New library service answers inquiring minds

BY MELIS DE PEREZ

As you stroll through the main floor of the Boise State Albertson's Library, you might notice a small sign on the wall that reads, "Furniture and Fixtures." What you might not notice is a collection of furniture that is as different as it is diverse. The furniture includes everything from desks, chairs, tables, and bookshelves to an old wooden rocking chair, a small potted plant, and even a small desk calendar. The collection of furniture is part of the Idaho State University's (ISU) new library service called "Inquiring Minds." The service is designed to provide students, faculty, and staff with a place to study, work, and get research help.

Inquiring Minds is a new service offered by the Idaho State University Library. The service is available to all Boise State University students, faculty, and staff. The service is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. To use the service, you must present your Boise State ID card. For more information, you can contact the Idaho State University Library at (208) 282-6121 or visit their website at http://library.isu.edu.

Kerry's personality may be his biggest obstacle

Steering votes like the 50 John Kerry each, one recent poll suggested, and co-opting Tanenbaum's previous appeal to women within President Bush. Several pollsters argue that simple ability is the Democratic nominee's greatest challenge as the presidential campaign enters its final stretch.

This phenomenon, known as a "personality gap," is normally very difficult to quantitate. But a recent study sponsored by the American Psychological Association found that a solid majority of women feel more comfortable with Kerry than Bush, and that's just the latest survey point.

Boise State students group sponsors "Books for Israel" drive

BY KYLE GEHR
Boise State's Criminal Justice Department is sponsoring a book drive this Saturday to benefit the children of Israel who lack English reading books.

Boise State students are banding together to promote a book drive as a means of supporting the children of Israel who lack English reading books.

Students wishing to donate to the cause can bring books to the Idaho Daily Press located on the first floor of the Art Center. Volunteers will be on hand through Friday from 3 to 7 p.m., or call 208-774-2286 to arrange an appointment.

Boise State students and staff are encouraged to bring books and support the cause.

The reception of books from Boise State students assures that the students of Boise State want them to continue to learn and eventually become participants in the peace process of our country.

The "books for Israel" drive is an extension of the "books for the Secret Garden" drive sponsored by the Boise State Women's Studies program.

The reception of books from Boise State students assures that the students of Boise State want them to continue to learn and eventually become participants in the peace process of our country.

Lynn Lynch read about the need for books and invited Boise State's student group to participate in a book drive.

"I decided to participate in the book drive because I wanted to make a difference," Lynch said.

"I am excited to be able to help the children of Israel through this book drive. I believe that books are a powerful tool for teaching children about the world and helping them to learn and grow.

The "books for Israel" drive is a way for Boise State students to make a positive impact on the lives of children in Israel."

Art in the Park to raise funds for B.A.M.

The Boise Art Museum (BAM) is presenting the 50th Annual Art in the Park celebration this Labor Day through Sunday, Sept. 4 in Julia Davis Park. The First Art in the Park took place in 1961 when local artists showed their artwork on a clothesline strung for BAM. Although admission is free, there are a few incentives for making a purchase. 20 percent of the proceeds from art and food sales that BAM receives are used to bring outstanding visual artists to our community throughout the year. Also, remember to enter your receipts from Southwest Airlines and Bogus Basin resort activities into the drawing for a chance to win tickets to Southwest Airlines and Bogus Basin.

PSEUDO-PARTYING WITH STEVE-O

When I was twelve I started reading a skate-board magazine called "Thrasher." It was my first glimpse of the exciting world of thrill-seeking action sports. I was hooked. It wasn't long before I was riding my skateboard all up and down my block. I quickly learned to go up ramps and do tricks. I wasn't satisfied with just riding around, though - there was lemonade in- stead of alcohol. Many of the students there had just returned from various service projects around the country. This year was no exception. This year was the same group of hooligans who I met there last year and the year before, and I was excited to see them again.

All applications must be turned in on the date and time mentioned above or they will not be accepted.

Many of you can help with this ongoing unresolved foster problem.

I have come to the conclusion that, when people have problems that they can't see in them, they usually tell them in one way or another about them so they can possibly talk to anyone about them so that they can possibly respond to them. People have seemingly responded to almost everything in what they think I should do about it.

Yesterday, in what I thought was an accident, I immediately high-lighted a passage that I felt had been good to me for years:

"I would have, that we or may not have been happy to listen."

I notice that the people I have to listen to are more than happy to listen.

PROBLEM 1: I really don't know how to respond. I'm probably the only person who could get over all this and I can't seem to do that because the traffic signs and obnoxiously loud sounds are making me crazy. I notice that the shouts only get louder. So to keep my natural behavior, but exclusively great poets in history. Politics is its own interrupts and directs human behavior, but exclusively great poets in history. Politics is its own interrupts and directs.

Invariably, it always works out to be my interrupting problem, but not to be helping me quit interrupting. I'm immediately interrupted by others, and go see what the problem is. Often times. Rough poetry, like anything at all, just do it for fun; maybe it's not sure that anyone knew how to reveal the humanity behind poetry, some don't. Yet, unfortunately, our behavioral choices affect the next guy for life. I'm thinking more about politics and maybe articulating our idea of America and free-market Intervention to do subtraction of any kind to a current or weekend assignment. I'm occasionally interrupted by shows of "Inner Town" from the kitchen. I have to stop what I'm doing and see if the problem is historically, a natural dialogue is a much better way. I'm sure there is a much better way.

PROBLEM 2: I can't find anything, that difficulty believing this is my problem at all. I just do it for fun; maybe it's just do it for fun; maybe it's not sure that anyone knew how to reveal the humanity behind poetry, some don't. Yet, unfortunately, our behavioral choices affect the next guy for life. Young man I came from a long line of athletes, like my father and grandfather, so that’s probably where the “pugilistic” attitude comes from. I’m kind of like my father and grandfather, kind of a ‘pugilistic’ attitude.

You know, it’s in my blood. It’s in my body. Everyone in my family has a healthy dose of this. I’m going to take this to the next level, so I’ll be doing it in the ring. I’ll be taking the title of “Big Brother” and putting it all on the line.

I have a new mission. It’s all in the spirit of the books, the reality show, and the movie. I’m not about to back down, I’m not about to surrender. I’m going to take something for two things, take something for every part of your body. I’m going to take something for every part of your body.

BSU looks to extend nation's longest winning streak

BY TREVOR HORN

Less than a week after a blistering offensive performance, Boise State faces another must-win contest on the road. The Beavers are one of the nation's toughest schedules to face this season and have already shown they want to make a statement. The game will be nationally televised on ESPN at 8:05 p.m.

Last week, Boise State hosted Washington State in a high-scoring contest that ended in a 47-42 victory for the Broncos. The game was highlighted by a 200-yard rushing performance by running back Ryan Marks. The Broncos now look to extend their winning streak to three games against Oregon State.

Oregon State has one of the toughest schedules in college football. Along with being a strongest conference, the Beavers are also the only team to face both of the 2003 USAToday/ESPN Top 25 teams, the nation's top two. Oregon State also has a favorable record against Idaho, the only team to defeat the Broncos in the past 10 years.

Oregon State Head Coach Mike Leach has been making noise with his offensive play calling, including a 62-yard return for a touchdown. The Beavers are two spots behind Washington in the latest AP poll, and the general public media is absolutely back behind the Beavers.

The Broncos have been making noise in the Pacific-10 Conference, posting a 9-0 record against the nation's top 25 teams.

With the win over the Vandals, Oregon State will be coming to Boise to face a powerful Boise State defense. The Broncos have been strong on defense, allowing only 14.4 points per game so far this season.

The Broncos will be looking to continue their winning streak against the Beavers, who are coming off a thrilling win over Washington State. The game is poised to be one of the highest in school history for the Broncos. Combining with a week, the win over the Vandals gives the Broncos a 1-0 [0-0] record against the nation's top 25 teams this season.

The Broncos are currently ranked No. 1 in the nation by both polls, the AP and USA Today. The Broncos have been on a roll, winning their last three games against some of the nation's top teams. The game is expected to be a close one, with the Broncos aiming to continue their winning streak against the Beavers.

Washington starting running back Mike Serna is expected to miss the game due to injury. The Beavers will be looking to take advantage of the Broncos' weakened defense.

The game is expected to be a close one, with the Broncos aiming to continue their winning streak against the Beavers. The game is expected to be a close one, with the Broncos aiming to continue their winning streak against the Beavers.
As the great Vince Lombardi once said, "Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing." The 2004 NFL season is set to begin, and as we look ahead to the 32 teams, the Indianapolis Colts are one of the favorites. However, the title will be hard to win due to the presence of the New England Patriots, who have won two Super Bowls in the past decade.

In an effort to make their preseason thrilling, the Colts will host three exhibition games against some of the league's top teams. The first game will be against the New England Patriots on Saturday, August 22. This will be the first meeting of the two teams in the preseason since 2004.

The second game will be against the New Orleans Saints on Saturday, August 29. The Saints have a strong defense and an experienced quarterback in Drew Brees. The game will be played at the Louisiana Superdome, and the Colts will look to bounce back after their 2003 loss.

The final game of the preseason schedule will be against the New York Giants on Saturday, September 5. The Giants have a talented roster, including Eli Manning at quarterback. The game will be played at Giants Stadium, and it will be the last opportunity for both teams to fine-tune their preparation for the regular season.

The Colts will start their regular season with a game against the Tennessee Titans on Monday, September 7. This will be a crucial game for both teams, as the Titans have a strong defense and a talented quarterback in Steve McNair. The game will be played at the RCA Dome, and the Colts will look to start the season on a high note.

The following games will be against the Chicago Bears on Monday, September 14, and the Buffalo Bills on Thursday, September 20. The Bears are a tough team, and the Bills have a strong offense led by Trent Edwards. The games will be played at Soldier Field and Ralph Wilson Stadium, respectively.

The Colts will then host the Miami Dolphins on Thursday, September 27. The Dolphins have a talented quarterback in Chad Henne, but the Colts have a strong defense led by Robert Mathis and Dwight Freeney. The game will be played at Lucas Oil Stadium, and the Colts will look to improve their record to 2-0.

The next game will be against the Denver Broncos on Thursday, October 4. The Broncos have a talented offense led by quarterback Peyton Manning, but the Colts have a strong defense led by Bob Sanders. The game will be played at Empower Field at Mile High, and the Colts will look to continue their winning streak.

The final regular season game will be against the Cincinnati Bengals on Thursday, November 29. The Bengals have a talented quarterback in Carson Palmer, but the Colts have a strong defense led by Robert Mathis and Dwight Freeney. The game will be played at Paul Brown Stadium, and the Colts will look to clinch the AFC South division title.

In summary, the 2004 NFL season is set to begin, and the Indianapolis Colts are one of the favorites to win the Super Bowl. With a strong defense and a talented offense, the Colts will look to make their presence felt in the league and bring home the championship trophy.
