important aspect of Black Studies noted by Hansen.

"We live in a country that was built by many races, by many nationalities and it is important to recognize the distribution of these people," Hansen said.

When asked how he felt about being a white instructor and teaching a Black studies course, Hansen stated, "Ideally we should have a Black teacher. It is unfortunate that it is going to take a course to cause integration. It's a shame we don't integrate the faculty without this."

Because of the present Black population in this area, Hansen doesn't envision a BA degree being offered in Black studies at BSC. However, he noted some growth in the Black studies area.

Presently the Afro-American Literature is a special topic course in the experimental state. After one or two semesters, the course may become a regular catalogue item if student and evaluation work justify the need for the course.

Other Black studies courses to be offered at BSC soon include "Black Novelists, Civil War to Present," taught by Glen Selander; "Minority Response," instructed by Bob Corbin, Sociology Department; and Non-Western World Literature which includes Asia and African Literature to be taught by Dr. Eunice Wallace.

Hansen also noted plans for a teacher education course revolving around the relationship of teachers to minority students.

Black students at BSC and members of the Black community were very important in initiating this program. Posters with messages such as WE'RE BLACK AND PROUD! FIND OUT WHAT BLACK AMERICANS ARE PROUD OF, and LET'S NOT TALK IT, LET'S KNOW IT, were put up by Black students.

Students posters and efforts have proven successful in initiating excitement about the course. The class was closed temporarily after 70-80 students enrolled.

Hansen said the Afro-American Literature course will satisfy the requirement in American Literature for the B.A. degree at BSC. Described as an intensive survey of literature including essays, novels, and drama by Black authors, the Afro-American Literature course will include as much historical context as possible.

Hansen stated, "The Black studies program is going to enlighten white people that want to understand. The courses will widen and broaden cultural horizons of whites. Whites, as well as Black students will want to read novels, and essays they've never read before because of our predominately white culture." Hansen noted a healthy educational impact of white students.

When asked his personal feelings in seeing Black studies come to BSC, Hansen concluded, "I am excited it's a good thing. I think anything that makes our curriculum more honest in the sense that it offers what should be offered, is good because education is supposed to give us an educationally broad culture."

Student Senate Reports

The lack of a quorum prevented an official Student Senate meeting from being called Tuesday, but several committee reports were given. Ed Weber, BSC Social Chairman, said he expects a "fantastic homecoming" this year. B. B. King will perform at the Homecoming dance concluding the week of events from Oct. 16-24. Weber also noted that no tests or exams were to be given during homecoming week this year.

Entertainment included in Weber's plans are two performances by Doc Severenson, for $13,500 in February, a group called Smith, Sept. 30, student charge $1.50, and possibly a performance by Agnes Moorehead in December for $8,000.

Dee Cazler, ASB treasurer, reported that no Financial Board has been appointed. He plans to wait until Senate elections are completed.

Wayne Mittleider, ASB president, pointed out that committees including those on pollution, environment, homecoming, constitutional revision, and a Board of Governors to run the SUB would be appointed after Senate elections because Senate members must

Mary Saunders assistant to the Dean of Women

"My job exists because there are young adults on this campus," says Mary K. Saunders, assistant to the Dean of Women at BSC as she expressed her position as one of facilitating and initiating ideas of students.

"Communication is a two-way street. There should be no break between faculty, administration and students."

She is involved in the residence hall program at BSC and states, "Residence halls are a 24 hour a day education. It is the first time students are exposed to particular beliefs and ways of life. Individuals learn a level of tolerance and understanding."

Miss Saunders attended the University of Oregon, where she received her MA degree in Student Personnel Administration and counseling, and a B.S. in Psychology, University of Heidelberg, Heidelberg, Germany, and Pepperdine College, Los Angeles, Calif.

She has experience in counselling, Panhellenic, research and specialized training in universal student activism, residence halls, student activities and work with foreign students.

People top the list of interests and hobbies she enjoys and she expresses interest in the individual.

Miss Saunders expresses her reaction to BSC as an "exposure to a new developing and exciting college that's not just turning out people, but individualized students with a sense of realism."

Celebration Audition

Readings and auditions for the musical comedies THE FANTASTICKS and CELEBRATION will begin on Monday night, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m. in Room 111 in the Music-Drama Annex. Auditions will continue the following night at the same time and also Wednesday if necessary.

Dr. R. Ericson who will direct the two shows stressed that all BSC students are eligible to participate. "There are a lot of parts to be filled," he said, "and we urge any interested student to come. There are non-singing roles as well as singing ones. We hope for a lot of new faces at the auditions."

The two musicals will open on Nov. 26 and will run on alternate nights until Dec. 11 for a total of sixteen performances. The Theatre Arts Department is providing another opportunity for many students to work on the productive end of the theatre.

Ray Wolfe assistant to the Dean of Men

Mr. Raymond Wolfe, assistant to the Dean of Men at BSC, views student involvement in administrative posts as "great."

"Communication wise it is fantastic for students to handle their own problems."

Wolfe, who is filling a new position offered for the first time at BSC, points out there is no problem involved in getting to talk to administrators at Boise State. He notes that sometimes it is easier for students to communicate with young people they feel will accept their views more openly.

When asked about his philosophy concerning student involvement, Wolfe states that he views education as two-fold, academic and social. He feels students should become involved in as much of the social aspect of education as possible without jeopardizing academic performance.

Wolfe says he is presently involved in coordinating fraternities and establishing an Inter-Fraternity Council on campus which would relieve the Dean of Men's office of managing fraternities.

After graduating from BSC Wolfe plans to attend graduate school and possibly obtain a M.A. in Student Personnel and Education.

Wolfe says, "BSC is a school to be proud of, and students should take pride and become involved."

EXIT CONTROL!

"May I check your books? Will you open your briefcase, please?"

Students using the library can expect to be asked these questions by new department personnel in "Exit Control."

"Exit Control" started when the librarians took inventory last June. Their findings discovered 2,751 volumes missing, which is four percent of the book collection.

"Really, it's carelessness, not willful, wanton stealing," says circulation librarian Beverly Miller. "It's very easy to set your books down on another library book, pick the whole stack up and walk away. Actually, the book check is more of a reminder than a search."

Some students feel the check infringes on their personal rights. Declares Miss Miller, "We're just trying to prevent a minority of students from taking from the majority. If a student is found with a book, no bells will ring, he won't be handcuffed, humiliated or punished in any way."

Volumes most often lost include fiction and books on drugs, sex, Yoga, and sports. Often whole sets of books are taken, leaving students who need those works for research without materials.

Though "Exit Control" will be permanent, the library needs the help of individual students in detecting missing materials. A student who cannot find a book should check at the circulation desk to find out if the book is already checked out. This is the only way librarians can identify and replace missing volumes.

lyrics of many of the songs our youth are liberally inundated with each day. For example, Spiro cited a song by the Beatles called, "With a Little Help From My Friends." The Beatles state herein that they "Get high with a little help from my friends," and Spiro concludes with conservative but irrefutable logic that friends must mean drugs, at least to him.

Getting into high gear he then mentioned several other songs which blatantly suggest the putrescent glories of the degradative drug culture. "White Rabbit," "Eight Miles High," and "The Acid Queen" were mentioned as well as some with titles which would almost invoke cold turkey symptoms in many of the less enlightened members of our society.

Luckily for my readers, I happen to know many of the lyrics to "The Acid Queen," sung by a mysterious group known only as the Who. (We know who.) First, the seller, the acid queen, is made appealing to the listener with the line, "I'm the gypsy, the acid queen, pay before we start," indicating that drug pushers are really people you can love and trust.

Further along in the song is the line, "His head, it shakes, his fingers clutch, watch his body writhe." Presenting such a pleasant description of a trip is only one of countless references in rock music to the counterfeit euphoria of these drugs of the bogus liberal quasi-pseudos. (Only a few are born with a natural fluence with these words.)

As you can plainly see, Spiro hit it right on the back of the head with these songs, but I feel he stopped too early, probably because of his conservative good taste. My public should be warned of other songs that they must not listen to if they value their freedom.

"Cold Turkey" by the Plastic Ono Band is perhaps the worst of the lot with even the title suggesting a drug experience familiar to many drug users. The lyrics go on to purport the joys of cold turkey with lines like, "Prayin' to someone to free me again," and "I'll promise you anything to get me out of this hell." How blatant can you get? I tell you these songs promise your children experiences we all realize are false and incompatible with the American way of life.

"Bridge over Troubled Waters" is another song with a catchy tune which Spiro, in his conservative wisdom, has refrained from properly castigating during his Las Vegas speech. It cannot be refuted that over is a high word. Even garbled liberals cannot refute that; though many will try, indubitably.

To our youth, whether they know it or not, a bridge is a drug experience which roughly translated means rising above one's problems through a drug induced high or bridge.

If you would like further information on these and other songs of the swishy left, please write for my free booklet. (Please enclose $10 for handling and mailing charges). Songs listed and ripped off in this book include the "Star Spangled Banner" (bombs bursting in air, etc.), and "Three Little Fishies," a sex bespattered hit of yesteryear.

Consumer Report

by
Gerry Locklear

1970 is not a good year to buy a new car. Sticker prices are up an average of $121, the steepest increase in new car prices in 13 years.

Buyers with the money and patience to shop carefully may be able to find bargains that partially offset inflationary increases. The really alert consumer can drive some hard bargains if his main interest is in practical, more reasonably priced transportation.

If you must buy a new car, though you would be far wiser to buy a good used one, there are ways of avoiding being taken for a ride.

A Federal Trade Commission survey made last year showed that 71 percent of new cars were sold at prices from $200 to $800 lower than the bottom sticker price, and an additional 11 percent were sold at discounts ranging from $800 to $1,000. Virtually all full-sized cars and intermediates were sold at discounts greater than 5 percent. Half the full-sized models were at prices from 15 to 20 percent less than sticker price. About 60 percent of the intermediates went for prices 10 to 15 percent below sticker prices. This time of year the careful buyer can do even better.

In late summer-early fall the situation in the new car business is something like this: Salesmen are anxious to get rid of this year's cars and to prepare the public for next year's models. This is called in the trade the "annual auto cleanup" or "year-end clearance."

There are a number of reasons why you will be able to get a new car at its lowest price of the year.

1. Many models are a drug on the market. It's easier to let them go for a lower price than usual just to get rid of them.

2. Manufacturers give rebates to dealers on autos sold during the "cleanup". The average rebate is $200, but it can run much higher on more expensive models.

3. In a few weeks it will be "last year's car", worth about $700 less for a compact and as much as $2,000 less for luxury cars due to depreciation.

Before you start to buy figure how much the car cost the dealer; then figure roughly how much profit he's trying to make and decide for yourself whether you think it's excessive. To do this, take the bottom sticker price and subtract the transportation charge from it. Then for an intermediate car (and the Chevy NOVA, a compact, and the AMC AMBASSADOR, a full-sized car) take 81 1/2 percent of the remainder; for full-sized cars other than the AMC AMBASSADOR take 78 percent of the remainder; for compacts other than the NOVA take 85 percent of the remainder.

Then add the transportation charge. The result will be very close to what the car cost the dealer.

Whatever customers agree to pay, they should beware of signing blank contracts. They are apt to find their "bargain" price has been hiked. In August 1969 the license of a Detroit dealer was suspended after buyers complained they had been victimized. One buyer signed a blank contract after agreeing orally to pay $5,505 only to find that the price was later filled in as $6,256.

One usually good buy is a demonstration car. Ordinarily well cared for and loaded with optional equipment, these cars are often the last to be sold, but often go at prices well below cleanup levels. Most dealers get a five cent rebate from the maker for every mile shown on the odometer of their demonstrators and may be willing to pass the savings to the customer. For example, a $3,100 Chevy Impala with 5,000 miles may cost the dealer only $2,075, since he gets a $250 allowance for the mileage on top of his usual $775 discount on the car. One possible drawback to buying demonstrators is that warranty coverage has been shortened by several months while the dealer has been using it.

Sell your old car yourself instead of trading it in. No matter how good the condition of the trade-in, dealers pay only rock bottom prices which are set at wholesale auctions. If a car's wholesale value is $800, a dealer may offer his customer $1,000 trade in, then tack $200 to the price of the new car to make up the difference.

Local conditions vary, but nationally Chrysler and American face the biggest clean-up problem. Chrysler is overstocked with both standard and top-of-the-line Plymouths and Dodges, partly because GM has made inroads into Chrysler's share of the market among taxi and car rental companies.

If the car you want is in short supply, as was the Ford Maverick last year, you can't expect as good a deal. With demand high you'll pay top dollar or close to it.

Buy a car sitting on the lot; don't order one. The dealer has money tied up in it that he's paying interest on. He may give you a better than average deal just to be able to unload it.

Review: Woodstock

by Terry Ertter

"By the time we got to Woodstock, we were half a million strong," go the lyrics to the popular song. There weren't quite half a million last Saturday night at the Fairview Cinema but, just like the original, there were too many people at Woodstock (the movie).

The problem was, basically, that nobody went home after the six o'clock show and the nine thirty people were left standing out in the cold. The manager invited us into the lobby and promised a special showing to those who got in late. Everyone plunked down on the carpet and shared food and conversation, getting into the general spirit of the thing. Still nobody seemed to be leaving the show and after an hour we gave up and went home, vowing to give Woodstock the worst reviews ever witnessed by man.

Nevertheless, we returned Sunday to the most peaceful, easygoing, beautiful movie I've ever seen. The movie captured a spirit which could never have been portrayed by professional actors with pre-written lines. The split screening photography has the effect of presenting two shows in one and lets the viewer choose his own focal point instead of having to rely on the cameraman's preferences.

The show is so easygoing that you feel as if you are right there smoking dope and playing in the mud. You don't get overloaded with any single phase of the happening unless, of course, you don't happen to like rock music or weirdo freaks. I dig both so naturally the movie kept my interest.

Aside from the natural beauty of the event, the photography is the most outstanding feature of the show. Split-screening and color lenses work with an occasional splash of slow motion to batter your eyeballs into submission.

Public address announcements are seldom even a minor highlight of anything but some of the gems in Woodstock turned out to be A-1 show stealers. The ad-lib dialogues between the filming crew and the various participants added still more to the color and humor of an already colorful event.

The port-o-san toilet dialogues will probably take their place with the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet as one of the most charming scenes in the history of the spoken arts.

It would probably be unwise to leave out a comment about the music since that was the basic premise of the whole show. What can a native Bozeman say about the music of a good chunk of the top groups in the world. They were superb.

One of my major goals in life has always been to see the Who perform anything and they are the most intense performers imaginable. Jimi Hendrix fought the entire Revolutionary War while playing the "Star Spangled Banner" on guitar and nearly wiped out four Redcoats in a neighboring town.

Suffice it to say that everybody else was fantastic since it is not practical or wise to rave about all the groups that deserve it in an eight page newspaper. Anyway, I have to go to class so take a sleeping bag and provisions with you and go see Woodstock. It's that good.

Delta Delta Delta plans...

An olive green house on the left-hand side of Lincoln Avenue is the setting for one of the five Greek sororities, Delta Delta Delta.

Composing the sorority are fourteen members, seven of whom live in the house, and sixteen pledges. Officers for the year include Julie Lachiondo, president, Laurie Stewart, vice president and pledge trainer; Recording Secretary Julie Shelton; Joan Richardson, treasurer, and Katie Pence, Chaplain.

Purpose and goals of Tri-Delta are to get the girls involved in Boise State College, give them an exposition to cultural things, and help them keep an interest in college. Sorority life is social training, and many activities are planned.

Events planned by Delta Delta Delta include the homecoming dinner at the house, participation in all homecoming activities, general school activities, a founders day celebration, a Halloween party and caroling party.

B.A.A. Flavors of the week

Eric Guthrie and John Walker were voted the outstanding offensive and defensive players of the week by the Bronco Athletic Association, Monday during a BAA luncheon.

Guthrie passed 25 times connected on 10 for 190 yards. He also ran for another and was seven for seven on conversion attempts.

John Walker was selected for his sparkling defensive plays. He made 10 tackles for the night from his middle linebacker spot.

The coaching staff was introduced to the crowd of more than 100 persons. Dave Nickel narrated the game film, and George Squire gave a short scouting report on Eastern Montana.

All BAA members and friends are welcome to attend the noon luncheon held each Monday at the Elks Ballroom.

BSC to face Eastern Mont.

With a win tucked under the Bronco's belt, BSC will meet Eastern Montana College Sept. 19, 8 p.m. at Bronco Stadium.

Eastern Montana College is located in Billings, Montana and has an enrollment of 4,000. Last year in the Frontier Conference the Yellowjackets had a 4-1 standing and in overall play, a 5-4 standing for the season.

Coming to Boise with an 0-1 record for the year, Eastern Montana is out to even their record with a win. The Yellowjackets lost to Kearney College 44-7.

First game jitters seemed to be the name of the game as Kearney intercepted Eastern Montana five times. Also in that game Yellowjacket Mike Smith was hurt and will be out of the lineup against Boise.

Many changes in the lineup for Eastern Montana are planned for the BSC game to solve some of the problems they had last week. Taking over the reigns of quarterback will be Ron Bayduke, a newcomer to the team. Changes in the backfield will be made to give the team more speed and ball handling.

Eastern Montana has many outstanding letterman returning from last year such as Lynn Ahrens, end, Stephen Conover, fullback, James Dow, tackle Larry Hanft, end, Tim Morrow, end, John Semansky, end, Wayne Smith, tackle, and Paul Snyder, tackle.

With an experienced defense and new changes in the offense for Eastern Montana, the game between Boise State College and Montana should be an exciting encounter.

Wrestling gets underway

Wrestling season will get underway Dec. 4 as the Boise State College grapplers take on Brigham Young University and Ricks College in a triangular meet.

Until then head BSC coach Bill C. Bowman will be busy shaping up the wrestling team and working out the "bugs".

In a recent interview with Coach Bowman, he had this to say about the team: "We have returning lettermen in nearly all weight classes, and have several outstanding freshmen and transfers to fill in the gaps. With entrance into the Big Sky Conference and the advent of more difficult opponents, we are looking forward to an exciting wrestling season."

The coach also stated that he expected many football players to turn out after the gridiron season, which would strengthen the heavier weight classes.

Some of the outstanding wrestlers according to Coach Bowman in many of the weight classes are Ron Thompson, wrestling in the 118 pound bracket, a former Boise High School graduate, and Brad Gardner, also in the 118 pound class from Idaho Falls that took second in State while in high school. Tom Harrington, Wyoming State Champ, is wrestling at 126. Harrington, wrestling in Japan, was a member of the Japan Foreign Exchange Team last summer.

Jawn Stockdale, a freshman, is on the weight scale at 142. He has taken 2nd in Oregon State for two years and 3rd in Oregon free-style for one year. He also participated in the Mexico Foreign Exchange Wrestling Team.

Tipping the scales in the 150 bracket is junior Bruce Edgerton who is a two time state champ, and who placed 3rd in the Boise Invitational and Beehive Invitational in 1969.

First in Boise Invitational last year was Bruce White, a returning senior this year.

Mike Edmundson, a sophomore, wrestles in the 191 bracket and last year placed 3rd in both the Boise Invitational and Beehive Invitational.

Also in the 191 weight bracket is Dave Steppe, a returning state champion and a transfer from Treasure Valley College.

In the Heavy Weight division, from Avastburg, Germany, is Ron Owens, an all Europe Gold Medalist.

CrossCountry season opens

On Oct. 3 the BSC cross country team will open their 1970 Season in Pocatello in a five-mile race.

Most of the team's matches will be five-mile runs while home meets will only be four-mile runs.

Ray Lewis, coach of the cross country team, states that although this year's team consists of higher quality men. He is not sure of beating last year's record of 5-1 because they have a more rigid schedule.

Of the nine men on the team Lewis is looking for the most help from freshman Harry Ottey, Ron Strand and transfer students Scott Loyd. Other members include returnees Herb Glassen, Alex Vlazzonek, freshmen Doug Louis, Mike Dille and Briant Conpton and another transfer, Jim Berwald.

Head Coach Tony Knap

by Tony Smith
Arbiter Sports Writer

Recently this reporter interviewed Boise State College Bronco head football Coach Tony Knap to bring to light the nature of his paralysis, which has only slightly hampered his ability to run a football team.

According to Knap, he is battling a virus called Herpes Zoster. This virus is in the same family that causes mononucleosis, chicken pox and fever blisters.

Earlier this year Coach Knap experienced the Herpes virus which brought on a mild sickness called "Shingles," an infection of the sensory nerves. He recovered from the shingles in two weeks.

It was after his recovery from the shingles that the paralysis set in. First he suffered from pain in the lower back and then the inability to move his muscles. This trend continued until it reached its stabilizing point, at which time he was unable to move from his breast bone down.

He was examined by 30 neurosurgeons in Salt Lake City. It was discovered he has Herpes Zoster, and the paralysis was due to an allergic reaction to the virus causing swelling in the spinal cord.

As the swelling continued, electrical impulses from the brain to the muscles could not get through. The swelling reduced the polarity of the nerve cells in the spine to such a degree the impulses could not pass.

Consequently he has no muscle action outside of sporadic muscle spasms caused when the dormant muscles try to send messages to the brain requesting movement. In a reactionary response an impulse is sent to the muscle from the base of the spine where there is no swelling. The result is a muscle spasm which will help slow the deterioration of the muscle.

While in Salt Lake the coach had several spinal taps. Neurosurgeons are attempting to grow cultures of the Herpes Zoster virus. As of press time the results are unavailable.

The tests will show how critically the virus affected Knap. If the culture grows, it means the virus is in his spinal cord, and the damage may be permanent. If the culture does not grow, he stands a good chance of getting 95 per cent recovery of body movement.

In this case paralysis may be due to a virus allergy. The doctors feel the allergy is involved because Knap fails to show certain symptoms. He has a low protein count in his spine which indicates no virus and general health is excellent.

The reason Coach Knap contracted the ailment is because he is one of the few people who has never had chicken pox. The antibodies which prevent and destroy chicken pox kill the Herpes virus. Consequently, those who have had chicken pox cannot get the virus. This disease is so rare that only two or three cases have been reported in the Salt Lake medical center in its history.

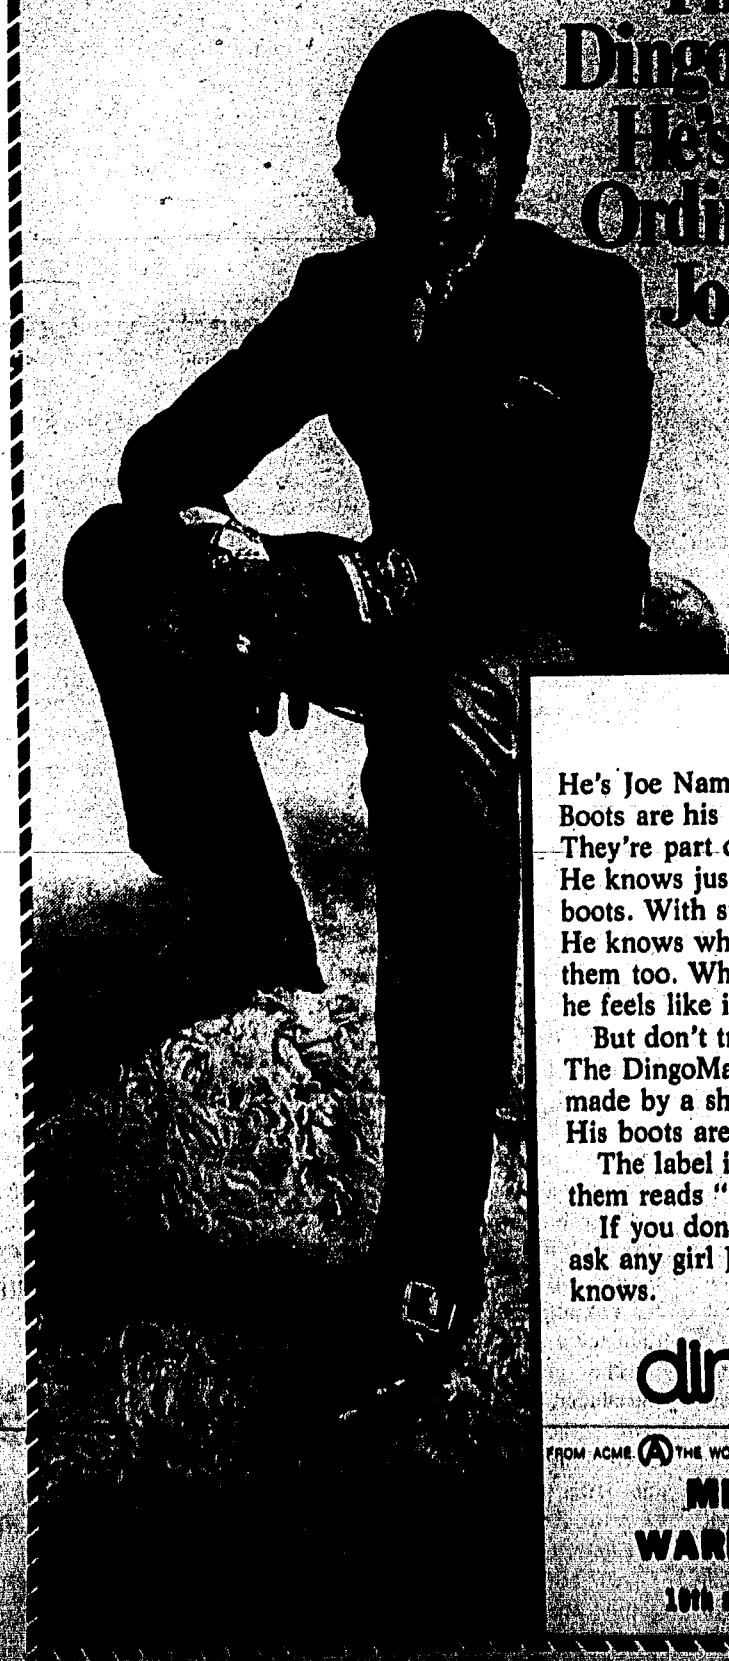

He is attending the Elk's Rehabilitation Center every morning five days a week, attempting to stop muscle deterioration. If he regains the use of his spinal system, he will have muscles to rebuild.

Machines work the muscles while he forces himself to think he is doing it. The purpose is to keep his body from forgetting how to use the muscles so when the nerves are repaired, he will remember how to coordinate those muscles.

Boise State Broncos Stomp Chico State Wildcats

Boise State College initiated the new Bronco Stadium by thumping the Chico State Wildcats by a score of 49 to 14 before 14,028 fans.

Chico took the opening kickoff, and on the second play from scrimmage turned Chauncey Turnbow loose for a 72-yard touchdown run. Chuck Gould's kick was good and Chico lead 7-0.

Boise's first series ended with a pass interception by Tony Bertuca, but on the next series they moved the ball 44 yards in eight plays with Dave Ray plunging over center for Boise's first TD.

BSC moved 64 yards in nine plays with Mike Haley off left tackle for four yards and another score. Eric Guthrie's kick was good and the Broncos lead 14-7. With 1:44 left on the clock in the first quarter Guthrie found Jerry Herring in the end zone for the third counter of the game.

Chico's last score came on a Mike Salsedo to Randy Washington pass play covering 38 yards.

With just 20 seconds left on the clock before halftime,

Guthrie hit Ray for a 32-yard pass that moved the ball to Chico's 18 yard line. Five plays later Ray swept left end from the seven and Boise lead 28-14 at the half.

The only scoring threat in the third quarter was a field goal attempt by Guthrie. It was short, but a Chico penalty moved the ball to the 34. The second kick was long enough but wide right.

Randy Washington picked off a pass on the first play of the fourth quarter. Bronco Ken Johnson grabbed one right back and went to the Chico nine. Two plays later Guthrie ramblled into the end zone from the right end.

Quarterback Pat Ebright managed to find Al Marshall on a swing pass in the flat, and Marshall rolled 52 yards for the six carries. The last TD was set up by a pass interference call on Dykman in the end zone. The ball was put on the Wildcat one yard line. Bruce Wong plunged in up the middle for the score.

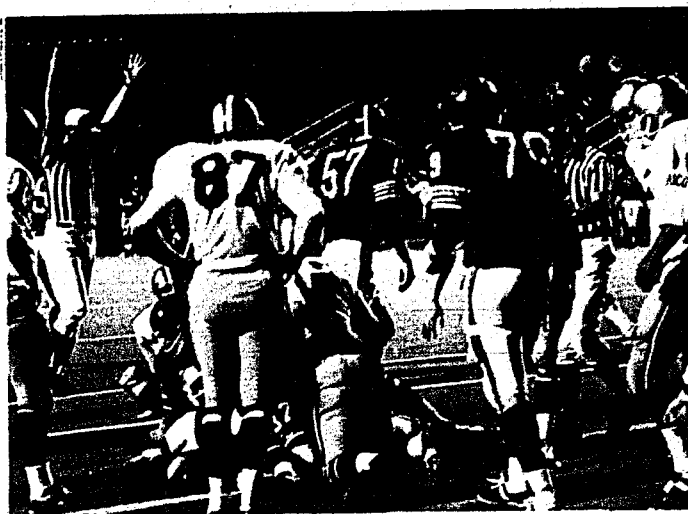

The two teams managed to amass 305 yards in penalties. BSC lost Charlie Holmes, and Chico lost Tony Bertuca early in the game for a little extra action of their own.

Faddie Tillman and Ray Rodriguez sparked the Bronco defense as they made many key tackles during the night. Eric Guthrie and Dave Ray were the leaders on offense.

Next week the Broncos host Eastern Montana Saturday night at 8:00 in Bronco Stadium.

•Cheerleaders•

"We'll beat BSC apathy!" is the theme of Boise State College's seven cheerleaders for this school year.

Their enthusiasm for the Broncos fired the student section into lively participation at the stadium dedication game last Friday.

Penney Walters, yell queen, commented the spirit of Friday's game was a "100 percent increase over last year's interest." She is unsure what the reasons are for this increased participation but attributes the high spirit to the new stadium, faith in the Broncos, and of course the hard work of all the students and cheerleaders.

This year the squad includes Karen Low, Liz Tester, Sandy Hight, Christy Homstad and the new male additions Jeff Hartung and Pat Large. They are concentrating on new gymnastic routines, encouraging more individualism in the performance and establishing a "college image" for their cheers.

Often the true activities and hard work of the cheerleaders go unnoticed on a campus such as BSC. They are obligated to attend almost every game, which becomes difficult because of funding. This year the ASB gave them $4,999 which may appear considerable, but this allotment is designed for five people. Now, due to the new male members, the sum must cover seven persons. Most of the money goes for travel arrangements.

On Aug. 30 the squad attended a cheerleading clinic sponsored by the National Cheerleading Association, a large national organization, in Santa Barbara, California. The seven financed their air passage, and the Associated Student Body paid the cost of attending the clinic.

After competing with 400 other people they received the "Spirit Stick" and two ribbons for excellence. The squad does not consider itself a precision group, but they believe emphasis should be placed on cheering spirit and enthusiasm.

Aside from cheerleading members are active in other fields. Liz Tester is a Tri Delta pledge and a history major; Christy Homstad, an Alpha Chi pledge and a business education major; Penney Walters a math education major; Karen Low a medical records major; Sandy Hight a physical ed major and president of the Valkaries. Pat Large and Jeff Hartung are both Sigma Tau Gamma pledges.

This year BSC's cheerleaders hope to create a unified student body and endorse school spirit. They wish to express their thanks for the support at last week's gridiron action and hope that enthusiasm will continue.
