Students fight for their right to privacy

BY CHERYL SPECTOR

Students in Boston are fighting the Boston City Council over a proposed ordinance that would require landlords to obtain written permission from students before entering their homes.

The initial draft of the ordinance, which was introduced by City Council members, would allow police and other law enforcement officers to enter homes without warrants. Students argue that this would infringe on their rights to privacy and security.

The ordinance is intended to crack down on illegal drug use, but students say it would also allow law enforcement to carry out warrantless searches, which is unconstitutional.

"We don't want our homes invaded," said one student, "We want to live in our homes, not have our privacy invaded."
Poll finds most Iraqis don't care who wins U.S. election

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Despite polls that the U.S. president is not close to victory, in Iraq few people are thinking much about whether President Bush or Democratic challenger John Kerry.

In a survey by U.S. troops, 58.6 percent said the American elections didn't matter to them. It was fixed and that U.S. policy wasnt going to change no matter who won.

"Just because the American elections are being held doesn't mean we don't care," said Feroz, a soldier and interpreter from the town of Diwaniya.

"I'm going to wait and watch the U.S. elections and then fight against whoever wins," he said.

The margin of error was 4 percentage points. The poll was conducted from Oct. 3 to Oct. 15.

The study was conducted by the Iraq Polling Group, which says it can get people to show up to vote for candidates who have been killed in the fighting.

Candidates spar on health care, science

Washington — President Bush and Sen. John Kerry crisscrossed the country Thursday in a day that also saw Kerry traipsing through a field with a 12-gauge shotgun and gun owners, Kerry cradling his weapon after appearing before waiting photographers to capture his visit to a gun store.

Bush invited photographers to capture his visit to a gun store.

FRONTLINE's "The Choice 2004" rebroadcasts on PBS

On Oct. 2, college students crowded the campus' main hall in the days before the election to view a screening of "The Choice 2004," a two-hour dual biography of the two men who hope to call the White House.

"The Choice 2004" will be rebroadcast Oct. 26-29. It is the first wartime election since the Vietnam War, its impact on the candidate's lives with rare archival footage of meetings and conversations during their campaigns. PBS will rebroadcast "The Choice 2004" on PBS.
Professor's book promotes awareness about breast cancer

BY WICKY HERVEY

Anne-Marie Newman, professor of English at Seattle University, says her book "Reading and Bookshelves: A History between Woman and Book" aims to reveal "the history of how books have been used to promote awareness of breast cancer"

Newman is the author of "Cancer Stories into Action: From Breast Cancer to the Women's Movement" and has been working on cancer awareness for over 30 years. Her book is part of a new trend in women's studies and public health that seeks to promote awareness through the lens of literature and history.

The book also includes interviews with key figures involved in the fight against breast cancer, including Rachel Carson, Betty Ford, and Hosea Williams. The book's premise is that reading can be an effective tool for raising awareness and promoting advocacy.

"I am really excited about this book," Newman said. "It's not just about the history of cancer awareness, but also about how literature can be used to inspire action."

The book includes essays on the role of literature in raising awareness, including the use of poetry, novels, and essays. It also features interviews with women who have been involved in cancer awareness campaigns.

Newman hopes the book will inspire readers to get involved in cancer awareness efforts and use their passion for reading as a tool for change.
Bush's religious views translate into public policy

by MARK GREEN

The President's faith is shaping his policy, and it's not just in the usual arena of foreign policy. Bush's religious views are influencing his decisions on social issues, including abortion, gay rights, and school prayer.

Bush has been a vocal supporter of the religious right, and his administration has taken steps to advance their agenda. For example, Bush signed into law a bill that would allow prayer in public schools, and he has appointed judges to the federal courts who are sympathetic to the religious right.

But the religious right is not the only group benefiting from Bush's religious views. The President has also been a strong supporter of the pro-life movement, and his administration has taken steps to restrict access to abortion. Bush has also been a vocal supporter of traditional marriage, and he has taken steps to limit the rights of gay Americans.

Bush's religious views are not just体现在国内政策上。他还支持宗教自由,并任命支持宗教自由的法官。但宗教自由并不是唯一受益群体。总统还支持反堕胎运动,并采取措施限制堕胎。他还支持同性恋,并采取措施限制同性恋权利。
War issue also of concern for women

BY CRRL P. LEUBSDORF
The Delles Morning News

Dear Editor:

I was extremely disappointed to read the recent story regarding the Boise State women's basketball team and its association with the Taco Bell corporation.

I believe that the Boise State women's basketball team should not be associated with the Taco Bell corporation for several reasons. First, the Boise State women's basketball team is a highly respected and successful program. The team's success is due in large part to the hard work and dedication of the players, coaches, and support staff. By being associated with the Taco Bell corporation, the team is diluting its reputation and the respect that it has earned.

Second, the Boise State women's basketball team is a source of pride for the university and the city of Boise. The team's success has a positive impact on the entire community. By being associated with the Taco Bell corporation, the team is losing its connection to the university and the community.

Finally, the Boise State women's basketball team is a source of inspiration for young girls and women. The team's success has shown that women can achieve success in sports. By being associated with the Taco Bell corporation, the team is sending a message that girls and women should not be associated with fast food restaurants.

In conclusion, I urge the Boise State women's basketball team to consider the negative consequences of being associated with the Taco Bell corporation. The team should focus on its success and the respect that it has earned, rather than diluting its reputation and the respect of its fans.

Sincerely,

Brandon Follett speaks it like he thinks it

By JONE HUFFMAN

For three years, Brandon Follett has been the lead poet of the Vermont Poetry Club, a band that beautifully enriches Vermont. Follett, who released his first book, "Follett," last spring, was in the School of Fine Arts on Tuesday, Oct. 30. Follett made a solo appearance at the Madrigal room, pushing his contemporary poetry with Veronica and the Mental Foreplays. It was a perfect setting, hand-picked and thoroughly played at 11:30 p.m. It has been the coming together and sharing of tastes and styles that Follett's poetry reflects.

Follett attended a poetry in drama course and used to perform his poetry and music in the famous "The Mechanistic Lover" seminar that addresses the things America needs to understand about its post-apocalyptic future: "Death, societal decay and nuclear arms," he said.

"The Mechanistic Lover" is a performance with heavy doses of sexual imagery. Follett, who often shares his poetry with Veronica and the Mental Foreplays, is in his element as usual. Follett is known for his senior seminar last spring he gave a presentation of spoken word that, in the words of Veronica and the Mental Foreplays, was rocking, hand gestured, and rhythmic. Follett performed for the first time in Main Street on a sunny day with Veronica and the Mental Foreplays.

"Part of his senior seminar last spring he gave a presentation of spoken word," Pollett, who often shares his poetry with Veronica and the Mental Foreplays, said. Follett, who is in his element as usual, was in his element as usual.

Re-discovering learning

BY CARRI ALLEN

Just across the street from campus and through the doors of Park is a place called the Discovery Center of Idaho. People who go up to Boise may know about the center already. Some have even visited with their classroom or youth groups to school, maybe a few have even heard a little about it. I think therefore I am with scientist in action. Now that I’ve been, I guess one might think the Discovery Center is not for the kids, but the fact is, local animals can learn things too. The center is stimulating regardless.

Some of the more popular exhibits include the sense of touch, eyes. These insightful displays show and display, all of which include available and descriptive items of what makes them work. One special exhibit demonstrates the use of air brakes by jerking, showing how the pressure within several feet located in a distant area can produce a weight displacement while swinging completely across a kind of pendulum.

From one area and last, the changing exhibit area is a set of exhibits called “animal jams”. These educational exhibits allow a glimpse into the inner workings of fish, dogs, cats, owls and other animals through shows and slide demonstrations. The program gives the interested a chance to learn about the animal’s behavior. Recently beam is a volunteer at the Discovery Center. For four months, beam has been helping out with the stations and helping visitors as they listen to the stories. “I love keeping them coming back.” beam says. “As an enthusiastic volunteer.”

Bill Bil, a volunteer for the area, talks about the different age groups that visit and visit it. The Discovery Center is filled with scientifically crafted tips on what makes them work. Schools" as part of the Brown Bag nation, demonstrated the proposition they receive.

As much as we may love football, however, our own obsession with winning their winning streak alive, sometimes it sure seems like it. Life is football, football is life — or at least it appears to be. Gaines (Billy Bob Thornton) is the star running back who's talking about his own life, and in every scene are hauntingly sad. When he's not performing well. These matches the intensity and passion of the players on the field match the intensity and passion in the film.

The movie contended that well-funded, well-equipped teams were the ones that were winning the games. But what really matters? What is at stake for these kids? What are the consequences of their actions? And what role does football play in their lives?

The movie also suggested that the key to success is through hard work and dedication. It portrays the players as being driven and passionate about football, willing to do whatever it takes to win.

The intensity and passion of the players on the field are matched by the intensity and passion in the film. The movie is shot on a gritty film stock that gives the work a raw feel.

Dear Students, Faculty and Friends:

You may be aware of the Coalition of Immokalee Workers (CIW), a registered group of tomato pickers from Immokalee, Florida, in publicity on Boise State University's campus in support of a Taco Bell shareholder resolution — an investor proxy of Boise State University and Brown's Outfitters for the last five years.

The CIW has been targeting Taco Bell for the last several years in an attempt to gain attention for a labor dispute they are having with one of our tomato suppliers in Florida. The fact is, their efforts at Boise State are working against a local farmworker owner who does not purchase tomatoes from Florida.

Taco Bell has made multiple attempts to resolve this matter, all of which have been rebuffed by the CIW. It is now our opinion that the CIW does not wish to resolve any matter with Taco Bell, but rather is using our company to raise awareness and financial support for their cause. We wanted to provide you with the following facts that you may not be aware of and share our perspective on this issue:

During the last year, Taco Bell has held several meetings and demonstrations with the CIW in an attempt to find solutions. We have taken the following actions:

- Taco Bell entered into a first contract to pay a premium on pounds shipped, showing dedication to an industry-wide solution. We encouraged the CIW to use our Company's support as leverage with the Florida Growers Exchange and other purchasers.
- Taco Bell went to check the amount of $10.00 — the equivalent of a penny a pound for every pound of Florida tomatoes purchased in 2000. The CIW rejected this check and offered alternative solutions.
- We updated our Supply Code of Conduct and posted it on our Web site as a request of the CIW. Taco Bell has strict supplier guidelines that are enforced, including adherence to wage and low labor laws and proper treatment of employees.
- Our Company also committed to helping the CIW lobby for changes to Florida labor laws and working conditions in the fields.

Yet after our ongoing efforts, the CIW has not been willing to work with us in looking an industry-wide approach that we believe will bring about the social change they seek. It is unfair that one company has been singled out and subjected for something that we, along with others, are committed to preventing in Florida and all of our national enterprises, and not simply not in a position to single-handedly reform the State's farm labor issues.

As part of the Boise State community, you have an opportunity to help the CIW know that such support and campaign against our company is both inappropriate and ineffective in solving the farmworker issues. We invite you to share your position with your fellow students and friends.

Thank you in advance for your understanding and support.

Sincerely,

Laurie Schalow

On a cold, rainy night at Bronco Stadium, the Boise State Broncos looked like the 7-0 team the fans have expected the past two seasons. Boise State dismantled the Fresno State Bulldogs 49-7 on Saturday night to give the Broncos an early lead. Boise State now has a short week to get ready for another nationally televised game and keep the dreams of the win streaks and keep the dreams of the WAC alive.

The Broncos defense dominated Fresno State offense, holding the Bulldogs to just 17 rushing yards in the 60 minutes.

The game was dominated by the Broncos' defense. They had to rally at home last week from a 6-0 deficit to beat the Wolfpack, the Wolfpack did to itself, completing three passes for 33 yards.

Saturday is what happens when marvelous meets mediocre, when dazzling meets unassuming. The Broncos extended the nation's longest winning streak to 18 games along with impressive record of 7-0, 4-0 in the WAC.

The Broncos now have a short week ahead of them. They can get a better look at Fresno State on Saturday night to see how the Bulldogs prepare for another nationally televised game on ESPN.
