Mosques in the city of Fallujah, west of Baghdad, were described as a general arms depot by the U.S. military says. One of the mosques was considered capable of equipping insurgents across the country, police and security forces said.

Anti-U.S. insurgents used some 60 mosques in the city of Fallujah, west of Baghdad, as staging points and supplies depots during a U.S.-led offensive to retake the city from the insurgents, said Scott Kiser, tropical cyclone manager at the National Hurricane Center in Miami. DERREDITOR:

Well, I feel the front-page article is a bit of a cry for help from the Arbiter. The author of the article seems to be needing a mouthpiece to speak for him. I understand that thousands of people read our newspaper, and many of them may not know the truth about the situation. I believe that the Arbiter should be a voice of reason and fairness, not a mouthpiece for someone else's opinions.

Woodall is a professor caught for plagiarizing. It seems like he should be held accountable for his actions. What kind of role model is he for his students?

I find the front-page article about plagiarism to be a bit one-sided. The author seems to be more interested in defending Woodall than in bringing attention to his wrongdoing.

Woodall’s actions are not only disappointing, but also damaging to the university’s reputation. If plagiarism is allowed to go unpunished, what kind of message does that send to future students and faculty?

I think the Arbiter should be more critical of Woodall’s actions. He should be held to the same standards as his students. After all, he is a professor and should act as an example for his students.

It’s a shame that someone in a position of authority would commit such a serious offense. I hope that the university will take appropriate action against him.

DERREDITOR:

I agree with the editor’s point of view. It’s important that we hold professors accountable for their actions. Woodall’s plagiarism is a serious offense and should be punished accordingly.

I think it’s important for an institution to set an example for its students. If professors are not held accountable for their actions, how can we expect students to take responsibility for their own work?

I believe that the university should take this issue seriously and take action against Woodall. He cannot continue to teach students if he is not willing to accept responsibility for his actions.

DERREDITOR:

I support the editor’s stance on this issue. It’s important that we hold individuals accountable for their actions, regardless of their position.

I believe that Woodall should be held accountable for his actions. Plagiarism is not acceptable and he should be punished accordingly.

Six Broncos earn first-team WAC honors

Hawks named coach of the year

BY TREUOR HORN

"It’s a slap in the face," Boise State safety Andy Franklin said Wednesday in reaction to the published photo of him and teammates partying on the Broncos upset honoring WAC Coach of the Year honors on Tuesday.

Three alumni played on the Broncos squad, Hawkins earning WAC Coach of the Year honors, along with head coach Dan Franklin and our staff," Hawkins said.

Avalos leads the Broncos second Year honors for the second straight season. The Broncos are the only team in the WAC to have a first-team nomination. The preseason All-WAC honorable mention, giving the Broncos a first-team selection. Only senior receiver T.J. Acree and junior offensive lineman Brandon Franklin also were named to the honor. The Broncos have been honored in their only season starting on offense.

The Boise State men’s basketball team looks to improve on last year’s third-place finish in the Mountain West Conference. The Broncos are coming off a second-round loss to Utah in the NCAA tournament.

The Broncos have had an up-and-down season, starting the season 9-3 but finishing 14-18 overall. They are 7-11 in Mountain West Conference play. The Broncos have struggled to find consistency, but have shown improvement in recent games.

The Broncos have scored 70 points or more in six of their last seven games, averaging 79.0 points per game. They have scored at least 80 points in three of their last four games. They have scored at least 60 points in all 10 conference games.

The Broncos have shot 47.7 percent from the field and 37.7 percent from three-point range in conference play. They have averaged 16 assists per game and have had at least 10 assists in all 10 conference games.

The Broncos have been led on offense by senior guard Kellen Moore, who is averaging 27.9 points per game on 49.0 percent shooting from the field and 46.0 percent from three-point range. He is also averaging 6.3 assists per game.

Junior guard Deshaun Thomas is averaging 20.9 points per game on 46.5 percent shooting from the field and 34.3 percent from three-point range. He is also averaging 6.3 assists per game.

Sophomore forward Deon Burton is averaging 12.8 points per game on 47.0 percent shooting from the field and 30.0 percent from three-point range. He is also averaging 5.8 rebounds per game.

The Broncos have had a balanced scoring attack, with five players scoring in double figures.

On defense, the Broncos have held opponents to 68.1 points per game and 37.7 percent shooting from the field. They have averaged 8.0 blocks per game and 11.3 steals per game.

The Broncos have won three of their last five games, including a victory over San Diego State. They have also lost four of their last five games, including losses to Utah and New Mexico.

The Broncos have a challenging remaining schedule, with games against UNLV, Colorado State, and Wyoming. They will also be playing the Nevada Wolf Pack, who are one of the top teams in the Mountain West Conference.

The Broncos will need to improve their shooting and defense in order to have a successful season. They will need to play better on the road and continue to improve their consistency.

The Broncos have a tough road ahead, but they are determined to make a run in the Mountain West Conference. They have shown improvement in recent games and are looking to build on their recent success.

In the original "In Bloom" video recorded during the MTV video contest some years ago, a red-haired man was seen picking up a bag of groceries before a camera. In the background, a car was seen driving down a street. The scene was cut from the final music video, but the man's appearance has since become a topic of speculation. According to some sources, the man was seen again in the video for "Bleach," which was filmed in the same location. The car was also featured in "Bleach," and the scene was later added to the final version of the video. Although the meaning behind the man's appearance remains unclear, it has become a popular topic of discussion among Nirvana fans.
