Science-Education building put in limbo by Building Fund

"Apparently the Building Fund has more requests for money than it can meet so it had to take our second priority," said Roger Green, Vice-president for Financial Affairs, in response to the Permanent Building Fund's choice to grant a small addition to the Vo-Tech building instead of the new Science and Education Building.

The proposed Sci-Ed building would be a two building complex. The Education wing would be five stories tall, the Science wing three stories. The two would be connected by common lecture halls. The complex would cost $1,200,000 with the monies to come from state funds. It would be built in two phases. The Science building first at a cost of $2,500,000 and the rest in following years.

The Department of Education and Welfare had approved matching funds of $3,092,608 for the complex. That money will be lost because the state funds were not available.

The Administration had hoped that the new addition of the project could have been started this summer. The next section several years after the completion of the two wings would be the Vo-Tech addition to the Education building making it an eighty-story structure.

Dr. Barnes said, "Although the college needs the $250,000 for the Vo-Tech addition, the State Board's and the institution knows that the most critical building is the Science-Ed building. We have not had an addition to the Science building since 1950 and the enrollment has changed drastically since then."

The State Board of Education listed the new Science-Ed building as the number one priority on its building list.

Dr. Barnes said the college is still going to try to get the building because it is so badly needed.

Possibility of beer on campus good if students work through college

"There is no state law which prohibits the consumption of alcoholic beverages on any state-owned property," according to James Hargis of the Attorney General's office. Hargis spoke at a special ASBSC hearing on alcohol on campus.

Pat Elbright, ASB president, said the fact that beer on campus is not the only issue, that students' rights and responsibilities is the total issue. Elbright said that Idaho is not the first school to get involved with the beer-on-campus question.

"According to a poll taken by the Brewer's Association, the number of campuses changing has tripled in the past year," Elbright said. "And again, although beer on campus is not the total issue, it has been the most flagrant example of where we're getting shafted."

The Senate did not submit any petitions on the matter in the meeting, preferring to wait until the next Senate meeting when various resolutions will be discussed.

Hargis stated that there are things that students must do to allow beer on campus. One is to go through the State Board and get them to change their policies regarding alcoholic beverages on campus.

Why other wine and beer would be possible in the student coffee house, the Lookout, was also discussed. The possibility of allowing the Lookout to obtain a beer license is also, according to Hargis, possible if the policies of the State Board are changed, perhaps the students could bring their own beer to the Lookout, be added.

Sue Hunter, Dean of Women, said that one way of alleviating the problem with dorm students wanting to drink is to set up an average dorm system such as the one at Oregon State University in Corvallis. In this hall, drinking would be permitted and only those students who wanted to drink would be living there, she said.

Hunter said that this has worked very well in Oregon. She added that it is entirely feasible to do the same at BSC because 200 of the 750 students living on campus are 21 or older.

The question brought up by one of the students in the gallery was the fact that alcoholic beverages were not allowed on campus, this including beer, while beer in reality is not an alcoholic beverage because alcoholic content is less than four per cent. Hargis said that he could not answer this and that he didn't know why this was so.
In My Opinion
Uninvolved Students Are Missing the Boat

Pat Ebright

Why don't you get off the boat and stop acting like she's alive. There are things wrong in your student government, in your college, in your city, and in your nation! There are many of these wrongs that can be righted by one or two people getting off their boats of total untruth and truth and getting down to real work.

A step in this process is to think and deciding what is right and to do it. The first step is easy: you're afraid to stand up by themselves and decide by themselves what is right or truth to them. If, by some strange quirk of fate they decide what is right or truth to them, then they can't remember where the ASUCS office is, or where the SEC is, or where the Registrar is, or where they were born, or what day it is today... (they broke their brain out of its shell)

Now that I have managed to let out a little bit of the frustrations that have been building up inside of me and maybe having started some people to either get angry with me, or start some laughing at me, let me throw out a few ideas for you to either decide whether these are right or wrong to you or possibly present something that might make you want to come up to see us (at least this one idea)"

Tells of Czech Trip

As one of the four ambassadors of the Peace Information Club, I had the privilege of going behind the Iron Curtain and living in Czechoslovaka for two months last summer. The most important memory of all the people experienced was the experience I met. Prague is out of place to drive generalizations about the people of a country, but they are mostly long-suffering, The closest thing to them is their nation, and it causes them to be most sorrow. Evidence of the Russian invasion and occupation in August 1968 still remain. At the top of St. Wenceslas Square stand the National Museum, covered with scaffolding and a huge red sign "IN LILO" by 50 years of communism. They are presently preparing a bullet holes from Russian guns during the invasion. The Russians believed that nationalists were imprisoned within the museum. Tank tracks in the asphalt are almost gone, but the remains. One of the most beautiful castles I ever visited had tracks, some as wide as 2 inches, running from the ceiling through the walls of both floors. During the first two years of occupation, tank division stationed in the village and restoration could not be resumed until they left. Not far from this village was a monument carved from a large rock. A wooden figure with a top hat representing the last monk who lived there stood at the top. The common story is that the Russian believers were saying on it and nailed it with a bullet. The saddest and most remembered monument is the graves of the walls of Olomay. Prague's largest cemetery. Jan Palach burned himself to death in front of a statue of St. Wenceslas in 1969 in a student protest against the Russian Occupation. He will not allow his family to have any marker, other than a cross, and has been encouraged them to the grave site to their home town. They have refused. Jan's grave is now covered with flowers, many candles burn before it, and on the cross is a paper with his name and 1969. My Czech mother told me that every time the time is up, someone always makes another. I saw Jan's mother. She was dressed in black, mourning for her son and her country.

The people I met each had a story, but only one was so disheartened and heartbroken that he wanted to be left and had once tried to emigrate. An excellent artist was not among the 100 chosen to attend the creative arts school and so worked as a mechanic in an airport. Learning to speak perfect English, a girl hoped for a job dealing with foreign people, perhaps as a secretary. She was allotted a job in a factory, the reduced and worked during the summer as a castle guide. Another girl only wanted to be a nurse and had studied pre-med in high school. She was not accepted and her family hoped that she could go to a textile school. My Czech mother loved to travel, but it is not allowed outside the Iron Curtain. The only means the bed of leaving was to be accepted to attend a university underdeveloped country. She has taught 1 years in Baghdad and lived in Cuba another 2 years while her husband taught. Their daughter was born once, 3 months in Cuba.

An inscription upon a church dating from the 10th century is attributed to St. Wenceslas: "Do not judge a man by his clothes, by his mouth, or his reason. Consider the entire culture, this month, and the Chinese will be no different.

The Chinese people will never let their race or tradition die. They are a courageous people. My thanks to the ambassador of the Peace International Club for allowing me to know about the beautiful country of Czechoslovakia.

Editor, the ARBITER

My compliments on a good paper last week. It improved over the weeks considerably. I must admit though that after some investment in the ARBITER is undersubscribed, as I have often, whatever help I can give, right out.

To all the beautiful students at Boise State College,

To all of the people of the American Society and the millions of our friends in the Philippines:

Happy Independence Day! 1964 will make it possible for the students to remain alive for another month.

Waddell Grips About Student Grips

The Arbiter has been a sounding board for moans and groans for many years. Students complain about parking problems, the way articles on the campus papers are written, and a few of you would probably like to see the SU Board of Trustees do more walking and less talking. Students complain about the rules and regulations they must follow. They question the right to choose what they put in the campus papers. They question the right to discuss the courses they are taking. They question the right to discuss the professors and the courses they teach.

You might wonder why I say all this. It is the job of the Arbiter to bring such thoughts to light. It is the job of the Arbiter to appraise policies and procedures. As an ASCSC Senator, I have the right to hear these opinions. It is my duty to represent you.

For many elections, Student funds, the way articles on the parking problems. After awhile a few of you would agree or disagree you write to the campus paper about this. The person who wrote this article about ecology had a message - don't walk on the grass. I'm repeating this message that they are doing. Imagine if we increased this number to 200 or 1000 or 8000. The students would instead run the campus and not the campus running the students. In my eyes right now I see no hope of high school or college kids getting off their B.D. until they mature a little and get involved. Right now most of the students are a pain in the a.s.

Common Cause

Common Cause Sets Meeting

Concerned Citizens

Across the nation 220,000 individuals have banded together to form Common Cause. Common Cause is a national citizen's lobby whose purpose is to lobby on behalf of the public interest to counteract the powerful special interest groups that today have excessive influence over governmental processes and institutions.

To date, Common Cause has primarily concentrated on national issues. However, its interest is to be a positive influence at all levels of government. Recently Common Cause members have held several meetings across the state to discuss these issues and to develop Common Cause on the local level. We hope to see similar meetings held in your area. We have found that there is considerable support for this type of citizens' organization that is willing to publicly work hard toward improving government within Idaho.

In the Boise area, we have already had several preliminary meetings. We would like to invite you to see us as a meeting on Thursday, November 12th, 8:00 p.m. at the Boise YMCA to discuss several possible issues for Common Cause's involvement in 1972. If we are successful in improving Idaho's governmental processes, we need to expand our membership among citizens. Among citizens are those people who are willing to stand up and be counted. This meeting is open to the public and all Idaho citizens are encouraged to attend.

ISU Team Made Up of Out-of-States

Editor, the Arbiter:

Last Saturday night, Boise State rolled into the Minden, hoping to capture a fourth straight win against cross-state rival Idaho in a close game. The Broncos had lost the conference title, a possible sour end to their high national ranking.

It is noteworthy, and commendable to Tony Knapp and B.D.C. to observe how the participants in this event between the two State schools of the fifty-nine players listed on the B.S.C. varsity, twenty-nine, or half, came from within the State. ISU on the other hand, had only fifteen of seventy-eight, or sixteen percent per cent. State officials more interested in that fourteen of the twenty-two Boise State players and the fact that they were elected.

As with all nonresident students, out-of-state football players are considered by those institutions that use institutional money makes a nonresident clear total over those times of a resident. Since these students are on full athletic scholarships, the State must shoulder this additional cost. Thus, nonresident football players are on full athletic scholarships, the State must shoulder this additional cost. Thus, nonresidents

LD Responds to DG

Editor:

In response to DG, The Arbiter. No Colleges are going to bleed the student body for that amount of money. I wish that we could eliminate the Arbiter and how it fails to help the students. Why don't you guys propose a better plan and then do your part to get it fulfilled.

Since DG, you don't like the crooked column wandering around for something to help the students. I wish I could spot something you are wrong. The Staff needs people who want to do something. But if you don't want to help them then don't prope about something else in doing you can do a better job. Do get off your apathetic...and do a better job of thinking.

To the rest of the Student Body, there are less committees in the ASCSC, which need good people to work on them. Let's keep a close look and be a service not GRIPPING ABOUT WHAT WERE DOING.

Applying the slogan of the United Fund to Boise State for very well. IF YOU DON'T DO IT, IT WON'T GET DONE.

Senate Strikes Out, Says Henscheid

Editor, the Arbiter:

Well, the Senate strikes again! It seems that the students of Boise State College have a chance to express their feelings in two polls. With two of the Senators, one would almost be led to believe that their opinion was worth something in the eyes of the Senate. This is apparently not the case. This "omnipotent body", has been known to disregard the "minorities". One wonders why the poll was even taken at all. Since its effect on the Senate was minimal.

It appears the Senate felt it inappropriate to conduct such polls, lest there be confusion raised by the questionnaires. Giving consideration to the feelings of the students on issues they felt important enough to respond to, it would seem to be the first responsibility of the "representative government," for now let us consider the fate of two questions which were considered by the Senate.

The Senate was charged with the consideration of over $2700, which was to be allocated to the Boise YMCA for a trip to Florida. In the polls, the students expressed a divided opinion as to whether they should be given the money. Job 100 people that are Boise, the request was divided opinion as to whether the action taken by the Senate was wise. No dissenting vote. It is hardly a representation of opinions of exactly 50 percent of those responding to the poll who voted on it. I had not been discussing the Executive Council at that time, the vote would most certainly have not been on one side.

Another question which was considered was the poll of the students on the requirements for graduation regarding history and literature.

An action taken by the Curriculum Committee and the Faculty Senate, it was proposed leaving out the history and literature requirements. It was the common opinion that the action taken by the Student Senate was highly considered in regard to the final decision to be made by the Faculty Senate. The course of action which was taken by the Student Senate was to recommend to the requirements remain in the core. It was interesting to note that while the students were brought to light, they had, in fact, voted two to one to remove the requirements. It is apparent that the Student Senate should take a look at their intended role in relation to the students they were elected by. The students, in turn, should demand proper representation from those who so willingly allow them to speak for them. Without a cost of $25 a month. Both the Senators and the students have rights, and responsibilities, but new rights and privileges involve responsibility.

Representative James A. McClure, (R-Idaho), ended speculation concerning his entry into the upcoming race for the U.S. Senate by announcing that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination Wednesday.

McClure, who is presently serving his third term as Representative from Idaho's First Congressional District, made the announcement at a press conference in Boise.

In his full statement follows:

On August 24 Senator Len Jordan announced that he would not seek re-election to the United States Senate. I feel my time in the Senate was definitely interesting and would carefully consider whether to seek the Senate seatVacant.

The decision has not been an easy one to make, but I can sincerely state that I will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Nearly six years ago I had to make a difficult choice: whether or not to run for election to the House of Representatives. I feel that I liked living in Payette, and I didn't have the chance to move in the state that has indescribable quality of life which all Idahoans cherish. That above all else I wanted the chance to serve my family in the wholesale manner that was announced to be a candidate for the family conference. But of course, and this decision is influenced by this fact that I am the right choice, not only for the people who I have to consider the Idaho's First Congressional District, but also for my family and myself.

At the news conference, McClure was asked if he thought he made a mistake. McClure said he did not think it would be. With the president's troop withdrawals progressing at the present rate, the withdrawal involvement will cease, leaving only enough troops to keep up local negotiations. He also stated that he fully supports the president's policies in Viet Nam.

When asked what changes he should be made, he stated that he felt that present federal policy tends to be turned back to local initiative. Present land evaluation and agricultural policy tend to be strongly influenced and controlled by the federal government.

The paper of roles reform, "must be careful and not make a bad situation worse by taking away the individual's self-reliance," he said.

White House Youth Conference report released

"The 1971 White House Conference on Youth was a unique event in the public life of the nation. It was the first time that a White House Conference has been held in the concerns of young people.

So he testified to the President of the White House Conference on Youth, released last Wednesday by the White House.

Stephen Hess.

The 160-page document includes approximately 150 recommendations and 4,500 delegates to last April's meeting in Four Park, Col., covering such matters as the day-care centers and extracurricular activities.

You may not agree with all 150 recommendations of the delegates," Hess said, "but their proposals are certainly provocative and are well worth discussion and debate in classrooms and community meetings."

Called by President Nixon almost two years ago, the Conference was an attempt to separate the concerns of youth aged 14 to 26 from those who were problems, who were aired at the White House Conference, which closed in West Virginia last December. At the time of the youth conference's call, President Nixon, said the youth are the "Valiant Americans" in the universities, the farms, the assembly lines, the street corners" be interested in finding out more about them.

The Conference began work on ten areas from foreign policy to sports, ethics and culture, by assigning adult and youth co-chairmen to oversee the preparation of advisory reports to the delegates.

When the Conference completed the delegates used these reports to draft their own recommendations, and removal to be submilled to the April report to the delegates. The Conference report has also been sent to 26,000 "institutional leaders - businesses, unions, churches, mass media, foundations, schools, etc. These institutions will fill out a questionnaire on their plans for acting on pertinent recommendations, and a summary will be prepared in time for next year's report."

In the eight months since April 22, when the Conference ended, at least two recommendations have taken effect, according to the spokesman.

First, the President's ACTION agency, established July 1, fulfilled a Conference wish that the Peace Corps and VISTA be merged into one volunteer agency.

Second, the national Endowment for the Arts has appointed youth members to its Art Advisory Panel at the Conference's recommendation. "Most recommendations were in the form of proposed legislation," the spokesman said. "So, Congress has had no chance to pass any laws implementing these ideas, since the Conference."

Copies of the Report to the President can be obtained for $2.50 each from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C.

Convinced this is "right choice"

Young men who wish to draft deferments in favor of 1-A classification for 1971 may now apply. Local boards will continue to grants these requests in accordance with the conditions for which the deferment expires. The deferment is 60, the last day of the 1971 draft year, and the 1971 selective service group for this 60, the last day of the 1971 draft year, and the 1971 selective service group for 1-11 to 1-A.

This policy was enacted in late 1970 and was particular interest to young men, according to the National Guard. The National Guard and the Ordnance Group are the highest level of deferment. By dropping their deferments at the end of the year, they became part of that year's prime selection group, and on January 1, they were placed in a second priority group. In this, they are not subject to induction until the next major national emergency occurs.

The policy was reaffirmed in a letter from the National Guard on this week by Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr to all 4,300 local boards. Regiments have had to take advantage of the January 1 deadline to be deferred in 1971, their liability for induction will be extended into 1972. They will be prime candidates for induction during the first three months of 1972. The report must be marked no later than December 31.

MEN 125 has been set as the year-end ceiling for 1971 draft calls. Unlike 1970, when the year-end ceiling was not necessarily reached by all local boards, the authorization in the 1971 draft amendments of a National Guard board to allocate all eligible registrants will be considered for inclusion in the 1971 draft calls.

Commenting on the continuation of the policy which allows the dropping of deferments, Dr. Tarr said:

"Young men holding lottery numbers of RSN 126 and above can effectively limit their vulnerability to the draft by being classified into 1-A by year's end. Since the law allows young men to apply for deferments, we believe those young men granted deferments should be able to drop them if they desire."

"Our purposes," Tarr added, "are to achieve fairness to all registrants in determining their priority status on January 1, of this year and to limit the uncertainty that young men with high random number face. Registrants with student, occupational, parenthood, or bank deferments will be eligible to take advantage of this policy."

The Memorandum also announces selective Service policy which allows on assuming the cooperation in the 1971 draft calls.

Starting December 10, if a birthdate number 1-11 to 1-A.

Registering with a lottery number, the records will be sent to the registrant, but the registrant will retain his original lottery number.
“The Child-Buyer”
A tragic comedy on society's commercialism Review..

Struggling through the streets of Boise noticing that the Christmas lights are up two weeks before Thanksgiving, one can easily begin to wonder if commercialism isn’t getting a bit out of hand.

With American capitalism pushing and driving like never before and competition being engendered in our children from kindergarten, who can say what we’ll be doing for the dollar next? For a glance at an unerring possibility, I suggest you see “The Child Buyer,” the opening fall presentation of the College of Idaho Hospitality Arts.

The play, based on the 1960 novel by John Hersey, takes the form of a state senatorial committee investigation which focuses on Wines Jones, of United Lymphohelide Corporation, who purchases child geniuses to serve as “specimens” for industrial and scientific research. One child in a small New England town, Barry Rudd, is exactly what Mr. Jones wants, but there is strong opposition to the sale from people of the town.

Interaction of the committee with the variety of testifying witnesses serves to develop the theme of the play, satirizing American education, government, and military, and ending with a piercing clear look into the George Orwellian cause by money-mad Americans.

A talented cast, under the direction of Dr. Richard Spren sensibly in maintaining a delicate balance between comedy and poignant profoundly through not the performance balance that grows in intensity with the banquet taking on increasingly tragic overtones, as the plot unfolds.

A considerably praiseworthy performance was done by 19-year-old Erik Burdick, playing the part of Barry Rudd.

Annie Marie Bolen, performing at her usual near-professional level did a stirring and thoroughly convincing characterization of Dr. Grace Gogar.

Jef Blattz, by use of a nasal voice tone captures audience attention and achieves a published impersonation of a state senator, Noddy. Charge for Players Rehearsal, Thursday, November 19, it is 25¢ student charge for Fri., Saturday and Sunday night performances is 75¢.

Sha Na Na

Friday!

Sha Na Na is probably one of the foremost, most outrageous musical groups ever to grace a concert or night club stage, and they can be seen Nov. 19 at Boise State College.

They are a satirical one-two-one of the few in music today. They specialize in half the rock and roll Golden Era of the 50’s and on stage they tear apart every one of those top tunes. There are no sacred cows with this band.

Appearing live, they tend to cloud, jerk, crouch, dance and waddle through every number.

They defeat Phil Specter and the Dick Clark groups, and their, “nostalgia” is more humorous than memorable.

They’ve been preserved for posterity at least through the early 70’s on record, having waxed an album called “Sha Na Na” on the Kama Sutra label.

One side was recorded live at Columbia University in New York, and captures the excitement of performing before a live audience. Here the listener can shed a tear over the like of “Jailhouse Rock” and “Tell Laura I Love Her.”

The flip side was done in New York recording studio, but has the same verve and serve as the live side.

In all, however, Sha Na Na is a group which must be seen to be fully appreciated.

The celebration, a 45 minutes of Indian dances, was sponsored by the Community Symphony and the Correctional Institution. Also performing Monday were Lavina Franko, Melton Bronchaeu, and Pasco Abraham.

The Eagle dance is a very special dance because of the significance the eagle holds for Indians. Music for all the dances was the traditional music.

Community Symphony
Concerts clashes with ASB

A potential bomb between the ASB and the Music Department was quietly defused this week. After the last Community symphony concert, Wilbur Elliott, chairman of the Music Department, refused to give the ASB any amount of the revenue from the concert, said Terry Francis, Administrative assistant to Pat Ehrlings, even though the concert program is partially funded by ASB.

"It all started the Friday before the last Community Symphony concert," said Francis. "Elliott called and said he wanted tickets to run the concert. I made some up and gave them to him. He also said he'd heard from some that the ASB wanted revenue from the concerts."

"After the concert," he continued, "I called Elliott. He said that the ASB didn't fund enough in his department to make a difference and refused to share the revenue from the concert with us."

Elliott said he doesn't want any quarrel with the ASB over anything. The Department, he said, is totally funded by the Administration. The $1600 was split to pay for the Lyric Arts Trio (which was free to students and faculty) and the college symphony.

Legally, according to Paul Fisk, ASB treasurer, ASB is entitled to all revenue taken in by all ASB-funded organizations. ASB has given $1600 to the Community Concerts program—all of which has been spent.

According to Francis, he and Fisk talked to Elliott later. Elliott then told them he'd cleared everything with Dr. Shankewiler. The revenue from the concerts, he said, will now go to music scholarships.

ASB is going to drop the matter, said Francis who added he would write Elliott a letter on the lack of communications between the ASB and the Department.

Do you think that the recent polls taken in the Liberal Arts Building and the Business Building are an effective way of communicating with the Student Senators of Boise State? If so, why?

Colburn Spornor, Economics Major
Yes, I feel the polls are good for both the senate and the students. As long as they don't ask too many questions and when they keep it down to a few four or five questions, it helps out a lot more.

Gail Meyers, Liberal Arts Major
I think it is effective. It is definitely a good way to get a voice of the student body in regards to the beliefs of the school and the way it should be run.

Henry Hendel, Political Science Major
Like any means of communication it has to be used. The polls must be made available to the students and the senate must use the results. The poll is a very important way to tell how the students feel.

Steve Hill, Economics Major
They're not effective to me because I never heard of them before.

Roland Jensen, Accounting Major
No, because where it was taken in the Liberal Arts Building it would have the polling of that type of student where as if it was taken in the Student Union, then it would have a more over all class of students. Therefore, it would be a better poll.

Cecil McRiddle, Business Major
Well, I think they are great. I think they're a step towards better communication and it's very needed in getting students participation.

Boise State College graduate will be taking on the College of Idaho Coyotes in the last game of the season this Saturday in Bronco Stadium at 1:30 p.m.

The U of C Coyotes received a tasting last year by the Broncos to the tune of 41-7 and square up with a 6-7 record. The Coyotes have 25 touchdowns this year and have lost only two to 1-O Idaho. Longhand will provide the picks of the U of C squad with senior Tony Hughes and sophomore Mike Howard.

The Broncos will be going into this game after just recently being nudged out of the Big Sky Championship due to a 2-1-7 loss at the hands of the Idaho State University Bengals on Nov. 13. The University of Idaho is in the Big Sky championship running four games behind leading 4-1 conference record. Boise State moves into second place with a 4-2 conference record and an 8-2 overall record.

The Bronco's announcement fight against the Bengals and played well. Boise State lost and well fought against the year, refusing to quit when the going gets tough. Statistic wise, it looked as if the Broncos should have won. Net yards rushing was the big story with 259 and ISU at 136 in the passing department. Boise State exploded with 263 yards compared to ISU's 70. Total offensive yardage showed Boise with 362 and the Bengals at 188. The key factor seemed ISU's tough defense and mistakes made on the Boise side. Net yards for interceptions returned had ISU with 322 and BSC at three. Also, penalties played an important role as Boise was penalized 124 yards and the Bengals 39.

The critical scoring part of the game came in the fourth quarter when the BSC squad was trailing 21-17 and Mark Goodlett intercepted a Bengal pass at their 14 yard line. Boise State quarterback Eric Guthrie pumped a bullet to Al Marshall at the seven and on the next play Gary Howarth bulldozed his way to the three on a quick pitch. Two more running plays and a pass were thwarted by the ISU brickwall defense. Not being able to score the TD the Broncos tried a field goal which bounced off the left upright, leaving the score at 21-17.

The Bengals responded with the first TD came in the third quarter with 2:43 left when Billy Stephens drove his way in from the three off the left guard and the scoreboard at 21-17. Guthrie booted the extra point. The next Boise TD came in the fourth quarter when they drove up the field 55 yards in seven plays and placed the pick on the Bengal 12. Guthrie then threw a bomb to Ken Johnson who went in for the marker. Guthrie kicked the PAT putting the score at 21-17 where it stayed for the rest of the game.

Next year the Bengals will be travelling down to Boise State Nov. 11 to play in Bronco Stadium. As in barding a press at the outcome, let me just say that Coach Tony Knap is good at preparing, yet packages.

Salinger remembers Kennedy

"I have not given a speech on the Kennedy years for about four years now," said Pierre Salinger, former press secretary to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, "and the reason for this is that in the aftermath of the assassination of President Kennedy, and with so many books written that I felt it was time to let the dust settle."

Salinger spoke to a discussion group at BSC last week. He is a former senator from California, a former journalist for the San Francisco Chronicle and a former staff member of Colliers Magazine in addition to being press secretary for the two presidents.

Salinger feels that it is appropriate to again speak of Kennedy because next week is the eighth anniversary of his assassination and the fact that so many young people today only remember President Kennedy for the fact that he was assassinated.

He also feels that the U.S. is going into a period of "revisionist history" about Kennedy, a period which is marked by some second-guessing by people as to whether or not the things he did were what they said at the time.

"One of things that is rather elusive about John Kennedy," according to Salinger, "is the fact that very few of us, except the people that were involved with him remember him before he became president." He said that the U.S. citizen tends to forget the time when Kennedy was struggling to get recognition and remember him only as he emerged from the 1960 presidential campaign.

"We tend to think of him as he turned out emerging from the campaigns of 1960 into the presidency that he was," Salinger said. "We tend to compare him as we remember him in the presidency, forgetting that he evolved as all political figures in the world must evolve."

Salinger believes that the 1960 election was a "watershed election" in American politics. He believes that it marked a dividing point in the politics of America in many ways.

Firstly, it was the first time this country had ever elected a Catholic to the presidency and the first time a man born in this century and a veteran of the second world war had become president.

"But those aren't the real reasons for why I feel it was a water shed election. It was because the techniques of presidential politics ever since," he stated.

The biggest difference was the impact of television in the election, Salinger said. Television for the first time had a direct hand in the choice of the president.

"It does not believe that John Kennedy could have been elected president without the great debate of 1960. This was the first time that a presidential nominee had used television for a debate."

Television was not used in the 1964 election because President Johnson did not want to debate. Nor in the 1968 election because President Nixon did not want to debate. And they will not be used in 1972 because President Nixon has already said that he won't debate, Salinger said.

"Salinger said that two findings have come out of the many studies done on the four debated in 1960. One, that the majority of people who made up their minds about one candidate or the other switched, made up their minds on the candidate. Secondly, and most important, is that the people who actually saw the debate thought that John Kennedy, won while the people who only heard them thought Richard Nixon won them."

These debates ushered in an era in which television has taken an increasing role in the selection and the election of people to public office, not only the presidency, but to other offices as well.

Salinger went on to talk of President Kennedy's foreign policy. He feels that on the topic of foreign policy, Kennedy's biggest mistakes as well as his greatest victories emerge.

He said that one striking thing he witnessed as secretary to Kennedy, was a meeting one day before Kennedy became president, with President Eisenhower. He said that Eisenhower explained the world situation to Kennedy and put once during that meeting did the word Viet Nam come up. It was not mentioned because it was not important at that time. This shows how much the world can change in just one decade, Salinger said.

The worst disaster that President Kennedy was involved in was the Bay of Pigs incident in 1961. In this, the CIA and the joint chiefs of staff had planned to drop 1000 men on the coast of Cuba in the thought that once they were there, the Cubans would rise up against Castro. Of course this did not happen but, Salinger said, Kennedy handled himself with a great deal of courage and honesty.

"He showed this when people around him started leaking to the press that it was not his fault, that it was the CIA's fault. He called me into his office and told me to hold a press conference and tell the people that it was not the CIA's fault, but that it was his fault. As president, he must take the blame."

The Bay of Pigs set off a string of events such as the summit meeting with Kruschev in which the two leaders got the chance to know each other and size each other up. This helped the United States when the fiery crises arose, according to Salinger.

One victory of President Kennedy, according to Salinger, was the test ban treaty following the Interstate ban treaty. This treaty, according to Salinger, would not have been reached if it were not for the influence of the Soviet Union.

Leaving this, Salinger said many people feel that Kennedy did not do as well in domestic affairs as he did in foreign affairs. The reason for this they claim is that he did not get very much legislation passed during his administration.

Salinger felt however, that Kennedy did get some very important legislation passed, especially in the fields of Medicare, federal aid to education, civil rights and many others.

Another great achievement of Kennedy, according to Salinger, was his interest in the space program. Kennedy said that the U.S. would have a man on the moon before the end of the sixties.

And that happened, as briefly stated by his death.

Salinger, in speaking of Viet Nam, said, "John Kennedy felt that the United States had a role in Viet Nam." He did send approximately 15,000 troops to Viet Nam.

But, Salinger said, Kennedy felt that the United States should be in the war as an adviser, that the Vietnamese should win or lose the war. And although no prediction can be made as to what Kennedy would have done had he lived, Salinger said, he doubts whether Kennedy would have sent half a million troops to Viet Nam.

Salinger closed his speech by saying that in his opinion Kennedy will go down in history as a great president. He tried in many ways to break down the past and go on to the new. From 1960 to 1963 marked a changing point in the history of the United States that is still prevalent today, he said.
