Demand for student housing is less than projected

BY MARY RICE LOZER

University health officials said Monday that demand for university housing is less than projected. According to the director of the University’s new housing facility, Scott Jensen, the university has more than 400 available beds, but only 150 of those are currently occupied. Jensen said that the university has recently opened several new dormitories, but that demand has not kept pace with the supply. He also noted that some students have chosen to live off-campus, which has led to a decrease in demand for university housing.

Fewer deaths make young people complacent about HIV

BY EMILY RMSHRW

Young adults (under 25) are estimated to be responsible for about 50 percent of new infections with HIV/AIDS. Yet, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, it is not uncommon for young people to underestimate the risk of acquiring HIV.

"It is not uncommon for young people to underestimate the risk of acquiring HIV," said Adele Webb, executive director of the Resource Center of Dallas. "Young adults often believe that they are not at risk, or that they can take a pill so what's the big deal?" she said. "The only person they know with HIV is their friend, and they think they can't get it just because they are not seeing it," said Webb. "It's really important that young people understand the risk of acquiring HIV and the importance of using condoms and other protective measures."

In 31 states, freshmen must be vaccinated against meningitis

by BY DEB CHASE

The New York Times

HACKENSACK, N.J.—For the price of a pair of tennis shoes, Kach could probably have saved his life.

Kach, a college student in Hackensack, learned vaccination against meningitis would have kept him from contracting the disease that left him with some permanent disability—red and purple blotches on his arms and back. If only he had gone to the doctor, which was a mere $150.

"I went to the doctor's off-ce for a haircut. They recommended getting vaccinated, but they didn't have vaccine at the time," Kach said during a recent interview at the home of his parents, Paul and Karen Kach, in Bogota, N.J.

If Kach's meningitis had been treated at an earlier stage, he might have been able to avoid the lasting effects of the disease. But even though the meningitis was not deadly, it was severe enough to leave Kach with a lifelong disability:

"My blood was curdling, like milk," recalled Kach, who is attending college again. He now advises high school students, "Don't let meningitis catch you by surprise. Go to a medical clinic for $25. It's a pair of sneakers."

I DON'T SUPPORT A MARRIAGE AMENDMENT. MY DAUGHTER IS GAY. SO I KNOW SOMETHING ABOUT THAT.

MAYBE IF YOUR DAUGHTER WAS UNHAPPY, UNEMPLOYED, OR UNINSURED, OR ON A FIXED INCOME AND NEEDING PENSIONS WHERE THEY "KNOW SOMETHING" ABOUT THOSE PROBLEMS, TOO?

WE DID BURDEN HER GENERATION WITH CRUSHING DEBT! DOES THAT COUNT?

Who is really to blame for illegal immigration?

BY EMILY PELCZAR

I went looking for "Dubai Tall Tales" the other day when my attempt to hack some music from a friend backfired. They say one has to take such risks to make the five dollars an hour that one's going to "distribute" to the West Bank. If you're not guaranteed an address, if you're not assured your identity won't be stolen, if your "cache" is not password-protected, if you don't know who's going to see it, then you have to mention "the distribution of pornography growing from the south." I find this comment bothersome, not because I think the blame for its ills are so grossly misplaced, but because the current immigration situation is just "hunky dory," but because the freedom to steal your kid's healthcare to them, immigrants are so determined to steal your kid's health care, to even the simplest mind. Wave a handful of money at a desperate immigrant and let them have a shot at the American Dream. They'll be thirty-five, they'll have a mohawk, their collar will be white, not blue. Immigration is currently estimated at 10 million. Arguably the plight of the Mexican immigrant and family improves greatly in America, but to go to work in a meat-packing plant in Idaho certainly cannot be likened to hitting the jackpot. It is morally reprehensible to place the greatest responsibility for this problem on the actor with the least amount of choice. So who really is to blame?

Digital Piracy: House bill would weaken copyright law

In the days of camcorders and videocassette recorders, the recording industry simply turned on its customers and said, "Don't expect to make any money off your camcorder. We have made piracy exceedingly easy, and now we want to charge a fee for using it to make copies of copyrighted material."

The truth is, the recording industry has always tried to make money off people's desire to make copies of their favorite recordings. They just didn't make that as explicit or as close to their customers as it has for the last six years. In the past, the recording industry has been more likely to say, "Hey, the free software is good enough, but we should probably charge you for using it." But now they're saying, "Hey, we're going to charge you for using it."

In the latest assault on the digital revolution, a bill introduced by Rep. Howard Coble (R-N.C.) and Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) would broaden the definition of what is considered "public performance" of a work and let movie companies and television networks charge people who copy without permission.

Congressional Appointments

Beverly Goodman, a Virginia lawyer, and Robert Clifford, a California lawyer, have been appointed by the Jewish Film Institute to serve on the board of directors. Goodman has made piracy exceedingly easy, and now we want to charge a fee for using it to make copies of copyrighted material. The truth is, the recording industry has always tried to make money off people's desire to make copies of their favorite recordings. They just didn't make that as explicit or as close to their customers as it has for the last six years. In the past, the recording industry has been more likely to say, "Hey, the free software is good enough, but we should probably charge you for using it." But now they're saying, "Hey, we're going to charge you for using it."

Digital Piracy: House bill would weaken copyright law

The Recording Industry Association of America is lobbyng Congress to broaden the definition of what is considered "public performance" of a work and let movie companies and television networks charge people who copy without permission. Instead of buying a second copy of a favorite movie, customers could legally circumvent anti-copying technologies to make a copy for their personal use.

"There is a vast difference between using copyright materials for personal, noncommercial use and making a fraudulent or illegal copy of a copyrighted work," said John P. Caffrey, chairman and president of the nation's largest copyright lobby. "We don't think personal, noncommercial use is the same as illegal copying, and we don't think the public interest is served by weakening copyright protections."

You only think you know what sacrifice means.

TYNES DESPOV, Student Columnist

I would like to confess something and tell to my readers about something I consider important. It’s sacrifice. Yes, this brave new world in which we live, it is a serious topic that everybody should spend some time reflecting on. For some people, sacrifice may be taken for granted, but I believe that we should be grateful for the fact that we are even able to think of it as an option.

“Sacrifice” is a word that is foreign to many people, but I believe it is important to understand its meaning. Let’s define its separate root pieces: a deity, something precious; es- within an animal or plant often graphical name; moun-

“Sacrifice” as a concept has been around for a long time. It has been used in various contexts, from religious practices to personal decisions. The question can now be: What is sacrifice?

In my book, sacrifice is more of who you are.

What I’m trying to get at here is that what we sacrifice must be meaningful to us. Sacrifice means giving something up, but it doesn’t require you to give up everything you actually want. It can be a small sacrifice, such as taking a nap on Saturday after-

Broncos prepare for Vandals with sealed lips

The 2004 Boise State football season gets under way Saturday at Bronco Stadium with one mammoth question looming on everyone's mind. Who will be the starting quarterback?

Boise State Head Coach Dan Hawkins has made his decision. Whether it's fifth-year senior Mike Sanford or sophomore Jared Zabransky, he is not saying. So fans and media will have to wait until Saturday's 6:07 p.m. kickoff versus in-state rivals Idaho to learn who will succeed Ryan Dinwiddie.

"I don't want those guys to have to deal with questions daily regarding this," Hawkins said. "Fans can expect to see one or the other taking all the snaps.

"We are a one quarterback system," Hawkins said.

"I just have to worry about myself and get ready to play," Sanford said. "And regardless of the way it turns out, as long as I'm the starter, I've got to be ready to play because anything could happen.

There is still a question mark at another key position for the Broncos. There's a logjam at running back.

"I think all of those guys can contribute in their own way," Hawkins said. "I think there's four or five guys who can really contribute.

The Vandals will travel down to Bronco Stadium for the last time as a non-conference opponent. Idaho will join the WAC in July of next year. The two haven't played in a conference game since Boise State left the Big West Conference after the 2000 season.

Vandals are coming off a disappointing season in the Sun Belt Conference, 3-9 overall (3-4 SBC). But there is a glimmer of hope with the offseason arrival of Head Coach Nick Holt. The former defensive coordinator for the Vandals spent the last three seasons as the linebackers coach at USC.

"He (Holt) has a tremendous amount of fire and a tremendous amount of passion," Hawkins said.
