Luther King Jr. called his dream, Jan. 17 from the SUB's Jordan Ballroom to the capitol building as brothers and sisters under the banner of freedom, equality and justice. Songs honoring the life and work of the people's prophet and his dream — King's life and impact on the civil rights movement, many members and speakers through their own political and social messages in the room.

Singin' for the Ink, Larry Alexander,bbie Bailey and Chief David Baer sang a number of songs, followed by the SUB's own a cappella choir, which sang a song they wrote. The choir's song was about the struggle for racial freedom and equality.

Messages presented by marchers and speakers brought their own political and social messages. Those messages ranged from exuding equality and human rights as the marchers and speakers made their way down a partially closed off Capitol Boulevard. To the capitol steps, the crowd's original audience as his famous "I Have a Dream" speech was made.

"I Have a Dream" speech was made and was a call to continue to fight injustice and to continue fighting injustice. LeFavour echoed McNeil's urgings to continue fighting injustice. LeFavour said, "Consciously or unconsciously, we distance ourselves from others." McNeil urged the audience to take part in the civil rights movement and to continue fighting injustice. Washington in party mode for Bush inauguration

BY LEE NEUHER HOLT

For more than 33 years, Martin Luther King Jr. continued to believe in the hope for his brother. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was a member of the Martin Luther King Jr. Leadership 2000, Inc., an organization that developed opportunities for young leaders to take up the mantle of King's dream. King's call to promote peace in foreign countries began in the late 1980s when he was called upon by the White House to serve as a go-between for peace negotiations.

The "I Have a Dream" speech was made after King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts to bring about civil rights legislation. The speech was delivered on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., on Aug. 28, 1963.

Students get real education for real world

BY LIZ HENDERSON

Many students and students in military studies are not required to participate in the ROTC program, but the majority make their decision during their junior year in college. Students who complete the ROTC program and sign a military commitment contract become qualified commissioned officers and may join the Army National Guard or the Army Reserves as second lieutenants. The labs are designed to give students the opportunity to participate in the program this year. Brown said she believed everyone that is offered through the Military Sciences and Public Affairs.

The Confederate battle flag: a racist symbol or proud history?

Readers negate Newman

Neuman piece inaccurate

Dear Editor,

Ms. Neuman's article does not reflect her opinion, but rather the opinions of the American Nazi Party and the KKK. In Ms. Neuman's article, she does not challenge these groups' interpretation of the flag's meaning. Instead, she accepts their interpretation as fact. This is inaccurate, as the Confederate battle flag is not a symbol of white supremacy.

Michael Hehnck,

Cary, Ky.

Neuman article insulting

Dear Editor,

Ms. Neuman's article is insulting. It is not appropriate for anyone to claim that a symbol belongs to them or anyone else. The Confederate battle flag is a symbol of our history, and it is important to respect that history.

Julia Staff

Cumberland Ky.

Racism article misguided

Dear Editor,

Ms. Neuman's article is misguided. She makes a number of false claims about the Confederate battle flag and its meaning. For example, she states that the flag is a symbol of white supremacy, but this is not true. The Confederate battle flag was adopted by a number of states before the Civil War, including border states that did not secede. Additionally, the flag was not necessarily a symbol of racism or segregation. Ms. Neuman's article fails to acknowledge the complex history of the flag and its various meanings.

Dr. James Brown

University of Arizona

Neuman guilty of misleading

Dear Editor,

Ms. Neuman's article is misleading. She claims that the flag is a symbol of segregation and racism, but this is not accurate. The Confederate battle flag was a symbol of states' rights and a desire for independence from the Union. It was not a symbol of racism or segregation. Ms. Neuman's article fails to provide an accurate and balanced perspective on the history of the flag.

Quaid, Grace come of age in 'Company'

BY ERIC RUSSELL

"In Good Company" isn't meant to be a perfect family situation as evidence by Paul's pious parents. The film caters to the heart's desire to be with someone who is there for us even when we're at our least desirable. Thus, the movie is about the relationship between the two main characters. The film is a powerful testament to the strength of the human spirit and the importance of love and understanding in the face of adversity.

The film is a heartwarming story of two people who come together to help each other through their respective experiences. Though she's just a teenager, Kay (Quaid) is a role model for all young people. Her intelligence, humor and grace are a great example of what women can achieve.

The film is a very touching and emotional story of love and loss. It's a film that will make viewers think and feel. The performances by the lead actors are outstanding and the cinematography is beautiful. Overall, "In Good Company" is a film that will stay with you long after you've seen it.

"Coach Carter" starts the year off strong

"Coach Carter" starts the year off strong with its hard-nosed portrayal of basketball. Though he's got the same issues as the boys, the boys learn from his mistakes and become a better team. The film is a powerful testament to the strength of the human spirit and the importance of love and understanding in the face of adversity.
