Vo-Tech responds to Verby

Mr. Verby:

What is all this about the staff policy of turning-out drones (workers) instead of thinkers?

Why don't you tell all the students to do the same and save us the trouble of doing so for you in life?

Tell them that you went to Vo-Tech for one (1) year and then didn't stay with it! Is it not then that you ought to make a grade as a drone worker, as you refer to the people as drones?

What would happen to this world if everyone decided to do what they've said many times, most of the people can't see the woods because of the thicket. I think this is affecting your judgment.

Maybe this affecting your judgment?

Support the Coffee House

In the Editor

The Covered Wagon Coffeehouse, Mountain House Idaho, organized by active duty military men and women, citizen supporters as part of a G.I. program, is being held on Sunday, November 21. This followed repeated harassment and threats from elements in the local community. On Thursday, November 18, a member of the project was beaten up inside the coffeehouse. On Saturday, November 20, the premises were illegally entered and the word, "This is just a warning," were painted on the wall.

The Covered Wagon was an old theater which G.I.'s converted. Having many hours of hard work, into a meeting place for their off-duty activities. These include publication of their newspaper the "Helping Hand" (what we call a "coffeehouse") and other G.I. rights, women's meetings, political education sessions, music groups and work with local people, such as the Idaho Migrant Program. In short, the project which offers an alternative to the daily abuses of the military system used the coffeehouse as its center.

We feel the G.I. Movement must have the support of all people who desire a quick end to the war in Indochina. The active duty men and women at Mountain Home Air Force Base tell us that the G.I. movement is stronger than ever now, due to this incident and their growing awareness of the necessity to organize together for a world free of militarism. We ask that you help them re-establish a new center. We feel it is a matter of sending a contribution immediately to the Covered Wagon, P.O. Box 974, Mountain Home, Idaho 83647, or, a donation order post marked "U.S. Military" to the United Services Organization, 20 Greenwich Ave., N.Y. 10011, which has supported the Covered Wagon and similar projects.

Francis rebuts Elliott

Mr. Elliott:

What would happen to this institution, if the ASBSC office's position as far as Community Symphony is concerned, is ignored in the moving of the Masonic Auditorium? The ASBSC realizes that the Community Symphony Concerts clothes with ASBSC, were only in an effort to let students know what is happening to their money. I made a special effort to want to talk to all parties involved, including Mr. Elliott before any formal action was taken.

The 1971-72 Symphony, "Community Symphony Concerts clothes with ASBSC", were only in an effort to let students know what is happening to their money. I made a special effort to want to talk to all parties involved, including Mr. Elliott before any formal action was taken. Why did you not realize that the students are the ones who would have the right to know what is happening to their money? It is not a case of "How much money is being spent on student funds?" but rather how the student's money is being spent.

I am writing this letter in behalf of Mr. R. Ballard, Community Symphony chairman, who is a policy of the ASBSC office's position as far as Community Symphony is concerned by the students. Taylor Justifies Core Curriculum

In at least one corner of the university, the core curriculum still stands as the bastion of a sound liberal arts education. In an interview, Father John Taylor, S. J., dean of arts and sciences, explained the importance of the core in "developing the full potentiality of man, in particular, his intellectual capacities, at their deepest level."

He criticized the current vogue on colleges to be innovative and experimental, commenting that a number of schools in financial difficulties are using practive courses as an alternative to hiring new teachers. "I don't think this is a responsible way to run a school. You turn out a lot of people who are just half-baked," he said.

Asked whether he had received much adverse opinion on the curriculum, Taylor answered that students frequently come up with particular gripes, but "usually they're not on the theoretical level."

Should students receive credit for practical experience in such areas as communications? Taylor had a number of responses. He said that "practical ad hoc things really don't educate. The more those things intrude, the less liberal is the education." He particularly stressed that it is a liberal education which Gonzaga strives to provide, and that this necessarily qualifies the kind of courses offered. "All kinds of learning experiences are valuable," he said, "but they are not necessarily academic. And, they don't have to all be accredited."

By the very nature of a liberal education, according to Taylor, students must be provided with learning experiences in various disciplines. Those different fields should be studied, but not so much for the knowledge acquired and retained, he said. Taylor admitted that students forget "probably 90 per cent" of classroom material. Rather, the value of placing a liberal arts student in science classes, and science majors in poetry offerings lies in the intellectual habits formed, said the dean.

In this area, Taylor doubted the capacity of students to judge what habits they should acquire. "Student interests are directed toward immediately and objectively relevant subjects," he stated. "Before they can understand the value, they must experience more of life." Because the faculty is "ultimately accountable" for the kind of education given, Taylor placed the burden of curriculum decisions upon them.

Taylor also sees alumni as important potential contributors to academic decisions. However, their input has only been "casual" so far, he said.

Supreme Court strikes
sex bias in Idaho

Washington, D.C. In a unanimous vote of 7-0 the Supreme Court struck down an Idaho law giving women preference over men in relations for first time that the 14th Amendment applies in sex discrimination cases.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote the opinion modifying the state law which saw women gain not be treated equally with men in administration of estates.

Other than the 5-3 Supreme Court decision, each state committee agreed on a proposed constitutional amendment outlawing legal distinctions between men and women not based on physiological or functional differences. But the Idaho Committee voted down the amendment a few minutes that the high court decision saying that women's rights could be adequately established through the courts.

The amendment will still be open to a vote in the general election because it was certified by the Idaho Secretary of State.

The decision was based upon the clause in the 14th Amendment forbidding denial of equal protection of the law. The judges held it was a violation of the amendment's guarantee to members of one sex to deny them the right of membership in the other sex to the legislature's failure to provide funds for the enforcement of the state constitution. The basis was that the amendment was not subjected to the action of the legislature. The committee, San J. From 1964, said.

Until now, state committees providing legislation were prohibited in the election of whether women had voting rights.

The court did not grant the plea's contention that a legislative body was illegal unless a majority of women were given women to the body.
"Our crime is that we were effective"

By Daniel Alaimo

Los Angeles (CPS)-When a mutter counsels her son to go to college in order to stay out of trouble, she is probably not thinking of the draft. But Dr. Bernard Bender, a Canoga Park dentist and victim of a recent grand jury "expedition" into the realm of draft counseling and draft resistance movement here in LA and across the country.

Dr. Bender and his son, Lawrence, 22, a student at Cal State Monterey Bay College, have been charged with counseling, aiding, and abetting Selective Service registrants to evade the service and making false claims concerning their classifications.

To earn this distinction, Dr. Bender placed braces onto orthodontic appliances (braces) on the teeth of an estimated 20 young men about to undergo physical examination for their draft boards.

Dr. Bender's son said, "Our crime is that we were effective.

"Whether or not the braces were absolutely necessary is not an issue in this case, the only question is whether the treatment was done in terms of a draft deferment."

Because of the nature of most people's teeth, it can be shown that braces can be necessary for just about anything somebody has. It becomes a matter of whether or not the person was thinking about the draft when he had them put on.

"In other words, the government is giving them all these rights and immunities on one condition, that they never use them. If they use them, they go to jail."

Bender's son said that the question seemed to be raised by those who are neither wearing braces nor going to college.

"If you don't use 'em, they say, "You're not a good enough person." But if you wear 'em, they say, "You're not good enough to go to college." So the government's doing it on its own, and there's nothing they can do about it."

About four years ago, a smoothly functioning draft counseling operation was organized in the Los Angeles area. Since then, LA has had 25 percent more deferments than any other area of its kind in the country, for the draft boards to operate according to their own laws and regulations, something they had never done before.

Evidently this percentage prompted the grand jury to look into the movement as a whole, not just particular cases, and the indictment on Dr. Bender, Lawrence, and 11 of Dr. Bender's patients.

Lawrence said that "the whole first part of the grand jury transcripts (which they acquired through discovery) were so nothing to do with us. It was nothing but a fishing expedition."

"I call a witness, try to come up with names they could prosecute."

Another effect of the indictments, Lawrence, is to scare dentists throughout the country so that the draft is now between the ages of 18 and 25 walks into his office he becomes scared stiff because the kid has the draft in the back of his mind."

In regard to the basically middle-aged jury he said, "We feel we have a fairly good, honest jury, like, for example, who had eight ex-wives on his jury. They found him guilty in 10 minutes. We feel we have a good representation."

"As far as I'm concerned it shouldn't be a representation of my people through 25 years old up cause in the jury selection process and was immediately kicked off by the government."

Lawrence continued, "The process of jury selection. The judge (Mr. Andrew Kent) asked each potential juror, do you have any feelings towards the war pros or agans? Everyone answers "No! Do you have any feelings towards the draft pros or agans? Everyone answers "No! According to everyone on the jury they have no feelings towards anything."

The 11 count indictment is charged against him. Dr. Bender faces a possible 35 year sentence, five years on each count. Lawrence's two counts may bring him 10 years.

"In the story of a man's capture and arrest is a commonly used name in Arlco Godwin's "Bert's "Alecs's Return.""

Last spring, Dr. Bender sold his practice and retired to Arlco Godwin's "Bert's Return." He sold his two sons and a friend left on an extended road vacation and were turned down the west coast through the Panama Canal to Jamaica. He was then Jan. 15, 1973.

During a storm they drifted off course and ended up off the coast of an island which turned out to be Cuba. At this same time four Cuban submarines had been caught by the United States. They were then policed for 36 hours by its in the water blockading the exchange of the submarines. They were finally released, after being fined $2,000 each.

While they were at Cuba, the Los Angeles grand jury had shown arrests, arrested individuals against Dr. Bender and Lawrence. Two jury members called the Cuban coast (the U.S. Coast Guard's counter offuscation) polled over the waterfall. When "Cuban," the Coast Guard had no warrant, an excerpt from the Miami Herald stating that they were wanted for draft evasion charges. They were then taken back to L.A. in handcuffs and chains at what must have been an extreme expense to the government.

During the trip back to Miami aboard the cutter, they sighted a brighter and another 500 foot sailboat working. They did not stop to help the government regarded it as more important to get the Bender back to the country.

On the way back to Miami, they were treated to all the comforts of a first class 747. People watched, waved, and stared, and we are not to make any kind of a scene before the rest of the passengers. Their treatment at the airport was described by Lawrence as something you might see in a cop and robbers show on television. Suburban, full of house, broken security and top security, all at taxpayers expense for a dentist and his son.

Bail was originally set at $10,000 for Dr. Bender and $100,000 for Lawrence. This was eventually reduced to $30,000 and $10,000 respectively.

The Benders have lived in the LA area for 15 years. Comparing the jails they visited on their little rap, Lawrence said. "Mara Mia City Jail. We thought of our experiences in Cuba as out-of-sight paradise. The jail was a big room with about 20 men. Half of whom were ex-servicemen picked up for draft, all with a few bony shoulder, but we were getting along fine, we were having a good time."

Then, we were taken to Georgetown headquarters, L.A. County Jail. If you even see the word with the electric shock things all in a row, that's L.A. County.

79 degrees in there and night and no air circulation. We were kept in huziers and bells. You become an animal, you don't have to think.

The trial is expected to be a short one.

3E Revolution
As the third and final speaker presented by the Boise State Committee, Pierre Salinger said this semester—newman John Sack—has come and gone. It is a good omen that the committee has selected this year, problems encountered and presented as they have been.

Chairman Ron Haberman, a junior business student, is currently chairman of the committee, from realizing its actual role, has written the future.

The man problem facing the committee, he said, was in getting students to volunteer to talk to the current speakers and getting people to listen to the speakers contracted.

As for the first: "The problem that students say lies in the committee, but when you when them we do it, they do not do it for this, their own interest."

The present means of recruiting students to write on the committee involves efforts by associated student offices. Haberman said there is potential for building student mailers, advertising for volunteers, but the reaction is poor. He wants interested students to contact the committee directly.

The present makeup of the Lecture Committee reflects the choice of speakers brought to the campus, Haberman admits. I would say the committee is basically conservative, due to the fact that most of the people are prominent names. But we have been trying to do all sorts of things, he has succeeded in getting young students who live on campus to join us and add new and different ideas.

When asked if more controversial speakers brought to campus therefore, should more potential speakers be brought to campus, Haberman said, "I would think interest in the committee's work Haberman said.

The choice of lectures this year was on the basis of funds, (they have a $10,000 budget) and speakers available. This year we contracted six of seven people of which a couple canceled. This presents a problem in mid-year when you have to contract to plan next year. A list of the more popular ones are:

First of all, to bring in people with big names, this is what people want. Students have discussed the choice of Joe Blow speak on theology.

Hence, Astronaut John Glenn and former presidential press secretary Paul Farley were chosen to lead off the lecture series this semester.

Haberman said the committee is making a serious attempt in contacting local and commuter speakers, however, John Sack was "very excited".

Tuesday night talked about U.S. military and conditions in Viet Nam at the time of the My Lai massacre.

In addition, women's liberation advocate Anthony was scheduled for the series in February, she was hired for women's rights along with the outspoken Gloria Steinem.

When bringing left-oriented speakers to campus, Haberman said, "We have discussed this, but the opinion of the committee right now is that we don't think they would go over well. Basically, we believe this whole idea is not too much for this area. We are not quite ready for the hard core left. We're still young. I believe that most people would really understand what these people have to say. We would like to bring in some radicals—but not way way way way to the left. There is a difference between what we could bring in and chiasmus that would go over well.

While he believes the campus remains relatively conservative, Haberman admits there has been a change in student views over the past few years. As we get bigger we begin to see factions in this school, nothing really big, but there is the feeling of starting to grow—which is normal.

As for next year, Haberman said the committee is going to expand its budget. We have some ideas. We have a chance to pick up a video tape for about $750. It contains about 10 speeches by various political figures and it outlines their ideas. This is something we need this year. We are going to explore this idea further.

With the presidential election coming up for next November, the committee is considering inviting presidential candidates out on the Boise campus.

Haberman noted, "When we were here before working on Sen George McGovern's presidential campaign, I asked him what were our chances of getting Sen. McGovern to come to Boise State on a stop over. He was on his way to the Oregon primaries. He said to think we might be able to work something out.

He added, "We have been in contact with other presidential candidates, and we will send invitations to them to stop here."

He said there in a definite chance of getting the front running democratic presidential candidates Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, to visit the Boise area.

The committee is working in conjunction with the state Democratic headquarters on the matter.

Also, to consider the possibilities of other forums for the students where Idaho congressmen would be presented. The seats were held by Sen. Lon R. Jordan and Rep. James S. McClure are up for bid now.

Haberman said, "I think it's a definite plus for our committee if we could bring these people in. I do believe the students are interested. It definitely going to concern their next November when we have our general election, because most of them will be voting."

"I'd like to get somebody on the committee to take care of all these political aspects, sort of a sub-chairman. It takes time and effort. The average student, he critically noted, "doesn't want to put out any effort."

I'm preventing students are indeed needed to carry out the programs of the Lecture Committee. And several choice spots are open. Haberman said he could be contacted through the College Union Program Director's office on the main floor of the CUB. Is anybody listening?

Question: What do you think of the way the Pops Concert Committee has handled the recent concerts in the Boise State College Gym? How do you think they could serve the students of Boise State better?

1. Karen Pierrat - Freshman - Communications
   I think they have done OK with these. They've brought in a lot of big name groups and I like the way they've asked who to bring in.

2. Michelle Haney - Freshman - Art Ed.
   I think they're holding them just fine and I think the only thing they could do better is just get some of the groups more people want.

3. Rick Harvey - Senior - Art Ed.
   Well, I think we've had good concerts so far. I have been to most of them and I liked them a lot. I don't know of any way that they could handle them better.

   Well, I am glad they're bringing in J.C. Superstar, but I'd like them to get Creedence Clearwater and maybe find out what students want.

5. Jeanette Addell - Sophomore - Music Ed.
   I think they've worked hard and they've done a fine job of bringing in Pops Concerts but I think it's a shame they can't bring in more legitimate (quote, unquote) classical type concerts for the students.

6. William Arrigito - Sophomore - History
   I don't know how they are handling them and I think that they could improve if they would have a few on weekends, Sat. or Sun. night. It would help for some of us students who have to work.

7. Leon Bellakki - Sophomore - History
   I think they're handling it fairly well. I've gone to several other concerts. I think they do pretty good. If they can have them more than one night or at least two shows in one night instead of the usual one, it would help.

8. Chris Oswald - Jr. - Psychology
   They're handling them the ones that they have, well. The prices are reasonable. If they had some kind of poll on who would be available to have.

Buzzard lectures on the Tarahumar

Dr. Melissa Buzzard of the College of Idaho will lecture and show a movie on the Tarahumar Indians of the Americas at Boise State College on Monday evening, December 13th. The program is sponsored by the Human Relations Program of BSC.

The Tarahumar are a tribe of 50,000 Mexican Indians living in serene, inaccessible hill country for miles around. They are said to be one of the most beautiful peoples living on this earth. They are very shy, but they are trying to be friendly these days. They do not speak Spanish, but they are eager to learn it. They have a fine sense of humor and are very kind to guests.

One hundred journals are now available in the BSC library, and more than one hundred have already been donated by the doctors.

The program started approximately three years ago but has been at the planning stage for some time. It is hoped that the program will continue to grow.

A study of the life and teachings of Jesus Christ is one of the three college accredited Biblical studies that is being made available to all BSC students through the Church of Christ Bible Chair, a newly organized student group on Campus. John W. Moreland, the director of the Bible Chair, holding BS and MA degrees in Religion from Eastern New Mexico University will serve as instructor of the courses.

Moreland, who moved to Idaho last summer for the purpose of conducting accredited biblical studies at BSC is supported by the Church of Christ which meets at 2000 Falkerado in Boise. He said that "this trend in the college community appears to be making a great change. Students, generally speaking, have long ago lost interest in established religion and religious churches. But across the nation we are experiencing a renewed interest among college students in a return to the Bible and a return to the religion of Jesus Christ. This new campus Bible Chair studies will contribute several deserving faculty members and will admit their names to the BSC student body for a vote sometime in March (the exact date will be announced at a later time). The awarding of the honor will place probably sometime in April. The honored faculty member will receive a certificate of recognition and his name will be inscribed on a plaque to be displayed on campus for the viewing of the students, faculty and visitors at BSC.

State Board approves School of Health Sciences

Bose State College will have a new school next fall—the School of Health Sciences. The State Board of Education, meeting in Boise last Friday

Dr. John Barnes said that over one year enrollment in health areas has increased 28 to 29 per cent at ISU. There is a need for the expansion of many of the health occupation curriculums in higher education, he said. The board is not meeting these demands. Barnes pointed out that Boise State is well located for major health programs. It is the only college in the Treasure Valley.

Dr. John Swartley, Boise, said that the money was coming due. The sooner it can be implemented, the better, he said.

To set up the new school, Dr. Barnes said, the college will have to open a position for a dean of Health Sciences. “We need someone with the experience in health areas to coordinate college programs and state and federal programs.” Presently, he said, there is no one at the college with such experience.

The Board also approved plans for a two-phase married housing program. To be completed in 1973, the project will cost an estimated $4.5 million. The units will have either one or two bedrooms. Fencing, parking and play ground will also be provided. According to Roger Green, Vice President for financial affairs, rent is anticipated at $100 a month for one bedroom apartments and $125 a month for two bedroom apartments. The units will be located at Boise Avenue and Beacon street and at Boise Avenue and Prospect Avenue.

At a noon luncheon held Thursday at the College, the State Board of Education met members of the Permanent Building Fund Council and discussed the need for more buildings. Said Emery Heddles, Chairman of the council, if the colleges and universities want more buildings, they will have to try to get legislation for direct appropriations or find a way to increase the fund.

Three weeks ago the Council turned down the State Board's request to fund its two top building priorities. The BSC SciEd building and the ISU library were turned down because, the Council said then the cost would be greater than the fund.

Dr. Donald Kline, executive director of higher education, said that the presidents of the two schools had agreed that the BSC SciEd building would be built first, then the library at ISU as the money became available.

Student body leaders made a report at the joint session held Friday. The Board passed a recommendation that would lower credit hour requirements for student body officers. Effective second semester, a student body president may take three (3) credit hours per semester the the vice presidents, treasurer and senators six credit hours. All however, must pay full-time fees.

Pat Flaherty, AUSB president, said the action “will help perpetuate. Student leaders will have the time to administer the programs students pay for and elect them to administer,” he added.

The recommendation originated on the ISGA agenda last fall. The State Board then maintained that student body leaders should take the eight-hour load.

Dr. John Swartley, who opposed the lowered credit hour load last summer, continued his opposition until this meeting. Referring a motion to deny the recommendation, he said “Physicians and women have a right to change their minds” and voted in favor of the change.

In other action the Board decided that classes will be held on Washington's Birthday, Columbus day and Veteran's Day though they are legal holidays.
