Artistic depression

Boise State University is in an Artistic Depression. Falling far below the standards recommended by Accreditation Teams in the mid-sixties, the state of Cultural Excellence has not improved. Inadequate facilities, underfunding and all but total priority omission has left the Arts at BSU in a state of absolute constipation.

The faculties in the various Arts fields are to be commended for tolerating the abysmal facilities while remaining constant in their dedication to the arts. The students in the art fields are to be applauded for their stamina and understanding amidst this depression; however, the need for growth far exceeds the reality of expansion.

The question that faces us is this: what can be done to alleviate this problem? Can we lobby at the legislature or ask for additional funding from the State Board of Education? The answer to this inquiry is simply NO! Neither group believes that public funds should be spent on the fields of Art and Culture. Both groups of people believe that it is up to the Student Bodies or Administrators to garnish their respective institutions with the latest in artistic equipment. Both of these beliefs are not realistic at the moment nor are they feasible. If the students were to build the needed facilities, then it would be necessary to raise student fees, and at this time, the Administration is not willing to recommend additional funding through this manner. What are we then to do?

This editor's suggestion is to form an art alliance utilizing all three areas of the arts -- Music, Theatre and Art. United we stand, divided we fall, etc. This would bring into closer understanding the needs of each respective group and would provide an overall picture of the needs for the group as a whole.

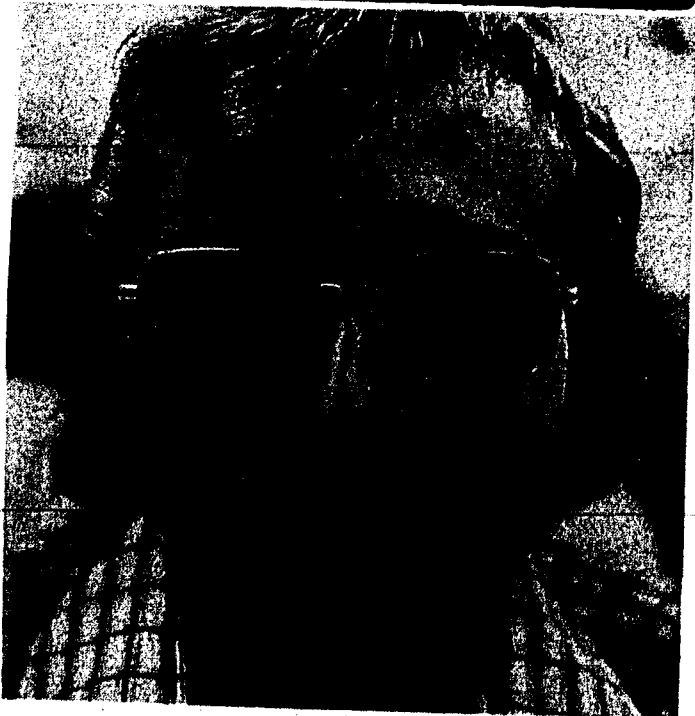

The methods employed by the Bronco Athletic Association could serve as a guideline for this program. The involvement of the community in the expansion of the overall program would most probably bring to light added revenue and rejuvenated interest. Despite most observers' comments, Boise is not overly blessed with cultural activity; though there has been a substantial growth over the past four or five years, the cultural opportunities here are not yet overwhelming.

Along with community involvement, the initiation of an art publication denoting all endeavors here at the university and throughout the area would best inform all interested patrons of the affairs happening at the university and throughout the area. Along with the arts, perhaps restaurant reviews and single cabaret critiques would enhance the overall view of the arts and entertainment in the Boise area.

If the arts are to expand in Boise and on this campus in particular, they must stop waiting for the government, the legislature, and the administration to come through with answers and appropriations. If the Arts are to survive this depression, they must compel the citizenry of Boise and the surrounding area to become involved with the culture and heritage that is so much a part of the general spectrum. In short, they must become more sensitive to the humanity to whom they are responsible. J.W.E.

Cleta's Corner

Not your ordinary fellow

It's called a "touring cap"....and this one was plaid. Then came the jacket of another plaid. In between I noted something on a chain around his neck. Those three articles of apparel turned me on. But the face under the touring cap was the most arresting: snappy black eyes, a moustache which was a work of art, complete with a kind of curly wisp on his chin. AND THE GRIN. That did it! I was absolutely compelled to stop him and get a story for this column.

LONNIE PARLOR, age 24 (looks 17), freshman, from Kansas City; major: Music. His parents, a sister and brother, reside there. Lonnie is married and the father of a 6-year old daughter, and a son four weeks old.

Uncle Sam started it all. When Lonnie was stationed here during the Service, he enjoyed Boise and the surrounding country. That was in 1969. Intermittently since then, he has returned to Boise; left the area to be "on the road" with a band, then eventually returned to attend BSU. At a tender age, Lonnie began a career in music which included playing the bass and singing in Las Vegas with the Peggy de-Castro group. Presently he performs in a group at BSU called the Spectrum. Since music will be his career, Lonnie feels that he needs a more formal education on the subject. A little plug won't hurt anything: he is starting a job at the Gamekeeper Monday night with piano and drums as partners.

Back to the Zodiac around his neck. This was a pendant carrying the Virgo sign. When asked what qualities Virgo has, he replied "perfectionist"....so the thing to do is go listen to Lonnie and his group at the Gamekeeper...I'll bet the sound is great. Some hunch also tells me that Virgo must include "ability to make friends". With every third word, someone stopped at the table and yakked a little with Lonnie. They popped up from around corners, on the stairway, and from behind things. This Parlor guy might be fun for parlor games. (pun intended).

As music is his vocation, we won't classify it as a hobby. Rebuilding sports cars is of interest to him, but he does not race them. Just rebuilds them. This is a mechanic-musician combination. I'm sure he doesn't thrump the bass with greasy mitts. Not according to his zodiac as perfectionist. Virgos would have clean fingernails.

Senate allocates $300 to Day Care

by Mark Stinson

A step in the right direction was taken by the Associated Student Body Senate in the meeting of October 22, 1974. The Senate voted unanimously to allocate $300 toward a systematic attempt to see if a day care center is needed on the campus of BSU.

Rayleen Myers is the coordinator for the project which is being conducted through Vice-President Dave Ward's office. The attempt which will take the form of a survey is concerned with three objectives:

1) Is there a true need for a day care center here at Boise State University.

2) If there is a need what is the exact nature and extent of that need.

3) If there is a need then, they will develop a comprehensive plan for the implementation of such a facility.

The survey will be conducted of the approximately 2,500 married students of BSU either through a face to face interview, or by telephone or mail. The results of the survey which is to be completed by the end of January will then be sent on to the office of Dr. Barnes, President of BSU, and then on to the State Board if all goes well.

Research into the possibility of a 3 to 1 grant by the Federal Government is now being checked into. If such a grant is possible the cost of such a facility would not be that great to the State of Idaho or BSU.

If you are interested in volunteering your time or finding out more, there will be a meeting Tuesday at 6:30p.m. in the Minidoka room in the SUB, or call the ASB offices at 385-1440.

If it is found that such a facility would be a useful asset to Boise State University, let us hope that Dr. Barnes and the State Board will see the value of such an operation. If the day care center would become a reality this would allow women with children at home a safe place to keep these children while they themselves are attending classes. This would also be of extra benefit to instructors which have to take their children to centers in the community.

Say Slick,

A student view Points concerning drinking clarified

By Pat Nance

Last week, my column centered upon the drinking that occurred in the stadium during the BSU-ISU game. It is, in my opinion, necessary to clarify two points:

First of all, to the best of my knowledge, at no point were students frisked at the gates. This had been implied by some students as the procedure at the gates during the game. This was not true. Security personnel and police officers were explicitly informed that their duties did not include search and seizure. They were there to prevent kegs and coolers of beer, (the most flagrant violations of the State Board's policy) from entering the stadium.

Secondly, it was not the intention of this columnist to present the point of view that if students cannot drink, then no one should. But my intended point did not come through as clearly as I had intended.

My point was that inequities exist within the State Board's policy concerning possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages on state property. In the past few years, at least three attempts have been made to change this policy. All of these attempts were student-initiated and all of them failed. Perhaps it is time we, as students, looked for allies to side with us on the issue.

Possibly the best ones we could have are those who sit on the west side of the stadium -- the alumni -- the "Bronco Boosters" and our faculty and friends. These people are there for the same reason as you and I, to watch our team and to enjoy themselves. We cannot alone, as students, rectify the policy of the State Board without help from our community people.

LET US, AS STUDENTS, APPEAL TO COMMUNITY MEMBERS FOR HELP IN THIS IMPORTANT MATTER.

'Nuff said.

Students object

Editor, the Arbiter,

We fail to see the significance of banning alcohol in Bronco Stadium. If no drinking is going to be enforced on campus, including the Stadium, it must be done equally, which means both sides. The first game the ruling was enforced was against ISU. There seemed to be more drinking on the west side than the east. The cost of enforcing the rule could be quite expensive. Drinking at the games is as traditional as going to the games. How many people do you think will show up if there is no drinking?

How much was that

Editor, the Arbiter:

Hello, I'm figuring out how much I'm paying for BSU football. Hmm, let's see. That's $18 a semester toward athletics, so that's $36 a year. Strange, that's more than I pay to support the films program, lectures, concerts, dances, outdoors activities, games room, Arbiter and student government combined.

What else have we here...Permanent Building Fund. $27 a semester goes to the stadium, that's $54 a year and, hey, wait a minute. That's $90 a year. $90 a year! $90 to sit in the end zone? To walk a mile? To get frisked? Oh, oh, my heart. Hand me those pills. No, not those, the yellow ones. Yes, oh, I'm much better now.

I think I'll go puke on the astroturf.

Don Parker

Editor's note: As far as I know, there was no frisking at the game.

Pedestrian replies

Mr. Editor,

In a previous edition of The Arbiter I wrote a letter complaining about people riding their bicycles on the sidewalks at BSU. Since then there have been several replies, both positive and negative, to my letter. As a result of a letter by Lars E. Hansen, I feel I must reply.

Mr. Hansen is to be commended because he uses his bike as an alternate to an expensive gas-eating automobile. I also sympathize with his complaint about the attitude and reactions of Boise drivers to bicyclists. I have had the same problems when I ride my bicycle around town.

I must disagree with his comment that people should be willing to share the sidewalks with bicyclists. As I stated in my previous letter, section F under General Information for autos and bicyclists states "Bikes shall not be ridden on sidewalks and/or grass." This is the reason why pedestrians do not have to share the BSU sidewalks with bicyclists. We who walk are able to get to class on time without driving our cars on the sidewalks. I see no reason why bicyclists cannot do the same.

Thank you for letting me reply to Mr. Hansen's letter and for printing my first letter.

Huck's realm State Bored worried about you

by Huck Hovey

Friends, THE STATE OF BORED EDUCATION IS WORRIED ABOUT YOU. After so long a time, a few of you might find it very hard to believe this Dear Group of Friends has a concern for us, the recipient of their too-traditional educational pattern. It's true though, Sinners. These disseminators of the educational WORD are DEFINITELY interested in salvaging your Soul from the loose morals and lascivious manners, you the Pupil, have incurred at Blessed Saving U (BSU). You, the AFFLICTED, still have a chance in their closed Eyes, Minds and Hearts to repent.

The State of Bored Education, in a manner of common concern and limited wisdom, met in a secretive session beneath the Eighth Street Bridge over troubled water to examine and deliberate the tragic, yet apparent collapse of moral standards on the BSU campus. An air of anxiety, uncertainty and pollution hung over the saddened group as they mentally girded for the unwelcomed classrooms, shortages of instructors, insufficient funds and other "minor" problems of unearthing the cause and raising of behavior standards of misguided students and/or Sinners.

As usual, prominently displayed Dr. E.A.T. Baal, Bored President and recent Agricultural Award Winner for the Largest Hemp Plant, slowly called the meeting to order and then immediately rescinded his direction while he examined his head for suitable space. Upon finding a point of reason, Baal recalled the group to attention, immediately suspended all rules of order and intimately asked each present in his blurry vision, to give the greatest amount of concern to the task at hand, if it can be located. The group then proceeded to have a Joint.....discussion of the symptoms students displayed and received several Hits.....of new information from interested bystanders. Needless to say, after the preliminary bout with the demon, the Bored went into a more in-depth discussion of this immorality to find a solution. It seemed though that the brutal realization of depravity on the campus had brought a feeling of sobriety and shall we say, light-headedness to some.

The most prominent individual present to address the Bored was his Divine Impetus, Holy Hubert of campus renown, representing the Institute For The Salvation of Sinful People, Inc., and Profit Motive, Ltd. Hubert began his dissertation by carefully pointing out the numerous Visions he has had since the meeting began and attributed these revelations to Divine Organic Happening. Hubert did, however, let him completely go on a Doobie.. Bros. album as an example of simply bad things for a child to hear. He rounded out his highly unintelligent expounding by ranting about the Profanity present in BSU Bathrooms (declared lacking of socially redeeming value by the Non-Oriented Student Senate), Obscene Books in the Library (98 percent in use as class textbooks), Non-Prayer in the Classrooms, Lack of Reverence on Holy Hubert Day (February 2, Ground Hogs Day), and finally built up to his major point, the degradation involved in the partaking of and drinkin' of....(the Groupies huddled in fearful suspense).... ALLLCCCOOOHHHOOOILLLLLL. Apparently, Hubert hit the nail on the Heads when he isolated the apparent symptom of all the evil presently rampant on the campus. ALCOHOL, he emphasized, was the ravager of morals, profit maker of the Alumni, and reason for the reproduction ability of Australian Red Ants.

Hubert's testimony was more than reaffirmed by Student Body President, at times, H.R. "Call Me Baby" Yesman, who emphatically stated he was in complete agreement with whatever was being done. When assured the solution was still in the air, Yesman emphatically agreed with the solution in the air. When asked if he had anything further to contribute, he emphatically answered in agreement with whatever he had further to contribute. At this point, Dr. Baal regained reality and asked Yesman to check his Hemp plants for proper contribution to the air and Yesman emphatically agreed the solution was checking the Hemp plants for proper contribution to the air.

After Yesman was comfortably situated as an observer of an Award Winning Hemp Plant, the Board overlooked his strange manner and glazed expression to watch the pretty sailboats travel down the waterless right hand side of Eighth Street Bridge. Reddy Kilowatt observed the largest boat and immediately moved to establish fees for those sailing by, but this move was squashed by the Bored Secretary who had already concluded agreements to collect empty beer cans, not boat hulls, along this site. Reddy immediately fumed and promptly blew a circuit much to the happy glee of the rest.

Stumbling back to the problem at hand, Dr. Baal put forth a proposition that all people are created equal, but some are more equal than others. With that in mind, he ODED, that is, overdrove his authority and forbade the drinking of alcohol, depraver of youth, at all on campus. The rest of the Bored vaguely comprehended due to the heavy influx and subsequently went along with whatever Baal said.

The secret meeting ended with the Group unanimously, in a strange manner, agreeing to request the use of National Guard, Police, the Armed Forces of the United States, Various Scouts, the Institute of Salvation for Sinful People and numerous other agencies concerned to maintain Prohibition on this campus. That is, to maintain Prohibition upon any student fortunate enough to receive a guest ticket to any athletic event on the BSU campus, thus the amount of suspects apprehended will be few.

The Bored further issued this appeal to BSU Students: "Kids...Save yourself from this ravager of Youth...this depositor of evil; the elixir of sin; quit coming to classes...with useless liquid in your body.....ABSTAIN FROM ALCOHOL. Remember, DO AS WE SAY, not as we do. We know that is good for you since we have been through it all before. A few of you radical hotheads might scream this is illegal; well, if it was good enough for our forefathers, it is good enough for you. Besides, those good people who pay to see football games, in this case, earn the right to consume. They are ADULTS; you are only KID STUDENTS who don't contribute very much to BSU except money and bodies. Think over what we have said and see if you don't agree with us. Make no Doubt About It. We are the State of Bored Education".

Student suggests Les Bois remedy

Editor, the Arbiter:

I walked around the other day (as a student, I do this best) and happened to go to a place that some people on this campus refer to as the SUB. Upon entering this building to attend a meeting, I happened to walk by a place where the Weekly Disappointment was placed for the enlightenment of the student to read, such as myself. However it is known by a surprisingly simple name of ARBITER.

Anyway, to get on (or off) with this letter, this paper has a policy by which the reader can write to it and "tell it like they see it". Well,

I am doing that.

In last week's issue, it was brought out that 240 pages of the 1973-74 yearbook are missing some place in the vast reaches of space, because some person last year sent the 240 pages out somewhere and everything seemed to be all right but one slight problem arose -- the problem of how to send them. The problem was solved, however. The pages were sent by mail (what else) BUT they were sent 3rd class instead of 1st class which cannot be helped for now.

Knowing that we may have a 1974-75 yearbook and that we do have a thing called a printing shop on campus, may I suggest that the shop be used for the yearbook and the student directory. (I assume that it will come out). This action will save money, for alas, there is a big problem called inflation going around that means, dear student, that it will cost more to get your yearbook if the thing is done some place else.

Let's see if some of the people who came up with a brilliant idea sometime back to have a tricycle jump across a ditch that a frog could jump, come up with an idea to save money at BSU.

AER prepares for meet

Members of Alpha Eta Rho, BSU's aviation fraternity, have been utilizing the last three weekends preparing for a big regional meet at McCall on October 25, 26, and 27. According to Mike Swanson, club president, the stiffest competition at McCall is expected to come from TVCC at Ontario, Oregon.

Approximately 20 active members will be participating in five major events:

Power off and power on precision landings;

Bomb drops (hitting a small predetermined ground target with a small sack of sand;
Flight computer trials
A preflight inspection test

The winner of this contest will be eligible to compete in the National Flying Meet held at Sante Fe, New Mexico, later this year at which over 50 collegiate teams will be in competition to see who is the best in the nation.

Administrative Management meets, elects officers

There is a new club at BSU. The Administrative Management Society held its organizational meeting last Thursday night and is on its way to a busy year. Officers were elected as follows:

Sex and the single clone?

by Jo Elliott Blakeslee

Does anyone remember The Nose in Woody Allen's movie, "The Sleeper"? The Nose was all that remained of The Leader after some revolutionaries had blown him up, and the country's leading surgeons were called in to perform a cloning operation on The Nose. In this operation, the surgeons' task was to induce The Nose to grow into a new Leader, who would be a perfect copy of the original one. Woody Allen stole The Nose, and so the operation was never performed, but the movie left the viewing audience with the impression that in that future time, surgical cloning was a reality. Perhaps what is even more amazing is the realization that actual cloning operations on people is probably just a matter of time.

Cloning is not new. Mother Nature has used it for millions of years as a means of asexual reproduction. A clone is an offspring which has exactly the same genes (barring mutations) as the parent. Cloning is present in some invertebrate animals, such as hydra, where a blob of the animal breaks off and grows into a new hydra. Cloning can also be induced in some invertebrate animals, for example, the starfish. If a starfish is cut in two, often each half will regenerate the missing half.

The kingdom in which cloning is by far the most widespread and successful, however, is the plant kingdom. Blackberry bushes, for instance, grow long, draping branches which frequently take root when they touch the ground. New bushes are the result. Currant bushes can regenerate by still a different cloning method. The roots from one plant send up several new stems which can then be isolated as separate plants. Strawberry plants send out runners that grow roots and form offspring. Pineapples, sugar cane, and water hyacinth are but a few of the thousands of other plants which reproduce through cloning.

Man has used this asexual, reproductive ability of plants for his own benefit. Nurseries can grow trees in a much shorter time through budding and grafting techniques than by raising them from seeds. Nurseries also reproduce rose bushes this way. A common cloning practice used by many people is the leaf cutting of African Violets and Coleus. If a leaf and a part of the stem of these plants is cut from the parent plant and placed in water, it will sprout roots and develop into a mature plant.

Aside from the commercial value of cloning plants, why should anyone be interested in this means of reproduction? One of the biggest advantages of cloning is that the genetic composition of the offspring can be controlled. This has far-reaching ramifications when applied to the possibilities of cloning in animals, both human and non-human. Some successful experiments have been done in hybrid sheep. When a variety of sheep had been bred which possessed the characteristics the breeders wanted, they took a fertilized egg from a ewe and allowed it to divide several times. Then the cells were separated from each other, and each one was implanted into the uterus of a ewe. This way, 12 or 15 lambs, all genetically identical, were produced. Techniques such as these are also possible with humans.

Perhaps the most promising outgrowth (no pun intended) of cloning experiments will be regeneration of lost parts. In some of the lower vertebrates, like salamanders, if a limb is cut off, the cells will grow another limb. In mammals, obviously, this does not happen. If scientists could find the crucial difference between plant and animal cellular reproduction in the area of cloning, and the difference between lower and higher vertebrate animal cells, then techniques to induce regeneration of a person's lost arm or leg or removed kidney could be developed. And that would be one gigantic step for mankind.

O.K....I've just about had it! I'm not complaining, mind you, because I really enjoy doing a little automotive maintenance once in a while, but when certain young loves discover I have a big heart and greasy fingernails and they have a sick car, well...aw hell...so what...I'll fix it for them anyway!

However, to preclude a few heartaches (due to broken buggies, not my availability), I would like to offer the following hints to those of you chicks who at some time or another face car problems.

If it doesn't work normal, don't push the issue! Remember, that little strange piece of machinery has some very simple built-in signals that indicate it's time to check the innards. O.K., if it doesn't start, make sure all those magic safety devices are properly hooked up and then see if the ignition key is turning correctly. Next, check the battery terminals for corrosion and snugness and the battery itself for missing caps, lack of water or cracks anywhere in the case. Clean, tight, full and no cracks you say? Well, then the battery's all right. If not, correct the malfunctions and read on.

If it starts...great. If not, your battery is dead and it needs to be replaced (eccchhhh...that's a few bucks), recharged by push starting the engine and driving 20 miles or so to recharge properly OR using the handiest battery recharger. It will be either a simple "jump" from a friend with battery cables (remember -- 6 volt to 6 volt, 12 volt to 12 volt, positive wire to positive terminal and negative wire to negative...or it's Happy Fourth of July in your engine).

OR:

Push the beast to the nearest service station for their fancy magic machines

So it runs, huh? But not smooth. O.K....get it tuned up! Did that 6 months ago, eh what? That's entirely too long between tuneups! If you're the average ivy schmuck and as tightfisted as I am, you buy the cheapest gas in town and, like cheap booze, can do strange things to the innards of both man and machine alike. So take your pick: cheap gas and frequent tuneups OR standard, habitual, same-kind gas and longer periods between tuneups.

Anyway, go to the local discount auto parts store, tell them the make, model, year and number of cylinders (pistons...same thing) of your particular 4-wheeler and the friendly neighborhood high school counter clerk will cheerfully get you the following items: points and condenser kit, spark plugs, and rotor. Have him pull a quick check on your distributor cap to see if it's broken, and if it is, get a new one. Also, if your spark plug wires look cracked, or heaven forbid...broken, get new ones. Now is also a good time to get a new gas filter, oil filter and about four or five quarts of good 10w-40w detergent oil, depending on how much your little car manual says you should have. Oh, before I forget, get some engine oil treatment and gas treatment. These products can't hurt your engine, all they can do is help. If it's fall, get the recommended amount of anti-freeze (look closely at the can instructions in your little car manual and into the eyes of that counter clerk). This is for your radiator, if you have one. If not, strain the stuff through a loaf of bread, mix with battery acid and serve with the sliced bread for an outstanding but deadly high.

Now lug this $15 or so loot home and find a big-hearted idle, grease monkey like me (385-3401) to spend the short two hours it takes to install it. Repeat this song and dance every 60 days and your inanimate machine will find a soul with which to please you daily, your pocketbook will bulge with savings from unneeded major repairs and...who knows...love, if that grease monkey doesn't drink too many of your complimentary beers, you might have found yourself a new friend!

IFLT celebrates 10th anniversary

Idaho Foreign Language Teachers' Association celebrated its 10th birthday on the Boise State University campus last week. With "Idaho is Too Great Not to Lead in Language Learning" as their motto, over fifty foreign language teachers joined together for a two-day seminar, luncheon, and dinner.

Featured speaker, Dr. Serafina Krear of Austin, Texas, joined the seminar after spending the summer teaching at the Universidad Anahuac in Mexico City, a unique institution established for training in bi-lingual education.

Included on the program as a speaker was Dr. David P. Benseler, associate professor of foreign languages and literatures at Washington State University. Benseler is current president of Washington Association of Foreign Language Teachers and is president-elect of ACTL for 1974-75.

Goals set for the IFLTA are to improve instruction, exchange opinions and ideas and to promote interest in foreign language studies.

Membership is open to all foreign language teachers in Idaho who are interested in joining together to enhance the cause of education in the various foreign language fields.

Black Student union seeks wider base

The Black Students Union wants more participants from the entire student body in order to organize the group more successfully. They need help to make posters and other materials with which to publicize the group. The organization meets as follows:

The Black Students Union is open to all creeds and would really appreciate the support of everyone.

What's in a name?

When Boise State College became Boise State University last February, one of the first problems to be overcome was a name change. Stationery, brochures, etc., had to reflect the new name.

All those changes were small compared to changing one readily identifiable fixture. That fixture was the marquee or signboard adjacent to The Towers residence hall on Capital Boulevard.

The old marquee was a permanent fixture mounted on a two-story brick column. When lettering required change, it required two men using a forklift truck to make the change. Another obstacle was that the old marquee offered only 16 letter spaces on each of its four lines.

BSU's Office of Purchasing went to the state public works department for a new marquee and letter symbol. When they couldn't help, bids were requested. Of the two submitted, a bid of $6,260.60 was accepted from Image National of Boise.

Early in September, Image National completed the name change.

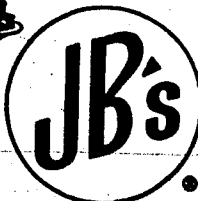

The new marquee measures 7 feet high by 14 feet wide. It can be operated by one person using remote control to raise or lower it. There are 18 letter spaces per line.

Finally, it proudly proclaims that BSU is indeed a university.

WHY COMMIT YOURSELF TO THE PRIESTHOOD?

Why be a priest? Certainly, in times as difficult as these we live in, being a priest is a lot harder today than it was in years past.

And committing oneself to anything for any amount of time seems to be one of the conflicts of our modern age. But the priesthood is a challenge. A big one.

Today, more than ever before in history, men and women, young and old, are searching for religious meaning, for withdrawal from isolation and alienation to joyful community experiences, for Good News in the midst of discouragement and hope in the place of pessimism.

The Paulists are trying to minister to these needs. As a contemporary religious community serving the American people, our mission is to communicate the love of Christ to people.

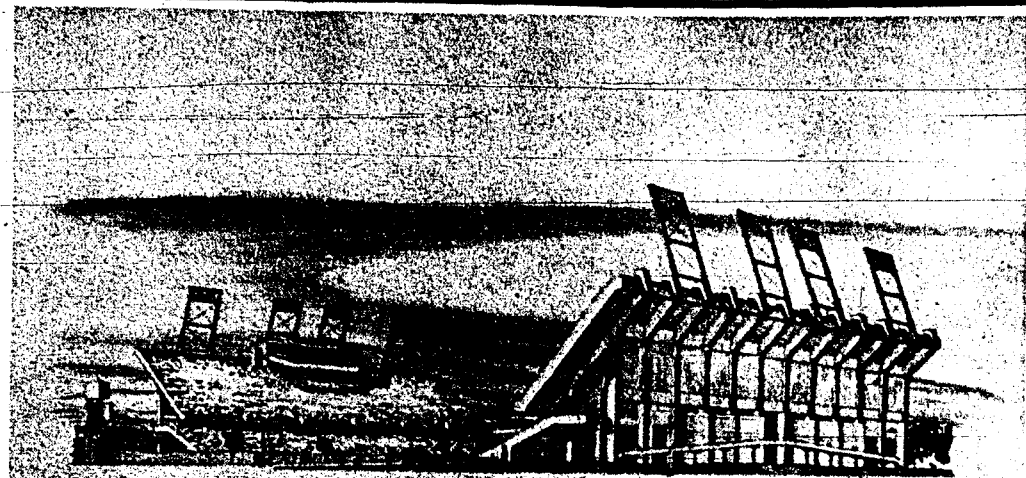

Every Paulist is a missionary: in the pulpit or the parish house... on campus or in the inner-city... with the spoken or the printed word... he is communicating to people. His mission is to all of America. His message is love; the love of Christ for all people.

It isn't easy but the Paulist welcomes commitment. Welcomes the challenge. If you are interested in the Paulist way of life, send for the Paulist Papers.

Income from Scholarship Box expected to be $100,000

The Scholarship Box to be located directly under the Press Box on the west side of Bronco Stadium is nearing realization. This facility will seat 209 spectators and is expected to raise $100,000 in additional revenue annually which will be applied toward several areas. Each seat in the proposed Scholarship Box will sell for $500 per season, and seats will be limited to two per patron.

With State Board and Permanent Building Fund approval, the new facility could be completed in time for next year's football season.

Pledges of roughly $400,000 have been raised by the Bronco Athletic Association to pay for the construction of the Scholarship Box.

Visually the new stadium facility will have an open frontal area and enclosed side walls. The Box will contain private restrooms, a concession area, a small lobby and private elevator from the ground level which will be connected to the stadium by a skybridge walkway.

The four areas in which the added revenue will be directed include:

1) The growing expense of Athletic costs;

2) The expansion of non-revenue producing sports such as tennis, baseball, wrestling, skiing, track and golf;

3) Women's Athletics;

4) General scholarships other than athletic.

Dr. John Barnes, Boise State University President, stated that the money is not being raised to put us into a new conference. Barnes went on to say that this new facility would not interfere with or replace the existing President's club which is presently referred to as the Orange Section of the Stadium.

Just one of the boys

by Arnold Panitch, ACSW
Assistant Professor

Now and then I delight in reviewing the times with a certain sense of history and the political context of the events. And so, with Richard Nixon hounded from office, I chanced to reflect on the nature of these troubled times.

I dug up a list of 200 of Nixon's contemporaries in the political limelight. The list provides us with the basis for an interesting bit of insight into just what is happening in the back rooms among the officials whom we see in the news. It tells me that Nixon replaced crime in the streets with crime in the suites. But is he so discrepant?

Take a look at our trusty list of polls. Just our basic group of "good old boys". They hail from the East and the South, the North, and whoopee, a few Westerners, too. Our list includes a variety of elected jobs: mayors, judges, special assistants, district attorneys, a President, judges, senators, commissioners, a Chief of Staff, congressmen, clerks, members of the school board, treasurer, controllers, White House aides, zoning board chairman, and a Freehold, whomever that is. As I look at your garden variety of folks from off the block.

With our list, we have a good example of how business is done in our country down at city hall, in the state house, over at the local courts of education, or in the back rooms at the court house. Yes sree, from all three major branches of government: the executive, the legislative and the judicial.

The names are always interesting too. So many good ethnics out of their peasant garb yearning to be free who rallied in joining the rank and file of the silent majority in 1968 and again in '72. Just your basic American melting pot. Stare duck, Wodzinski, Nowakowski, represent the Polish; DeLauro, DePasquale, Addonizio, Ambrogio, Bufalino out of Italy; some Jews like Deutsch, Ginsberg, or Isaacs; and who can forget the notables Ehrlichman, Haldeman, Kalmbach, and Kleindienst of our German unit. You know, it takes a bit of keeping up with the Joneses to round out the list so if it's Frenchmen you look for a LaRue or LaSane or the back rooms among the officials whom we see in the news. It tells me that Nixon replaced crime in the streets with crime in the suites. But is he so discrepant?

Names, names, names. Keeping up with these Joneses would put you in good company. Ronald or Guy Jones. Al Johnson: Hunt, Williams, Jones, Scott, Pine, Mills, Turner, Edgar. Just your basic group of ethnics. Just your basic piece of the American dream. Names, names, names. Keeping up with these Joneses would put you in good company. Ronald or Guy Jones. Al Johnson: Hunt, Williams, Jones, Scott, Pine, Mills, Turner, Edgar. Just your basic group of ethnics. Just your basic piece of the American dream.

The nature of the crimes is just your basic white collar variety, nothing too terrific. One show definite class as of John F. Kennedy whose showing of DEEP THROAT up in New Hampshire cost him a moment of freedom. But that's not too terribly different from Caldwell, Idaho is it? Lots of bribes, some extortions, drunk driving, and your garden variety of traditional all-American conspiracies.

Some elected officers were bribed and others extorted bribes. Of if you were like Frank Brasco, you set up a conspiracy to bribe. Lots of income tax evasion, even by revenue collectors themselves. Check out Theodore Isaacs! Some got bribes, some solicited them, others extorted them. Just your basic money trip.

Judge Edgar and Magistrate Blodgett are an interesting pair. These two Detroiters were convicted for "treating women employers in a 'vulgar' and 'tawdry' fashion". Just your basic garbage mouths. Too bad about Robert Duggan and George Lamb who committed suicide after their indictments or the supreme sacrifice paid by James Scott who was caught holding 40 pounds of heroin. They murdered him. HEAVY!

I took the time to count the number of states represented. My roll call would have produced 29 states, in all Regions of the nation. Twenty nine states is more than half of all of them. Majority rules. Help! Well, it's voting time once again, everybody. Sure glad there's no one on my little list from around here. Kind of makes ya proud. Just checking it all out.

Wanna spend $20,000?

How do you want it spent? Due to an increased enrollment this year, the ASB has approximately $20,000 in unbudgeted funds that can be used for student needs. But the Student Senate and the ASBSU Finance Board need your input to help in deciding where this money should go. Some of the suggestions received so far are:

- 1) Financing a photographic bureau which would alleviate much duplication in campus event coverage
- 2) A Day Care Center for students with children
- 3) A marquee located on Broadway to spotlight campus events
- 4) Putting a loudspeaker for announcements, etc., between the Liberal Arts building and the Library
- 5) Donating money to the Fine Arts Auditorium
- 6) Landscaping certain parts of the campus

7) Having a bicycle safety education program

Any project that will benefit the students is being considered and if you have any ideas - jot them down and give them to Wes Scrivner in the ASB offices or to someone in the SUB information booth.

When making your suggestions, try to be as complete and accurate as possible; also please sign it so that you can be contacted if further information is needed. Please let us know soon because the Finance Board will be meeting again November 4 to consider all suggestions presented. Recommendations will then be sent to the Senate.

Your help is needed - so take some time out from your busy schedule and let us know what you think - it's your money - how do you want it spent???

Experimental film winners named

The winners of the Experimental Film Contest have been selected. Their films will be funded by the Films Committee and sent to film contests around the country, and they will be placed in the Filmmakers Cooperative Catalogue for rental throughout the country.

The three winners are: Walter [Turkey] Roberts - his film is about a young man learning to hang glide for the first time and the comic results; John Edgerton, with a film about the drama of death and the waste of life; and Dan Peterson, with an animated film in color, titled "Inside his Head".

The judging was done by a panel of judges who did not know the name of those submitting the scripts as the names were sealed inside envelopes. The judges decided to sponsor three different students with three small films rather than one bigger film. The three films also contrast each other, three different stories, ideas and moods.

The Pop and Experimental Film Committee wishes to thank all those who entered the contest. The turnout was so fine that another contest may be held next semester.

BSU initiates outreach program

Boise State University's new Director of Off-Campus Programs, Bill Jensen, will initiate an extensive outreach program to ten southwestern counties in Idaho.

Jensen, who was appointed in August to head the Off-Campus Educational Program, cited his main goal as, "moving Boise State University out to the people who cannot commute to the university site".

Through a State Board of Education initiative, BSU has been authorized to offer courses for credit, audit, and non-credit to interested citizens throughout ten southwestern counties in Idaho. BSU's territory encompasses that area north to New Meadows, south to the Nevada border, east to Glenns Ferry, and west to the Oregon border.

Courses to be offered will be supplied according to interest, faculty availability, and classroom facilities. Questionnaires will be distributed throughout Idaho to those interested so that courses can be scheduled with respect to subject, time, and place. Jensen plans to send these questionnaires during November and December so that planning for BSU's spring semester can begin.

"Faculty and staff interest in the program at BSU is high, there will be no problem in finding enough teachers for the courses offered", related Jensen. He also added that community officials welcome the opportunity to provide the facilities needed for the program.

Cost of the program is based on the regular BSU $20/credit hour for college credit and $15/credit hour for audit.

Currently, BSU has Off-Campus Programs at the Mountain Home Air Force Base, Idaho State Penitentiary, in Nampa through the Migrant Education Resource Center, and several other teacher-aimed offerings throughout the area.

Alex 'Mad Duck' Karras 'Me gonnakick a touchdown'

by Barb Bridwell

Former Detroit middle line backer, Alex Karras, spoke to a crowd of approximately 350 people in the SUB Ballroom Tuesday night. Karras, second in the 1974-75 lecture series, spoke on his career in the major league and of his impressions of sports casters, pro athletes -- on people and places in general.

Karras is a native of Gary, Indiana, the "only place in the world where birds cough." He attended the University of Iowa, the smallest of the Big Ten schools. Karras explained that there were no entrance exams, the only requirement being the ability "to tinkle across the Mississippi river. I could barely do that."

According to Karras, he always wanted to play pro football, but actually didn't play football until he was in college. "My older brother really got me into it," he said. "He used to take me into the closet and beat the crap out of me....and said if I would go into football, he would stop."

The only thing which frightened him, Karras expressed, was "taking showers. Those guys had hair in places I never knew." When the All-State ratings came out, Karras was drafted into the national leagues, a feat for which his brother again "beat the crap" out of him.

In 1958, Karras was the number one choice for the American Football League, with a salary of $9000, $1000 in advance. "I bought my Edsel with it."

Veterans appeal to Mexican-Americans

Boise State University is reaching out to Mexican-American veterans. Student Coordinator, Jose Zabala is the man behind a program designed to inform these veterans of their educational rights.

Taking literature to migrant workers and labor camps, driving interested vets to BSU for further recruitment, and operating a radio program consisting of Mexican music presentations and a question-answer period, these are all part of Jose's work schedule.

Veterans who have questions and want to learn more about BSU are able to call on Jose for help. They can meet with him in the field as he makes his rounds to Nampa, Caldwell, Marsing, Grand View, and the Boise area. The radio program he coordinates is another way to

He played for 13 years in pro football, having been suspended for one year with what he termed a sickness. "There was a blond-haired kid from Green Bay who had the same sickness," referring to his suspension by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozell along with Paul Hornung for betting on their own teams to win.

He told several anecdotes concerning games he had played during his pro career. One concerned a game with New Orleans in 1967, in which a fellow kicked a 63 yard field goal setting a new record which still stands. "They called this little guy out with a limp and one arm. We thought they were crazy. They were all in the huddle giggling. We all laughed and laughed like hell for the first 62 yards. Then there was silence."

Karras said that field goal kickers have changed the game considerably. "You have a team who has played 59 minutes, 57 seconds and are beat up physically. Then the coach calls on Bruce, the 145 pound field goal kicker who comes scampering onto the field yelling 'I'm going to kick a touchdown.'"

A defensive tackle, Karras expressed that Detroit was a great football team defensively. But the offensive was a little weak.

"We'd go six games without a touchdown. We'd call in the offensive team after a while and give them a pop quiz, with questions like 'How many points is a touchdown worth?' And the field goal kicker would say 'three points.'"

Since leaving the pro ranks, Karras has appeared in movies, including the acclaimed "Blazing Saddles" in which he played Mongo, a humorous retarded man. He is currently working with Howard Cosell on Monday Night Football.

Following his informal address, Karras answered audience questions. One concerned the scene in "Blazing Saddles" where it appeared he hit a horse and knocked it down. He explained that the horse was trained to fall on command and that he was actually 15 feet away. "It's all done with cameras."

The World Football League would have problems, Karras said. "Larry Czonka is on a personal contract worth 3 1/2 million dollars. I knew he was worth it when I saw him walk on water."

The players who were striking against the national leagues were right, Karras said. "I believe in what they're doing. Seventy-five percent of the players are underpaid."

Karras has three choices as to who will go to the Super Bowl. Those choices are Los Angeles, St. Louis and Philadelphia.

His own personal favorites are Johnny Unitas, quarterback; Jim Brown, greatest all around football players, the Oakland Raiders, best personnel and best "inside pass rusher, Alex Karras."

Karras left following the lecture to visit Ray Mittleider, a BSU player currently hospitalized.

JOHN EVANS

Editor, the Arbiter:

As one who believes that "Idaho's future depends on its most valuable resource -- its youth, and that the best possible educational programs from kindergarten through vocational schools and colleges must be provided so the youth of Idaho, regardless of financial ability, can attain their highest educational goals", I am pleased to respond to the questions posed by the Arbiter.

In answer to your questions:

1) I am aware of the building need and the additional faculty needs to serve the student body of BSU based on the studies and recommendations of the State Board of Education which evaluates the needs of the higher institutions of learning and makes recommendation to the Legislature which, in turn, should follow these recommendations as closely as possible. My voting record during 14 years in the Idaho Senate has given me the reputation of being one of the leading proponents of education legislation, and I am a firm believer that such measures should not and must not be affected by partisan or sectional opinions.

Since BSU census figures, released by the State Board of Education, show a 7.6 gain in on-campus academic students and a full-time equivalent students gain of 10.5 per cent, there is an obvious need.

2) If elected lieutenant governor, I would be compelled at every possible opportunity to use my influence to solve the problems of all worthy educational needs regardless of sectionalism or partisan politics.

Sincerely,
John Evans

ROY TRUBY

Editor, the Arbiter:

1) Yes, I am certainly aware of the growth in the number of students and the need for a more favorable student - instructor ratio.

2) The State Superintendent is a voting member of the Board of Regions and I will work with the office of Higher Education and the Boise Administration to see that they are treated fairly in every respect.

We need to look first at the needs of the students and provide equitable services to the students of our Colleges and Universities.
Roy Truby

TONY PARK

Editor, the Arbiter:

Following are Mr. Park's answers to the questions you posed to him in your letter of October 10:

1) Are you aware of the building need and the additional faculty needs to serve the student body of BSU?

Yes. As an alumnus of Boise Junior College I am very much aware that the recent accreditation report verified that Boise State University is severely hampered by inadequate facilities and staff. The overcrowded classroom conditions; inadequate laboratories and unduly heavy faculty loads must be remedied.

2) How will you, if elected, fight to solve these problems?

Idaho's Attorney General is the chief legal officer for the state, and in that position I am not directly involved in making the decisions allocating badly needed monies to higher education. I do, however, serve as legal counsel to the State Board of Education and the State permanent building fund. In those capacities I have and will continue to work to see that the needs of Boise State University are met. As the institution of higher education serving Idaho's most populous area, Boise State University's standards must be kept high, and the best way to do that is to provide adequate facilities and staff.

Thank you very much for providing a forum for these remarks.
PAT Clark, Chairman
Committee to Re-elect Tony Park
Attorney General

Candidate

The Candidates were given the following questions:

1. Are you aware of the additional faculty needs of BSU?

2. How will you, if elected, solve these problems?

RAY COX

Editor, the Arbiter:

1) I am aware of the building needs at Boise State University and I must say the quality of education is a priority that has always been, and always will be mine.

Collegiate studies can be difficult at best, and it is essential that students be provided with an environment that aids the student, not hinders him.

2) Work to see that my years as a Congressman in Washington D. C. include educational grants for institutions of higher learning across the United States.

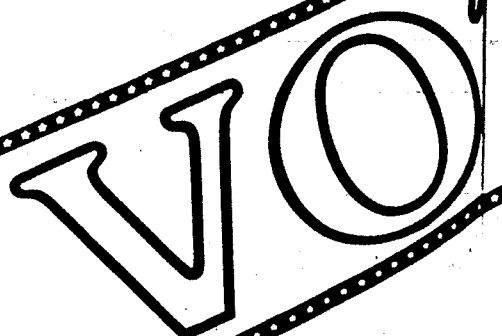

A Congressman can do little about the roof under which studies are conducted, but my responsibility will be to see that our foundation for curriculum at Boise State University is continually upgraded.

Many times a program develops first and from that grows staff and finally the building to accommodate both.

My priorities lie in giving the students of Boise State University the opportunity for Federal educational grants such as in the teaching arts, communications (continued and improved Federal support of such fine organizations as KAID and others) and many others.

JACK MURPHY

Editor, the Arbiter:

You must remember my background as it pertains to BSU. First, I cosponsored the bill that made Boise State College a 4-year school. Then also let's remember that on the question as to whether Boise State should be given university status, that vote tied in the Senate 17 to 17. I cast the deciding vote in favor of university status.

I am very much aware of the needs of BSU, particularly the hours of attendance per student as compared to the ratio of state expenditures. I have been concerned that the state might not be doing its share in anticipating the inevitable growth of BSU and making arrangements now for that growth. I have heard some discussion on a split campus. Without really knowing why, I object to this theory and I believe that the state should now be looking to the area south of Boise State campus and, in fact, acquiring land for future use even though we don't utilize it immediately. As Governor I would be committed to these propositions.

They need not be equated on political campaign promises. What we need is performance, not promises. This I have done. Boise State, because of the anticipated growth, will have a never-ending problem in additional faculty needs. Top priority should be assigned to insure that we keep pace -- and having so assigned, perform to keep pace with this increased enrollment.

Jack M. Murphy
Lieutenant Governor

WAYNE KIDWELL

Editor, the Arbiter:

1) As the former attorney for the Associated Student Body at BSU for the last two years, I am very much aware of the needs of Boise State University.

2) As Attorney General I would be legal advisor to the Investment Board, and a member of the State Land Board.

It would be my position that Boise State University, with the largest enrollment in the state, should get its fair share of the monies derived from these lands.

The members of the Board are:

The Governor
Secretary of State
Attorney General
State Auditor
State Supt. of Instruction

It is my judgment that it is very important that this Board, which handles millions of dollars, be bipartisan in nature. The best assurance of this would be close to equal representation by members of both parties.

Wayne Kidwell

PETE CENARRUSA

Editor, the Arbiter:

I appreciate this opportunity to submit comment in response to your recent questionnaire. In answer to your inquiries:

Yes, I am very much aware of the unprecedented growth which has occurred at Boise State University and recognize the need to provide adequately for this growth.

As a legislator, I was chairman of the committee which initiated legislation to establish the permanent building fund. Over the years, this fund has provided tax monies used to construct buildings on our campuses of higher learning. As Secretary of State, I will welcome the opportunity to work with Boise State University students and faculty members in behalf of future requirements resulting from continued growth and expansion.

Land acquisition to meet future Boise State University needs is also an important consideration. As a member of the State Board of Land Commissioners and the State Board of Examiners, I will continue to lend assistance to land acquisition efforts in behalf of Boise State University as I have done in the past.

Pete T. Cenarrusa
Secretary of State

VERN RAVENSCROFT

Editor, the Arbiter:

1. Yes, I'm sure I am. By way of elaboration the last session of the legislature divided the surplus funds basically between building needs, tax relief and debt payment and I think this was very reasonable policy to govern those funds. We also have dedicated taxes going into the building fund and if we can continue to supplement the Building fund from surplus funds the building needs should be satisfied in the near future. I think the decision from the last legislature already provides some improvements in the Vo-Tech facilities.

2. The Building Fund should continue to participate in part from any surplus that is generated. The Legislature should encourage the Board of Education to clearly establish a formula basis for the distribution of higher education operating funds and if necessary the legislature may have to determine by either interim study action or by public hearing during the legislature the ingredients that would be included in such a formula. Right now, I receive conflicting reports from the 3 major campuses as the reporting standards of each of the other two institutions.

The Trojan Women

by Pat Nance

Greek tragedy is not something to be dealt with in a light conversationalist, or friendly manner. It is something that weighs heavily on the mind and soul, not only in reading but in seeing it performed.

BSU's Theatre Arts Department production of Euripides' The Trojan Women is one that reminds us of the severity that the Greeks afforded life and its living. Directed by Dr. Charles Lauterbach, the show is done in traditional Greek style; the costumes, staging, and set itself are patterned along classical Greek lines. And considering the size of the Subal Theatre, the show works extremely well.

Performing the saga of a crushed civilization is not easy but did not appear to be overwhelming to the cast of players. Fine performances were turned in by John Elliott as the god Poseidon; Hecuba, the heroine of Troy played by Gwyn Harms; and the somewhat strange but pleasing Cassandra performed by Nancy Kokes. The complex style and manner of speech proved formidable to some of the stage newcomers such as the messenger, Talithybius, performed by Mike Hoffman, but in the face of such odds, even they did admirably.

Combined with an innovative set of rigid polystyrene foam and intriguing lighting, the long piece flowed well. At times, the background sounds of the show were a little out of place, but in light of the fact that this is a 3000-year old play and sound systems have changed, it can be overlooked.

All in all, this year's Theatre Arts Department season is off to a good start in this noble effort of reviving Greek tragedy and presents a welcome change from the usual theatre bill-of-fare offered in Boise.

BSU STUDENT TAKES TOP HONORS IN ORATORY

Dan Peterson, a freshman at Boise State University, took top honors in Original Oratory at a recent competition in Forest Grove, Oregon. The two day meet was sponsored by Pacific University and was attended by 23 colleges from Oregon, Washington, and Idaho.

Peterson, speaking on the subject of prison reform, was selected as the first place speaker by an overwhelming majority of the judges in the final round.

Other Boise State debaters also fared well in the competition. Rinda Ray, a freshman, was finalist in Oral Interpretation. Chris Schulthesis, a transfer student from Whitman College, was a finalist in Impromptu. Rob Barraclough, a senior teamed with Schulthesis to represent Bsu in the debate division.

The team was accompanied by BSU Director of Forensics, James DeMoux.

The next tournament for the Boise State debaters will be sponsored by Idaho State University in early November.

Thanksgiving week will find the debaters in Southern California for regional competition featuring schools from eleven western states.

10¢ Oly

10,000 sun visors have been donated to Boise State Public Relations Department to be sold at both afternoon football games of November 2 and November 9. The visors will be sold for 10 cents apiece or any donation and all funds will be placed into the ASBSU Scholarship Fund. The visors will, we hope, be worn by all students, faculty and guests to show support for the team and for scholarships.

Olympia Beer, who gave us the visors, asks that we all yell "Oly" each time we score in honor of their donation.

Onate festivities begin long Basque winter

by Ron Wilper

Many people of Onate are taking today off to recover from a 72-hour festival which ended early this morning. It was the third such festival in as many weekends and for the students on this program an unforgettable, if not exhausting experience.

The weekend of September 22 was set aside for the children in the seven Basque provinces of Spain and France. Over 1000 of them, all dressed in traditional Basque costumes came to Onate and danced... and danced... and danced practically nonstop for three days. If we could find a way to harness the energy they burned that weekend there would be no more talk of a shortage.

The children's festival not only provided us with entertainment, but taught us that if we wanted to survive the next two weekends we would have to pace ourselves. This was not an easy task.

The Festival of San Miguel was held the following weekend and attracted people from all over the Basque land. The entertainment was so varied and the attractions so numerous that it was next to impossible to take it all in. Dances were held on each of the three nights and lasted until around four in the morning. The groups played traditional Basque Jotas and American rock and were a little embarrassed about faking the words in front of so many Americans. If you've ever been to a Basque street dance in Boise, multiply the hilarity ten times and you will have a fair idea of the mood in Onate while the bands played.

At one point during the festivities the annual sheep dog tournament was held and again, people from all over the Basque lands came to watch the competition. The object of this contest is to see which dog responds best to his master's commands. The commands are not oral but rather a series of gestures, claps and whistles that tell the dog which sheep to go after and where to take them. After watching one such tournament it's easy to see why shepherds from the Basque country are considered among the best in the world.

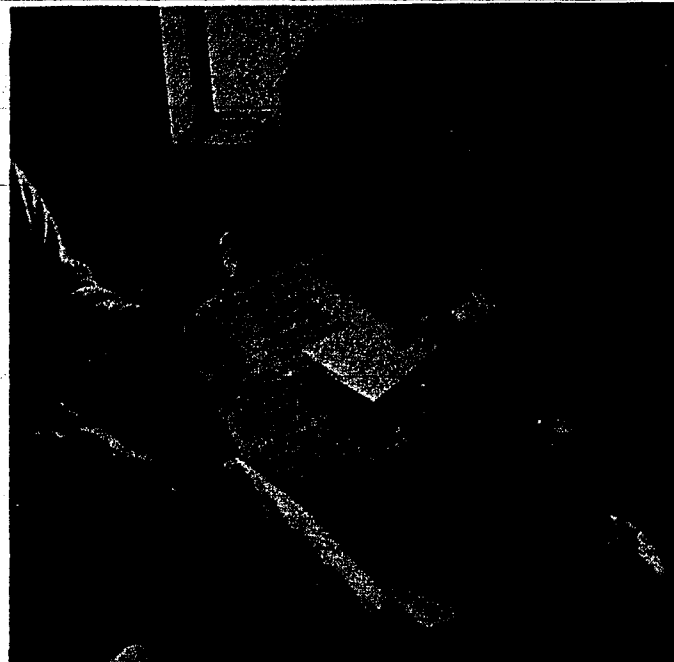

One of the most popular attractions of the festival was an event similar to the annual "running of the bulls" in Pamplona. The large plaza in the center of town was closed off by a low fence and the more daring in the crowd, including a good share of Americans, entered it. A blindfolded bull was then led into the ring and after some difficulty, the blindfold was removed and the bull set free. Although his horns were blunted and his speed impaired by the slick pavement, the bull proved too powerful for many of his taunting opponents.

The people in the arena aggravated the bull until he charged and then they scattered. When one of them tripped or was caught up against the fence, the bull punished him until the crowd could divert his attention again. At one point the bull became so enraged he bucked over the fence into the audience. He was quickly recaptured but not before he had gotten his licks in on several of the spectators.

When one bull was too tired to continue, another was released. Three in all, each a little bigger and a little meaner than the last. The people enjoyed the bull so much they asked him back for the festival of Our Lady of the Rosary the following weekend.

The third festival was a repeat of the second, possibly even wilder because it was the last one until next year. On the final day, hundreds of townspeople paraded through the streets dressed in outrageous costumes to make the end of the fiestas and the beginning of the long Basque winter.

Theatre conference to begin

On October 30, delegates from five states: Idaho, Montana, Utah, Colorado, and Wyoming will start to arrive on the BSU campus for the 1974 Annual Convention of the Rocky Mountain Theatre Conference. The Conference will be hosted by the Theatre Arts Department of BSU. Workshops and productions will be presented to the delegates along with displays and guest speakers.

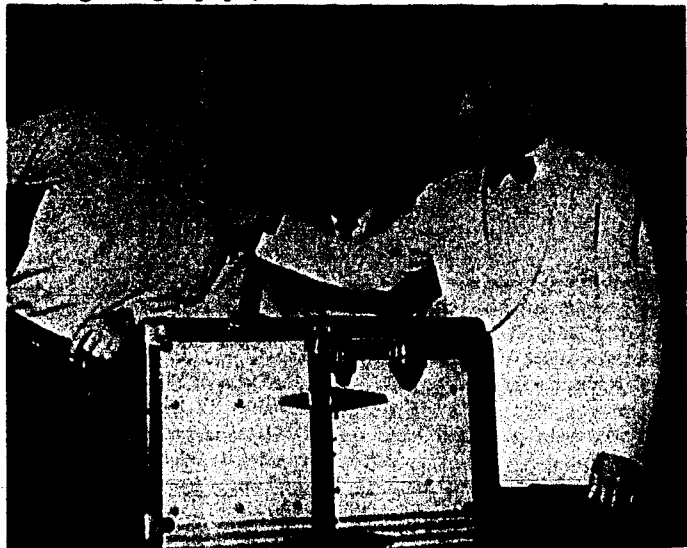

Work was begun on the RMTC by

Dr. Robert Ericson last November after the Conference held in Laramie, Wyoming. Since that time, more than 800 letters have been mailed and many hours have been utilized in setting up the conference. Students will be participating in the activities of the Conference. They will act as hosts and hostesses, drive courtesy cars and be representatives of BSU.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI MEETING

Our third professional meeting of the fall term will be held on Thursday, October 31, at 7:30p.m., in the Owyhee room in the SUB. Our speaker will be Idaho Attorney General Tony Park. His topic will be on ethics and we feel that he will be very interesting. Since this is an election year, Mr. Park should also have some interesting comments on his policies. The public is invited and refreshments will be served. Anyone interested please feel free to attend.

BLT's "The Bat"

Cornelia Van Gorder. (Marie Blanchard), a maiden lady of sixty, rents the summer home of a New York banker who had been reported dead in Colorado some months before. She is warned that mysterious things are happening around the house, but she refuses to move. About this time it is discovered that a large sum of money is missing from the dead banker's bank. Immediately, the suspicion is aroused that, far from being dead, he has stolen the money, hidden it in a secret chamber in his house, and is awaiting a good chance to sneak back and get it. Four different people are after the money -- the bank cashier, wrongfully accused of taking it; a detective engaged by Miss Van Gorder to clear up the mystery; a doctor friend and supposed confederate of the missing banker, and THE BAT, a notorious thief who has long eluded the police. There are mysterious murders, shivery rappings and many false leads for the audience to follow before the mystery is finally cleared.

Meistersingers, jazz ensemble to perform

The Boise State University Jazz Ensemble and Meistersingers will combine to present an evening of entertainment Sunday, October 27 in the Music Auditorium.

The Meistersingers, directed by Mr. Will Elliott will present two selections arranged by Norman Luboff, "Skylark" and "Blue Rondo a la Turk". A special composition "They Called her Moses" by Robert DeCormier will feature multiple vocal soloists and choir. This work is based upon the life of Harriet Tubman. The songs of her time and her people are utilized to tell the story of a journey to freedom on the Underground Railroad, which prior to the Civil War led thousands of slaves to the free states and Canada.

The Jazz Ensemble portion of the program will be as follows:

Granada
played by Stan Kenton
Parenthia
(a contemporary jazz number)
Ded-Reckoning
(original number composed by Boise's Gib Hochstrasser)
A Train
(Lou Ventrella's arrangement) made famous by the great Duke
Ellington Band
MacArthur Park
(featuring Kirt Kitchen on flugel horn)
Trajectory (contemporary number featuring trombonist Mike Elliott)
The concert is the second of the Student Ensemble Series. Tickets may be purchased for the entire series for $10 either at the Music
Office or at the door. Single admissions are $1.50. BSU students are admitted with their photo-ID card.

Music department provides talent

Sunday, October 20, the BSU Music Department presented a concert utilizing the format of a Duo-Piano ensemble. The choice of material was excellent in that it demonstrated formidable challenge to the musician in accordance with their achieved talent.

The highlight of the afternoon was Bach's Two-Piano Concerto in C Minor. The color and emotional approach imparted to this difficult selection was truly magnificent. Robyn Metz Riggers and Charles Enlow exhibited excellent use of technique as did the string quartet, which accompanied the selection.

The singularly most exciting performance of the afternoon was a Rachmaninoff composition from Suite Opus 17. The sheer passion accorded this number was topped only by the vivacity of approach from the performers. Teri

Robinson and Denise Klaas reached down somewhere within the depths of learning and made Rachmaninoff sing through the keyboards.

Duo-Piano Ensemble is instructed by Mrs. Madeline Hsu, who is also an extremely accomplished pianist in her own right. It is apparent from this concert that Mrs. Hsu is an equally proficient teacher, which in these times of struggle is quite difficult to achieve.

All in all, the concert Sunday was excellent. Since there are no appropriations for Classical Concerts here at BSU, the classical music lovers are spared from total despair by the Music Department, and if the quality of their work continues at its present rate -- our own musicians will provide fine opportunities to experience the miracles of the classics.

YWCA holds womens seminar

by Jo Elliott Blakeslee

In this society, females are not socially acceptable unless they are attached to males, according to Dr. Charles Stromberg, a local psychologist. In a seminar entitled The Psychology of Women, held Monday evening, October 21, at the YWCA, Dr. Stromberg was accompanied in his discussion on depression and guilt in women by Dr. Carol Harvey, BSU sociologist, and Dr. Glenn Weyhrich, a local obstetrician. Dr. Harvey outlined some of the effects of societal role-stereotyping on women, while Dr. Weyhrich spoke about many of the physical manifestations of psychological problems that women have.

The way that women respond to people and situations, as pointed out by Dr. Harvey, is largely created by the society in which they live.

For example, studies have shown that mothers treat girl babies different from boy babies, resulting in passivity in female children and aggression in male children by the age of 1½ years. Sex-role stereotyping is reinforced both by teachers and textbooks in schools, until at the college level, Caucasian females demonstrate a fear of success. Caucasian males, overall, do not exhibit this fear, nor do Black females.

Dr. Stromberg emphasized that women are trapped by this society, and do not have the same freedom that men do to challenge themselves and explore their full capabilities. This can result in frustration and worse, depression, withdrawal, admittance to mental institutions, and suicide. Further, although many people claim that society has made strides in bringing about equality of the sexes, Dr. Stromberg claimed such changes are very minor, in his opinion.

Stress and unhappiness often cause psychosomatic illnesses, according to Dr. Weyhrich. Some of these illnesses include bloating, gastro-intestinal upset, and pelvic congestion.

When questioned about the life styles open to women in the future other than the traditional wife-mother role, Dr. Stromberg questioned the validity of marriage contracts. He said that women do most of the child-rearing as it is, and a piece of paper sanctioning their doing so is not necessary.

Dean Spulnick on watercolors, sandlife

by Kathy Alters

A Boise State University professor of chemistry notes that his hobby of watercolor painting has enhanced his perception of the world surrounding.

Dr. Spulnick, Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, painted his first watercolor five years ago at the urging of Dr. Louis Peck, and now shows an impressively large collection of his own paintings as a result. His paintings, currently hanging in the Liberal Arts Gallery, depict typically Idaho scenes of meadows and rustic cabins backed by sloping mountains, and of wild ducks flying over marshy fields. In one pleasant scene, the artist used only black and grey tones to create a night view of wild birds on the wing.

Once weekly, he paints with Dr. Peck, and for now, he uses slides and photographs of Idaho and some of his native Oregon country as models. Some time when he retires, he hopes to paint more from live settings. Not only is painting a relaxing occupation, but the professor feels that his viewpoints have sharpened. He expressed that what he has learned is "more than just making pictures. It opens ones eyes to the things on the earth's crust which we see only as obvious and commonplace".

As a scientist, he understands the internal structure of natural elements, and with the perceptions of an artist, he may also comprehend the visual composition. The reconciliation of the two, science and art, is possible he feels, through their common need for organization and structure.

The professor's years at the college have brought satisfaction. He joined the faculty in 1941, when this institution was still a junior college. His eyes light up as he proposes that "teaching is also creating, painting a picture in the student's mind". If his teaching is affected by his hobby, says Dr. Spulnick, perhaps it has become more descriptive.

Stafford, Roan concert encouraged by audience

For those of you who did not attend the Jim Stafford concert, you missed a truly professional entertainer.

The concert, which was attended by approximately 2000 people, started off with the warm and wonderful talents of Diana Roan, a former Miss Idaho, who showed her powerful voice through the country-western type songs she does so well. Diana was well excepted by the audience which was in the mood for good music plus a pretty and talented entertainer with all the charm and poise which won her the Miss Idaho title.

Then for the main attraction, Jim Stafford came out in blue jeans with sequins running up the front. This was an indication that those present were in for a good show and this was truly the case. Jim sang such songs as "Spiders and Snakes" and "Wild Wood Weed." And also did his rendition of how the National Anthem would have been done if someone other than Francis Scott Key had been the author.

From the minute Jim came on stage the audience was put at ease through his fabulous rapport and funny sense of humor. This was only topped by his musical talent with both the guitar and banjo not to mention the specially designed instruments at his feet to make him truly a "One Man Band."

All in all the concert was a big success with everyone in attendance having a very enjoyable evening.

On October 27, 1974 Loggins and Messina will be appearing in the BSU Gymnasium. Tickets are now on sale: $4.00 for BSU students, $5.00 for general admission and $6.00 at the door. If this concert is half as good as the Jim Stafford-Diana Roan presentation that's cheap at half the price.

Broncos to travel to NAU

by Melinda Scharf

The Boise State Broncos will be going for their third Big Sky win and sixth season win against one loss Saturday as they travel to Flagstaff to play the Lumberjacks of Northern Arizona University. Game time is set for 1:30 p.m. PDT.

"Northern Arizona is a big, strong football team which is capable of beating anyone in the Big Sky if they put it all together," commented BSU head coach Tony Knap. "The fact they beat Weber State 21-20 last weekend is a sign of that," he said. Weber State had defeated Montana State earlier in the year. "Northern Arizona is getting better every week. They have a defense that no one will push around much. We'll have to make them play our game," he said.

The Lumberjacks are led at quarterback by freshman Dan Troup, who has completed 48 out of 100 passing attempts for 731 yards and four touchdowns. Their top receiver is junior Kevin Riley who has 18 catches for 318 yards and three scores. NAU's leading rusher is Eric Days, another junior, who has carried the ball 116 times for 419 yards and two touchdowns.

In earlier action, the Broncos lost their first game of the season 37-35 last Saturday night to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas at Las Vegas Stadium before a record crowd of over 18,600 people.

The Broncos were subject to a problem in UNLV running back Mike Thomas, who went to work on the BSU defense early in the first quarter when he took a sweep from QB Glenn Carano and ran it back 85 yards for a touchdown on the third play of the game. Thomas rushed for a total of 166 yards against the Broncos and his 85 yard TD set a school record.

Boise State came back right away and moved to within one point as quarterback Jim McMillan hit John Crabtree from the eight. The PAT was no good and Nevada led 7-6.

The Rebels overwhelmed Boise State in the first half, as Carano and Thomas combined for four touchdowns, the two scoring a pair each. They also scored when BSU fullback Ken Johnson was hit for a safety in his own end zone. After the safety, which turned into a Nevada touchdown following the free kick, Johnson was called for unsportsmanlike conduct by the officials. Nevada led 30-6 at the half, and BSU went into the locker room with a few problems to iron out.

And they did, as Jim McMillan came back in the second half and brought the Broncos to within two points of the Rebels. McMillan and wide receiver Mike Holton put on quite a show for the Nevada fans, as Holton snatched 14 passes for 252 yards and, in the process, broke a school record that was previously held by Don Hutt (227 yards against Cal-Davis 1973). McMillan, on the other hand, finished the game with 454 yards passing, which broke Eric Guthrie's old record of 367 set in 1971 against Montana State. His 29 out of 40 completions broke the record of 21 he co-held with Guthrie and his five touchdowns passing broke Guthrie's record of four and his 471 yards total offense bettered the 407 yards he gained against Montana State. For his outstanding effort, McMillan was chosen Big Sky Offensive Player of the Week.

"There was no way we could adequately practice to face a runner like Thomas," coach Knap said. "We did some adjusting in the second half and our defense did a fine job. Our offense didn't give up and kept on fighting right to the end. I'm proud of the job the team did in the second half," Knap added.

Defensively, Pete Poumele led in tackles with 14, followed by cornerback Rolly Woolsey with 10 and linebackers Rocky Patchin (nine) and Ron Davis (eight). The Bronco defense held the Rebels to 74 yards total offense in the second half.

Never-never land of BSU football

by Tim Ritter

With all the turmoil about and around the campus concerning football ticket screw-ups, lost annuals, and lousy radio announcers, a sports column would seem to be an enlightening experience for those wanting to read about something besides the eternal of man. With that in mind, my friends, rid yourselves of all anxieties and plunge ahead with me into the never-never land of Boise State Football. The Broncos lost last Saturday night. Believe it or not, Dear Readers, I speak the truth. They lost to a superb Las Vegas Rebel team 37-35. Never mind that BSU was within the UNLV 15 twice in the fading minutes of the ballgame, close only counts in horseshoes, hand grenades, and dancing. The loss is recorded forever, and the Broncos must regroup, not recap. Last Saturday night's game will undoubtedly be talked about for a long time, yet for their sake, I hope most of the BSU team and staff don't dwell on the contest, except maybe to see what they did during the game that must be improved on. It was just too much Mike Thomas in the first half.

The Broncos will face Northern Arizona in Flagstaff Saturday afternoon. NAU surprised Weber State last week 21-20. The Axers have had a good season so far by their standards, and an upset over Boise State would do wonders for them. Under different circumstances, perhaps they could pull it off. However, Boise State is still number one in the Big Sky Conference, and Boise State is not at all anxious to have someone change that status. This writer is looking for the Broncos to rebound after Las Vegas in a big way. In other words, watch out NAU, the Big Blue is coming to town, and their pride is hurt. 'Nuff said.

With their first game a little more than a month away, the BSU basketball team is being put through their early paces by Head Coach Bus Connor and assistants Burt Golden and Mike Montgomery. A lot of things have changed from last year, the most outstanding being a shortage of players. There will be no freshman team this year, as all freshmen are needed on the varsity. For another change, 6'7" forward George Wilson has apparently decided not to turn out for BSU this year. The high-jumping Wilson reportedly returned home to St. Louis for personal reasons. The quick little 5'6" guard Alonzo Goggins, who excited Boise crowds two years ago with his ball-hawking play, reinjured his knee before the season and decided to call it quits also. Both players would have really helped Boise State this year, and their absence make Coach Connor's job a little harder. The Broncos face a tough early-season schedule, and every experienced ball player BSU can put on the floor will help.

Boise ski & snowmobile show

The Annual Boise Ski & Snowmobile show will be held again this year at the Western Idaho Fairgrounds, November 8, 9, 10, 1974.

Attractions will include Ski Shop, Ski Area and Snow Machine displays, Ski Ramp Demonstrations and a dance Saturday evening, November 9th. Feature of the Show will again be the annual Used Ski Equipment Sale. This year, instructors from the Bogus Basin Ski School will work the sale area assisting people in selecting equipment.

The theme of the Show will be to introduce new people to winter sports. Cross Country as well as Alpine ski equipment will be on display. Ski Ramp demonstrations will cover the spectrum of beginner programs through Hot Dogging.

The Bogus Basin Ski School will demonstrate its new "z'glm speedway" program, designed to make instant parallel skiers out of intermediates.

The three day Show will give ski and snowmobile enthusiasts an opportunity to spend a few hours in one location and view all the seasons new equipment.

Holton, Poumele earn Players of the Week

Over 300 combined BAA members and fans attended the weekly luncheon to watch the films of the BSU loss to Nevada-Las Vegas and to elect the Offensive and Defensive Players of the Week. The latter was accomplished and the players honored were wide receiver Mike Holton on offense and defensive end Pete Poumele on defense.

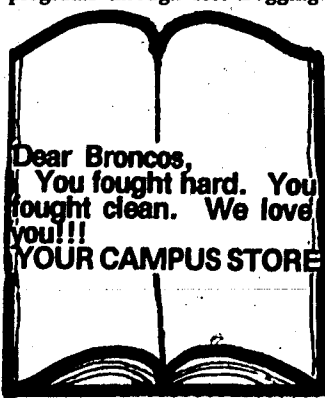

Holton caught 14 passes for a total of 252 yards and a new school record, breaking the old one held by Don Hutt last year. He also scored two touchdowns in the Boise State effort. Holton was one of the major factors in the Broncos' comeback in the second half.

Poumele had a total of 14 tackles against Las Vegas, as he led the defense machine. This was the second time in as many weeks that Poumele was selected, having won the award last week for his performance against Idaho State.

Former lion blazes

by Bill Kasala

Sitting in the SUB Ballroom last Tuesday evening, I wondered how Alex Karras, former football great with the Detroit Lions, star of movies, TV, and ABC Monday Night Football, would make his entrance. I thought maybe he'd walk through a wall or something equally dramatic, but he merely sauntered through the door like a regular human.

After setting the tone of the evening with his first (Thanks for the crappy intro, Hoppie), Karras began the saga of his football career. The ex-defensive tackle, famous for his hatred of blond-haired, blue-eyed, milk-drinking quarterbacks and faggot placekickers, began divulging his story to the students of BSU.

He first became interested in football through his brothers, who were both excellent players. However, Karras showed reluctance in playing high school football, but was convinced otherwise by his older brother Teddy. It seems Teddy had an emotional problem that required isolation in the family closet.

Alex was often thrown into the closet so his brother could take his frustrations out on him. He was told to either play football or continue to get beaten up, and the obvious choice was made.

Karras was good enough to get a scholarship to the University of Iowa, a school that hadn't won a championship in 32 years. He and his buddies won a few titles for Iowa, and in 1956 he was the first round draft choice of the Detroit Lions of the NFL.

Alex began to wonder about his future employees, who in 1956 won the NFL Championship. Karras and other college all-stars played the Lions in the annual pre-season exhibition game, with the collegiates winning 37-0. "I was the only guy on the team that was unhappy about winning," he said.

Karras played 14 years with the Lions, except for 1963 when he and Green Bay Packer great Paul Hornung "came down with an illness" and had to sit out the season. The illness was a suspension by Commissioner Pete Rozell for betting on NFL games. In all those years the Lions never won another title.

The Detroit squad didn't suffer on defense, when Alex starred with several players who are now enshrined in the Football Hall of Fame. The Lion offense was one of the worst in the league, and this only exaggerated Karras' hatred of quarterbacks and especially field goal kickers.

Probably the greatest frustration Karras suffered at the hands of the field goal kickers was in 1967, in a game with New Orleans. The Lions were undefeated up to then, and were in New Orleans for the first time. Karras and his buddies were suffering the effects of a night on the town and were only ahead by one point, 16-15, late in the game. With three seconds left, the Saints sent in Tom Dempsey, to attempt a 63 yard field goal. This situation coupled with the fact that Dempsey plays with a deformed right hand and club foot, sent the whole Detroit team into fits of uncontrollable laughter. Most of the Lion bench headed for the showers, while the defensive tried to line up to block the kick.

"Even the Saints were laughing about it," Karras said.

The ball was snapped, Karras got past his blocker and headed for Dempsey.

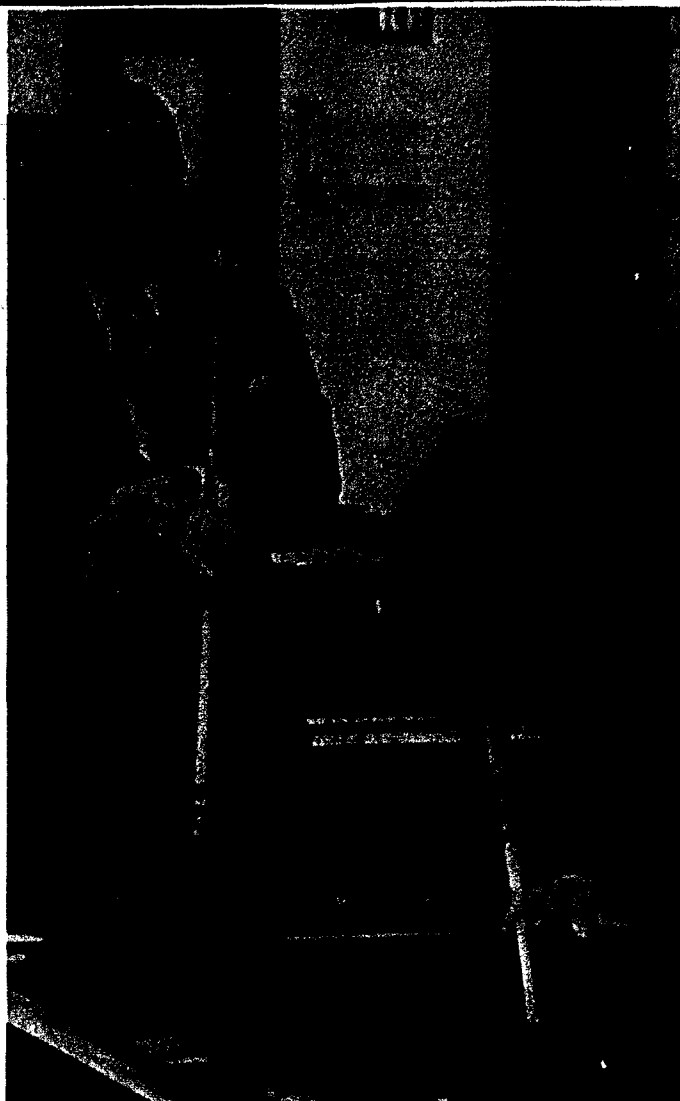

"I could have blocked it," he said, "but I was laughing so hard I just watched him kick it. I laughed for 62 yards."

Unfortunately, the ball went 63 yards clearing the goalposts and winning the game for New Orleans. Dempsey set a NFL record that day, while Karras and the Lions never recovered.

After that season he was traded to Washington, and since he didn't want to play on a team with Bill Kilmer as quarterback, Alex retired, and began pursuing a career in acting. He was featured in the film "Paper Lion" and starred in an episode of "Daniel Boone" on TV. Karras had to wear shoulder pads and elevator shoes to appear as tall as Fess Parker.

Perhaps his greatest acting role came in the film "Blazing Saddles". Karras played Mongo, a not to bright villian who beats up horses and lights cigars by sticking his head into a fire. He is currently co-hosting ABC Monday Night Football with Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell.

Karras gave a truly entertaining lecture Tuesday night, combining a vast knowledge of pro-football with his unique style of dry satirical humor. The "Mad Duck" of the Detroit Lions has finally gained the recognition he's deserved for so long.

Janis Ogawa, BSU's own champion, fired up her cue Tuesday evening to challenge the country's billiard pro, Jack White, and promptly stunned, hooked and ran him around his own exhibition table. Good show, Janis, and thanks, Jack, for a wonderful demonstration on how it's really done. (Photo Dustin Coney)

Skiers get ready

Eight more inches of snow blanketed Bogus Basin Sunday night and Monday to give the Ski Area its first taste of winter. While Ski Area officials do not plan on opening the facility until mid-November, the early snow brightens the outlook for another long and successful season.

Most of the Ski Area's summer maintenance and improvement projects are now completed. Skiers will be greeted by some additional ski slopes served by Chair 5 and a completely renovated Bogus Creek Lodge. McU's Ski Shop was expanded this summer to provide for additional retail and rental fitting areas. Of great importance to skiers will be a new surface on the Bogus Basin road which has been repaved from the Highlands to the parking lot.

The Intramural office wishes to announce that the three-man basketball tournament will start November 4. The deadline for signups is Wednesday, October 30, and the team rosters are to be submitted to the Intramural Office.

This is just a reminder for all interested in joining the gymnastics club, whether you be male or female.....come to the gym either:

Monday or Friday
4:30 - 6:00
or

10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

The only requirements are that you be a full-time or part-time student and have a desire to learn gymnastic skills. There is supervisory help at all time to assist you on any difficulties you might have, but it is primarily open workout.
