Students of Boise State College
Dr. John Barnes says he sees no advantage to incorporation for Boise State College Associated Student Body

One of the biggest donnybrooks Idaho colleges will see in a long time is building up in FSGA. The fight will be over incorporation of student body government. Idaho's President Bill Foley has put it at the top of his list of priorities for the coming year, however, college administrators are not so enthusiastic about incorporation. Dr. John Barnes discussed it for the ARBITER.

None of our student leaders have approached me directly on that problem. I've heard about it just from what I've read in the paper. I don't really understand the advantages that would accrue from incorporating because, for example, now at Boise State, at least, the student officers and the student senate are given an eighteen dollar per semester lump of money which amounts to an estimated hundred and ninety thousand dollars next year and that money is for ASB. They may spend it in any way they see fit as officers and senate. We don't control the expenditure, we don't approve expenditures as an administration of the college. We only urge that these funds be used for the benefit of the student body. We urge that they be accounted for well and we hope that they'll be audited so that good management practices are pursued. In other words, we do not supervise or monitor or administer that area of student government at all. So it wouldn't be an advantage to incorporate there because we don't meddle in student expenditure of money even now and we haven't at least in my four years as president of Boise State.

There are some problems or some disadvantages that I would see in incorporating. If the ASB was a private non-profit corporation not at all legally related to Boise State College, and I assume this is what they mean by incorporating, if that were true, they would have no legal right to use Boise State buildings. They could easily find that someone on the student body would contest the fact that they weren't paying rent, for example, for any buildings they did use on campus. In spite of the fact that our student body has build the student union. But if you start a non-profit private corporation not related to Boise State college, you then don't have any relationship to Boise State College. You might find that the student body people would not have legal entitlement to the use of buildings in their work.

Now secondly our business office provides a lot of consulting and advice and help when asked to do so by the officers of the student body now, but if it was a private corporation we might legally be asked, "Why are you doing this in terms of manpower to help a private corporation that is not legally a part of Boise State College?" I think a third problem with incorporating is the State Board of Education sets the fee and that's in the statutes they set the fee. Now someone might contest whether the state of Idaho, be it the State Board of Education, sets the fee and then turns around and gives 190 thousand dollars to a private corporation over which they have no supervision, no control at all—and some student could very well contest the fact that cannot be, that is state money paid by students as a condition for being enrolled and that there's no legal way in which the state can give money to a private corporation.

So, in other words, I see some possible disadvantages and I don't really see much advantage. Now maybe there are some advantages that have not been portrayed in the news media. ARB: Wayne Mittleider mentioned liability as one reason for incorporation.

BARNES: Liability. Now there's another disadvantage, not advantage because under the way we're operating now, Boise State College carries liability insurance on everybody that handles money, you see, and ASB is today a legitimate arm or part of Boise State College and Boise State College is a state agency. We carry insurance on all those things, liability insurance, theft insurance, every kind of insurance, and ASB is covered in this canopy of insurance. Now if they were a non-profit, private corporation, they'd have to take out that insurance themselves. They'd have to pay for it out of their student fees which they are now getting free and in addition to that they'd have to pay utilities, maintenance of some building that they might use. If they had to hire a lawyer, they'd have to pay for that whereas now, if they needed a lawyer, Boise State College pays that bill and we have the whole Attorney General's staff of the state of Idaho as our legal counsel because we're a state school. But if you had a non-profit corporation not legally related to the college, then the Attorney General can't be the legal counsel. So on liability, I think that, from where I sit anyway, that's another disadvantage. Where the advantages are I really can't say. I think the reason nationally some ASBs around the country have gone to the route of incorporating is simply that they were hamstrung by the college administration in the use of money. And the administration told them what to do and how to do it and the students got fed up with that. And in that case, I wouldn't blame them. If I were a student, I might lean toward incorporating, too. But there has never been any evidence of our doing that kind of thing with the student government leaders over the four years I've been here, and as far as I know, much longer than that. And there's no intent on the part of the administration of the State Board to change that practice. It has never been discussed. So, I think in Idaho, at least, let me say not Idaho, but in Boise State, I see no advantage to incorporating.
There is a point of clarification to be made concerning ASBSC Senate service awards, a proposal introduced in the Senate last week to give them $25 per month for their duties.

The bill was introduced into the Senate by ASBSC President Pat Ebrahim, who sincerely felt the senators should get a monetary reward for their services, and justly so.

However, it appeared to some senators that reports gave the impression the senators themselves introduced the bill as they did not, and passed it without first getting the feeling of the Associated Student Body. Ebrahim, however, said he felt he made a mistake introducing the bill without first taking the issue to the students in referendum form, and justly so. The ARBITER did not make that point clear. We stand for clarification.

Ebrahim said he wanted the bill be introduced and he has Plans to take up the issue to the students next fall via referendum. At that time, students will get a chance to voice their opinions on whether the senators should be awarded the monthly stipend.

The act in itself was honorable, and senators should be given a service award for their duties, even if it is only $25 per month. Idaho State University senators receive $35 per year, and Boise State College senators would receive $225, if the referendum passed.

It makes no difference, actually, who would introduce such a bill. It's not a matter of who dons the white or black hat. This is not an issue of anyone at fault, because no one would be wrong to raise this proposal.

The concern, however, is to get student opinion before a final judgment is made. That is honorable foresight from our new student body president.

The senate would have been completely in the right to vote a service award for that body, and as stated before it would be deserved. And now, students are being given added importance. Ebrahim and the senate are providing students with a chance to help in decision making. That, above all, is honorable.

Tuesday night the senate did not override Ebrahim's veto, and the matter now will go to the students next fall.

P: "You've started from the point that Calley was a soldier, he had no orders to kill the enemy—that is exactly what he did and judgements about his conduct must revolve around that he was given orders and "did he carry them out?" If both one and two occurred, then for Calley—as a soldier—no other question arises.

A: You use "enemy" too loosely and "soldier" to restrictively. There are also rules to war. Faith and obedience are not the only credentials for soldierly excellence. Dauzay, Auscudon, and Friedmann taught us that "Is the act right?" is a question which also must be asked in war. To the extent that we can legally and morally encourage it, every soldier must take some minimum standard of fidelity to war, with him, else the "enemy" becomes anyone or thing over the muzzle of his rifle including people on his own side; and he does not have to ask himself, "Is killing this person right?" He only must ask himself "Was I ordered to do it?"

P: You are impractical. Soldiers cannot ask of each act in which they engage, "Is it right?" Under that requirement, it would be impossible to conduct a war. No soldier could kill until he had thought out the moral implications of this particular killing and under these stringent requirements an army would be paralyzed by moral obligation, e.g. a gunner on a ship artillerymen, and airplane bombers. Moral obligations rest with the leader of the army, not the soldiers. If anyone should be tried, it should be those leaders who made the moral decision to "want" My Lai and not the particular soldier who carried out the order. Wann's the conclusion of the Nuremberg trials?

A: You have made an excellent point. Military leaders and U.S. citizens must share the guilt and shame of My Lai, but we cannot stop there. It was Calley who needlessly killed residents of My Lai. It was his finger on the trigger, his body, his mind. Calley is guilty and no amount of additional guilty people absolves him of the needless act of killing in which he engaged.

A: Will you address yourself to the issue?

A: 1. Man responsible for his acts.

2. Rules in war.

3. Definition of "enemy.

These are the "practical issues."

The ARBITER
Senate Report:
Student body votes to raise student fees

Put Ebright, ASB president, reported to the senate Tuesday that the referendum to raise student fees one dollar passed (362-140). This one dollar payment is to be used for an intramural recreational program for BSC. Before it goes into effect however, Ebright and Marlett Miller, ASB vice president, need to approach the State Board of Education for that approval.

Dr. Daniel A. Posner, Prof. of Chem., representing the faculty approach the senate with the following resolution on academic protocol, asking for their endorsement:

"Academic protocol demands the students respect the classroom activities of other students and professors."

The student referendum Tuesday for $1 increase in student fees to support a student-run intramural program proposed by ASB President Put Ebright and Vice President Marty Miller, appears to some persons to be illegal. Ebright and Miller say it is all in the interpretation of the newly adopted ASBSC Constitution.

At the Tuesday senate meeting Senator Phil Yerby, V-O-Teach, asked if the referendum was legal, if Ebright could call for an election, and if the voting consisted of the Senate, in accordance with the ASBSC Constitution. He said if he agreed it was not, and asked for a clarification.

The referendum clause in the constitution was read by Assistant Student Union Director, Gary Klemm, "The ASBSC Senate 'may,' by a two-thirds majority vote of the total membership, place a measure before the ASBSC to obtain an approval or rejection by the member of the ASBSC." It appeared the senate should have been presented with an executive proposal from Ebright and Miller, so members could have the final say if the referendum was to be interpreted legally.

Ebright, in a telephone conversation Wednesday, said he would give Ebright the power to call for a referendum by the ASB officers was "an implied power," considering the wording in the clause. "May" is the controversial point, leaving the door open as to whether the officers could act independently of the Senate.

Ebright said they should have gone to the Senate in the first place, but they made the mistake of conducting the referendum too late. "We would have had to call a special Senate meeting, and we didn't have the time." The referendum was the kind of thing Marty and I did not plan in advance.

He said Miller is now working on procedures to get the clause clarified or changed so officers would have to go before the Senate for resolution consideration first before any referendum was conducted. He said, "The important thing to remember is that the results of the referendum are not legally binding, as it is simply a polling of the student body. It would have just the same effect if a poll was put in the ARBITER." He said students were only voting to see if they would give their support to the fee increase proposal, so the officers would know whether they had the student backing to present the idea to the State Board of Education.

Ebright and Miller said last week they would be attending the state board meetings in Idaho Falls May 6 and 7, with the intent of now presenting the $1 increase proposal.

In light of Tuesday's successful referendum, he said, "Now we do have a right to say students are behind the fee increase." He added, regarding the constitution referendum clause, "The Senate should clarify the point, but it should not be a big issue. It's not like we were trying to play power politics. We were just trying to get the issue out in front of the students."

"Cave Dwellers..."
The play that left you sitting

It's the kind of play that left you sitting...the kind of play from which the romance would be taken if it were analyzed.

The King and Queen...and the rest of the cast...swooped into everyone's heart for the only difference was a look of love and trust and kindness...and truth.

The book is "The Cave Dwellers," produced, directed and loved by the Sabah Theatre Company...artistic.

Written by William Saroyan.

The story is that of an old Queen of the theatre...an old King of the theatre...of a one-time President...a man, a woman, a family...family with an old King of the theatre of a family with an old new, collared...compensation...say, sorrow New York City.

The play opened with the girl, the prince...the prince, who had been defeated prize fighter, who welcomed the King and Queen, and wants to be part of their family. She finds acceptance as never before.

The King, Michael Reinhold, enters, laughing and crying. "I don't want to be a beggar!"

"Don't you think you should tell the King at once," said the Queen, being allowed into the old King...as the old King described in the old days how good life was...through the old dance.

He knows the police will call for him, but says he doesn't care. He will only let the child bake the meal.

The Duke braves to go to see it, it is the Silly Boy, Dan Coffman. He takes a look around at the cobwebbed stage, sees the old people, the King and, and the Girl. They start at each other for long moments. He spits the milk bottle, but realities and understandings begin to take him. He leaves...the Girl already telling the Duke she loves him, but letting her eyes and heart show. Instead she loves the Silly Boy. Then they make another to go up on the door. A wrecking crew enters, Dan Coffman, and his assistant, Janie, Barry Lesb., telling the inhabitants the bookshop will close down from the following morning, to make way for new buildings and the future.

But the two men take the situation into consideration, study the dreams of the people, and they delay wrecking for four days, kindly supplying the inhabitants with food. But the play being the people and their souls prepare to have a cobweb bearing dust and run down. One by one, the family starts to leave. The King leaves first, then the Queen. This leaves the Duke and the Girl happy. She was gone, but returned, to ask what would take her. She rushes to the Duke, who careers her, but painfully gives it to the Silly Boy, and true love.

They all leave, except for the Queen and King. They sing a final "Put a Little Love in Your Heart." The King says the final moment alone on stage, and with loving farewell, he says good by to all...and welcome to who knows what. The bald of light fades.

The play made one leave with tears...until tears meant something for more. This was the story of their lives...nothing ever happened.

So the symbols...people must face truth...people love what they have become...someone else's needs...enjoying...use love to bring people together...love...love...love...love the inside as well as the outside.

On this final stage, all dreams could come true. That love could be the only plot...in the theatre. It seemed to say man has a way of making life something it never should be.

And that stage...the Sabah Theatre Company, has been named for these fine set decorations...and this time you could admire them.

Creating a dusty, run down stage, with effective lighting and stage scenery, it came across as it should have.

Paul Norman, the stage manager, set designers, custodians, sound effects people, and everyone...everyone...all capture the secret of the stage...love.

Bookstore

Mismanagement will remain rumor

The bookstore has often been attacked for over-priced, under-stocking and general mismanagement. Few people neither understand the workings and the importance of the store that is the lifeblood of the institution right under their noses. Every year the store posts a blue, orange, and red report card that may be called the bookstore's answer to A+.

"The Boise State College Bookstore is solely owned and operated by Boise State College. Accordingly, it is a separate department of the College Administration. Its purpose is to provide a complete book service for students and faculty. Primarily this involves procuring all necessary textbooks and recommended and supplemental books to aid students in their college classes. To aid in the maintenance of scheduled classes for the full complement of essential classroom supplies, as well as the amount of time required to maintain supplies, the bookstore is owned.

All profits from the bookstore are used to pay all costs of goods and services. Additionally, the bookstore is an extension of the Student Union Building, and to retrain any bonded indebtedness on the building.

The pricing of books is determined solely by the publisher and prices are subject to change without notice. From the price structure offered to the students, bookstore receives a 20 percent discount on which to operate. Average figures across the board are that the bookstore would have come from the students.

Students have always known that something was wrong at the Boise State College Bookstore. Finally they have proof that the store is run by the management, which in the end has been proved to be the best solution.

For many the resignations of Elizabeth Forsyth and Jim McGee, manager and assistant manager of the Bookstore, meant little or nothing. However underlying the management shuffle were hints of mismanagement and misuse of funds.

The administration, as a matter of prudent management, has buttoned its lip on the subject saying nothing more than that there was a disagreement between college policy and bookstore operation. "All I can say," said Dr. Barnes, "is that the management and the board of the college determined that some of the management practices that had been followed (at the Bookstore) were not consistent with our policies of operating the Bookstore. We identified some specific problems, and corrected them by investigation." The thesis themselves are so hard to prove that the college's legal counsel, has advised against pressing charges.

As a result of the start of a new manager, the bookstore will remain rumor.

In January, 1970, I answered an advertisement for a job as bookkeeper. I needed the money but didn't have any experience.

Then the job was offered to me. I accepted it and left the next day, pregnant. The bookkeeper was overjoyed. "When you have your baby," she said, "I'll be back to work as soon as possible!"

There were about ten girls and most of us were left in charge of the store. We were assigned to work with one of the regular cashiers, and practiced the week before registration. I didn't have to be there the first week, (and just punching the buttons "in" hard) but it's things like matching checks, cashing large checks, and refunds that are confusing. Then when the real demands arrived, the students, we started to make mistakes. The regular employees were really great—I've never seen anyone so patient.

I worked in the bookstore during registration. They gave me the chance to be myself for what the students feel about the store. The thing I heard most often after the store was being robbed! The high pressure of long lines of prices of textbooks is quite a controversy. As far as I could tell, though, the cost is pretty much the same...the prices are only made up after the bookstore sees records (records, paper and ink) which are meant to be high to me. But if you really think about it, you can't expect a store to be able to compete with K-Mart or Staggs.

For my part, the best job in the world...and the best reason to work there...I think the people who run the bookstore are doing a good job. I was really shocked, and disgusted to hear the Forsyth had resigned. I still can't understand why she would ever want to leave. I thought she was a great employee and friend.

Outbound Ambassadors to visit
Greece, Chile, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia

Four Boise State students will spend their summers abroad under the Outbound Ambassador Program sponsored by the Experiment in International Living. The four will live with host families in Greece, Chile, Yugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia.

The International Club which is sponsoring the students is holding its annual ambassador dinner Saturday night at the Raquet and Swim Club, 1108 North Cole Road. Beginning at 5:30 p.m., the dinner will feature dishes from the countries to be visited by the ambassadors. Greg Knight, a freshman majoring in art, will spend six weeks in Greece; Vivian Rendla, a sophomore majoring in English, will visit Czechoslovakia; Todd Burt, a freshman pre-dental major, will visit Yugoslavia; and Ron Cook, a freshman Spanish major, will visit Chile.

Prior to leaving for their overseas visit, they will receive intensive language training at Putney, Vermont, headquarters of the Experiment in International Living, America's oldest private person-to-person effort in international understanding. The banquet will begin at 5:30 p.m. Tickets for the benefit are $5 per person and $2.50 for students. Proceeds will contribute to sending the BSC students abroad.

As part of the entertainment for Saturday night's dinner, displays of dishes representing 40 different countries will be shown, and Boise's Little Theatre will perform. For further information, those interested in the Boise International Club Ambassador's dinner are invited to call Blanche Crow, Mary Carson, Vicki Hunt or Nicole Rudd.

New Idaho drug law makes possession of any illegal drug a misdemeanor

The New Idaho drug law which makes possession of any illegal drug a misdemeanor will be a "deterrent to law enforcement," said Ada County Sheriff Paul Bright.

Bright explained Tuesday that a person can be arrested if an officer has "reasonable grounds" to believe the person committed a felony. But in a misdemeanor, the crime must be committed "in your presence or you must have a warrant."

Contrary to popular belief, possession is a misdemeanor no matter how many times one is arrested for it.

Bright feels that with the penalty lowered more people will try drugs because "faced only with a misdemeanor you don't have the fear or respect," for the law that a felony commits.

Under the new law the selling of drugs is still a felony, but no limit is set on the amount of drugs one can possess and be arrested for not selling.

However, District Judge Alfred C. Hagan says one can be convicted of selling drugs if there is evidence "to substantiate that he intended to deliver."

Bright said that a misdemeanor is more or less a punishment and drug addicts could be helped by getting a felony because "a felony has a provision for rehabilitation."

Hagan said that the punishment under the new drug law could vary little from the punishment under the old law "except now they can't put them in the penitentiary," for possession. The new law "considers the user a sick person," rather than a criminal.

Bright feels the new law will "flood the county jails with people we arrest and the jails are already inadequate."

Chuck Palmer, head of the Boise Vice and Narcotics Squad, refused to comment on the new law and said it would be better to talk to his boss, Police Chief John Church.

Larry Overholser

"I think the first thing that the students have to be aware of, and I know that a lot of campus discontent right now, is that Marty and I are here to help the students and administration come together," ASB President Pat Elbright said recently.

"We are going to be a lot more responsive, to what the students want," referring to plans for 1971-72.

"The new mack bar and the game room, he, and the bookstore will be more responsive. "

On the SUB's second floor, there will be a beautiful lounge, an ASB office complex, the ARBITER Staff, rooms, a ball room seating 800 and dance capacity for 1,000 persons. SAGA Foods will be located on the second floor and will have six or seven banquet rooms seating 30 to 40 persons each.

The third floor is the gem of the whole sub, they say, with a night club walled in glass, with seating capacity for 250 persons.

The Student Union, Elbright emphasizes, is under the College Union Board of Governors, composed of college students who will set policy as to times facilities can be used, what will be served, what kinds of books and supplies will be on hand, and what margin of profit they will operate.

The students will enjoy control of policy concerning the union and the majority vote will decide, one of the few things they have in the state of Idaho that students have actually built, been expanded with and at present they are talking about sponsoring free dancing once a month, building up the lecture series with controversial speakers, sponsoring coffee houses, plus bringing in big name groups for the ASB.

An orientation will open the SUB during registration week next fall, with events scheduled each night.

HOMECOMING PLANS

Elbright and Miller say the 1971 Homecoming will be combined with Parents Day. The week will be sparked by a concert with a big name band, so yet unselected, parties, the usual games and races, and the annual Homecoming Parade and game.

On Saturday of the week of Oct. 27, parents of students on campus for Parents Day will be given tours of the schools, a continental breakfast, an opportunity to see the Homcoming Game with Montana State, and will wind up their day with a banquet and dance in the new ballroom.

Intramural Activities

Elbright said another big step planned for next year is intramural activities. He said up until now, the program has not been expanded because of the lack of funds and participation from the student body. He said many events such as tennis, soccer, basketball and girls nationwide events with such a setup at schools across the nation.

Elbright said that the State Board of Education approves a recently proposed $1 increase in student fees at Boise State for the intramural program, 25 per cent of the funds could be used to buy bicycles, boats, back packs, skiing equipment, etc., which could be loaned to students from the SUB headaches at minimal cost.

Changes Seen

Elbright and Miller said there are a few changes on campus that are going to occur. Elbright said, "Some of the ridiculous rules on campus such as with the dorms and the police regulations are in order to change."

He said new proposals for open dorms, co-ed dorms, better campus police, better services to married students in College Courts, and a student bill of rights are just some of them.

Miller said they can hit dorm policy rules and regulations, but it would be much better to have legal backing. He said next year they would like to get some kind of special services for students. He added it would mean hiring one or two lawyers for the students, and it would be money well spent.

Funding Cut

Elbright said in cooperation with the Senate and Dr. Barnes the two officers have cut back on funding Theatre Arts, Rodeo Club, and Skydivers for when they travel, they do not represent the Associated Student Body as a whole. "These activities," they said, "are selective in nature and the majority of students cannot participate."

Senate Awe

Elbright and Miller said they are both a little in awe of the pride and enthusiasm that the Senate displayed in their last meeting. They both realize, they said, they will not have dictatorial or absolute power, as it has so often been in the past.

"Nothing will be pushed through. The checks and balances are in effect and working," Elbright said.

Travel to get ideas

In order to obtain new and better ideas for campus improvement, Elbright and Miller are visiting other schools across the nation this summer to bring changes and ideas to the campus at Boise State. They have said they will talk to leaders of the major schools and see what the other schools are doing.

Elbright said, "When Marty and I first came to these offices, it was on the downhill grade. We got to checking around and found out what powers we actually had, and we got excited. But we haven't even started the master wheel. We've got all the little ones up to a terrific momentum, and we're going to keep them there and accomplish all that we have set out to do."

Elbright said another big step planned for next year is intramural activities. He said up until now, the program has not been expanded because of the lack of funds and participation from the student body. He said many events such as tennis, soccer, basketball and girls nationwide events with such a setup at schools across the nation.

Elbright said that the State Board of Education approves a recently proposed $1 increase in student fees at Boise State for the intramural program, 25 per cent of the funds could be used to buy bicycles, boats, back packs, skiing equipment, etc., which could be loaned to students from the SUB headaches at minimal cost.

Changes Seen

Elbright and Miller said there are a few changes on campus that are going to occur. Elbright said, "Some of the ridiculous rules on campus such as with the dorms and the police regulations are in order to change."

He said new proposals for open dorms, co-ed dorms, better campus police, better services to married students in College Courts, and a student bill of rights are just some of them.

Miller said they can hit dorm policy rules and regulations, but it would be much better to have legal backing. He said next year they would like to get some kind of special services for students. He added it would mean hiring one or two lawyers for the students, and it would be money well spent.

Funding Cut

Elbright said in cooperation with the Senate and Dr. Barnes the two officers have cut back on funding Theatre Arts, Rodeo Club, and Skydivers for when they travel, they do not represent the Associated Student Body as a whole. "These activities," they said, "are selective in nature and the majority of students cannot participate."

Senate Awe

Elbright and Miller said they are both a little in awe of the pride and enthusiasm that the Senate displayed in their last meeting. They both realize, they said, they will not have dictatorial or absolute power, as it has so often been in the past.

"Nothing will be pushed through. The checks and balances are in effect and working," Elbright said.

Travel to get ideas

In order to obtain new and better ideas for campus improvement, Elbright and Miller are visiting other schools across the nation this summer to bring changes and ideas to the campus at Boise State. They have said they will talk to leaders of the major schools and see what the other schools are doing.

Elbright said, "When Marty and I first came to these offices, it was on the downhill grade. We got to checking around and found out what powers we actually had, and we got excited. But we haven't even started the master wheel. We've got all the little ones up to a terrific momentum, and we're going to keep them there and accomplish all that we have set out to do."

Dear Doctor Dodson:

I am neurotic to compete with them for favors, so that's not the problem either. When they are moll up about the cats himself, so that's not the problem either. Dear Doctor Dodson:

I talked to someone who was in one of your encounter groups, and I'd like to get into one. Will you have any this summer? Next fall?

The only other problem that I'm in my late 40's. Are only younger college students allowed in the group? Second Time Around

Dear STA:

If you're a BSC Student or staff member you are eligible to participate in the services offered by the Center for Counseling. There is no problem. In fact, I think the value received from experience is often proportionately to the diversity that the group members in terms of age, racial and ethnic background, values, past experience, etc.

If you're interested in participating this summer please talk with me personally within the next two weeks.

Incidentally, the Center for Counseling will be open this summer on a regular basis. We've located in the basement of the Administration Building.

The new library will provide a spacious children's wing, informal borrowing and study areas, listening carrels, as well as expanded areas for periodicals, nursing and reference materials. There will be an auditorium holding a maximum of 1,000 persons and conference rooms that can be used by the public for small hearing, study groups and other community gatherings. This portion of the building can be open during the closed hours of the library. Complete accommodations for the handicapped are provided, one. Will you have any this summer? Next fall?

The building offers an opportunity to expand the library in the future in an economical manner without disruption of current service. Office, now being erected throughout the city, will be located on the upper levels, resulting in additional saving. Remodeling of the first floor will be paid for rentals. The total cost of the library project, including purchase of the property, remodeling, equipment, fees and miscellaneous costs, is estimated at $3,676,000. Funds sufficient to cover the construction will be available in 1971. This will be invested at a 5-year maturity from the library levy.

This will be used by the Boise City Council. The balance will be paid over a ten year period from one mill of the library levy. Thus the total financing of the building project will mean to the taxpayer one mill increase in the library levy. This cost is estimated at $1.68 per $100.00 assessed property for each year of the ten year period. Vote to support this low cost, modern library for all the families of Boise for ten years.

For your support this low cost, modern library for all the families of Boise on Tuesday, May 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium.

The dinner will be served at 7:15 p.m., and the football game in the Bronco Stadium at Boise State will begin at 8:30.

The dinner is free of charge, however, you may make a donation to the FCA if you wish. The money will be used to support the Center for Counseling.

Les Bois Yearbook available

Assistant Editor of the Les Bois Yearbook, John Streiff, says the 1971 issues are in and are being distributed at Ticket Booth Number Four at Bronco Stadium, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Be sure and take your BSC identification card when you pick up your 1971 edition of the Les Bois. If you've seen the book, you know it is worth it!!!

Fees for the yearbooks are included in student fees and each semester. If a student has been at Boise State both semesters this year, the books are free at this time. If you have only been at BSC for one semester this year, the books will cost you an additional $2.50. The full price for the books is $5, for people who wish to have a copy and have not been a student.

Subal Theater presents

"Masks of Angels"

Immediately following "The Cave Dweller", on May 12, 13, & 14, the busy Subal Theater will continue its buzzing life. This time the production will be "Masks of Angels", a one-act play by Norris Pynchon. Director Gary Bernouwol has presented us with this play because it gives rise to the necessity for a change of color, of blue, the red, glaring and realistic, shows them as they are-atile, insignificant, dirty and alone. But through the piercing flash of the red we see that there is no room for further retreat; beyond lies chaos. And this knowledge gives rise to the necessity for a change of color, to blue. It is by virtue of this necessity that the two heroes of this play are redeemed and find each other. They put on the masks of angels. It is the victimmers who finally put on the mask of death.

Curtain time will be promptly at 8:15 p.m. Seating will be on a first come first serve basis. There will be no admission charge.
Bronco thincld fall 81-80.5 to University of Idaho in Knights of Columbus Meets

Although placing in all but one event last weekend at the first annual Knights of Columbus track meet held in Boise, the Broncos still had to settle for second as the University of Idaho edged BSC 81-80.5.

Gerald Bell earned two of the three Bronco wins as he took victories in both the long and triple jumps Bell's winning mark in the long jump was 23-5 while he jumped 49' 1" in the triple event.

The only other Bronco win came in the 440 relay where the team of Wood, Casanova, Ward and Moore combined for a 42.3.

In all the Broncos gained eight seconds in the meet including Charles Varner in the high hurdles Ken Moore in the 100 and 220 dashes, Alex Ulatson on the 880 and Brad Weidenbach in the pole vault. Also gaining seconds were Mike Schell in the high jump and the Mile relay team.

The next bit for the Broncos will be on May 13-15 when they trek to Pocatello as the Idaho State, defending Big Sky Champions will definitely be considered the team to beat with Montana expected to pose the biggest threat to the Montana club. In order for BSC to give a run at the title the Broncos would not only need tremendous showings from their usual outstanding performers but also from the field events where Boise State has shown little strength in the past.

Much of the Boise burden will be laying on the backs of Alex Ulatson, 880, Harry Ostley, 2-mile and Ron Strand in the mile. With outstanding performances in these events, the Broncos could give a run at the Bengals.

However, such performers as Charles Vizner, Ken Moore and Gerald Bell will also need to be in peak condition to make the Broncos effective. Varner in the hurdles, Moore in the sprints and Bell in the long and triple jumps have all shown potential during the season to carry away wins with a few breaks.

The field events, as they have been during the entire season, will probably prove to be the downfall of the Boise State team. Although Bell has managed to give some strength to the field, depth in these events leaves something to be desired.

However, with the addition of Brad Weidenbach at the pole vault, the BSC chances in the field events are deeply improved. Weidenbach, who returned last week from an ankle injury, vaulted 14' 4" in the K-C meet and with time could develop into a top performer.

Other in the field events are Mike Schell, high jump. Mark Burgener, discus and Arlo Decker, in the shot put. Schell, with a second last week and Burgener with a third, in the high jump at 4'4" are showing signs of improvement and should they could prove to be a major factor in the Bronco success. With outstanding performances, the Broncos could be a strong contender in the championships.

Bronco Baggers
finish season against Idaho

Boise State clinches out its 71 season in hot action at Idaho State with the doubleheader competition slated for Saturday in Pocatello.

In conference play, ISU is 1-3 for a 250 mark while Boise State is 1-3 for a lowly .167 percentage. Total games statistics find BSC at 14 wins to 15 losses and ISU at 8-14 for percentages of .483 and .364 respectively.

Individual stats for Big Sky hitters include fourth place Sam Mortford of ISU with six hits in 11 trips to the plate for a .545 slugging pace. Steve Proniewich in 12th on the list with four hits in 11 ties for a .364 average. BSC's Bob Petersens holds down ninth place with six hits in 16 trips for a .375 mark.

Bengal pitching did not make the Big Sky hurling rolls however, Dan Smith, Bronco moundman, holds down seventh place on the list. He has worked 13 innings, given up 10 hits, four earned runs and had struck out 13.

Cinder women garner second at Eastern Oregon College

Taking four first places, Boise State College Women's track team finished second place at a four way meet at Eastern Oregon College.

Tom Balderrama gained first places in the 100 yd. Dash (12.3), the long jump (15' 1") and was the anchor man for the winning 440 yd. relay (51.7). Other team members of the 440 included Brenda Swift, Tom Turnbull, and Nancy Vanderhoef. Turnbull also won the high jump at 4' 4".

Julie Osman won second place in the mile run with Jan Van Wassenhove placing fourth. Jerome Hawkins finished second in the 220 yd. dash and the 880 medley also won second place. Running in the medley were Jane Rich, Swift, Pat Reckmeyer, and Hawkins Diane Westbrook finished 2nd with a 33.3" throw in the shot put.

Vanderhoef gained a second place in the 100 yd. dash and also in the 220 yd. dash Rich finished 3rd in the 100 meter hurdles and Helen Fleurant came in place Wesbrook also gained a 4th in the Javelin with Turnbull gaining 4th in the shot put Rich gained a 4th in the long jump, as Karen Mahan tied for 5th.

Eastern Oregon College finished with 98.5 points, Boise gained 51.5 points, North Nazarene College had 37 points, and Blue Mountain College was last with 7 points.
Boise State ski coach airs views on ski program

At a recent meeting of college journalists held in Park City, City and State, a total of 57 number of student newspapers in the western half of the country were represented with respective athletic departments.

Art Ardanian is on the ropes, practicing a unique combination of recruiting black football players for one semester and making the ski team at the same time. Boise State, it's a small minority sport as far as school administration is concerned, we only compete for a month and a half. We only have a month to train out for the ski team this year, and only traveled with five.

The Lockers by Brent Peterson

At Montana State, students voted by 68 percent to place the question of a ski team on a campus-wide referendum. The first tally alone spells out the future of MSU on the gridiron.

These are just a pair of examples in Utah, Idaho, and Colorado. These are just a pair of examples between students and the athletic department concerning over expenditure of student fees. No less than 15 different intercepts have been presented with athletic programs. This is just the Rockport College anonymous amnesty.

What is your attitude regarding the role of the minority athlete in your program?

JONES: The only thing I can think of is that the minority student may be sociological or financial limited to being a skier. You have to buy your own gear and it's expensive. Individuals, I don't care what color, star or shape the are, they can ski all, they can all do their own speed and their own thing. But again it is expensive. You have to equip your own people or have their parents equip them. But minority students are just as capable and sometimes better than these kids who have all the money and can afford all this kind of stuff. You put some kid who has a lot of guts on a part of all wonder and they come down the hill just as fast if not faster than a kid with brand new skis that his dad just bought him at the sporting goods store.

What is your attitude regarding the role of the minority athlete as a student outside the team atmosphere in terms of his academic career and his chosen course?

JONES: First of all I think you have to be a student that you then become a skier. Like in any other sport you have to maintain a grade point, you have to be academically qualified before you can be on the varsity. And this is the only way I think football, basketball, track or anything will work. Sure you can go and hire boys to be athletes, but it's hard. There are actually poorer athletes than the guy that plays out. If I have very few rules, but I do have some regulations that involve the college image. I think you are representing your college, your school, your instructors and everything else by the way you act when you are away from school. I don't think there are no speed rules in regards to skiing, the guys can go out with your feet long as it didn't affect their skiing. Personal image, think that you have to be just keep your self presentable. I don't let them go skiing in levi or old boy "I" shirts, you'd freeze to death. So again individual. I have five football players with long hair, that doesn't make any difference to me. It is what they look like in their own mind that they have to contend with. I tell the guys to relax, be yourself, and prove your own self image and forget everybody else. You're the guy doing it, everything is going to reflect back on you, you are an individual again.

What is your attitude concerning the individuals role as a student outside the team atmosphere in terms of his academic career and his chosen course?

JONES: The student must maintain a grade point and these guys are going to be skiing here possibly maybe three or four years and then they are going to have to go out with the athletic program.

Next year I hope we have a better program that will include cross country and possibly some jumpers. But we are limited because of our area at Bogus Basin not being a good jump or cross country area.

We can only go Alpine-dalom, giant slalom, and down hill. Again an individual is the real thing on the ski business. The individual fits into this plan very well, because he is an individual. They're own speed, they do their own thing and nobody else is. A different style through everybody tries to imitate Jean Claude Killy, win all the way. But again Killy has an individual style and people are trying to imitate him but they can't. He is more or less cut out through everyone, but he is in rough control to get through the next gate.

What is your attitude, as a coach, regarding the "individual" skier in this role with the lam?

JONES: I think the individual is a very important part of the program. It's more of an individual role with the athletic department for their cooperation in making this team possible.

What is your attitude, as a coach, regarding the direction of your program? What is the object that you are trying for?

JONES: As far as my attitude as a coach, regarding the direction of your program! Where does the individual fit in this program?

JONES: What is my attitude as a coach regarding the individual role with the team? Where does the individual more of a role? There are different animals, giant slalom, giant slalom, cross country and jumping, it's all individual and can't have any team participation perse. They do ski as an overall group for team positions at the end of the day. Individuals are a must in skiing.
