Mexican troops commit rapes and torture, human rights group says

MEXICO CITY - The Mexican government's failure to investigate and prosecute widespread human rights abuses in southern Mexico is highlighted by the recent arrest of three soldiers suspected of raping and torturing an Indian woman, according to a new report.

The Human Rights Watch report, "Mexican Rapes and Torture," said soldiers were responsible for the rape of a Tlapaneca Indian woman in the southern state of Guerrero.

The report, released June 11, accuses Mexican soldiers of raping and torturing indigenous women in southern Mexico since 1996.

"Over 400 women and girls have been raped, tortured, and subjected to sexual violence by Mexican soldiers," said Mario Patron, an officer for Human Rights Watch.

The report describes how soldiers raped and tortured a Tlapaneca Indian woman in the southern state of Guerrero.

"The soldiers went to her home and raped her. She was then tortured with a metal pole," said Patron.

The report also cites cases of soldiers raping and torturing indigenous women in the states of Oaxaca, Chiapas, and Michoacan.

The report concludes that the Mexican government has failed to investigate and prosecute widespread human rights abuses.

"The government has failed to investigate and prosecute widespread human rights abuses," said Patron.

The report recommends that the Mexican government take steps to investigate and prosecute widespread human rights abuses.

"The government must take action to investigate and prosecute widespread human rights abuses," said Patron.

cian Todd Goldade is usually seen LA building with a goal in mind and the motivation to carry it out. "Mr. Helpful," said one art student. "He will drop whatever he's doing in a minute if you're just needing something..." His name is now synonymous with the Liberal Arts BUilding. "This is my dream job," said Goldade. Goldade is an artist himself, focused on jewelry design in the metals department. He eventually had his own line of jewelry, "It's getting more popular," said Goldade. Goldade previously did work as a stay-at-home dad and let his wife continue her education at Columbia in New York. "Back when I was in high school in the 1980's before transferring to Parsons School of Design in New York City his senior year. My copy of his son's recent report card tells one art student, "It will create a positive working environment for him. "It's not so much school in a fancy building. It's the people there, the walkways. Vice President Tom Labrecque says the project is 95 percent going to happen. ASBSU is looking to raise up to a million dollars for a scholarship that will go to the general campus. "As an ASBSU initiative we want to be able to create a senior pathway," said Goldade. Dear Editor:

Two weeks ago, I heard that there was going to be a parade outside of the Boise women's prison. I felt moved to join in to offer encouragement and to spread the message of love. The women were surrounded by a wall of security, and I was only able to get a glimpse of them through the window. I was moved by their courage and determination to fight for their rights and to challenge the system that keeps them locked away. It was a powerful moment that I will remember for a long time. I hope that my presence and my voice helped to make their voices heard.

Sincerely,

AIDS quilts: Symbols of life, love

BY TAYLOR L. ROFF

I went to see the AIDS quilts at the Boise Women's Correctional Institution last Tuesday night. I was impressed by the emotional weight of such a simple faith. It's amazing how a simple act of kindness can bring people together. The quilts included in the exhibitcs were created by prisoners at the Boise Correctional Facility. It was an emotional experience for me, and I felt a sense of solidarity with the individuals who created them. The quilts are a powerful reminder of the human condition and the need for compassion and understanding.

Immigration Forum did spark heated debate - for good reason

BY RHELEY A. SLEIGHT

There were some outrageous comments made by some of the panelists at the "Speak Up" forum. Canyon County Commissioner Robert Vasquez made some controversial statements about immigration. Vasquez said that we are all Caucasian, and that the term "Hispanic" is not an appropriate descriptor. He also claimed that illegal immigration is not a threat to our economy.

This was a provocative statement, and it sparked a heated debate among the panelists. Some agreed with Vasquez's views, while others disputed them. The debate was intense, and it highlighted the complexity of the immigration issue.

Leinart nails Palmer impression with Heisman performance

BY STEVE KRESS
Los Angeles Times

Leinart managed to do just a little bit more, nudging USC to a 17-14 victory and earning himself the Pac-10's player of the Week award.

Leinart's performance didn't back up the Heisman Trophy he's been chasing this season. The Broncos didn't have a Heisman winner until 1983, when they won the trophy for the only time in school history.

The Bronco Alumni Association and Boise State students mailed out an additional 1,000 to 2,000 orange and blue tickets to fans who weren't going to Saturday night's game.

Bronco fans showed their true colors.

The Bronco Alumni Association had done this because of the Boise State game the following Saturday night.

It had to be done to keep Boise State from being rated second in the nation.

The Broncos had one second-down play left, and the place-kicker attempted a field goal to tie the game.

In the West regional competition, Boise State is second.

It's a classy and amazing showing by Shields, a freshman running back who has been the team's top rusher since the Fiesta Bowl.

Bronco fans showed their true colors.

Boise State is not all about the high-flying, aerial assault that the seniors think of when they think of Boise State.

Lee Merka, the team's leading rusher, broke a 69-yard touchdown run on Saturday night to lead a pack of Bronco running backs into the all-time Boise State record books.

Leinart got his 17th straight touchdown pass against Notre Dame, and his 31st straight against Pac-10 opponents.

Leinart is one of the premier quarterbacks in the Pac-10, and his performance against Notre Dame was a testament to his ability to lead an offense.

The Broncos' 41-10 mugging of the Irish on Saturday night also.

Shields had a good a performance as Reisman, the Orange County Register Sports Writer Sparta Editor.

The Broncos did not play on Monday, after the second half of their game against the Wolverines was canceled due to a weather delay. The Broncos were scheduled to play against the Utah State University Aggies on Saturday night, but the game was postponed due to inclement weather. The Broncos are coming off a 34-21 win over Portland State with a last second shot put in by Seth Harris to give the Broncos a lead of 1-0. The win was considered a crucial one for the Broncos as it helped them secure their fourth consecutive victory of the season.

The Broncos were led by a strong performance from Seth Harris, who scored a total of 18 points and grabbed all of Boise State's points in the fourth quarter. Harris also added three rebounds and two assists. The Broncos finished the game with a record of 3-1, including a 3-0 record in conference play.

The University of Idaho Vandals are coming off a 65-55 decision at the McKay Center on Saturday night versus Utah State. Tez Banks was arrested earlier this morning for felony grand theft, and no bail has been set. He was then scheduled to appear in court on Monday. The Broncos have won three straight games on the road before they come back to the Taco Bell Arena in Mountain West Conference.

The Broncos are looking to continue their winning streak as they head into the second half of their season. They will be looking to build on their recent success and continue to show their dominance in the Mountain West Conference.

HALO 2 has a winner's aura

BY VICTOR GOMEZ

Halo 2 is a great game, expect no less than excellence. But this is a game that is not only great, but also a game that will set the bar for other games to follow. Halo 2 is the sequel to Halo: Combat Evolved, the game that started it all. It is more of the same, but it is still a great game. The graphics are amazing, the sound is great, and the gameplay is fantastic. However, there are some things that could be improved. For example, the AI could be more intelligent, and the story could be more compelling.

A Bush in his hand: President's re-election a win for 'SNL' players

BY ROGER W. VENRIBLE

George W. Bush got re-elected. The question is: do the 'SNL' players get a boost in their paychecks? We can't be sure, but it's likely. After all, 'SNL' is known for its ability to turn current events into hilarious commentary. And what better way to do that than by parodying a sitting president?

But will the boost be enough to keep the 'SNL' players happy? That's the question on everyone's mind. The 'SNL' players are some of the best in the business, but they're not exactly known for their patience. They want to be paid what they're worth, and they're not afraid to let the world know it.

Early holiday movie releases don't live up to hype

BY RODERICK BURMAN

Hollywood is known for its love of the holidays, but this year's crop of Christmas movies didn't exactly light up the box office. The most anticipated film of the season, "Love, Actually," was a disappointment. The story of the love lives of eight people, the film was meant to be a romantic comedy. Instead, it was a mess.

The other films didn't fare much better. "Bad Santa" was a dark comedy about a man who becomes a Santa Claus on the run. "The Family Stone" was a family drama about a dysfunctional family. "The Holiday" was a romantic comedy about a woman who falls in love with a man who is already taken.

In the end, the holidays were a bust for Hollywood. The movies didn't live up to the hype, and people were left feeling disappointed. But at least there are still a few weeks until Christmas.
Truth is, everyone lies; professor delves into the world of deception

BY ELRINE D'RURIZID

The Record (Sergen County, N.J.)

BY JULIAN KEENAN

New York University's psychology professor, who has spent the past 10 years researching the world of deception, says that we lie much of the time, even in personal relationships.

Keenan, who has lectured internationally, has discovered that lies are prevalent in the human experience, and that they are a part of our daily lives. He says that even in close relationships, people lie to protect their image or to avoid conflict.

Keenan explains that there are many reasons why people lie, including social and psychological factors. He uses examples from his own research to illustrate his points, and discusses the psychological effects of lying on the individual and society.

One of the main reasons that people lie, according to Keenan, is to protect their self-image. He says that people lie to avoid negative consequences or to gain positive attention. He also notes that people may lie to avoid conflict or to avoid the discomfort of a truth.

Keenan also discusses the role of lies in our daily lives, and how they can be learned from an early age. He cites research showing that children as young as two years old can lie, and that this behavior increases with age.

Keenan also discusses the role of lies in our daily lives, and how they can be learned from an early age. He cites research showing that children as young as two years old can lie, and that this behavior increases with age.

Keenan concludes by discussing the importance of honesty and the need for better communication and trust in our relationships. He notes that lying can have serious consequences, and that it is important to be honest with ourselves and others.
