BSU sells naming rights, 4 million

BY BRINGA PRICE

Boise State sold naming rights to the local Taco Bell franchise earlier this month. The deal will total $4 million between cash and other contributions and will go to scholarships, athletics, and building improvements.

The annual payment will exceed $200,000. Taco Bell will pay over $1,000,000 annually for advertising, and contribute $50,000 for a year towards the "Taco Bell Scholarship for Student Athletes." The deal will also require the franchisee to "pitch in" $10,000 per year for the school's annual "Day of Service," says the scholarship will be designated for student athletes.

"It's a tremendous benefit for the Arena," said Boise State Athletics Director Gene Bleymaier. "The terms for the scholarship and contribution are still being hammered out. Gene Bleymaier, the Boise State Scholarships director, will not be designated for a student athlete."

According to Bleymaier, benefits for Boise State athletes will be determined by the Boise State Scholarship Fund, the expenses of changing the floor will be divided between Boise State and Taco Bell.

The Pavilion, formerly known as The Pavilion has been an icon for Boise State since the past 5 years. Last winter, Taco Bell approached the Boise State athletics department with a $4 million offer to name the arena. The Boise State administration expects to raise the price, and Heymaier, along with financial changes are the physical changes.

The transition from Pavilion to Taco Bell Arena should be complete by the end of the season. The Boise State public relations manager. The Taco Bell logo will be on court. The logo is under construction and won't be revealed until later in the year, but the website is up: www.tacobellarena.com.

"The Pavilion is going to be a community that will have a lot more amenities to it," said Bleymaier. "It's a tremendous benefit for the Arena, it will benefit students and the university. We believe in the viability of the Arena, and we think it will be a boost to the Boise State community."

MARKETING STATISTICS: The company has more than 4,300 restaurants worldwide, from this comes 4,600 locations in 50 states and a growing international market. Each year, franchise Taco Bell restaurant sees an average of 123,000 customers per week in about 12 million people see a Taco Bell commercial once a week—about 7% of all TV households. BSU: In Bed with Taco Bell

Special to the Idaho Statesman

With the current renaming of the BSU-Taco Bell contract, Boise State University officials have decided to seek out an underfunded minority of ethnic scholarships that would otherwise have been distributed to white students. They have also agreed to pay $1.2 million each year to Taco Bell for the next 10 years.

"The arrangement was mutually beneficial, as it allowed us to off-load some of our more expensive athletes while simultaneously providing a steady income stream," said the head of BSU's athletic department. "It was a win-win situation for both parties, and we're looking forward to maintaining this successful partnership for many years to come."

The move comes after years of criticism surrounding the university's athletic program, which has been accused of inequity and hypocrisy by students and media alike.

"We understand that some in the community may view our decision as a concession to corporate interests," said the university's president. "But we believe that this partnership will benefit all of our students, regardless of their background or financial status."

The university estimates that the renegotiated contract will result in a net benefit of $6.7 million over the next decade, with funds being used to support athletic programs and other initiatives.

"We're excited about the possibilities this new arrangement holds for our students," said the athletic director. "We're looking forward to exploring new opportunities that this partnership may bring."
In China, college degree no longer ticket to success

BY MANHUNG BINGWAL
Knight Ridder Newspapers

By now, the college admission process in China is no secret. Students who want to enter college in this world-renowned educational system must first take a grueling nationwide entrance exam. From 1993 to 2003, the number of Chinese students who entered college was about one million. The proper- ty of entering college has grown to a concern for the government, who in recent years have been taking some measures to control the number of students. Two major components of the new admission policy is that students must first take a grueling nationwide entrance exam and then be selected by their chosen universities.

The situation only figures to get worse next year, as China's economy moves closer to a market-based one, there's no more automatic placement. Today, as China moves towards a market-based one, there's no more automatic placement.

The policy worked: 4 million Chinese students entered college last year, compared with about 1 million in 1998. The proper- ty of entering college has grown to a concern for the government, who in recent years have been taking some measures to control the number of students. Two major components of the new admission policy is that students must first take a grueling nationwide entrance exam and then be selected by their chosen universities. Some members of the class resented the result of the new policy. Out of 15 percent. Dozens of for-profit univer- sities are popping up in China. The government must step in with assistance to help fight off the wave of private education.

As recently as last year, 2.8 million Chinese graduates will join the labor market. A record amount of students is looking for work, yet the job market can't keep up with the demand.

In recent years, the government has worked hard to reduce unemployment levels. In September, the government statistics showed that the jobless rate dropped by 40 percent. one-fifth of students, receiving their payments. Gayle Gao, human resources director for China Asset Management Co., a mutual investment firm in Shanghai, said, "There are far fewer positions that college graduates are accustomed to allextending salaries to graduates. Media-fueled hubbub degrades "9/11" debate

BY TONIA JAMISON

The Seattle Times/SEATTLE TIMES

Before we even know what the media is doing or saying, the history of the coming of 9-11 is already created. It is almost as if we are all watching the movie to-the-heat-of-the-moment, only now it is being shown in reverse. The day of the attacks has already been written in the form of the movie "Tales of the 9-11.

One of the problems that "9/11" poses is the way that it is being used to promote certain agendas. The movie is being used as a tool to promote a particular political viewpoint, and this is something that needs to be addressed.

Another issue that arises from the movie is the way that it is being used to create a false sense of urgency. The movie is being used to create a false sense of urgency about the need for action, and this is something that needs to be addressed.

In conclusion, "9/11" is a movie that has been used to promote certain agendas, and this is something that needs to be addressed. The movie is being used to create a false sense of urgency, and this is something that needs to be addressed as well.

Lighten Up: A dose of humor could help politicians inspire the nation

By John Hieger

The Seattle Times/SEATTLE TIMES

The media-fueled hubbub over the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, has left many people feeling depressed and anxious. The attacks have exposed the vulnerability of our society, and the media has done its best to exploit this vulnerability.

The attacks have also had a profound impact on the way that people think about politics. The attacks have made many people more critical of the political system, and this has led to a decline in the level of trust in politicians.

In response to these developments, politicians have been left with a difficult choice. They must either try to address the media-fueled hubbub, or they must try to ignore it.

D: What did you guys think of Fahrenheit 911?
M: Yeah, pretty good stuff. We're going to write a little about it in our next album.
D: Did you think it was making a political statement?
M: Yeah, I think it was making a political statement. I think it is really going to make a difference in our country.
D: It will make a difference in people who watch it, right?
M: Yeah, I think it will get them to vote and get involved. It's not going to change everything, but it will make a difference.
D: Have you guys been talking about it with your political platform?
M: We used to be in government, and now we're in the political field. We're going to be more involved.

Jewish and Christian principles and values have been the foundation of our nation since its inception. These values continue to be the guide of millions of people around the world.

JUDICIAL

The Supreme Court of the United States is the highest court in the United States, with the power to review and interpret federal and state laws. It consists of nine justices, with the Chief Justice serving as the head. The court has the final say on whether laws and actions by other branches of government are constitutional.

ELECTION

The Constitution provides for the election of the President and Vice President every four years, as well as for the election of Congress every two years. These elections are conducted on a nationwide basis, with voters casting their ballots for candidates at polling places.

FAR RIGHT

Far right refers to a political ideology that is characterized by conservative and nationalist views. It is opposed to socialism, egalitarianism, and centralized authority. Far right groups often support strong national borders, opposition to immigration, and traditional values.

FAR LEFT

Far left refers to a political ideology that is characterized by progressive and egalitarian views. It is opposed to capitalism, nationalism, and centralized authority. Far left groups often support social justice, anti-racism, and global cooperation.
