BPD begins reign as campus law enforcement

By MARGIE PRICE

Boise Police Department will take over campus security October 1, in a news conference Wednesday. Boise Police Chief Jim Tibbs, flanked by two recently named officers, announced the hand over. "It's been a long time coming," said Tibbs.

Tibbs, a 30-year graduate, thanked the Sheriff's office for working so close to BPD. "It's been about 21 years," he said. "We have had a long partnership with Boise State University. It's been a great opportunity to be on campus, it's a different kind of police work. We wish the Boise Police back in development. We're looking forward to working with the campus community."

Tibbs said the BPD has been working on campus for about 11 years. "We have a very strong relationship to be on campus," he said. "We wish the Boise Police back in development. That's what we're looking forward to working with the campus community."

C-SPAN school bus drives to BSU

By CORY MICHURO

The C-SPAN Foundation brought its new school bus to Boise State University Monday. BSU students and faculty were privileged to tour the bus and learn about C-SPAN and its mission.

The C-SPAN school bus is a 45-foot mobile production studio and interview area on the C-SPAN network. While on tour, the bus provides access to the political process through live, gavel-to-gavel coverage of the legislative process, debates, presidential elections, and other events of public interest.

The bus, which was provided to the university by C-SPAN, is equipped with robotic control units, an eight-channel audio board, two video access to the political process through live, gavel-to-gavel coverage of the legislative process, debates, presidential elections, and other events of public interest.

The bus is a fixture in the nation's capital, traveling around for over a decade. It has won awards for its coverage of events such as the State of the Union Address, the National Prayer Breakfast, and the inauguration of President George W. Bush.

The tour of the bus was arranged by the C-SPAN local coordinator, who is a Boise State student. The tour was open to all students and faculty members.

Hurricane Ivan pummels Cayman Islands, takes aim at Cuba

MIAMI—Hurricane Ivan lashed the Cayman Islands on Sunday and destined to barge western Cuba this week as a Category 3 storm. "Our greatest concern is the potential for a very strong wind storm," said the National Hurricane Center. "The Cayman Islands are exposed to a wide array of strong winds."

Sustained winds of 120 mph, the island's strongest, were expected to come from the north, north east and east, according to the National Hurricane Center. "People should be prepared for heavy winds and high waves," said the center.

Around the Caribbean, 40 deaths have been blamed on the hurricane so far. "Persons from South Florida have been coming to the region since the storm warning was issued," said a person who wished not to be identified.

Over the past week, Ivan has been blamed for at least two cars, one in the Bahamas. In the Bahamas, a trucker and a trucker's wife were killed, according to the Bahamas National Disaster Management Team. The storm has been blamed for at least two more deaths in the Bahamas, according to the National Hurricane Center.

The National Hurricane Center said that Ivan was moving toward the Caribbean at about 15 mph, with winds of 75 mph.

Ivan is expected to make landfall in the Cayman Islands on Sunday and move into the Bahamas on Monday. "If you think about the number of people that we have exposed to this storm, it's significant," said the National Hurricane Center.

In Cuba, the National Hurricane Center said that Ivan was moving toward the western coast of Cuba at about 15 mph, with winds of 80 mph.

"We are preparing for a major storm," said the National Hurricane Center. "People should be prepared for heavy winds and high waves.""
Salmon Festival spawns visitors

By MIRELLA BELL

The weekend of August 28 and 29 was special meaning for the outdoor enthusiast. The salmonWEST Festival is one of the most popular and exciting events on the calendar. The streets of Boise are filled with art vendors, food booths and numerous activities. The festival is sponsored by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission.

In addition, the festival includes a salmon spawner contest. The contest is open to anyone who wants to participate. The contest is divided into two categories: the adult category and the youth category. The adult category is open to people of all ages, while the youth category is open to children ages 12 and under.

The salmon spawner contest is a way to showcase the beauty and importance of the salmon population. The contest encourages people to think about the conservation of salmon and to work towards protecting these important fish species.

Jon Stewart and "The Daily Show" unite politics and young people

By Robert Service

When he endorses silly tales in his "Daily Show" and subject themselves to this sort of comedic patronizing. However, political figures - chairman of the National Republican Committee - has also been there. We know exactly why Gillespie would accept this style of reporting since the likes of Republican winners on the show in much shorter relative to Democrats and Liberals.

When Gillespie was on "The Daily Show" last, Stewart managed not to let the "show" during the interview. That was not exactly a very comfortable audience of any of the clownish attempt to get rich by running for a cause or putting his name on a picture. Stewart immediately deflected the audience with a witty comeback or joke. The "fake" report on the show's state of media quality.

During a Q & A with a comedian Republican National Committee chairman, Senator Sam Nunn asked the reporter if he was having a good time in New York City. After his partisan opinion, a straight-faced free speech, "Will you be having your picture taken with a black president while you are here?" The stump speech is intended to connect. "You see, I'm insinuating.." The man went on to express his feelings about whom he likes sitting there. Self-delusion is the name of the Republican game

Of Robert Steinback

I don’t think we can win this one anymore.

What’s next, I just thought we’d be able to talk about it?

BSU volleyball team sweep the Bengals in three games

BY INNAER FOGER

The Broncos improved their record to 9-0 Tuesday night after defeating the Idaho State Bengals for the first time since September of 2004. The Broncos dominated the momentum of the match defeating the Bengals in three games 30-22, 25-11, and 25-16.

The Broncos were able to make a comeback but the speed and offense of the Broncos from the start was too much for the Bengals to keep up with one another and pulled off a win.

"The Bengals had trouble keeping up with one another and pulled off a win," said Denver head coach Kim Headland.

"The Broncos had nine total block kills and 16 attack points. The Bengals had 12 block attempts and 13 attack points. Junior middle hitter Cameron Flunder led the Broncos with 15 kills and defensive digs. Senior outside hitter Libero Jackie Stroud had 10 defensive digs. Sophomore middle blocker Krista Johnson had seven defensive digs. Freshman outside hitter had four spikes up for the Broncos with 11 kills and service aces. For the last three seasons, the Bengals only have nine total block attempts. This is a combination of this style of play has worked recorded in the first three rounds of the match against the solid Bronco offense.

Bartman's spirit lives on in infamy in Chicago

By Mike Berardino

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Through a little-noticed security loophole at Wrigley Field, an impromptu statue of a Cub's season ticket holder was set up to guard the home plate during Game 6 of the National League Championship Series.

Bartman, on the other hand, was watching Game 6 on TV back in Regina, Saskatchewan. As an American expatriate, he was not even aware of the moment that forever changed baseball.

"It's funny, but it's unfortunate," said Rendell, like many other Cub fans. "I feel bad for the guy because he was just doing what he thought was right to make things a little better for baseball."
BAM delivers a bang in Boise

Michele E. Halley

The Boise Art Museum delivered a bang with the second annual Art in the Park. The event attracted over 1,500 people to the Park Center for Art & West Loch Park on a warm, sunny weekend. The event featured over 200 artists who showcased their work in booths set up around a ring of trees at the center of the park. Visitors could stroll through the park and explore the various areas of the event, including live music, food vendors, and interactive art installations. The event also featured a variety of performances, including dance, music, and poetry, which added to the festive atmosphere. Overall, the event was a success, with visitors enjoying the beautiful weather and the vibrant art on display. The next Art in the Park is scheduled for 2024.
