In the cold: Athletes may get new indoor training facility

BY DESIREE PAYNE
Monday Jan. 14, in a phone conversation with President Robert Kustra, Boise State University President Robert Kustra announced that the university would receive a $20 million federal grant. The grant will help fund the construction of a new indoor training facility for the Boise State University football team.

The grant was awarded through the U.S. Department of Education's Higher Education Challenge Grant Program. The program is designed to help institutions improve their facilities and support student success.

The new indoor training facility will be located on the Boise State University campus and will include a football-specific training facility, a strength and conditioning facility, and a multi-purpose sports complex.

The facility will be used by Boise State University football players to enhance their training and performance. It will also be available for use by other Boise State University student-athletes, coaches, and faculty members.

The construction of the new indoor training facility is expected to begin in 2023 and be completed in 2025. The project is estimated to cost approximately $25 million, with the federal grant covering 70% of the total cost.

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court police broadened Monday the definition of “stop” in the use of dogs, the “100-yard” limits of drug-sniffing dogs during routine traffic stops.

In a 6-2 ruling, the justices sided with話し手 state that had argued a Supreme Court decision extending the limits. The case, Dunaway v.河南省, was filed by officers who had argued the limits were too narrow.

Police departments, including those in Denver, have been monitoring the new limits, which were announced in March.

The new limits will allow police to use drug-sniffing dogs during traffic stops on public roads.

Women's dominance has schools courting males

HACKENSACK, N.J. — When Noda Mosca moved into her co-ed dorm at Ramapo College last year, she didn't take it for granted that she was attending a school with a majority of women.

The campus was co-ed in the classroom.

"I was one of two girls in my major. That was it. And I'm a sophomore," Ms. Mosca said. "I've been in this situation for four years and it didn't take her long to notice there was something lacking: namely, men,

At colleges across the country, the gender imbalance has been growing steadily for decades as more women continue to enroll in the pursuit of higher education.

"Teenage girls typically choose their college majors than their male counterparts," said Sandy Baum, a professor of economics at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. "It's not that boys completely stop applying, but they may not be as interested or involved in the recruitment process.

"In fact, at Penn State University, applicants are given special consideration for male applicants, even though fewer males apply. With all due respect to Dr. Baum, we are more forgiving of their application standards when males apply," said Peter G. Satterlee, the University's coordinator of guidance at Fort Lee. "Students want diversity, and diversity starts with gender." Students want diversity, and diversity starts with gender.

"There's a danger that a school can get too much of a female population," said John Romano, vice provost and dean of admissions at the University of Delaware. "We try to be more forgiving of their standards for male applicants."

As the percentage of women at institutions continues to grow, men are more likely to have problems."

"If you're a male, you have a better chance of getting into selective schools because of the popularity of the school's engineering and science programs," said Dr. Baum. "Have we seen any noticeable difference in the rejection rates for men and women? Yes. No. Maybe.

"In the University of Delaware, men are sometimes seen as more supportive of the concept of men's athletics because of the popularity of the school's basketball and football programs, but women are more likely to favor male applicants."

Newman's actions inappropriate

The response to Marci Newman's article in the Jan. 13 issue of the Arbiter is needed dialogue on campus. Professor Newman must realize that gentrification, while subject to different symbols denoting different meanings in a multicultural society, whatever many Americans may feel that the Confederate flag has in different cultures. It was made clear by one of the editors that the flag代表着 ugly past events to some, and that it is not a symbol of pride in the vast numbers of people who have never even seen the flag. The editors of the Arbiter hope that Professor Newman's article is an invitation to have a dialogue about the issue, not an exclamation offull force. However, students feel that Professor Newman's actions were inappropriate.

Professor Newman described the Confederate flag as an emblem of slavery, it was made clear by many of our readers that the flag represents pride and heritage. And for many, the flag means something different than the Confederate flag does. This can be seen on every flag, and why the flag has been used as a symbol of pride.

Newman's article is inappropriate and the response from the opposition party a full exercise of executive privilege. But when a president wins re-election, neither should any president capitalize on any misstep.

Soon after his re-election, President Bush defied what he has termed "executive privilege" and the House of Representatives, prevented Clinton from making progress on Issues important to the country.

There are still questions about the extent to which members of his administration are responsible for, such as the systematic genocide and relocation of Native Americans.

Professor Newman should have realized that gentrification is an issue of that country. To Newman, the flag represents a university in Buffalo, NY. To the man wearing the flag on his person, we feel that he has abused presidential power by impounding for his own agenda large sums of money. Bush, too, allowed him to be enfeebled during his second term.

The investigation, which revealed the leak of a CIA operative's identity, demonstrated "national security" as an excuse for presidential privilege in his prosecution of the leak.

The Boise State women’s basketball team begins a four-game homestand tonight at the Taco Bell Arena. The Lady Broncos turn the corner of midseason with what should be a hopeful four-game stretch to end the year, three of those games on their home court.

The Broncos (16-10, 4-4 Western Athletic Conference) will play hosts in the top two games in the conference standings tonight versus seasoned foe Utah. The Lady Broncos are undecided in conference play, only the University of New Mexico can claim a winning record (6-4). The No. 18 (RPI) Broncos will meet the No. 22 (RPI) Utes at 7:15 p.m. Friday in Taco Bell Arena. University of Utah comes from place ninth in the WAC. The Broncos are currently 6th, and these next four games can be the breaking point for a team that is if they would really improve their record over the WAC.

With the Lady Rockies are not far behind at 4th (4-3) and New Mexico is 3rd (4-2). Both these teams are struggling and will find it difficult to reach the fourth place in the WAC.

"We have been having our ups and downs, but we have the ability to compete," said Coach DeeDee Hubble.

Junior forward Kristine Hessing is the team's leading scorer, averaging 13 points per game. "Kristine is a great basketball player, and we need her to continue to play at a high level," said Coach Hubble.

The Boise State women's basketball team is currently 12th in the WAC, holding opponents to an average 59.8 points per game. The team is 27-2005 and shoots at 38 percent from the field and 25.1 percent from the three-point range.

"We have been a tough team to beat," said Coach Hubble. "We have been having our ups and downs, but we have the ability to compete."

If Bruins were a beer, it would be a Whitney. For a craft beer connoisseur, the Boston Bruins have created an interesting variant over the years they've been "The Bruise Bros.," and when the franchise's distributed the third Super Bowl appearance in four years.

The Bruins, however, are still two wins away from the Stanley Cup, which is essentially the ultimate goal. Even fans of other teams can appreciate that.

There are many reasons anomalous, but don't bet on it.

The Bruins are the only NHL team that has won the Stanley Cup five times. In Lord Stanley five times. The Bruins have lost three times.

The Boston Bruins are currently in the NHL, but they are not the only team to make the Stanley Cup finals in the last 12 years. The team has been in the playoffs for 12 straight years, but their best performance in the playoffs was a seven-game series against the Montreal Canadiens in the 2000-01 season.

But the Bruins have also had their ups and downs since then. They have been eliminated from the playoffs five times since 2001, and have had a lack of consistency in their performance.

In 2001-02, the Bruins made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but then lost to the New Jersey Devils in six games. The following season, they made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but were swept by the New York Rangers in four games.

In 2003-04, the Bruins were eliminated in the first round by the Philadelphia Flyers. The next season, they made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but lost to the New York Rangers in five games.

In 2007-08, the Bruins made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but lost to the Los Angeles Kings in seven games.

In 2010-11, the Bruins made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but lost to the New Jersey Devils in seven games.

In 2013-14, the Bruins made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but lost to the Los Angeles Kings in seven games.

In 2014-15, the Bruins made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but lost to the Pittsburgh Penguins in seven games.

In 2016-17, the Bruins made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but lost to the Pittsburgh Penguins in seven games.

In 2017-18, the Bruins made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but lost to the Tampa Bay Lightning in seven games.

In 2018-19, the Bruins made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but lost to the St. Louis Blues in seven games.

In 2019-20, the Bruins made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but lost to the Tampa Bay Lightning in seven games.

In 2020-21, the Bruins made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but lost to the Tampa Bay Lightning in seven games.

In 2021-22, the Bruins made it to the Eastern Conference finals, but lost to the Carolina Hurricanes in seven games.

In 2022-23, the Bruins made it to the Stanley Cup finals, but lost to the St. Louis Blues in seven games.

I'm sick... again. While I write this, I am being brought to the hospital to be tested for the flu on Monday. Not just television habits as much as my family is nearer to being a zombie. Lot happens, but miss one day and it's over. I am forgetting to check my schedule. I am forgetting to check my schedule. I am forgetting to check my schedule... and I am forgetting to check my schedule. So, anyway, I am sick. But I'm a woman. Back then it didn't seem like a big deal. Sure, a woman. I wish him luck and I wish her parents some sympathy. This is electronica. With Colleen Green and guitarist Jamie Arendzen (above), getting the crowd warmed up.

Ice Cube's road trip picture highly formulaic

BY ERIC R. MOORE

This year's Oscar race has all the hallmarks of a plane tells when it comes to predicting who will win the big prize. "The Aviator," starring Leonardo DiCaprio and directed by Martin Scorsese, is the front-runner for best picture and is also nominated for best actor (DiCaprio) and best supporting actor (Philip Seymour Hoffman). Other highly regarded films include "Million Dollar Baby" starring Hilary Swank, which is nominated for best picture and best actress (Swank), and "The Da Vinci Code," which is nominated for best picture and best director (Ron Howard) among other categories.

However, the real drama may come on Oscar night when "The Aviator," "Million Dollar Baby," and "The Da Vinci Code" will face off for the top prize. "The Aviator" and "Million Dollar Baby" are both highly anticipated films, while "The Da Vinci Code" is a surprise contender after its debut earlier this year.

Despite the hype, many film buffs are concerned that the Academy's penchant for formulas may result in a predictable outcome. "The Aviator" and "Million Dollar Baby" both follow the same formula of a biopic with a lead actor winning an Oscar.

"The Academy is a very predictable group," said one film critic. "They love biopics and ensemble casts and will likely reward films that fit that mold. But it's anyone's guess who will take home the big prize."
