Dr. Edward Benoit "Why wasn't this presented to the Board when you presented that statement?"

Dr. John Barnes—"I assume we had those. I don't know why it was not."

Barnes called on public carpet for PSP

The State Board of Education Friday severely reprimanded Boise State University President, Dr. John Barnes for what one member called "circumventing the board." The public put-down was a result of the administration's proposed President's Scholar's Program. PSP would allow exceptional high school students to enter BSU with certain basic classes waived. In essence, the proposal would establish a three-year baccalaureate program.

At last month's Board meeting, Barnes informed the members that such a program was under consideration; however, he did not tell them it was to be implemented in the fall. This infuriated the board.

In his presentation Friday, Barnes told the Board that the program was underway and progressing smoothly and that they would be informed at the April board meeting as to how it was being implemented. Barnes stated that close to 50 students had applied for the program thus far.

"I want to know several things, Doctor," stated board member Edward Benoit of Twin Falls. "I want to know, number one, when was this brochure (the brochure advertising PSP) printed?"

"I don't know exactly," replied Barnes.

"I want to know the date it was printed," Benoit demanded. "Was it printed two weeks ago; three weeks ago - when? Was it printed before you came to the Board (at the last meeting)...?"

Barnes: "Yes."

Benoit: "Were your application forms printed?"

Barnes: "No, no they were not."

Benoit: "Why wasn't this presented to the Board when you presented that statement?"

"I assume we had those. I don't know why it was not," Barnes replied.

"Well, now look Doctor, that statement you made led me to believe, and I think every member of this Board, that this was a program that you were reviewing, and it's my opinion... that it was entirely improper for you to send out brochures like this or to recruit students without approval of the Board. I'm accusing you to your face of... presenting to the Board a policy that should be presented by the Board and I think that you should send your recruiters around to everybody that you sent those applications to and withdraw them until you have come before this Board for approval of that policy."

Benoit, a Twin Falls attorney who was the most angered of the Board, further accused Barnes of "overstepping his authority, of acting completely out of line, and of insulting the Board."

The Board was mad, not because of the program itself but because of the by-pass of the Board. The brochure states that an experimental program at BSU will begin in the fall... the Board wanted to know when it gave authorization for such a program... Barnes admitted it had not.

At one point, Board member Butch Alford, Lewiston, asked Barnes what else he was doing in the way of experimental programs that the Board didn't know about. "Nothing," replied Barnes.

Member Janet Hay of Nampa termed Barnes's excuse for implementing the program without Board authorization, "naive."

By a unanimous vote the Board then approved a motion ordering Barnes to cease any further advertising of the program and the solicitation of students. The Board further concurred that such a program could be reviewed by a curriculum committee with input from the other institutions of higher learning.

Following the harsh criticism, State Representative Lyle Cobbs, Tuesday, called the public scolding of Dr. Barnes, unbecoming of the Board. He also felt the public scolding of Barnes by the media was improper.

Students gain time with changes made in academic calendar

Beginning next fall, students will have an extra two weeks following mid-term exams to withdraw from classes without penalty for failing work. This and other changes in the 1974-75 academic calendar were made at the Faculty Senate meeting Thursday, March 7.

The extension of the withdrawal date from October 25/March 7 to November 8/March 21 was made to give the registrar's office sufficient time to process and issue mid-semester reports. Students will thus have the benefit of actually seeing their mid-semester grades before deciding whether to drop a particular course. A student who receives an F at midterm will receive a W if he drops the course within the following two weeks.

Notification of incompletes will also be issued at the mid-semester. October 25/March 7 will not be the dates students must have incompletes cleared from their records, as stated in the current calendar, but rather the day they will be notified that they should meet with their instructors to choose one of several alternatives available to them. These include completing the course that semester, extending the incomplete into the next semester, or changing the Incomplete to a W.

September 10 and January 17 were retained as the last days in their respective semesters to register late, to add new courses for credit and to change from audit to credit. However, this year the right of petition, which has been an unprinted policy for several years, will be included in the academic calendar. Students may do all of the above after the deadlines by filing a petition stating the change requested and signed by the instructor.

November 25 and April 24 are listed as the last days to withdraw from classes. Imposing these dates gives the Registrar's office time to process the withdrawal and inform the instructor of the changes before the final semester report is issued. No guarantees are made the student who waits this long to drop a class, however. The instructor has the choice of giving the student either a W or an F, and this grade will appear with the student's name on the permanent class record.

These changes were formulated by the Academic Standards Committee at the request of the Executive Council. They were originally approved as recommended by the committee at the Faculty Senate's February 28 meeting. However, Senator Bill Mech claimed he hadn't really understood what he was voting on that week, so the changes were amended slightly at the March 7 meeting.

Senate concurs with Judiciary, places fraternity on probation

The ASBSU Judiciary announced this week that the Pi Sigma Epsilon marketing fraternity has been found to be acting in violation of the ASBSU Constitution and the announcement was made at the Student Senate meeting Tuesday.

The Judiciary revoked the fraternity's "right to exist" at the university; however, it provided that the group could continue functioning on a probationary status until the end of this semester. By that time, the group must have corrected its national and local charter to conform with the provisions of the ASBSU constitution.

The action stemmed from a complaint by seven female business students who were denied a full membership in the organization. The complaint alleged that the women had been denied access to better employment, opportunities, executive contact, and consideration for scholarships because of the discriminatory attitude.

To regain full recognition, the fraternity was required to comply with a section of the ASBSU

Constitution that states that "all full-time students... (shall have) all the rights and privileges... in any activities to which the authority of the Constitution extends."

The Senate voted to concur with their action.

Other actions taken by the Senate included:

Doug Shanholtz expressed displeasure over the State Board of Education's public criticism of Dr. Barnes and asked the Senate to consider taking steps to inform the legislators about their feelings on the incident.

Nostalgia came to the BSU cafeteria Tuesday as the ARA food service presented dinner in a carnival atmosphere. Pictured here, Gary Riberio lights a cigarette for Helen Harris while Barbara Heton waits her turn. All are food service employees.

Double standard

Academic credibility sacrificed for winning football teams

Last week the Faculty Senate voted to remove the deadlines after which a student cannot petition to make class changes from the 1974-75 academic calendar. This was a move to deliberately withhold information about the academic policy from the students-a certain portion of them. It could jepordize the academic credibility of this university.

There is currently no deadline to make class changes, by petition one can enroll in and receive a grade from classes that were held several semesters ago. All one needs is the permission of the instructor to petition.

Many instructors say that they won't sign a petition to let a student into their class if they don't think he can make it. But the policy seems to have been designed for athletes, and jocks needing to pick up a few credit hours or raise their GPA so they'll be eligible for sports are easily accomodated by the chairman and instructors of the PE Department.

There's nothing wrong with this of course. Nobody's breaking any rules. It's just that only a portion of the students are allowed to use (or abuse) this policy. If the policy is good enough to have let's let everyone use it, and if it's so bad that we have to be ashamed and afraid to have it on the books, lets get rid of it.

Because we all know that it won't be Joe Blow-who-needs-a-break that will get it. It'll be that new football star who flunked out of his old JC right after he got drafted by Boise State. It's those kind of people who help build John Barnes' edifice complex. (or is it a concept?)

This is only the second time in eight days that the Senate had considered the academic calendar, however. At their February 28 meeting they had established a deadline after which petitions could not be processed. The matter was brought up for reconsideration because Bill Mech claimed that he and other Senators hadn't understood what they were voting on the week before. One wonders if such deliberation and planning always goes into their decisions.

Senator Pat Ourada urged that the deadline be eliminated because she disapproved of the policy and didn't want it advertised in the catalog. The general attitude at the meeting seemed to be "We all know it goes on, so why advertise it? It will only open the floodgate of students wishing to make class changes."

And when confronted with Guy Hunt's anecdote about the head of the PE Department telling him in the fall to register two athletes for a golf class that had been held the previous spring, Senator Leo Knowlton, School of Business, merely said "Sure, we know it goes on, and if a student gets in trouble we take care of him. But we don't want it to be common knowledge."

Pat Ourada told me that I'm too idealistic, that rules were made to be broken, and that the policy is abused every day. Someone else told me that one function of an education is building a value system.

How much value can it have if we've only supposed to use it in an abstract sense during our student days?

Student slays streakers

Editor, the Arbiter:

I usually try to avoid late hours, but one night last week I couldn't get to sleep so I stayed up to watch Johnny Carson. He was talking about the new fad around the colleges nowadays. He called it streaking. I was really amazed at this, but I was even more amazed to find out it was happening right here on my campus.

I know kids have to have their fun, but running around without any clothes on is not my idea of fun. At least they could wear swimming suits. My mom and dad say they used to swallow gold fish, which is almost as bad, but at least they didn't take their clothes off to do it.

Why can't these students direct this energy toward something to better their community?

Bankers and oil

WASHINGTON - Those gas lines that you have to wait in have been caused by a deadly combination of industry greed and government bumbling. But they were also caused by bankers.

The world is awash in oil, but there are not enough refineries to make it into gasoline. The major oil companies have built few refineries in the last ten years. Here's where the bankers come in.

Independent refiners have had trouble getting financing to build new plants, because of the close ties between the eight major oil companies and the nation's largest banks. Many of the same men, who sit on the boards of the banks, also sit on the boards of the oil companies.

Therefore, they did not want to see the independents build more refineries and cut into the profits of the major oil companies.

In addition to freezing the independents out, the bankers have helped make the oil industry interdependent, rather than competitive. For example, the Chase Manhattan Bank is both the largest shareholder in Atlantic Richfield and the second largest shareholder of Mobil. Obviously, it is not in the bank's interest to promote competition between the two.

The Federal Trade Commission, meanwhile, has charged that the oil business is not free enterprise at all, but a monopoly which operates to the detriment of the public. It has filed suit to break up the oil trust.

Battle for Oman: The headlines hold out hope of peace in the Middle East and detente with Russia. But the opposite is developing in an obscure but strategic corner of the world.

The place is the oil-rich Shiekhdom of Oman, which controls the entrance to the Persian Gulf. All tankers, carrying oil reserves, must pass from the Persian Gulf into the Gulf of Oman.

Under hostile control, Oman could bottle up the flow of oil out of the Persian-Gulf. This is the jugular which carries the West's economic lifeblood.

Now the Shiekh of Oman, backed by the United States, is challenged by Communist insurgents, who are backed by the Soviet Union. Our staunch ally, Iran, has dispatched troops to Oman to battle the rebels.

Meanwhile, fishing fleets from both the United States and the Soviet Union have suddenly taken an interest in fishing in the crucial Gulf of Oman.

The American fishing vessels are owned by Charles Black, the husband of former child star Shirley Temple. She has close connections with the Nixon Administration. This has led to rumors that her husband's boats are really fishing for information.

The Soviet trawlers are also bristling with electronic gear, more suitable for spying than fishing.

The battle for Oman is beginning to look a little like a rerun of Vietnam. The stakes: access to the world's largest oil supply.

Church mouse waits for holy companionship

Editor, the Arbiter:

I'm a shy little churchmouse, Innocencia, and I regret that the Arbiter didn't remind folks that Wednesday, February 27, was Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent. That means forty days of practicing love of God to your neighbor. Or to put it another way, seeing that you are eligible for a Browne point daily by doing some good deed without advertising the fact.

You all have read "Everyman" and will recall that regardless of your beliefs, death is as inevitable as taxes. And like Everyman learned, Good Deeds were the only thing he could take with him beyond the pearly gates.

Many of you have seen Tevye in the "Fiddler" who had a good communication with his God.

How about improving your relationship with God by attending church more frequently and partaking of the special services, classes, lectures, etc. that the minister of your church has arranged for Lent as a preparation for the big Feastday, Easter?

Where do I come in? Though I'm shy and hide, I enjoy watching the baggy pants, the trim ankles in high-heeled slippers, the clump of boots, the denims, and the variety of footgear bringing students in search of "higher learning." I love company in my audio-visual fashion and sometimes I get so lonely waiting for someone to come.

Litter deemed a problem

Editor, the Arbiter,

There is an old problem here at BSU which involves all of us. The problem is what we see on almost every lightpost, tree, wall, in the middle of our lawns, and almost anywhere paper can be tacked up. The problem is litter. The reason I call it litter is because it usually ends up on the ground, and eventually in the garbage. Litter everywhere, defacing everything it touches and costing the state to clean it up.

There are bulletin boards, which are completely covered, for these announcements. What we need is to keep these bulletins in their proper place, on the bulletin board. Maybe the answer is the construction of another bulletin board, restrictions on size of bulletins, or a limit on the amount of time on display.

With the upcoming election, there is a greater abundance of litter. It's bad enough to walk into the restroom and see the same litter by the john, but someone had the nerve to cram it under our doors here at Chaffee Hall. (By the way, I thought there was a paper shortage going on). I'm sure all the candidates are responsible for adding to this grabage. My suggestion is for every candidate to take a look at what's happening on campus, then decide what really should be done if elected.

A concerned Chaffee Hall resident, Swede

Arbiter asks students about changes for BSU

The Arbiter conducted a survey last week to find out how students feel we stand as a university. All the students interviewed were asked the following question:

"Now that we're a university, what changes do you think need to be made?"

Dennis DeBrouche

DENNIS DeBROUCHE: I really can't think of any. I'm satisfied the way it is.

Paula Puckett

PAULA PUCKETT: I see a university as covering a lot of areas, but these areas are very specialized. Boise State has not yet specialized enough in its different departments. I see that what it needs to do now is specialize in general departments, offer majors in foreign languages and Advertising Design, something very specific like this; plus the general things that a college and university covers.

TERRY WEBB: I personally think we need an auditorium of some sort. It is the only change I can think of that we need. It has nothing to do with being a university.

Terry Webb

GREG NUTT: I'd like to see a graduate program in Psychology, the sciences, Business, Education, Social Work, and Biology.

HOLLY REEVES: A more extensive Liberal Arts program, including Theatre.

Greg Nutt

Holly Reeves

PETE EDMUNDS, a senior marketing student at Boise State University was recently named Marketing Student of the Year by the Sales and Marketing Executives International of Boise. The award is based on academic standings, performance, and interest in the field of Marketing.

Boise State experiences first streaking

by Jon Adamson

Forty-eight seconds and a streak of bare ass marked a first at BSU. Just before noon last Thursday, a lone streaker, thought to be a BSU Fratter, took off all his clothes except his socks, donned a black hood to hide his identity and dashed through the lower lobby and cafeteria of the Student Union Building.

He ran from the men's room located on the main floor of the SUB, through the packed noon cafeteria, out the east side door and into the parking lot where he climbed into a waiting car.

The streaker said, "I was a little nervous getting undressed in the lunchroom but after I started I felt a certain sense of accomplishment."

When asked why he streaked the SUB he replied, "I had heard of other people planning on streaking here at the university and I just wanted to be the first."

ASBSU Student Body President, Doug Shanholtz said, "I am amazed. I really can't believe something like this happened at BSU." He went on to say, "I think it's one of the funniest things that has happened, people are going to be talking about this day for a long time."

Dr. John Barnes, BSU President, in response to the very first streaking on campus said rather indifferently, "He certainly picked a cold day to do it."

Not to be out done by the fraternities on campus, seven male residents of Chaffee Hall streaked Driscoll Hall, an all girls dorm, Thursday evening.

According to the Boise Police Department, the maximum penalty for streaking or indecent exposure is a $300 fine and six months in the county jail.

Easy, cheap recipes to get 'stewed' with

by Frances Brown

In these days of inflation, entertaining can be expensive, but it doesn't have to be. Stew is one of those tasty concoctions, cooked slowly for several hours that is worth the time involved. Add a mixed salad or coleslaw, french bread and you've got it made.

2 bay leaves
 4 medium-sized carrots cut in 2-inch pieces
 6-8 small whole onions or 2 medium onions diced
 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen lima beans
 1 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
 Brown pot-roast on both sides in cooking fat in a Dutch oven or heavy kettle. Pour off drippings. Season with salt and pepper; add water and bay leaves. Cover tightly and cook slowly 2 hours. Add carrots and onions and continue cooking 30 minutes. Add lima beans and continue cooking until meat is tender and vegetables are done. Remove meat and vegetables to warm platter. Discard bay leaves. Add Worcestershire sauce to cooking liquid and thicken liquid with flour for gravy. Serves 6-8.

EASY OVEN STEW

3 lbs. chuck for stew, cut in 1 1/2 inch cubes
 1 can (10 1/2 oz.) each condensed onion and cream of mushroom soup
 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
 1/2 cup red wine
 Hot cooked rice
 Mix beef, soups, tomato sauce and wine and put in 3-quart casserole. Cover and bake in unpreheated 250 F. oven 6 hours. Serve on rice. Good with coleslaw or a green salad. Makes 8 servings. Can be reheated or frozen.

HACIENDA POT ROAST

3-4 lb. beef arm or blade pot roast
 3 Tbsp. cooking cooking fat
 2 1/2 tsp. salt and 1/4 tsp. pepper
 1/2 cup water

MONIKA

INGMAR BERGMAN'S MOST EROTIC FILM

MONIKA was unfortunately exploited as a sex film in its original release, and only recently gained stature as the masterpiece it is. A sexually experienced girl and a young boy escape from the city to spend an idyllic summer. They live and love joyously until she finds herself pregnant, bored and afraid of a mundane existence. Unlike Bergman's later films, MONIKA's austere simplicity and firm directness produce a naturalistic documentary of sensuality.

Music going strong at BSU

by Frances Brown

The concert performed Thursday evening, March 7 by the Brass groups on campus was a pleasure. Brass can be big and boisterous but don't doubt for a minute that it can't also be harmonious, lyrical and exciting. And that it was, with the added surprise that the Woodwind Quintet also performed, providing an enjoyable contrast.

The Meistersingers are making their first tour through Southern Idaho, March 10-12. There will be two evening concerts at Idaho State University and Minico High School. Another concert was arranged for the combined Pocatello/Highland High Schools and Jerome/Glenns Ferry.

Boise State University Music Department is hosting the Idaho State Music Educators National Conference (MENC) convention, March 14-16. This event is attracting over 300 elementary, Junior High, High School, and University/College music directors from all parts of the state.

Three BSU performing groups will take part in the Convention. Dr. John Baldwin will direct the Keyboard Percussion Ensemble in its performance on Thursday, March 14 at the 10:30 am clinic session.

Boise Philharmonic, March 19

by Frances Brown

Boise's own talented Barbara Shook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Shook, 1806 N. 28th Street will be the featured soloist at the Boise Philharmonic Concert, March 19.

Barbara is scheduled to perform the difficult Paganini Concerto No. 1 under Daniel Stern of New Mexico Highland University, Las Vegas, N. M., the guest conductor with the Boise Philharmonic for this performance.

Since Barbara's graduation from Oberlin Conservatory, Oberlin, Ohio, she has been First Violinist and Soloist with the Houston Symphony. While there, she played such guest conductors as John Barberolli and Arthur Fiedler.

Other current activities include teaching at Sam Houston

UNIVERSITY, performing with the Houston Contemporary Ensemble and playing the viola d'amour with the Houston Music Antique Ensemble.

Barbara has performed in many of the major music festivals in the United States including the Dartmouth Summer Festival, Teton Music Festival in Wyoming, and the Aspen Festival in Colorado.

The Philharmonic Concert is scheduled for 8:15 pm at Capital High School, Tuesday, March 19. All seats are reserved and tickets can be purchased at the door.

Preview Night for the Philharmonic will be Monday, March 18 at 7:30 pm in Capital High. Admission is by preview pass or ticket purchase at the door.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST, by Oscar Wilde, is a mild slap in the face of society to say the least. Playing through March 16 at the BSU Subal Theatre, this production of Wilde's classic farce plainly lacks professionalism, placing greater emphasis on the restraints of educational theatre. Many critiques, essays and literary reviews have been written concerning this particular play; henceforth, whatever might be said in this review would be of a repetitive nature.

This particular production, on the other hand, has never been commented on and deserves the courtesy of recognition. Though the production possesses many virtues, it contains as many pitfalls:

Directed by Del Corbett, EARNEST sadly misses the grace and sophistication so important to the late Victorian period. The director of this farce should be complimented for attempting such an ambitious venture, but it would appear that subtle humor is not Mr. Corbett's forte. Such devices as repetitive "thank-you's" distracted the audience, disturbed concentration, and finally placed ominous holes in a neatly contrived script.

To say the least, this production is technically difficult. Though the set is nicely designed, and acceptably well executed, it lacks continuity. The set contains no less than four different period-styles of furniture, color combinations and awkward entrance and exit facilities. The music chosen for character enhancement was excellent, but sloppy in execution.

Out of a cast of nine characters, there were nine excellent performances. Each member of the cast should be complimented on the growth and overall development they display. Though these young actors lack maturity and experience they definitely show the beginnings of the discipline so necessary to the art of Drama.

Poetry to be read March 14

Thursday evening, March 14, University students will have the opportunity to attend the second in a series of poetry readings sponsored by the Lookout Coffee House. The two poets sharing this weeks platform are Charles David Wright and DRAGONFLY editor, Duane Ackerson.

Wright, who came to Boise State from Chapel Hill, North Carolina is currently finishing up his second book of poems.

In addition to editing

DRAGONFLY, Duane Ackerson, 31, teaches at Idaho State University and has a forthcoming pamphlet of co-translations of the Brazilian poet Jorge de Lima from STINKTREE PRESS.

Poetry readings in the Lookout are admission free and David Delaney, director of Activities and scrutable publicist, extends his shady but warm welcome to all interested parties. Visiting poets for the March 27th reading will be Bill Studebaker and Jean Nuttle.

Faculty Senate puts one over

by Katrina Brown

Not everyone on campus was happy with the changes the Faculty Senate made to the academic calendar last week. Dr. Guy Hunt, Dean of Admissions and Records, said one date that was omitted at the Thursday meeting could put Boise State University in jeopardy with accreditors.

The week before the Senate had approved November 25/April 24 as the final date to petition adding new courses for credit or to change from audit to credit. Last week the Senate decided to strike that information from the calendar completely, because it would be "foolhardy" to let the students have access to that information.

According to Hunt, students have been able to make class changes after deadline dates as long as he has been associated with Boise State. When he first tried to enforce the deadlines, in the spring semester of 1971, he was told "very emphatically" that he was to process "any and all student requests for class changes" bearing the name of the instructor.

Hunt then designed a petition form to be used by students requesting class changes after the deadline date, and according to Hunt, more than 1000 of these forms have been used every semester. However, in December 1973 these petitions were done away with by Dr. Barnes' Executive Council.

A slightly remodeled version was hurriedly reinstated just after the first of the year, and this time Hunt tried to get the Executive Council to establish a deadline after which the Admission's office could refuse to accept even the signed petitions.

Hunt is not opposed to the use of the petitions, but does object to the widespread abuse to which the petition is exposed, particularly from the athletic department. For example, Friday morning Hunt registered another athlete, scheduled to make his football debut next fall. He is a transfer from a 2-year college, and is required to earn 24 credit hours between playing seasons, as well as maintain a certain GPA.

According to Hunt, many athletes register under these circumstances, and are usually enrolled in physical education classes, insuring both the instructors complicity and the event the student will deserve the grade he is given for the course.

The problem from Hunt's point of view is a practical one. After final copies of class records have been prepared in the data processing center, any additions or corrections have to be penciled in. They are conspicuously out of place, and Hunt and his staff have to defend every entry. In some cases this just isn't possible, such as in the fall of 1973. These two students, who received A's for the course, were athletes and needed the credits to be eligible for sports.

When Hunt requested a deadline this spring, the Executive Council referred the matter and several others relating to the Academic calendar, to the Academic Standards Committee. The committee surveyed the faculty, heard testimony from administration and students, and finally compiled a list of recommended changes which it sent to both the student and faculty senates.

Their recommendations, originally passed by both senates, included a deadline after which petitions would not be accepted. However, after further consideration the Faculty Senate decided they did not want to publicize a policy that would allow students to register up to three weeks before finals. This was done at the urging of Senator Pat Ourada, sponsor of the Academic Standards Committee's recommendations.

Senator Ourada, who claims that "the kid who makes it is the kid who learns how to wheel and deal," was opposed to having this information included in the calendar because it would advertise a situation of which she did not approve. "It's not really fair to the students," she said, "to take their money so late in the game, because they're really only being given a chance to fail anyway."

This ignores the fact that the policy is already being practiced on the campus, the fact that a deadline, either written or agreed on verbally, could possibly end some of the abuse the petition is now subject to.

Art work shown through March

by John Elliott

Margette Schille, whose work will be on display at TUESDAY'S CHILD through the month of March, is a carousel of leers and laughter that whirls without the confining moralization of our all too-artless society. Margette is a product of a renaissance within her own visions of the art. Her growth over the last two years has been great, and to say that she belonged in Boise, Idaho, would be as comical as saying that Richard Nixon should run for a third term.

Even though Ms. Schille does not belong in Boise, she does the area an unbelievable service to stay. To view Ms. Schille's work is to grow in intellect and to experience the burning passion of imagination which is released onto the sterile canvas. In short, her works make the viewer think and learn to accept what is seen by those rusty sensitivities buried by all the modern Byzantium disasters compiled upon the soul.

Margette stated that she liked to get the viewer involved with the painting. "The modern tragedy of art today is that it must fit a certain decor to be purchased, and then hung in display to be looked at but not appreciated."

Allan Shrum, talented co-part of the duo, let loose with a fine thought when he summed up the prism view of art today, "Art is not created with commercialism in mind, but that does not mean it will not or is not going in that direction. The realities of the world force the artist to face commercial realities."

Shrum, who works in miniature sculptures is a fine artist in his own right. His work displays the never ending search for communicative perfection.

"Imagine if you will," Shrum began, "A black wall upon which is a window. Most people see only the wall, some see the window, but damn few look to see the images inside the window and on the other side of the wall. I must see what is held behind the window on the opposite side of that wall."

Both artists are sensitive and creative; they are doomed by modern society to work hard and suffer the tormented lives of gentlefolks. They will be stepped on, criticized and for awhile ignored by society as a whole, but in the end they will be the strongest of all God's creations... for as they are now in youth, they shall grow to be artists to set the trends of ages yet unborn and countries still unknown.

The exhibition will continue through the month of March at TUESDAY'S CHILD located on Overland here in Boise. This is a chance to see first hand the works of future giants, a chance seldom offered the Boise public... the plantive presence of genius.

VETERANS

Club helps BSU, community

The Valkyries, a women's honorary service organization here at Boise State University, has been active with several important service projects concerning the school and the community this year.

The Valkyries have collected for the March of Dimes and the Heart Fund campaigns. They are active supporters of the Boise Children's Home, giving them money and donating items they can use at the center.

Here on campus they act as ushers at the basketball games and several years ago they paid for the marquee just west of the Towers with funds exclusively collected by the club.

The Valkyries along with the Intercollegiate Knights and Golden Z's are co-sponsoring the first annual Miss BSU pageant. Jennifer Diehl, a club member, said, "We have been responsible for the theme, the poster design, and have collected gift certificates from local stores to give as prizes to the winners." The club has already collected over $125 in prize certificates.

The Valkyries will sponsor Barbara Shewy as their contestant in the pageant. Miss Shewy is 18 years old and is majoring in nursing here at the university.

If you would like to be considered for membership you must have at least a 2.0 grade point average. Membership is also based upon leadership, initiative, dependability and cooperation.

Broncos streak home plate 18 times, win C of I Coyotes

While some people were busy streaking through cafes and down ski slopes, this past weekend, the Bronco baseball team was exhibiting their own form of streaking on the Adrian High School diamond. Although they were attired in baseball uniforms, they did streak across home plate a total of 18 times enroute to 6-2 and 12-0 wins over the College of Idaho Coyotes.

Defensive excellence was displayed by the Broncos and was highlighted by the superb pitching efforts of Nick Mitchell, Scott Hunsaker, and Paul Levar.

The talents of Mitchell and Hunsaker were combined in the opening game to limit the Coyotes to just one hit — a two-run homer that turned out to be C of I's only bright spot of the day. Mitchell hurled a strong five innings giving up the lone hit and striking out six while picking up his first win of the year. Hunsaker pitched the final two innings, striking out four, in getting credit for the save.

Meanwhile, the Bronco offense was ignited when the bat of Greg Frederick exploded for a two-run homer that catapulted the Broncos on to their first win of the season. Other artillery support was provided by Bob Papworth, Gary Allen, Mike Guindon, and Karl Benson with one hit each while Kent Peterson peppered the Coyote defense with two hits.

In the second game Paul Levar took the mound and proceeded to burn holes in the bats of a stunned Coyote team. Levar, in an excellent performance, struck out twelve and limited C of I to just two scratch singles.

Meanwhile, the Big Blue

Machine steamrollered the Coyotes with 12 runs on 13 hits including three round-trippers off the bats of Vic Wells, Karl Benson, and Dan Armitage. Armitage collected a total of four hits in the game while Max Stith contributed three, Karl Benson two, and Vic Wells, Kent Peterson, Mike Guindon, and Greg Frederick each contributed one.

Savoring the taste of victory, the Broncos will trek north to Lewiston this coming weekend where they will participate in the Banana Belt Tournament.

They will play a total of six games. However, only five games will count as tournament games with the team sporting the best won-lost record crowned champions.
